YMCA and city close to new, multi-year deal

By Jared S. Hopkins
 Times-News writer

Twin Falls city and the local YMCA are close to a new contract for the nonprofit to continue managing the city pool through 2011, officials for both organizations said Friday.

The deal follows more than a month of negotiations after the contract that expired Sept. 30 was extended by a month.

"I think we made huge headway and we're really excited about where we're going. We're really headed in the right direction now."

— YMCA CEO Karen Sharpnack

Officials said the YMCA would be paid 10 percent to 15 percent less than the $50,000 it normally receives, but could use its own guidebook and wouldn't have to cover maintenance costs.

The decision came Friday after City Manager Tom Courtney and Mayor Lance Claw met with four officials from the YMCA, whose board met Thursday night to discuss the contract. Bill Hollifield, a board member and an attorney, will draft a new contract to present to the city.

On Oct. 22, the Twin Falls City Council tabled a decision to renew the contract. Council members said they were concerned with a reference in the contract — which had been approved by the city's pool commission a week earlier — to a pool manual the city used when it managed the pool several years ago.

YMCA CEO Karen Sharpnack said Friday the YMCA was comfortable with the contract the council tabled, but once new negotiations began, they preferred the YMCA's national pool management guidelines — a

States target teacher sexual misconduct after report

By Robert Tanner
 Associated Press writer

The state government would open its now-secret books on teacher sexual misconduct in Maine. Missouri school districts have been barred from background checks that let misbehaving teachers quietly move on. New York would be able to swiftly remove convicted teachers' licenses.

Across the country, governors, legislative leaders and top education officials are pledging to close loopholes that have allowed teacher sexual misconduct to persist. In Congress, legislation that targets such misbehavior has gathered more sponsors.

The efforts follow an Associated Press investigation last month that found 2,570 educators nationwide whose teaching credentials were revoked, denied, surrendered or sanctioned from 2001-2005 following allegations of sexual misconduct. Experts who track sexual abuse say those cases are representative of a much deeper problem.

"There are roughly 3 million public school teachers nationwide. I want to make sure we do all we can do," said Maine Gov. John Baldacci. "When you are made aware of circumstances that could be harmful to children, you do want to act." Maine was the only

THE CLOCK CONFLICT

Matthew, 8, left, behind the 'Scraper' mask, and Nicholas, 10, prepares to trick-or-treat with their mother Andrea Cooper, Wednesday in Twin Falls. Daylight-saving time changes this year allowed kids more time to knock on doors before dark.

In Valley, standard time delay may not have much impact

By Nate Poppino
 Times-News writer

Jeff Cooper knew daylight-saving time would last an extra week this year.

But he forgot to inform his appliances. His VCRs, he said, have been in a different time zone since Saturday.

That's the only change Cooper, the pastor of the First Baptist Church in Twin Falls, said was worth noting about the delayed switch, the result of a 2005 energy bill passed by Congress. Daylight-saving time will officially end at 2 a.m. Sunday. But whether it ends Nov. 4 or Oct. 28, some in the Magic Valley aren't sure the time shift is worth the hassle.

"We would like it to go away," Twin Falls resident Jan Lewis said of her family's thoughts on the time change, first put in place in the U.S. to preserve daylight hours during the two world wars.

Over time, the purpose of the change has shifted. The energy bill changed the time shift's dates for the first time in 29 years, adding three weeks to it in spring and one week in the fall. The extra month was primarily meant to help lower energy costs from lighting. But the lone week in October may have also provided an extra hour of safety on what is statistically a dangerous evening for kids.

The extra daylight was good in that way, Lewis said Wednesday while putting the final touches on her Halloween decorations at her home on Cypress Way.

"But I like it dark," she said. "I think that's more Halloweeny."

Others approached on Halloween had a different take on things. The daylight was the only reason, Andrea Cooper said, that her children could trick-or-treat before heading to an event at the First Assembly of God church in Twin.

Handful of votes for president

Quarterly veto of water projects by Senate in 1991. It is expected to be overridden by Congress.

Bush vetoes water projects bill

By Jennifer Lowe
 Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — An increasingly confrontational President Bush on Friday vetoed a bill authorizing hundreds of popular water projects even though lawmakers can count enough votes to override him.

Bush brushed aside significant objections from Capitol Hill, even from Republicans, in vetoing legislation that provides $23 billion for projects like repairing hurricane damage, restoring wetlands and preventing flooding in communities across the nation.

It appears certain Bush will have his veto overridden for the first time in his presidency. The bill passed in both chambers of Congress by well more than the two-thirds majority needed to override Bush's decision and make the measure law.

"When we override this irresponsible veto, perhaps the president will finally recognize that Congress is an equal branch of government and reestablish his many other reckless veto threats," said Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev.

The bill provides funding to a handful of water items in Idaho, including one in the Magic Valley and another in the Wood River Valley. A total of $8 million will go toward designing and constructing the

'Dog, the Bounty Hunter' show pulled because of star's tirade

HONOLULU — Television bounty hunter Duane "Dog" Chapman's show has been pulled from the air indefinitely by A&E, two days after a private phone conversation in which the reality star used a racial slur repeatedly was posted online.

"In evaluating the circumstances of the last few days, A&E has decided to take 'Dog the Bounty Hunter' off the network's schedule for the foreseeable future," the network said in a statement Friday. "We hope that Mr. Chapman continues the healing process that he has begun."

A&E officials said the series, one of the network's top-rated programs, has not been canceled.

Chapman, 54, has been under fire and accused of being a racist ever since the private conversation with his son, Tucker, Chapman, was posted online Wednesday by The National Enquirer. Chapman used the N-word repeatedly about his son's black girlfriend.

At least two advertisers have pulled out from the show and civil rights groups have called for its cancellation.

Soon after the clip was posted, Chapman issued an apology and A&E suspended production of the series.

In the conversation, Chapman urges Tucker to break up with his girlfriend. He also expresses concern about the girlfriend trying to tape and go public about the TV star's use of the N-word. He used the slur six times in the first 45 seconds of the five-minute clip.

Police searching for teacher and boy, 13

OMAHA — A female teacher and a 13-year-old boy believed to be on the run may have crossed the California border into Mexico, a police investigator said Friday.

Paul Schwarz of the Lexington Police Department

Daniel Huffman is trying to unseat his sister, Charlotte Garman, the village postmaster who's been mayor of the western Ohio community for eight years.

Huffman, a carpenter and electrician, admitted that his decision to challenge his sister for the seat probably didn't sit well with her.

"I really don't believe she's tickled about it," said Huffman, 45.

The village that sits along Grand Lake St. Marys has just 138 registered voters so it's not unusual for the candidates to be familiar with each other. Garman, 49, said she was surprised but not upset that her younger brother entered the race.

"He has every right to run," she said. "The same as I do."

She did add, though, that she has never heard of a council meeting and doesn't seem to keep up on issues and projects in the village.

So far, the sibling rivalry seems to have been kept at bay. There hasn't been any blustering, hair-pulling or name calling.

Police told KXVN-AM in Lexington the pair crossed at the San Ysidro Port of Entry, which separates San Diego and Tijuana, Mexico.

Peterson, a sixth-grade math teacher and basketball coach at Lexington Middle School, fled with the boy after police began investigating whether the pair had an intimate relationship, authorities said.

Authorities believed the two were traveling in Peterson's car, and police notified and the FBI were also notified about them. Court documents said the boy was last seen Oct. 26.

Greater Manchester Police said the mix-up began when the body of a man and his 30s was discovered in Manchester, northwest England, on Oct. 12. He was identified as Thomas Dennison, 39, by a care worker who knew him.

Officials contacted Dennison's mother, Gina Partington, 58, who identified the dead man as her son. The body was released to the family and the funeral took place Tuesday.

The next day, Dennison was discovered alive in Nottingham, 80 miles away.

Partington said the resemblance between the dead man and her son was remarkable.

"I held his hand and kissed his head. I stayed with him for about 40 minutes and would have sworn he was my son," she was quoted as saying by the Manchester Evening News.

"We held his funeral on Tuesday this week at Southern Cemetery and there were genuine tears, because Tommy is a lovely lad," she said.

Postel inspectors told the Indiana Department of Natural Resources and county police about the shipment of rattlesnakes. Officials were waiting for Draper when he got off the bus near his apartment Thursday.

"He wants to be cool and have venomous snakes," said Sgt. Ed Rucker, a DNR conservation officer.

Anyone who handles dangerous or wild animals in Indiana may have a state permit, and possessing endangered species like timber rattlesnakes is illegal, Rucker said.

Snakes on a bus: Man accused of illegally transporting rattlers

MUNCIE — This time, the snakes weren't on a plane — they were on a bus.

Now, a 21-year-old man who police say picked up a package of venomous baby timber rattlesnakes at the post office and took it home on a city bus is facing charges.

Dustin A. Draper of Muncie faces preliminary charges of possession of an endangered species and transportation of a dangerous reptile without a permit. He was in jail Friday on $3,500 bond. It was not known if he had obtained an attorney.

TEXAS

Researchers say mythical 'chupacabra' in Texas is just a plain old coyote

SAN MARCOS — The results are in: The ugly, big-eared animal found this summer in southern Texas is not the mythical, bloodsucking chupacabra. It's just a plain old coyote.

Biologists at Texas State University announced Thursday night they had identified the hairless doglike creature.

KENS-TV of San Antonio provided a tissue sample from the animal for testing.

"The DNA sequence is a virtually identical match to DNA from the coyote," biologist Mike Forstner said in a statement. "This is probably the answer a lot of folks thought might be the outcome. I, myself, really thought it was a domestic dog, but the Cuero Chupacabra is a Texas Coyote."

Phyllis Carlton and some of her neighbors discovered the 40-pound bodies of three of the animals over four days in July outside her ranch in Cuero, 90 miles southeast of San Antonio.

Chupacabra means "goat sucker" in Spanish, and it is said to have originated in Puerto Rico and Mexico.

state where officials refused to provide the AP information on disciplinary actions against teachers, citing a 1913 law.

Baldacci said he intends to change Maine's confidentiality law and has discussed ways to do that with Education Commissioner Sue Gordon.

In Congress, GOP Rep. Adam Putnam of Florida is the sponsor of a bill to create a national registry for teacher offenders and to set up toll-free hotlines to report allegations of abuse.

He's now been joined by Sen. Mel Martinez, R-Florida, who is sponsoring companion legislation to Putnam's proposal. Several other House members have signed on, too.

The AP investigation tracked cases of abuse, including molestation and other misconduct that brought disciplinary action, including child pornography and sexual harassment. In just over half the instances, educators were not only disciplined professionally but also convicted of criminal charges.

Among the proposed changes at the state level: Legislative leaders in Missouri and Minnesota are pursuing measures that would force school districts hiring a teacher to fully explore personnel records.

A Missouri lawmaker wants to prohibit confidentiality agreements between districts and teachers who commit sexual misconduct, after the AP turned up the case of a teacher who quietly moved on after more than a dozen accusations of sexual harassment and misconduct.

In Missouri, the state School Boards' Association raised doubts about an across-the-board ban on confidentiality agreements.

Missouri," said state Rep. Jane Cunningham, a Republican. "We can't turn our back on a situation like this."

In California, legislative leaders plan to focus on a state law that bars the teacher credentialing commission from revealing the reason teachers lose their licenses if they plead no contest. Under no contest pleas, defendants are punished as if they pleaded guilty, but retain the right to challenge the charges against them in lawsuits and other proceedings. Such deals made it unclear why educator licenses were sanctioned in dozens of cases, the AP found.

In New York, state Education Commissioner Richard Mills said his agency wants changes that would allow swift removal of some teachers' licenses. Under current law, education officials must still go through a de-certification process when a teacher is convicted of a crime related to sexual misconduct.

Mills' proposal means a license would automatically be revoked upon conviction, avoiding lengthy and costly hearings.

In Kentucky and South Carolina, authorities are looking at age of consent legislation. South Carolina Education Superintendent Jim Rex wants to make it a felony for a teacher to have sex with a student, regardless of the student's age.

Though many leaders are coming forward to condemn misconduct, there also are voices of criticism. In Minnesota, Karen Ballmer, executive director of the Board of Teaching, said requiring each district to check with the state before hiring a new teacher could become a logistical problem at certain times of the year, when districts are doing a lot of hiring.

In Missouri, the state School Boards' Association raised doubts about an across-the-board ban on confidentiality agreements.

"I think we made huge headway and we're really excited about where we're going," said Sharpnack, adding she was not upset with previous contracts. "We're really headed in the right direction now."

Making the contract multi-year would make it easier to plan programs and would also add financial security, officials said. YMCA Board President Scott Standley said the pool would lose about $30,000 for the YMCA in 2007.

Standley, in an interview

Thursday, said concerns included small details such as monitoring pH in the pool and wanting more than 90 days before an opt-out option, since the winter is the busiest and most expensive time but brings in the least income.

"It's kind of become a political football," Standley said Thursday.

"I hope we can manage the pool. I know my board is tired of taking it on the chin."

The city also halted the deal as financially and structurally viable, and Courtney said it was a very productive day.

Parameters were set for the pool to break-even for the YMCA.

"We discussed several options during our meeting today on how best to account for costs and to assure the Y has sufficient revenue to cover those costs," said Courtney.

But Sharpnack said the sides will devise standardized fees for pool use — both for organizations renting the facility and for individuals, regardless whether they are members of the YMCA. The city requested a more equally distributed fee, and Sharpnack said the YMCA will have to recover $17,500, which could result in slightly higher fees.

Clow, who will be out of town next week, said the contract will not be signed before he returns Nov. 19.

"I think it's revenue-neutral that we're working on," said Clow. "We're not trying to pay them less. We're not trying to reduce their income. We're trying to make a revenue-neutral contract that everyone can live with."

Daylight

"It's hard to get everyone ready in that time," she said. "We wouldn't be able to go outside."

Supposedly, that extra time led candy companies to join the lobbying efforts that passed the bill — whether to encourage child safety or make a little profit. But a spokeswoman for the National Confectioners Association denied Friday that the group had any role in the legislation.

Nevertheless, Halloween trick-or-treaters may have gotten more than the fall delay than anyone else. Craig Hawkins, owner of the Grocery Outlet in Twin Falls, said the extra month of daylight probably helped his energy bills a little bit. A possible boost to candy sales on Halloween was a different matter.

"We really pretty well died off that late afternoon," he said.

The Twin Falls School District experienced some small glitches in its computer software, Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said. But the bigger problem this week may have been the fact that daylight later in the day meant darkness in the morning, when children are walking to school.

"The lighter it is in the morning when kids are coming to school, the safer I've got to think it is," Dobbs said.

Which time setting is safer may be a matter for debate. A study by researchers at Carnegie Mellon University in Pittsburgh found that ending daylight-saving time results in about 37 more U.S. pedestrian deaths around 6 p.m. in November, and 13 less around 6 a.m. The killer, researchers said, isn't the darkness, but rather the adjustment to an earlier nighttime.

It's that adjustment that makes Cooper prefer the fall change.

The spring change, he said, often coincides with Easter and people show up late to services. Ideally, the pastor said, the country should follow the lead of those states that don't have daylight-saving time and throw the whole thing out.

"To me, that would be just such a wonderful thing."

Gooding Idaho Channel Project in the Little Wood River for flood control and ecosystem restoration.

The bill also authorized a portion of $12 million for the Fish Creek Dam in Blaine County for safety improvements. The water in the reservoir is used for irrigation, recreation, flood control and fish and wildlife habitat.

Bush objected to $9 billion in projects added during negotiations between the House and Senate. He hoped that his action, even though it is sure not to hold, would cast him as a friend to conservatives who demand a tighter rein on federal spending.

Bush never vetoed spending bills under the Republican Congress, despite budgetary increases then, too. Attempting to demonstrate fiscal toughness in the seventh year of his presidency, Bush risked being criticized for doing too little, too late and of waging a transparently partisan attack against the Democrats who now run Capitol Hill.

The president took the gamble, though without any public fanfare, as part of a broader effort to take on Democratic leaders frequently and more pointedly.

It was Bush's fifth veto. Four of those have come since Democrats took over Congress in January.

Sen. George Voinovich, R-Ohio, pledged to work to override the veto. "We are facing a water infrastructure crisis and our national investment in water resources has not kept pace with our level of economic expansion," Voinovich said.

But Democratic Sen. Russ Feingold of Wisconsin applauded Bush for vetoing a "bawled, bloated bill. Instead of trying to override the veto, Congress should take this opportunity to fix the bill."

The water project legislation originally approved by the Senate would have cost $14 billion and the House version would have totaled $15 billion. Bush, and a few Republicans complained that the final version was loaded with unneeded pet projects pushed by individual lawmakers — sending the overall cost of the bill much higher.

Bush vetoed the bill because it is "fiscally irresponsible" and falls outside the scope of the mission of the Army Corps of Engineers. White House press secretary Dana Perino said.

McCain criticizes rivals' lack of military service

By Liz Sidel
Associated Press writer

NORTH CHARLESTON, S.C. — John McCain, a Vietnam war prisoner, argued Friday that his top rivals for the GOP nomination aren't qualified to deal with issues like torture — or to be present in war zones — because they never served in the military.

The Arizona senator's position on an interrogation technique that stimulates drowning — he says it constitutes torture and is illegal — puts him at odds with Rudy Giuliani, Mitt Romney and Fred Thompson, who haven't taken such a hard line.

"There's a clear division between those who have a military background and experience in these issues and people like Giuliani, Romney and Thompson who don't — who chose to do other things when this nation was fighting its wars," McCain told reporters after touring a shipyard and taking questions from workers wearing hard hats and blue jeans.

He stepped up his criticism of his opponents in the private, public and single-digit and trailing the poll.

In Iowa, Romney said that while he respected McCain's service in Vietnam and in the Senate, his own service in the private, public and non-profit sectors was "highly relevant to lead the nation at a time where we face such extraordinary challenges."

Aides for Giuliani and Thompson dismissed the criticism.

McCain questioned his rivals on their lack of military service even though he suggested during the 2004 election that military experience shouldn't be an issue.

on CNBC. The former New York mayor said "waterboarding" should not be used in every circumstance, but he also left the door open to it.

In this undated photo, John McCain, front right, poses with his squadron in 1965.

"I'm very reluctant to take away presidential prerogatives and decision making, maybe because I've faced crisis more than the other ones have," said Giuliani, who was praised by many for his performance in the aftermath of the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks.

McCain, a former Naval aviator who was tortured in his 5½ years in a North prison, responded: "Mayor Giuliani just contradicted himself because anybody who has experience in warfare knows that waterboarding is by any definition torture and cannot be condoned. I do not know which crisis the mayor may have been talking about. My experience goes back to the Cuban missile crisis and every conflict we've been in since."

Then, McCain broadened his broadside to also castigate Romney, the former Massachusetts governor, and Thompson, the former Tennessee senator, as well as Giuliani on Iraq. He argued they were "nowhere to be seen when we were fighting a war with the wrong strategy."

"I never saw Romney, Giuliani or Thompson say a word about it, except supporting what I clearly pointed out was a failed strategy," McCain added. He said he has called for more troops in Iraq since 2003 and saw President Bush embrace that proposal earlier this year.

"I don't think there's any greater indication of experience and knowledge of how wars should be fought and how crisis should be handled."

Arizona nuclear plant locked down

By Chris Kahn and Amanda Lee Myers
Associated Press writers

WINTERSBURG, Ariz. — Security officials at the nation's largest nuclear power plant detained a contract worker with a small pipe bomb in the back of his pickup truck Friday, and investigators were searching his apartment, authorities said.

It didn't appear to be an act of terrorism, authorities said, but they were still trying to determine why the device was in the truck.

The worker, identified Friday afternoon as Roger William Hurd of Goodyear, Ariz., was stopped and detained at the entrance of the Palo Verde Nuclear Generating Station, about a half mile from the containment domes where the plant's nuclear material is stored, plant spokesman Jim McDonald said. Security officials then put the nuclear station on lockdown for a few hours, prohibiting anyone from entering or leaving the facility until Friday afternoon.

Authorities described the device as a six-inch capped explosive made of galvanized pipe that contained suspicious residue. Tom Mangano, a spokesman for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, said it was likely homemade.

"If this thing went off in the back of the truck, it certainly would put a hole in it," Mangano said. "It was rather crude in construction, but it could certainly injure somebody."

Maricopa County sheriff's officials rendered the device safe, sheriff's Capt. Paul Chagolia said. The pipe was not hidden in the truck, he said.

Chagolia said Hurd normally drove a motorcycle to work but was in a truck Friday because of cool weather. He described Hurd as about 60 years old and originally from South Carolina.

Hurd was interviewed and cooperating, and authorities were searching his apartment in Phoenix with his consent, Chagolia said. Hurd had not been arrested.

"There's no information to indicate that there's domestic terrorism at hand," he said.

In Washington, the Department of Homeland Security also said there was no known terrorism link.

Messages left at numbers listed for Hurd in Arizona and Hartsville, S.C., weren't immediately returned.

McDonald said Hurd was a procurement engineer, responsible for evaluating equipment purchases for the plant. McDonald wouldn't say which company employed Hurd.

Hurd had access to protected areas of the plant but hadn't been in any such area since Aug. 21, said Randy Edgington, the chief nuclear officer for plant operator Arizona Public Service Co. Hurd would have had access to the reactor but officials didn't know the last time he would have been near them, Edgington said.

"Our security personnel acted cautiously and appropriately demonstrating that our security process and procedures work as designed," Edgington said in a news release.

FBI knew of O.J. Simpson plan in advance

By Linda Deutsch and Ken Ritter
Associated Press writers

LOS ANGELES — Federal agents learned three weeks in advance that O.J. Simpson and a memorabilia dealer planned an operation to retrieve personal items Simpson said were stolen from him, according to FBI reports obtained Friday by The Associated Press.

Dealer Thomas Riccio said he reported to the FBI a collector who claimed to have belongings taken from Simpson.

"The guy flat-out told me he had items stolen from O.J.'s house," Riccio said, "and he legitimate business."

Riccio told FBI agents Aug. 21 that Simpson wanted to videotape the confrontation with the collector, who was posted thousands of pieces of Simpson's memorabilia.

But Riccio was not clear how the operation would unfold. There was no mention in the report of any plans to use guns.

Riccio was advised to contact a lawyer before taking any action and was told that alerting the FBI would not absolve him of any potential crime, agent Linda Kilne wrote of the meeting, which occurred in Los Angeles.

"I went along with O.J.'s plan," Riccio told the AP on Friday. "It was a self-organized sting operation. Except for the final result, with him bringing people who had guns, I knew nothing about that."

Simpson, 60, and five other men were arrested after they allegedly stormed a Las Vegas hotel room with guns drawn Sept. 13 to seize items that were believed to include family photos and the suit Simpson wore the day he was acquainted of murdering his ex-wife and her friend.

Las Vegas police said the FBI did not alert them before the confrontation between Simpson and collectors Alfred Boardley and Bruce Fromong.

"They contacted us afterward and provided us with the documentation," said Las Vegas Police Detective Andy Caldwell, the investigator handling the case.

Caldwell said he had no information about any FBI investigation into the incident. FBI spokesman Laura Einmiller declined to comment on the interview.

Riccio told the AP on Friday that he called Los Angeles police and the FBI about Simpson's plan and "no one seemed to be concerned about it. They didn't seem all that interested."

Simpson is charged with an assortment of felonies including armed robbery and kidnapping. Three of his co-defendants have since pleaded guilty to lesser charges and said they would testify against Simpson. A preliminary hearing is scheduled next week in Las Vegas.

Virginia judge removed

By Larry O'Neil
Associated Press writer

RICHMOND, Va. — A judge who ordered a woman to drop her pants and decided a custody dispute by flipping a coin was removed from the bench — by the Virginia Supreme Court on Friday.

The decision against Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court Judge James Michael Shull of Gate City was unanimous.

"Unless our citizens can trust that judges will fairly resolve the disputes brought before our courts, and treat all litigants with dignity, our courts will lose the public's respect and confidence upon which our legal system depends," Justice Barbara Milano Keenan wrote.

According to the court, Shull admitted tossing a coin to determine which parent would have visitation with a child on Christmas. Shull said he was trying to encourage the parents to decide the issue themselves but later acknowledged that he was wrong.

The pants-dropping incidents, the court said, "were even more egregious."

The court said they occurred when a woman was seeking a protective order against a partner who she said had stabbed her in the leg. Shull knew the woman had a history of mental problems and insisted on seeing the video, the court said.

The woman dropped her pants once to display the wound, then dropped them a second time after Shull left the bench for a closer look to determine whether the woman had received stitches.

A court bailiff testified before the commission that after the hearing, he asked Shull, "Did you see what that lady had on?" According to the bailiff, Shull replied: "Yeah, a black lacy thing... it looked good, didn't it?"

Shull denied making the comment. His attorney, Russell V. Pappas, did not immediately return a phone call seeking comment Friday.

Key Senate Democrats boost Mukasey's prospects

By Devlin Barrett and Lara Jakes Jordan
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — Michael Mukasey drew closer to becoming attorney general Friday after two key Senate Democrats said they would vote for him despite his refusal to say whether waterboarding is torture.

The decision by Sens. Charles Schumer and Dianne Feinstein to back President Bush's nominee came shortly after the chairman of the committee, Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., announced he would vote against Mukasey, a former federal judge.

"This is an extremely difficult decision," Schumer, D-N.Y., said in a statement, adding that Mukasey "is not my ideal choice."

In announcing her support for Mukasey, Feinstein, D-Calif., said "first and foremost, Michael Mukasey is not Alberto Gonzales," referring to the former attorney general who resigned in September

Mukasey's nomination

INCREASING APPROVAL: Michael Mukasey drew closer to becoming attorney general Friday after two key Senate Democrats said they would vote for him despite his refusal to say whether waterboarding is torture.

DESPITE SEN. LEAHY: The decision by Sens. Charles Schumer and Dianne Feinstein to back President Bush's nominee came shortly after the chairman of the committee, Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., announced he would vote against Mukasey.

ALMOST THERE: Schumer and Feinstein's support for Mukasey virtually guarantees that a majority of the committee will recommend his confirmation when it votes on it next Tuesday.

Leahy

Senate votes on his confirmation. But Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., had said he would not bring it up for a vote without Judiciary Committee action first.

Schumer's announcement followed a private meeting Friday with Mukasey to discuss waterboarding.

"I deeply oppose it," Schumer said of waterboarding. "Unfortunately, this nominee, indeed any proposed by President Bush, will not agree with this. I am, however, confident that this nominee would enforce a law that bans waterboarding."

Schumer, who was Mukasey's chief Democratic sponsor, said the retired judge told him that if Congress passes a law banning waterboarding "the president would have absolutely no legal authority to ignore such a law." Schumer said Mukasey said he would enforce any congressional ban on the controversial interrogation method.

Human Rights Watch called Schumer and Feinstein's support for Mukasey "extremely disappointing." Jennifer Daskal, the group's senior counterterrorism counsel, criticized the two senators for "supporting a nominee for the position of America's chief law enforcement officer who refuses to call waterboarding, which has been prosecuted as torture for over a hundred years, illegal."

"Mukasey appears more interested in protecting administration officials from possible prosecution than in providing a straight answer on the law — hardly the kind of independent legal adviser that America needs," Daskal said.

Additionally, the American Civil Liberties Union urged its supporters to call their senators and demand a vote against Mukasey.

Torture is considered a war crime by the international community and waterboarding has been banned by the U.S. military, but CIA interrogators are believed to have used the technique on terror detainees as recently as a few years ago.

after months of questions about his honesty.

Including Leahy, five of the Judiciary Committee's 10 Democrats had said they would vote against Mukasey's confirmation after the nominee earlier this week refused to say that waterboarding, an interrogation technique that simulates drowning, is torture and therefore illegal. But with nine Republicans on the panel, Schumer and Feinstein's support for Mukasey virtually guarantees that a majority of the committee will recommend his confirmation when it votes on it next Tuesday. Leaders in both parties have said they expect Mukasey to get at least 70 votes when the full, 100-member

Gov. Otter's water plan a little fuzzy on details

PEERS: To Gov. Butch Otter, for his puzzling handling of a package of water conservation proposals unveiled last week.

On Oct. 26, Otter disclosed plans for several projects that could provide the city of Twin Falls with a new water source, recharge springs which feed the aquaculture industry and pay farmers to stop irrigating as much as 20,000 acres of farmland.

Then he left on a trade mission to China.

But water groups, lawmakers and Twin Falls city officials say they had little, if any, dialogue with Otter's office on the subject.

"The strange thing is that this came from his advisers without any input from the people who would be affected or the people who would pay for this long-term," said Rep. Maxine Bell, R-Jerome, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.

Some Republicans say money for the projects — $15 million — could come from a $60 million spending bill passed by the Legislature last March. That cash is supposed to be for emergencies and probably would be used to update prisons.

The total projects are estimated at $8.4 million and an item to pay farmers to stop irrigating their land would cost $5 million.

Otter could use the $15 million as he wishes, but needs approval from Bell and Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, who co-chair the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee.

The governor enjoys springing a political surprise, but this one was sloppy.

"My initial reaction is unless someone can justify why it would be an emergency to move right now, it's better suited to have these proposals brought before the Legislature and addressed during the upcoming session," Cameron said.

We agree. CHEERS: To supporters of a vote-by-mail system in Idaho who are taking another shot at getting the proposal approved by the Legislature.

The measure, put forward by the Idaho Association of Counties, would permit voters to mail in ballots in elections other than primary and general contests, such as bond issue votes, taxing districts and recalls.

In the 2007 legislative session, vote-by-mail made it out of the House State Affairs Committee, but was pulled off the House floor and never returned.

Supporters of the change say it would make voting more convenient — especially in rural areas with few polling places — and increase turnout, while saving counties money.

But opposing lawmakers worry about fraud. It seems to us that fraud is far less of a problem in Idaho than low voter turnout. It's abysmal in primaries and non-candidate elections.

Turnout for the May 2006 primary was less than 26 percent. It will be even lower. In 2008, if Idaho Republicans succeed in their legal quest to close the GOP primary to Democrats and independents.

Oregon has had vote-by-mail — with few problems — for 19 years. There's no reason it couldn't work here.

PEERS: To Sen. Hillary Clinton, for her burn-fisted efforts to court Nevada voters by opposing a Yucca Mountain nuclear waste dump.

The long-delayed opening of Yucca Mountain, which would take in the nation's most toxic nuclear garbage, means that dangerous radioactive waste stored at the Idaho National Laboratory will stay there indefinitely.

"Yucca Mountain is not the answer," Clinton told a hearing of the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee on Wednesday.

With Nevada holding a presidential caucus Jan. 19, Democratic presidential candidates have been competing to prove who's the most opposed to the Yucca Mountain facility that the Energy Department is trying to build in the desert 90 miles northwest of Las Vegas.

Clinton capitalized on her seat on the Senate environment committee with a detailed condemnation of the dump. Afterward, she held a conference call with Nevada reporters to reiterate her opposition.

Shameless timing, in our opinion. The Democratic presidential caucuses in Idaho are scheduled for Feb. 5. Probably just in time for Clinton to condemn potato blight.

CHEERS: To Idaho Power, for giving future coal-fired power plants the cold shoulder.

In a filing with the federal Securities and Exchange Commission, the state's largest utility said escalating costs, permit issues and greenhouse gas-emission concerns led it to abandon plans to add 250 megawatts of coal-fired power to its system by 2013.

Instead, the utility plans to get the electricity from a new natural gas turbine — as well as wind and geothermal.

Environmental groups praised Idaho Power's decision, saying it's a sign the utility is listening to customers who want green energy.

The grassroots backlash in 2006 that forced Sempra Generation to abandon plans to build a 600-megawatt coal-fired power plant near Jerome, followed by a moratorium on such facilities imposed by the Legislature and Gov. Butch Otter's decision to keep Idaho out of a mercury cap-and-trade program are all ample evidence that Idahoans want a cleaner alternative to coal.

Good for Idaho Power for listening.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Barigar hopes to preserve way of life in Twin Falls

As a fourth-generation Magic Valley native raising two young sons here in Twin Falls, I have a vested interest in and genuine love of our community. My wife and I enjoy after-dinner walks in our neighborhood, kayaking on the Snake River, having date night at local restaurants and watching our sons' sports. I want to preserve this quality of life and ensure my children, Twin Falls is always going to be a great place in which to live and do business.

In the past four years as a member of the City Council, I've been actively involved in studying the challenges of our water supply in Twin Falls. By the end of the year, the information I need to make a solid decision for the community's future will be available, and I look forward to leading the charge to implement the appropriate solutions.

Several other plans related to the future development of our community will be completed in the next few months. I've been a player in shaping these plans and look forward to the results to help me set in motion the activities that will guide our future growth.

I've also been an avid supporter of continued enhancement of our quality of life with trail systems, development planning for Auger Falls, implementation of an "Art in Public Places" program and involvement with defining a vision for development in Historic Downtown. I will continue to stand up for the issues that are important to the Twin Falls community and be a leader on the council. I ask for your vote at the polls on Nov. 6. And I ask you to encourage your friends, neighbors and business associates to support me and positive growth in Twin Falls.

Jerome candidates have proven leadership

As the city of Jerome continues with industrial, commercial and residential growth, it is more important now than ever to elect qualified people to the City Council.

My only feeling is one thing, but ability, integrity, knowledge and common sense are words that describe Bob Culver, John Shine and Kent Lee. I personally know these gentlemen and ask you to support them. Cameron Shine and Lee have proven business, management and hands on leadership that far overshadows the other candidates.

As a county resident I can't vote in the city election; however, city decisions impact county residents as well. Any mayor would be delighted to work with these three men.

Pants vs. pantsuit: Catching up with Hillary

WASHINGTON —

When you're leading the Democratic presidential race, as Hillary Clinton is, you don't expect other candidates to focus their sharpest criticism your way.

Yet the spin coming out of the Clinton campaign is that the race was ganging up on Hillary. Sorry, but when girls insist on playing hardball with the boys, they don't get (or cry foul — or change the game to dodgeball — when they get bruised).

Not that Hillary Clinton did anything herself following Tuesday night's Democratic presidential debate in Philadelphia. She's too smart for that. But somehow the idea magically surfaced that the men were piling on.

The New York Times reported that Clinton's campaign officials tried to create sympathy for Hillary the same way they did when Republican Rick Lazio confronted her during their 2000 Senate race. A Clinton adviser told The Washington Post that, "Ultimately, it was six guys against her, and she came off as one strong woman." A headline on the Drudge Report said, "Scorn: As the Med. Gang Up."

Pillie. Hillary's campaign people took swift advantage of her stance as a woman. A clever glib, "The Politics of Pile-On," shows in rapid-fire succession the other candidates mentioning Clinton's name and ends with her saying:

"I seem to be the topic of great conversation and conversation, and that's for a reason."

"So-wish! Score one for Clinton."

There's a reason, all right. Hillary's having her cake and eating everybody else's, too. It must be frustrating to challengers who need to attack her positions, but fear the inevitable piling-on accusations and the appearance of bullying a woman.

In debate post-mortems, moderators Brian Williams and Tim Russert were also accused of joining the pile-on, especially Russert, who kept pounding Hillary for straight answers when she refused to "bridge" to other topics.

In some instances, the pounding was justified. Hillary is nearly as pro-filer, if not as arduous, as her husband in avoiding a firm position that might alienate someone somewhere.

When asked, for example, whether she supports New York Gov. Eliot Spitzer's proposal to issue driver's licenses to illegal immigrants, as Clinton apparently said she did to a New Hampshire newspaper, she circled the question.

She wasn't necessarily for it, but she wasn't necessarily against it.

She wouldn't necessarily support it, but she could deny it; why Spitzer was doing it to address the failure of the Bush administration, of course.

She also mentioned Congress' failure to pass comprehensive immigration reform.

Sen. Chris Dodd of Connecticut, who deserves a more prominent place in the Democratic lineup, seemed to better understand the concept of answering a question.

No, he said, a driver's license is a privilege and illegal immigrants don't get one. How hard was that? Pretty hard, apparently, if you don't want to offend a single Spanish-speaking voter in the United States.

Hillary also refused to answer candidly when asked if she would release communications between her and then-President Bill Clinton that might illuminate her claims to White House experience. The former president has ordered all records kept under seal until 2012, but Hillary's response suggested that she has no choice in the matter. She can't ask her husband to lift the ban?

In another instance, Russert asked three times whether Hillary would pledge as president to prevent Iran from getting a nuclear bomb. Hillary gave three answers that were sort of yes-but, but that left uncomfortable wiggle room for failure. She pledged to do everything I can to prevent Iran from developing a nuclear bomb.

Why not just say, "Yes, I pledge"? She can still try diplomatic approaches, including carrots and sticks, as she mentioned, but why not simply say I can't get the bomb under her watch?

Getting a straight answer from Hillary is consistently challenging, as other candidates noted — hence the many "Hillary" references. Their "attacks" weren't only because Hillary looks like a punk, but because she's cagey to a fault.

At times, Hillary's relationship 40 nuance borders on compulsion more than wisdom. If her husband triangulates, she triangulates. She's been working so many sides for so long that she seems incapable of yes or no.

Hillary can handle the men just fine. What's giving her problems is Hillary.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Burley council made improper use of money

The Burley City Council, along with the Urban Renewal Board and possibly the city administrator, believed it was proper to give to one of the richest couples in Cassia County a gift of approximately $1 million. This gift was to supply city services which included road, sewer and water utilities to the Fairfield Hotel. No other subdivider or average citizen has received even close to these same benefits from this Burley City Council.

If you believe this gift is a bonafide, you should vote to remove the following incumbent city councilmen: Dennis Curtis, Ruben Saldana and Don Dean.

Dwight deserves seat on Twin Falls City Council

I am writing to request your support to re-elect Glenda Dwight to the City Council.

Glenda has done an outstanding job in the two terms she has served the city. In addition to her prior efforts in being on Planning and Zoning. She has worked diligently toward allowing thoughtful, planned growth for the city with the supporting infrastructure that allows the growth to work for all citizens. She has worked hard in her position, being involved in updating the new Master Transportation and Comprehensive plans.

She is also very much aware of the water issues facing the area and is working toward long-term, cost-effective ways to bring the city into compliance with the new federal regulations regarding the arsenic levels in our drinking water. This isn't a quick fix issue and requires that the various alternatives be considered, ones that will allow the city to meet the growing demand.

It is important to have a broad cross-section of perspectives on the council. As the only female council member or candidate, she brings a different viewpoint to this body that would be lost without her presence. Please vote for Glenda Dwight on Nov. 6. She truly is focused on our future.

Kezelle takes time for individuals, community

Will Kezelle, who is running for City Council, would be very worthy of your vote.

When I was 15 years old and decided to start a business of my own, the first person that offered to help me out was Mr. Kezelle. Having been a successful entrepreneur himself, he took time away from his own business to mentor mine. When I was 16 years old and decided to start an organization to help other teens that had an entrepreneurial spirit (Young Entrepreneurs Success), Will Kezelle was again the first person that willingly offered to help. He donated his time and talents to help me with my endeavors.

Mr. Kezelle believes in young people. He believes in new business and growth for the Magic Valley and has a keen eye that is focused on the future and is willing to work tirelessly for improvement.

Mr. Kezelle has the unique ability to never see failure, only opportunity, and he has been willing to share that insight with a variety of individuals throughout the Magic Valley. I have been so appreciative of his entrepreneurial spirit and his contagious enthusiasm about life.

He would be an excellent Twin Falls City Council member.

Johnson's service deserves another term on council

I encourage you to join me in returning David Johnson to Seat 2 on the Twin Falls City Council. Our community faces many challenges and opportunities over the next few years and it will take leadership on the council to ensure sound decision-making and follow-through.

David is a contractor, property taxpayer and, having resided here nearly 30 years, has served as a volunteer to many worthwhile organizations in Magic Valley in an effort to continue to work alongside citizen groups, city leaders and fellow council members providing guidance that will prove beneficial to Twin Falls and the Magic Valley.

As a local businessman, he recognizes the necessity of achieving a "balance" between quality of life and economic activity. His work, in balancing growth and quality of life issues in Twin Falls, is driven by a respect for our heritage, a belief in planning for the future, and a willingness to embrace change as needed, continually focusing on our city's ability to provide necessary services and infrastructure, in an affordable and efficient manner.

Regarding the "re-elect" campaign signs as noted by Times-News reporter Jared Hopkins' article dated Oct. 21: Let's not get hung up on semantics. Johnson is simply asking to be returned to City Council, where he has diligently served since his appointment in early 2006.

The issues are complex and challenging, but David Johnson has proven he can make a difference.

Again, I ask you to join me

In voting for David Johnson on Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Barigar has support from Magic Valley builders

The Magic Valley Builders Association is endorsing candidate Shawn Barigar for reelection to City Council on Nov. 6.

The MVBA Board of Directors feels that Shawn's involvement in this community, in both the public and private sector, gives him the unique opportunity to see Twin Falls from multiple perspectives. We feel his leadership is essential for the continued management and balanced growth of our city.

Shawn Barigar understands the need for continued economic development and in creating and maintaining a vibrant community. He also has a balanced and realistic understanding of how growth impacts our community and how growth should be financed in a fair and equitable manner.

Shawn Barigar's decisions have helped guide Twin Falls on a course that will take us well into the future. His work, however, is not done. There are many critical issues facing the city of Twin Falls. Shawn is very well educated on those issues and actively engaged in solving them.

The Magic Valley Builders Association would ask that you join us in support of Shawn Barigar for City Council on Nov. 6. On behalf of the Magic Valley Builders Association Board of Directors,
TONY HUGHES
Twin Falls

(Editor's note: Tony Hughes is the president of the Magic Valley Builders Association.)

Cast your vote for responsible leader

Not long ago a friend of mine visited me from the east. One of her first comments was, "I thought I was going to visit a unique little town, but this is anywhere-USA."

Usually don't get involved in politics, but at this point it's hard for me to sit back and continually see our town sold down the river by a few who will benefit from its exploitation.

Undoubtedly, growth is inevitable. It's happening in all the nice little towns across the United States, but unwanted growth is unnecessary. Have you taken a good look at all the big businesses and the buildings that they put up? Do we really need a Wal-Mart here? You want to "save downtown" and at the same time bring in Wal-Mart?

On Nov. 6, my vote will be for Lee Helder.

And if you care anything about this town, yours will too. Vote for someone who cares about the town — not his own agenda. Granted, we realize that politicians use their offices for personal gain, but if we know beforehand, why would we intentionally put them into office?

In the newspaper, we see that Barigar is wearing so many hats that he'd have to have a 120-hour week to fulfill the duties that he's getting paid for. We also see him skirting around an issue when asked about this question. Lee Helder is not going to skirt any issue just to get a vote. He will take a stand to do what is right.

How much is our town worth you? You can help by going to the polls and voting for Lee Helder so he can do something to save this town, because if you don't, there won't be anything left to save.

STEPHANIE HOLMAN

Barigar knows how to lead us through growth

When you go to the polls on Tuesday, cast your vote for Shawn Barigar.

Our city is growing, as is our region, and with that growth come opportunities and challenges. Shawn works hard to understand the issues and the impact growth will have on Twin Falls. He works well with others, community leaders, members of the council, city staff and citizens to capitalize on the opportunities and meet the challenges. He has a proven track record. When it comes to our tax dollars, he will manage our money as carefully as he manages the chamber finances and those of Historic Downtown.

As reported by the Times-News, Shawn is instrumental in turning around this organization's financial problems. Financial stability and revitalization of our downtown is a necessity. Our downtown is not only essential to our community, it plays an important role throughout the Magic Valley.

Shawn's involvement in organizations such as the St. Luke's board, Rotary and the chamber provide perspective for his role on our City Council. It helps him to understand the issues that affect the citizens he serves and he responds accordingly.

Shawn is diligent; he listens and he is committed to our community; he deserves our votes on Tuesday.

Please join us in writing for Shawn Barigar for City Council on Tuesday.

Kezelle's leadership will benefit community

David and I have known the Kezelles since they moved to Twin Falls more than 15 years ago. We know them on both a professional and personal basis.

Shawn has always been honest in his profession and, ever concerned, he handled them in a professional and timely manner. His wife is a wonderful support to him in all of his endeavors, along with his children's support also. You know where you stand with Will and he is always trying to improve or make better whatever task is at hand.

Will is a hard worker, dependable, committed to the cause and a problem solver. Twin Falls would benefit greatly if it were to elect Will Kezelle. He is self-motivated and wants what is best for all of Twin Falls in the present circumstances as well as future growth in our community.

Shine's background will help Jerome's future

This letter is to express my support of John Shine for Jerome City Council.

I've known John for several years and know him to be the kind of person Jerome needs on its City Council. He currently serves on the council as an appointee and has already established his good character and strong work ethic.

John is conscientious, has strong values and has all the qualities of a good leader for this community. He is the kind of person who will actively listen to the public and do all the research needed to make good decisions. He has a strong background in planning and budgeting and the skills and experience needed to properly finance priorities and create a budget that will keep the cost of providing city services well managed.

John understands the issues facing this city and demonstrates the thoughtfulness, good judgment and creativity to address those issues, presenting solutions good for Jerome's future. He has already shown that he is capable and forward-thinking, and I know he will continue to be that way for four more years.

He is concerned about the water issue and will proactively work to acquire additional senior water rights for the city.

He is concerned about senior citizens and actively supports a new senior citizen center. He is equally concerned about crime, illegal drug use, community appearance and the burden of property taxes. He wants to build a skate park and expand the animal shelter and will work to accomplish those.

John has demonstrated his willingness to go the extra mile for his community. He has been a welcome addition to the council for the past year and wants to continue serving the citizens of Jerome for four more years.

I encourage you to vote for John Shine on Nov. 6.

Otter's top aide will lobby for Idaho Power

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's top aide is going to work as a lobbyist for the company that owns Idaho Power Co., becoming the latest member of state government to skip directly to a private-sector lobbying post where he could be asking his former boss and colleagues for help.

Malmen, Otter's chief of staff and one of the state's most influential Republicans, will be senior manager of government affairs for IdahoCorp, the holding company for the utility. Malmen, a chief of staff for former Gov. Phil Batt and former finance director under former Gov. Dirk Kempthorne, had earned $120,000 annually under Otter — $15,000 more than the governor, the state's top elected official.

Malmen is being replaced by Jason Kreizenbeck, now a lobbyist for Micron Technology Inc.

Idaho has no revolving-door laws that limit officials like Malmen from immediately going to work at private-sector jobs in which they could be asking for concessions from state government.

Malmen, who will likely start his new job in December, told The Associated Press that after IdahoCorp approached him about taking the new position, he was careful to avoid conflicts while he's still a state employee.

"When they first approached me with an offer, I notified our counsel and recused myself from all those issues," Malmen said, adding his involvement with issues pertinent to Idaho Power has largely been reserved to tax-policy questions, not natural resource issues that are addressed by other staff members.

"The primary focus for me is going to be doing a lot of their federal stuff," said Malmen, who was also chief of staff when Otter was a U.S. House member from Idaho. "There will undoubtedly be some state stuff, too, but it will be mostly federal."

In the last 18 months, at least eight ex-lawmakers or staff for Otter and former Govs. Dirk Kempthorne and Jim Risch became lobbyists. They include former House Majority Caucus Chairwoman Julie Ellsworth, R-Boise, who won a lobbying job on the recommendation of House Speaker Lawrence Denny, R-Midvale; former House Speaker Bruce Newcomb, R-Burley; and Lance Giles, Kempthorne's top adviser on his billion-dollar "Connecting Idaho" roads project. Giles went to work for the company that won the contract to oversee that highway work, Washington Group International. Kempthorne's chief of staff, Brian Whitlock, also went to work as a lobbyist for the Battelle Energy Alliance, which runs the Idaho National Laboratory.

Idaho Power abandons plans to build coal-fired plants, says natural gas is better

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Idaho Power Co. is the latest utility to temper its enthusiasm for new coal plants, telling federal stock market regulators that escalating costs, permit issues and greenhouse-gas-emission concerns led it to abandon plans to build enough coal-fired electricity generation by 2013 to light 107,500 more homes.

According to a Securities and Exchange Commission filing this week, the Boise-based utility "determined that coal-fired generation is not the best technology to meet its resource needs in 2013." The company had planned to get an additional 250 megawatts from coal by then.

Instead, it now aims to develop a new natural gas turbine somewhere in southern Idaho by 2012, and augment plans to add 101 megawatts of wind generation in December 2008 and 45.5 megawatts of geothermal generation in phases between 2007 and 2011. One megawatt can light about 750 homes.

Across the nation, utilities have been making similar decisions, with at least 16 coal-fired power plant proposals getting scrapped in recent months and more than three dozen delayed as power companies face increasing pressure due to concerns over global warming and rising construction costs.

"We're really de-emphasizing our plan to build a large scale coal plant," said Idaho Power spokesman Dennis Lopez on Friday.

Now the utility is scrutinizing areas where its proposed low-natural-gas plant could be built to add to its base electricity supply, for which demand is rising at a rate of 40 megawatts annually. Since winds don't blow all the time, wind turbines alone can't meet the increasing demand, Lopez said.

The realities are, you still need a resource to back up nondispatchable resources like wind," he said. "As we look at it right now, the best immediate technology for today is a combined cycle natural gas power plant."

Jury clears local clinic in methadone case

Trial stemmed from patient's death in 2003

By Cass Friedman
Times-News writer

Medical personnel racing from their cars into the Valley Hospital in Spokane, Wash.,

each morning pass by a man talking to God.
The man is Thomas Byrne, a former physician's assistant who now works in Spokane. Byrne says he's made this ritual part of his morning routine ever since the family of a 61-year-old chronic pain patient accused him of causing her death by a methadone overdose in Twin Falls in 2003.The sentencing ended on Tuesday. Ending a nine-day civil trial, a Twin Falls jury found Byrne, his supervising doctor and the Southern Idaho Pain Institute of Twin Falls not responsible for malpractice or for breaching the standard of care.
But Byrne says the death of Rosalie Schmechel still weighs heavily on him. Schmechel, a new patient who died six days after she first appeared in his office, sufferedaccording to a forensic pathologist.
"There were times during the course of this I really questioned whether I really wanted to continue being a medical provider," said Byrne, who works in the Spokane hospital's emergency room. "It makes you have doubts, when you are being questioned about all the issues that came up at trial."
Schmechel's family still hasreason to feel anger toward him, Byrne said.
The verdict did not feel like vindication, Byrne said. But having a jury rule in his favor did eliminate many of his feelings of self-blame.
On Sept. 26, 2003, many doctors were switching their patients from OxyContin to the less expensive drug methadone. Byrne started Schmechel, who suffered from chronic low back and legpain, on three daily 10-milligram doses of methadone. By Oct. 2, she was dead.
Dave Comstock, the Schmechel family's attorney, cited studies from the Federal Food and Drug Administration showing that methadone can be deadly if not administered carefully.
Shortly after the death of "Rosalie," as her family calls her, she was buried in the

19-year-old confesses to purse theft in WinCo parking lot

By Cass Friedman
Times-News writer

A 19-year-old from Twin Falls, who was suspected of a Sept. 14 strong-arm robbery in the parking lot of WinCo Foods, confessed to police that he stole another woman's purse at the same location on June 1, police say.

Michael Copenhaver was charged Oct. 24 with grand theft after WinCo Foods shopper Jeanette Ellis identified him as the man who stole her purse. Another man approached Ellis as she loaded groceries into the trunk of her car in the supermarket's parking lot while another man, whom police say was another suspect, was shopping her car.

The first man had asked her for directions to the Third and Federal Church, causing her to scratch her head because no such church exists in Twin Falls.

The Oct. 2 grand theft charge was dismissed Friday after he agreed to plead guilty to other charges on Monday.

This week, Twin Falls police obtained a confession from Copenhaver saying he stole another woman's purse June 1 while she loaded groceries into her car. The substitutes in both cases were the same.

In the June 1 robbery, Linda Neal was giving directions to the Presbyterian Church, when the robber leaped for her purse and jumped into an open door of a moving sport utility vehicle.

Cass Friedman can be reached at 735-3241 or cfriedman@magiclevel.com.

IN THE FOOTSTEPS OF THE SAINTS

Katherine Oyston, 9, an altar server at St. Edwards Catholic Church, carries a candle as she waits for Mass to begin Thursday night for the All Saints' Day celebration. Jamie Gil, the coordinator of Hispanic activities at the Twin Falls church, says that as part of the Day of the Dead, the church acknowledges all saints within and outside the church. Gil, a native of central Mexico, remembers time spent with family on All Saints' Day. He says people in Mexico go to the cemetery with food and candy, and stay at their loved ones' graves all night. He says that there would also be Mass, as there was on Friday night at St. Edward's. "We celebrate life even though they have already died," he said.

Six run for two seats on Wendell council

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

Wendell voters on Tuesday will not only decide the political fate of Mayor Rex Strickland's recall, but they will decide who is best suited to represent them on the City Council.

With just two four-year seats, Wendell's ballot appears somewhat congested. Councilman Don Burns has chosen to not seek reelection, but Council President "Ironic" Rounsefell wants to serve another term. Five other residents — Barry Brown, Rex Davis, Parvej Jackatta, Jonathan Trace and Haty Jackatta — have also thrown their hats into the race. The two candidates with the most votes will run a seat.

Ilene Rounsefell

Incumbent Ilene Rounsefell, 70, has volunteered in Wendell since moving back seven years ago. Rounsefell was born in the Hub City and is a 1955 graduate of Wendell High School.

With four years on the City

Barry Brown

Council, she says her background is an asset to helping the city move forward.

"I feel that I can help improve the quality of life in Wendell due to my background in municipal financing, office management, knowledge of rules and regulations regarding municipalities and knowledge of the problems that can arise without future growth planning," she said.

I elected, she hopes to see the city's sewer project completed and will encourage better maintenance of streets and infrastructure.

The council has really gotten a lot accomplished over the past four years. We have updated ordinances and continue working toward financial accountability," she said. "I really do think that we can all work together."

Barry Brown

Barry Brown moved to Wendell in 1946, attended local schools and graduated from Wendell High in 1959.

"I have lived in Wendell and in the adjacent area most of my life. As is my home, I am greatly concerned with Wendell's health and welfare," he said. "The one thing that this current council and mayor seem to not be concerned about is having compassion or respect for the citizens they are supposed to represent."

Brown wants to see that intersections are safely visible and properly labeled with street signs. "Our city needs to also improve the appearance of the library," he said. "I don't know if we can improve the building (which).

Hansen candidate shares views on area issues

By Amanda Murphy
Times-News correspondent

Anthony (Tony) Bohm, 55, moved to Hansen, Idaho, in 2003. He has lived in Twin Falls County for more than 44 years. He is running against Joseph Ratto for a two-year seat on Hansen's City Council. He says he is a proactive resident who would like to help the community make positive changes.

"There's a need to be something for the kids," he said.

"Though Hansen may not be able to fund the construction of a pool or a theater anytime soon, Bohm said he feels that building a skate park on the south side of Rolling Hills Park might be just the kind of project the community could complete.

"Between volunteers and donations it is a project we could do at a low cost," he said.

The city's water system, strengthening law enforcement and attracting more businesses are also things he is interested in.

William Burns, who works for Dairy Farmers of America, is running for one of the City Council's two four-year seats.

Other candidates for the four-year seats include

William Pyron, Todd Simpson, Mary Dana, Kevin McClain and Sarah Hansen.

Burns has lived in Hansen for more than 50 years and would like to see more residents become involved in community events and show support for the children of Hansen.

"These kids are our future and we need to show them we care about them," he said.

Other areas he would focus on are supporting the school district and the city's water system, strengthening law enforcement and attracting more businesses are also things he is interested in.

William Burns, who works for Dairy Farmers of America, is running for one of the City Council's two four-year seats.

be most beneficial for the council to focus on improving upon what Hansen already has.

"We have nice facilities and space. The council's job is to take care of the day-to-day business," he said.

"That day-to-day business has included changing dog ordinances, working on the city's new well and water system, tightening the water lines, and working on a water bond," he said.

The bond he is talking about would be a $10-million bond to fund the city's water system, he said.

'Gear Up' stays alive

Undisclosed donor comes to rescue of college-prep program

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Idaho students should still benefit from a federal grant initiative that helps lower-income children go to college, the Idaho State Board of Education announced Friday.

The future of Idaho's Gear Up program now rests on Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter accepting a financial plan for the program submitted by the state Division of Financial Management after an undisclosed donor promised about $200,000 for the program Thursday afternoon.

Board members still have to find $1.3 million more for the program over the next five years, Browning said. But they expect some major donors to be available. "I don't think they're aware they can fix the program. The original funding problems came from unallowable in-kind matches written in during the grant-writing phase, and Otter had urged the board for several months to correct the problem.

"We're pretty close, and I think that's what the Division of Financial Management and the governor had seen," Browning said. "It would be a real shame for (students) to lose out now when the board's so close."

The program costs Idaho $2.9 million a year and provides coverage for financial management services starting in the seventh grade, with scholarships for those who take a college-prep curriculum and graduate. "Educators like it, and some in the Magic Valley expressed relief Friday that the program will continue."

"I'd be remiss if I didn't say I was a little bit nervous about (the remaining $1.3 million)," Twin Falls School District Superintendent Wiley Dotson said.

But the district has already hired a coordinator and prepared activities for 230 seventh-graders enrolled at Robert Stuart Junior High, he said, and stopping those programs now would be a disaster.

"It's worth doing, we think, so we're going to proceed in good faith," Dotson said.

The financial risk was much less for the College of Southern Idaho, which pledged in October to provide matching scholarships for Gear Up graduates. The money would have gone right back into the college's coffers, said Mike Mason, vice president of administrative affairs. But the loss of the program, he said, would have been a disappointment.

"I'm glad they're doing that," he said. "That's going to help some kids."

Other likely work decide on the plan until Monday, when he returns from China. But the board has support from Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna and other state employees. Melissa McGrath, department of Education spokeswoman, said Luna will help in the search for the rest of the funding.

The board's plan is a "waterfall" plan, where the state would pay for the first $100,000 of the program, and the rest would be paid for by the state.

Frances Ann Muldoon

Frances Ann Muldoon died peacefully in her Marsing home on Oct. 31, 2007. She was 75.

The funeral is scheduled for 10:30 a.m. Monday, Nov. 5, at the American Legion 1st Legion Hall, 212 Second St. in Marsing. Viewing will be from 4 to 8 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 4, at the Flahiff Funeral Chapel in Caldwell.

Friends and family remain shocked and deeply saddened by the sudden passing of Frances' passing. She had been uncommonly healthy throughout her life and showed no unusual signs of aging. We mourn the loss of a great friend, mother and grandmother. She will be remembered for her class, humor and loyalty. Her moral compass and love for Jesus Christ guided her throughout the years and was a shining example for all those who knew her.

Her mom named her Frances, but those close to her called her "Frankie." She was born Sept. 27, 1932, in Rupert, to Ruth and Robert Scott. In 1940, she moved with her mother and sister to Marsing, where she attended public school through high school. Shortly after graduating from Marsing High School in 1950, Frankie attended business classes in Boise before taking a secretarial position with the Swift Company in Caldwell. Frankie Scott met Jack Muldoon in elementary school and began dating in high school. They married in 1953 and began a lifetime partnership that endured through lean and beautiful years. Their love for each other was, simply, immeasurable.

Following Jack's graduation from Idaho State

University in 1958, the couple settled in Caldwell where Jack worked for Pennywise Drug Store. In 1965, they moved to Twin Falls and spent the next 26 years in the Magic Valley before moving to Marsing in 1991. Frankie and Jack finally found their way back to their childhood home in Marsing when they returned to 2007.

Frankie was preceded in death by her mother, Ruth; sisters, Raeb and Kay; brother, Robert; and father, Robert. She is survived by Jack; daughters, Lisa Lynn Newton and Kristine Anne Muldoon-Mead; and sons, Matthew Alan Muldoon and Colin Scott Muldoon. She is also survived by her 50 nieces and nephews. It's not now or not, but isn't a very attractive place, and it should be."

Ken Davis

Ken Davis, tired of paying high utility bills every month, stepped into the elections to see if he can get a residents' vote bang for their buck. "I want to see the city's trees trimmed, the roads repaired, all that good stuff. It isn't enough that we have a clean city that doesn't impress me at all. I am paying so much money each month and not seeing much for it," he said.

Davis, 62, understands that rates should at least cover the cost of treating waste water and delivering potable water. He worked for the city in a number of positions, and recently won a $75,000 lawsuit for his May 2006 wrongful termination. "I've no complaints with the city crew but there are a number of jobs that they could be doing. I just don't see how we can afford to pay both a city superintendent and aagoon operator who doesn't have much of a system to operate yet," he said. "I think if the city can get a control on its spending, then we should be able to keep our bill below $100 a month."

Jon Inace

After being defeated in his run for reelection two-years ago, Jon Inace hopes Wendell voters will give him an opportunity to serve this time around. Inace, 50, has been a Wendell resident for 29 years. His biggest concern for the Hub City is economic development. "We would like to see the city become more involved in bringing economic opportunities to the area."

"When I was on the council, Wendell was involved in meetings with agencies who bring economic development to rural cities, and I think we've really dropped the ball," Inace said.

"It would be nice to see some growth in Wendell. We would like to see more jobs opportunities," he said. "I think our sewer system problems are holding us back; we can put on more subdivisions or users to the system, and we need to work on getting that project going."

Pat Jacketta

Pat Jacketta, 68, moved to Wendell in 1990. She decided to run for City Council after resigning from the planning and zoning commission when City Clerk Carol Brown was fired in September.

"I guess I needed to put my money where my mouth was," Jacketta said. "I care very much about the future of Wendell and will work to see that we have where everyone can benefit."

"Throughout my life I have had to work with a lot of people, and I feel that I can help communicate citizen's concerns to the council," she said.

Harvey Parish

Not only is Harvey Parish concerned with the quality of Wendell's water, he is concerned with its dwindling supply. Parish, 57, decided to run for office to stress conservation and help the city try to find more water resources.

A Wendell resident for 32 years, Parish said he believes the city is moving in the right direction with the recent drafting of a water conservation ordinance, but he would like to see more progress securing water for future supply.

He would also like the city to draft a noise ordinance, noting that noise complaints are residents' No. 1 complaint.

 ther, Ada: County Forensic Pathologist - Dr. Glen Grobman's autopsy determined she died of an overdose of fentanyl.
 "Since that time it has been the family's mission to try to see that this doesn't happen to anyone else," Comstock said. "They are devastated. It's a hard pill for them to swallow because this is something that they have been emotionally invested in for nearly four years."
 Dr. Aron Lipman, professor of Pharmacology at the University of Utah, testified that the defendant breached the "standard of care" by rapidly increasing Schmechel's doses. He alleged the change was "dangerous" and "reckless." Comstock said after the trial, "Other medical experts testified that defendants had met the standard of care." Schmechel also suffered from severe aortic stenosis. Lead defense attorney Steve Hopper of Glens Parkway, "Grobman could not explain the trial. Her 30 milligrams a day brought the medication concentration in her blood to a toxic level."
 "Everybody agreed that 80 milligrams a day was a reasonable dose," Hopper testified. "Nothing from the autopsy tells us definitely what happened."

 The jury agreed. The Idaho Board of Medicine also agreed in a non-binding decision before the Schmechel family filed the civil claim in Oct. 3, 2005.

CLASS 4A STATE PLAYOFFS

Indians take Tigers out of 4A playoffs

By Bradley Gure
Times-News writer

POCATELLO — There wasn't a lot of time to adjust. One of Jerome's studs was out of action for the Tigers' quarterfinal game against the Pocatello Indians, and it was as if a stage coach had lost one of its horses. Sure, both can get by, but the load was heavier to pull. Such was the case, and the Tigers were sent home from the Class 4A Idaho High School Football State Championship chase after a 41-10 loss to the now 7-4 Indians.

"Add Jason (Stokes) to the game ... our leading receiver, our leading receiver, our second leading return guy ... he's caught 52 footballs, he's ran about 112 times, over 1,300 yards for us," Jerome coach Gary Krumm said. "It just deflates you, especially when (the injury) happens Thursday afternoon."

It showed as the Tigers took to the air to compensate, hoping that the hurry-up offense would throw

Spartans' title hopes end in quarterfinals

By Bradley Gure

POCATELLO — It was just one little mistake. But it came during the critical juncture of not only the game, but the time of the season where one loss sends a team home until next fall.

One simple, underthrown ball found itself in the hands of a Pocatello Bronco instead of a Minico Spartan with roughly a minute to go. The Broncos drove the short distance of 28 yards, picking up the score to put Minico away for 2007 with a 34-31 victory Friday at Holt Arena. Blackfoot advances to face Pocatello next week during the semifinals of the Class 4A Idaho High School Football State Championship.

"I saw Landon (Barnes) and threw a bad ball," Minico quarterback Dane Broadhead said. "Underthrow it and the guy (Blackfoot's Rafe Vicielli) made a good play on it. It's just one of those things in football when you look back and say, 'Man, I shouldn't

No Marvin, no problem

Bulldogs grind into semifinals

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — Star running back Eric Marvin might have been sidelined with a shoulder injury, but Kimberly still had enough in the arsenal to secure a Class 3A state semifinal date with Shelley with a 35-14 win over American Falls that was far closer than the final score indicated.

Despite being a three-touchdown win, the gap between the two teams was so minuscule that the entire complexion of the game changed over two plays, both of which fell in favor of the 10-0 Bulldogs, who scored 22 unanswered points to close out the game.

Moments after the Beavers took their first and only lead of the game at 14-13, Kimberly senior quarterback Evan Jerke connected with Cody Wadsworth for 84 yards on a 60 route for the go-ahead score.

"As soon as (Kimberly coach Kirby Bright) called the play, I knew I had to get rid of it quickly," said Jerke. "I just threw it up there and let 'Wads' make a play and that's exactly what he did. To have that happen at that time in the game, that's what playmakers do. You can't really explain his decision, but that play won it."

Two series later, American Falls mishandled a punt play, giving Kimberly the ball on the Beavers 5-yard line, and three plays later the Bulldogs struck. "It was just a well-thrown ball," said Johnson. "On the punt, we haven't mishandled that all season and it caught up with us tonight I guess."

American Falls gave Kimberly its first Maryland 'I' formation, running tosses, traps and deep passes out of it to keep the Bulldogs' defense off-balance. Beavers tailback K.C. Qualls was the workhorse, piling up 202 yards on 30 carries and a touchdown.

Bright lauded the performance of his stable of running backs in Marvin's place as well as the defense, which shut out the Beavers after Qualls' third-quarter touchdown run despite enduring scoldingly unending frustration from the power ground game. He hinted that the matchup with Shelley puts the Bulldogs within sniffing distance of a Hollywood ending to a state-book season.

"We were practicing all week that we were down a kid, but we had a kid ready to step up, and Braden Nicell and the rest of the running backs did a great job," said Bright. "It's just like we told the seniors before the conference championship, that we wanted their names on a trophy. Now we want their names on one that has the state of Idaho on it."

The date for Kimberly's game with Shelley has not yet been determined, but Bright suggested the game is likely to be played at Holt Arena in Pocatello, a place in which Jerke said it would be an honor to play.

"For us seniors that have put four years into the program, it's

College of Southern Idaho freshman Megan Parrish prepares to make a kill Friday afternoon in CSI's victory over Colorado Northern State Community College in Twin Falls.

CSI, NIC to play for Region 18a championship

By Eric Larsen
Times-News writer

The showdown is set. As expected, the No. 9 College of Southern Idaho volleyball team will meet North Idaho College for the NJCAA Division I Region 18a Tournament Championship at 3 p.m. today.

The Golden Eagles breezed past fourth-seeded Colorado Northwestern Community College, winning 30-13, 30-18, 30-14 in Friday's semifinal match at the CSI gymnasium.

The Cardinals advanced with 3-1 win over the third-seeded College of Eastern Utah.

Playing with a starting lineup consisting mostly of regular reserve players, the 46-11 Golden Eagles were sloppy at times, but never enough to face the danger of losing a game.

"One-down, one to go," freshman middle blocker Savannah Silcock said. "The Golden Eagles finished with six kills and two blocks, playing in the place of regular starter Alyssa Wistrick, who sat out Friday's match along with Pidge Pinau, Gabriela Bolawczyk, Jazmine Marafala and Santa Sanders. Outside hitter Nabby Nares finished with a match-high 12 kills and 16 digs, while fellow freshman Eric Barton called 10 kills. McKenzie Hawkins added six kills, while Riki Morland finished with four kills and six aces.

"We just wanted to come in, get some people some playing time, rest some of our starters and get ready for tomorrow," CSI head coach Heidi Carntisser said.

With the confidence of having well-rested starters and a 3-0 season record against the Cardinals, the Golden Eagles will enter today's championship match riding high. Still, a North Idaho squad with something to prove is sure to be a dangerous foe standing between the Golden Eagles and a national championship berth.

Forget it: Westchester no match for CSI men

By Eric Larsen
Times-News writer

Maybe they'll get tested tonight. Maybe. The No. 2 College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team picked up its second blowout win of the season in as many tries Friday night in Twin Falls. This time around, a surplus of 95 points at the half over Westchester Community College turned into a runaway 124-67 victory during the second day of the 31st Annual K&T Steel Tournament in the CSI gymnasium.

After winning the first two games of the season by an average of 48.5 points, CSI will look to tonight's game to offer the stern test to head coach Barrett Peery has played it up to be: The Golden Eagles and Central Florida Community College Patriots enter the tournament-capping battle of unbeaten teams with identical 2-0 records.

"We told the team that (Central Florida) is here for one reason," CSI head coach Barrett Peery said. "They're here to play CSI and see where they're at. And we brought them here for the exact same reason."

The College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team picked up its second blowout win of the season Friday night in Twin Falls.

North Carolina is preseason No. 1

Top 25 features 6 Pac-10 teams

By Jim O'Connell
Associated Press writer

North Carolina is back in its familiar preseason spot — No. 1. Kansas State is making rare appearance in the Top 25 rankings.

For the sixth time since The Associated Press started a preseason college basketball poll in 1961, the Tar Heels were ranked No. 1 Friday. They beat out UCLA and Memphis in a three-way race for the top spot.

The Tar Heels ended last season with a 96-84 overtime loss to Georgetown in the regional final. They lost an 11-point lead in the second half and missed 22 of 23 shots during a 15-minute stretch.

Three starters, including junior center Tyler Hansbrough, are among eight contributors back from that team. "In the game today a veteran team is sophomores and juniors instead of juniors and seniors like in the old days," North Carolina coach Roy Williams said Friday. "We had a great last year and the Georgetown game set us back in that we were a jump shot away from the Final Four."

The players have used that as motivation in some ways but even more was the realization of how quickly it can be over," he added. "In some ways that made the team stronger. We're not talking about Georgetown by any means right now, but over the offseason, yes, because the suddenness of what happened stuns you."

North Carolina received 29 first-place votes and 1,728 points from the 72-member national media panel. UCLA, which has four starters back from its Final Four team, was No. 1 on 24 ballots and had 1,710 points. Memphis, which has all five starters back from its regional final team, got 18 first-place votes and 860 points.

Kansas was fourth and Georgetown, which drew the only other first-place vote, was fifth, followed by Louisville, Tennessee, Michigan State, Indiana and Washington State. Marquette was 11th off-

Add 17 points from Ray Allen, another veteran newcomer, and the Celtics looked nothing like the teams played in Boston. Their first win since just three playoff series.

GOLE ROUNDUP

Verplank, Ridings lead at Disney

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. — Scott Verplank and Teg Ridings separated by one shot atop the leaderboard at Disney and by more than $2.76 million in season earnings. One is playing out the season and enjoying time with his family, the other is fighting for a job.

That could be one difference that separates a bunched leaderboard of haves and have-nots going into the weekend at the Children's Miracle Network Classic.

Verplank made enough birdies on his first nine holes Friday on the Magnolia Course that he wasn't too bothered by closing with nine straight pars, giving him a second straight 6-under 68 and a one-shot lead over Ridings, Stephen Ames and Ryan Armour.

Ames, who was at 12-under 132, already has won this year at the EDS Byron Nelson Championship. He is 15th on the money list, played in the Presidents Cup, has qualified for the four majors next year and has few worries. "Not so for Ridings, who also had a 68 at Magnolia. He has a split time playing the PGA Tour and Nations Tour. This year he'll be in the final event of the season, the No. 210 on the money list. The only way to keep his card is to win something he has never done. If he wins to finish his year, he'll be in a hole that would do it allow him to skip the second stage of Q-school. Ames is playing because it's cold in Calgary and the courses have been closed for

The 14-year-old English player's coming off a final-hole loss to Suzann Pettersen last week in the Honda LPGA Thailand. Her seven birdies: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912, 913, 914, 915, 916, 917, 918, 919, 920, 921, 922, 923, 924, 925, 926, 927, 928, 929, 930, 931, 932, 933, 934, 935, 936, 937, 938, 939, 940, 941, 942, 943, 944, 945, 946, 947, 948, 949, 950, 951, 952, 953, 954, 955, 956, 957, 958, 959, 960, 961, 962, 963, 964, 965, 966, 967, 968, 969, 970, 971, 972, 973, 974, 975, 976, 977, 978, 979, 980, 981, 982, 983, 984, 985, 986, 987, 988, 989, 990, 991, 992, 993, 994, 995, 996, 997, 998, 999, 1000.

Third quarter earnings

Throughout the next week, companies will be posting their third quarter earnings. Those reports will be printed periodically on the Money page.

Viacom reports jump in earnings

Viacom Inc., a media conglomerate controlled by Sumner Redstone, reported an 80 percent jump in third-quarter earnings Friday, boosted by the sale of a music publishing business and box office receipts from its summer movies "Transformers."

Viacom, which also owns MTV, VH1 and Nickelodeon, earned $641.6 million, or 96 cents per share, in the three months ending in September, up from $356.9 million, or 50 cents per share, in the same period a year earlier.

Analysts polled by Thomson Financial were expecting earnings of 59 cents per share. Viacom's B shares rose $1.31, or 3.2 percent, to $41.72 in late morning trading.

Revenues rose 24 percent to $2.97 billion from $2.63 billion a year ago and ahead of analysts' estimates of $2.99 billion.

Chevron earnings fall short of estimates

NEW YORK — Chevron Corp.'s third-quarter earnings fell more than 25 percent, missing analyst estimates on sharply lower profits from gasoline production.

Chevron, the No. 2 U.S. oil company, said on Friday its net income dropped to $3.72 billion, or $1.75 a share, from $5.01 billion, or $2.29 a share, a year earlier.

Excluding about $400 million of one-time items, it posted earnings of about $1.94 a share, coming in behind the average analyst estimate of $2.07 a share.

Revenue in the quarter rose to $55.17 billion from $54.21 billion.

Costs at the company's refining and marketing segment fell 74 percent to $377 million, including a loss of $110 million from its U.S. refining and marketing operations.

Coeur D'Alene Mines profit drops 80 percent

COEUR D'ALENE — Coeur d'Alene Mines Corp. on Friday said its third quarter profit fell 80 percent, as costs rose and silver and gold production fell.

The company earned $3.6 million, or a penny per share, versus $18.4 million, or 6 cents per share, in the year-ago period.

The recent quarter included $2.5 million in costs to end mining activities at the company's Rochester, Nev., facility, which contributed to lower production.

Production costs, which include labor, energy and other drilling expenses, rose 74.5 percent to $38.2 million from the year-ago period.

Revenue rose 4.5 percent to $52.9 million, from $50.6 million in the year-ago quarter.

Shares shed 13 cents, or 3.1 percent, to $3.72 in morning trading.

AIR DELAY SOLUTIONS SPARK FIGHT

By James Bernstein
Newaday

MELVILLE, N.Y. — Airline passengers disgusted by delays at John F. Kennedy Airport this past summer, when a third of all takeoffs and landings were late, can expect little improvement this Thanksgiving. The airport's two largest carriers — JetBlue Airways Corp. and Delta Air Lines — and others plan to schedule more flights.

The problems could grow worse next summer unless something dramatic is done, according to federal transportation officials, who have developed plans they say will ease Kennedy's delays, the nation's worst during the summer.

Though all parties agree action is needed, the federal Department of Transportation's plans to ease crowding at Kennedy by limiting flights have come up against stiff opposition from the Port Authority, consumer and business groups and aviation organizations, who say the proposed solutions will hurt business, cost jobs and raise airline fares.

A Continental Airlines worker rides down a baggage conveyor belt plane as a fuel truck pulls up at Houston's Bush Intercontinental Airport. The federal Department of Transportation's plans to ease crowding at Kennedy by limiting flights have come up against stiff opposition from the Port Authority, consumer and business groups and aviation organizations.

Since 2004, flights at Kennedy have jumped 44 percent, mostly because of rapid expansions by JetBlue and Delta. More than 40 percent of flights to Kennedy were either delayed or canceled last year, according to federal statistics.

Matters can't remain as they are, D.J. Gribben, the transportation department's general counsel, said in an interview.

"I think the public is rightfully impatient with aviation congestion," Gribben said. "We've been tasked with coming up with sustained solutions, and we think we'll be there by next summer."

The department hopes to flights to Europe.

"There's three performance measures we want to use," Gribben said. "The first is to reduce congestion. The second is to make the most efficient use of scarce capacity. And the third is to do it in a manner that is not unduly disruptive."

Opposition has mounted quickly.

Last Friday at Port Authority headquarters in Manhattan, groups that rarely, if ever, stand together joined in a press conference. Representatives of the Air Transport Association, which represents major airlines, found themselves in agreement with the Air Travelers Association, a consumer group.

"Are we concerned about delays? Yes, we're concerned about delays," said Bill DeCota, the Port Authority's director of aviation. "We know something has to be done. But we're opposed to pricing or caps."

DeCota said that a 20 percent one-day reduction in flights would mean that 10,000 passengers daily — 3.5 million a year — would be without seats.

Payrolls grow by 166,000 in October

National jobless rate holds steady

By Jeanine Aversa
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Employers boosted payrolls by a surprisingly strong 166,000 in October, the most in five months, an encouraging sign that the nation's employment climate is holding up relatively well against the strains of a housing collapse and credit crunch.

The Labor Department's report, released Friday, also showed that the unemployment rate held steady at 4.7 percent for the second month in a row. It is a figure that is considered low by historical standards.

Job gains were logged for professional and business services, education and health care, leisure and hospitality, and for the government. Those employment increases more than offset jobs losses in manufacturing, construction and retail — casualties of the housing market.

The latest report on employment conditions around the country was better than economists were anticipating. Economists were forecasting payrolls to grow in October by about half the pace — around 80,000. They did correctly predict the unemployment rate would be unchanged.

"Businesses have not clamored up on the hiring scene as some feared," said Ken Mayland, president of ClearView Economics. "The wheels aren't coming off the economy."

But on Wall Street, the good employment news failed to ease fears among jittery investors. The Dow Jones Industrials were off around 49 points in morning trading. One day earlier, the Dow plunged more than 300 points underscoring the fragile state of financial markets.

President Bush pointed to the pickup in job creation in October as evidence that his economic policies work. "This is now our 50th consecutive month of uninterrupted job growth, the longest in the nation's history," he said.

In other economic news, orders placed to U.S. factories edged up 0.2 percent in September, an improvement compared with the 3.5 percent drop registered in August, the Commerce Department said in a second report. The manufacturing news was better than the 0.4 percent decline analysts were expecting.

Only the employment front, even with October's solid gain in payrolls, the trend this year has been toward softer job growth, and that is beginning to show up in wages.

Average hourly earnings rose to $17.58 in October, a modest 0.2 percent increase from September. Economists were forecasting a slightly larger, 0.3 percent increase. Over the past 12 months, wages were up 3.8 percent.

"So economists said the wage gains should be sufficient to support consumer spending and keep the economic expansion — which began in late 2001 — intact. A jittery job market could crimp wage growth. That could lessen people's appetite to spend, spelling trouble for the economy.

The state of the nation's employment climate is a crucial factor determining whether the economy will, in fact, weather the financial storm.

So far, decent job creation and wage growth have helped to offset some of the negative forces hitting some individuals from the housing slump, weaker home values and harder-to-get credit.

"Resiliency is the word," Commerce Secretary Carlos Gutierrez said when asked what the latest employment figures say about the economy's performance. "It suggests to me that businesses see growth continuing," he said in an interview with The Associated Press.

"There is nothing out there that would suggest we can't absorb the housing correction," he added.

Idaho unemployment rate increases; no more decline expected this year

The Times-News

Idaho's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate moved upward in October to 2.5 percent. The end of harvest, the traditional fall slowdown in tourism and construction and a lull in retail trade added nearly 1,400 workers to the ranks of the jobless, the highest one-month increase in 30 years.

The bulk of the decline came in recreation, hotels and restaurants. Higher employment in public education offset a decline from September in construction, where commercial projects are not completely filling the gap created by a decline in home building.

Despite the increase, October is the ninth straight month of unemployment rates under 3 percent and the 29th month below 4 percent. Even with an increase from September, the number of unemployed workers remained below 20,000.

Department analysis do not anticipate significant changes in the rate during the remainder of 2007.

Nationally, unemployment remained unchanged at 4.7 percent — for 73 months, Idaho's unemployment rate has been below the nation's.

A decline of 3,400 in the statewide labor pool and a drop of 4,800 from September's record employment reflected seasonal patterns.

Nearly 18,000 more people were working last month than a year earlier, a 2.5 percent increase compared to the national employment increase of just a half percent.

Much of the rise in unemployment appeared to be in rural Idaho. The state's nine major cities — Boise, Stansbury, Caldwell, Meridian, Coeur d'Alene, Lewiston, Twin Falls, Pocatello and Idaho Falls — all post significant reductions in unemployment rates — with rates at or below 12 percent at the same time, 32 of the state's 44 counties posted higher jobless rates from September. Increases of more than one percentage point pushed the rates in rural Clearwater County to 6.7 percent, the highest in the state and to 6 percent in Boundary County, the only other with a rate of 6 percent or more.

NASCAR

Four-time champion Gordon feels good about title chances

FORT WORTH, Texas — A victory Sunday at Texas Motor Speedway would be something special for Jeff Gordon, and not just because the track is one of only two on the current NASCAR Nextel Cup schedule where he has yet to win.

The four-time series champion heads into the Dickies 500 — the eighth of 10 races in the Chase for the championship — holding just a nine-point lead over Hendrick Motorsports teammate Jimmie Johnson.

Moreover, Johnson, the reigning Cup champion, is on a roll, arriving at the Fort Worth track with two straight wins and a ton of momentum.

"We've been trying extremely hard to get our first win here, and we've been so close the last three or four races that we've been here," said Gordon, who has five top-five finishes, including a runner-up finish in the fall of 2005 and a fourth-place run last spring, in 13 starts on the 1.5-mile Texas oval.

"We've been strong enough to pull off wins and we've had little glitches here and there that have cost us the win."

"Your ultimate goal is to come out of here with a strong finish, a top-five, and not have that bad day. But it would be awesome to start up front with how tough it is to pass here and track position being so important. To pull off that first win would be incredible, especially at this point in the Chase with everything on the line."

Gordon acknowledged Friday there is plenty of pressure when you're racing for a championship — even for a four-time winner.

"Any time you're in a points battle, it's intense, every single moment you're on the track," Gordon explained. "The way the car is handling, the position that you're in, everything that is happening is going through your mind."

"There's just no points lead that's comfortable enough. It's almost better that it's close because, when it's a wider gap, sometimes you take an extra breath and think you've got room to relax and you really don't. That's when it reaches out and bites you."

Gordon even took the unusual step of avoiding media coverage of the championship battle during the past week.

"To me, it's almost tougher to go through

Truex adds first pole to first Cup win earlier this season

FORT WORTH, Texas — Kyle Truex, the 2006 NASCAR Nextel Cup champion, led the field to victory Sunday at Texas Motor Speedway.

The 25-year-old driver turned pole at Texas Motor Speedway for the 79th time in his career, marking the 10th pole of his career.

"I've got to be a team," Truex said. "From last year, I've learned that's been the key. They put me in the driver's seat, and I'm a team player."

Truex's victory was the 10th of his career, marking the 10th pole of his career.

Smith acquiring New Hampshire track

No plans to move races 'at this time'

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — New Hampshire International Speedway will have a new owner, and still has both of its NASCAR Nextel Cup dates — for now.

Speedway Motorsports chairman Bruton Smith confirmed Friday that he has agreed to buy the New Hampshire track, for $340 million from 60-year-old independent owner, Bob Bahre.

In a deal that should be completed early next year, Smith was much less direct about how the purchase could affect his long-standing desire to add a second Cup race at Las Vegas, one of the other six tracks Smith already owns.

"We don't plan to make any changes at this time," Smith said. "We're new in this. We've just done this. It's going to take us some time to develop all of our plans that concern the speedway there."

There is widespread speculation that Smith will move the week of thinking about it than it is once the engine starts and you get in it and go," he said. "That's more the comfort zone."

Whether he actually makes it on the field is up to coach Tony Dungy.

Harrison missed all three practices this week because of a bruised left knee, and Dungy said Harrison and several others are expected to be game-time decisions for the contest between the NFL's final two unbeaten teams.

"Our dilemma is that the doctors thought if he (Harrison) plays, he could have continued issues with it," Dungy said Friday in his final media availability before the game. "If we give him another week off, he probably would not have the same issues down the stretch. But he wants to play."

"Who wouldn't want to play in the NFL games of the year?" Harrison said.

Reid says he'll stay as Eagles coach despite judge's criticism

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Andy Reid is digging in. The Philadelphia Eagles coach insisted he will not resign Friday, a day after a judge sentenced Reid's two sons to prison and likened his home to a "drug emporium."

Asked whether he intended to stay on the job, a steady-eyed Reid delivered a stern, one-word answer: "Yes."

At least one of his peers thought that may not be the best approach. "If that situation comes up in anybody's family, I would think you would have to take a hard look at taking time off, of doing something to try and salvage the thing," said Reid's longtime friend and mentor, Seattle Seahawks coach Mike Holmgren.

Reid took a five-week absence earlier this year. At his regular news conference Friday, he said more about his sons' legal problems than he had previously.

"I know this is a big story for everybody and I respect that," Reid said. "On the other hand, I can't go into questioning on it at this time."

"However, as parents we have huge concerns for our two boys. This has been a battle we have dealt with here for a few years and I'm sure we'll continue to address the situation. ... Our prayers are obviously with the boys, for their future, and to make sure things work out there, when they can live a normal life down the road," he said.

The Eagles are last in the NFC East at 3-4, and host division-leading Dallas on Sunday night. During their final full practice before the game, Reid stood behind the offense and directed quarterbacks Donovan McNabb, A.J. Feeley and Kevin Kolb as TV commentator John Madden and Eagles chairman Jeffrey Lurie looked on.

Lurie did not take questions from the press. Cornerback Sheldon Brown backed his coach. "He has done everything he could. He went out, worked his butt off to make sure he made a good life for his family," Brown said. "Through that he showed his kids ... it is up to the kids to learn from it."

"At the end of the day, each individual makes his own decision and has to be held accountable for his own actions."

On Friday, prosecutors charged 24-year-old Garrett Reid with five additional drug counts related to 89 pills he had smuggled into prison. His cellmate said he saw Reid remove the pills from his room and that Reid offered him some of the pills.

On Thursday night, police searched the Reid home to corroborate the cellmate's story. They found numerous drugs in Garrett Reid's room, including several prescriptions in his name and other prescriptions in his brother's name. They also found two syringes, one with needles.

On Thursday, Montgomery County Judge Steven O'Neill called the Reids a "family in crisis" and questioned whether brothers Brian and Garrett Reid should return to their parents' home after they serve their jail terms.

Philadelphia Eagles head coach Andy Reid listens to a question at a press conference Friday in Philadelphia. The Eagles host the Dallas Cowboys Sunday.

Colts waiting to make decision on Harrison; Patriots put Morris on IR INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Colts doctors have told Pro Bowl receiver Marvin Harrison he can play against New England, and he hopes to.

Whether he actually makes it on the field is up to coach Tony Dungy. Harrison missed all three practices this week because of a bruised left knee, and Dungy said Harrison and several others are expected to be game-time decisions for the contest between the NFL's final two unbeaten teams.

"Our dilemma is that the doctors thought if he (Harrison) plays, he could have continued issues with it," Dungy said Friday in his final media availability before the game. "If we give him another week off, he probably would not have the same issues down the stretch. But he wants to play."

"Who wouldn't want to play in the NFL games of the year?" Harrison said. Some of the players can't have a choice. New England placed running back Sammy Morris on injured reserve because of a chest injury Friday, ending his season. Morris was hurt at Dallas.

The questions surrounding Harrison are more complex. He hurt his knee against Denver on Sept. 30. Since then, he has missed two more games and was put on a injury count that limited to about half of the Colts' plays at Jacksonville on Oct. 22.

If Harrison plays against New England (6-0), Dungy said the receiver, listed as questionable, would likely again be on a play button because of soreness.

Later Friday, the Colts denied a report that the 12-year veteran could have persistent pain in the knee not only the rest of this season but for the rest of his career. A message was left on the phone of Harrison's agent, Tom Corcoran. "The Indianapolis Colts have received no medical opinion that comes close to validating the report," the team said in a statement.

To compensate for Harrison's absence in previous games, the Colts (7-0) relied more on tight end Dallas Clark and receivers Anthony Gonzalez and Aaron Moorehead.

The 'dark time' requires a plan

ATLANTA — The sun is setting earlier. The fall light is thin and golden, and leaves are beginning to turn crinkly on the trees.

There's no getting around it. We are entering the dark time of the year.

For many folks, the darkness isn't merely external. There is a melancholy tinge to life, a sense of foreboding, as we edge closer to the cold, bony arms of winter.

LORRAINE V. MURRAY

Seasonal affective disorder is a trendy name for the psychological phenomenon that many struggle to overcome, but when I was younger, it was known simply as the blues.

In those days, if the kids struggled with a bleak mood, my mother's advice was simple enough: Read a book, invite a friend over or get busy.

And if you dragged gloomily around the house, moaning about being bored, she would hand you a list of chores that would make you too tired to notice that you were blue.

Today's pundits suggest installing full-spectrum lights to counteract grim moods. Others tout prescription drugs or aerobic exercise, which supposedly pumps mood-altering chemicals into one's bloodstream.

When I reflect on cures for the blues, however, a song by Carrie Underwood comes to mind.

The lyrics describe a woman driving alone on a snowy night to visit her parents, with her baby in the backseat. It sounds like the woman has hit hard times, because she is low on both gasoline and faith.

She's driving very fast when she suddenly hits a patch of ice and the car goes into a spin.

Panic-stricken, she shouts, "Jesus, take the wheel. Take it from my hands."

In that moment, the woman realizes she has to let go and trust bigger things. "Save me from this road I'm on," she begs.

And he does. The car stops safely, with the baby still sleeping peacefully in the backseat. And the woman has a big realization: She can't make it through life alone.

The song reminds me that we live in a high-control world. Many rely on weight-control products and live in climate-controlled houses. We put value on curbing our appetites, our emotions and our spending.

But sometimes, despite our best efforts, things go haywire. A child comes down with an illness or a spouse gets laid off. We can't make the mortgage payments and we lose a home.

Still, we cling to the wheel as we try to steer ourselves out of danger. We may be hesitant to ask for help because it seems like a sign of weakness.

It may take a dreary night and a sheet of ice for us to realize who truly has the reins.

As someone who has struggled with the blues since childhood, I am always apprehensive about the fall season. Without fail, my emotional barometer starts to sink.

Rendering to God has its own particular traditions

BUHL — She sat on a chair in front of the all-black Baptist congregation. After the full collection plates were gathered, an usher would bring them to her.

"She'd look at the plates and say, 'Uh-uh-uh,'" recalled the Rev. Jerry Peters, pastor of the Buhl United Methodist Church, of a service he attended years ago in another state. "So they'd go around again and she'd have another look. 'Uh-uh-uh,' she'd say, and they'd go another round.

"Finally, when she thought the collection plates were full enough, she shouted, 'Praise the Lord!'"

In Christian churches, there's more than one way to pass the plate. The Offering — a formal part of both Roman Catholic and Episcopal services — takes place in most churches every Sunday morning.

"It hasn't changed much since I was a kid," said the Rev. Rodney Woodcock, pastor of the Jerome Baptist Church. But traditions vary greatly. "We don't collect tithes as part of our services," said Grant Maughan, spokesman for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints in the Twin Falls area. "But there are envelopes in the church for people to give money for missions or other purposes."

"It's a time to offer our very best gifts, as God has offered his very best gifts to us."

— Rev. Jerry Peters, pastor of the Buhl United Methodist Church

Mormons are asked to give 10 percent of their income, but it doesn't go into a collection plate, he said.

At Twin Falls' Immanuel Lutheran Church, alms are given by personal check or through Internet-based bank transfers. But some congregants do it the old-fashioned way, said the Rev. Lawrence Vedder, the church's pastor.

"It's a mixed bag," he said. In Catholic churches, the Offering is a formal part of the Communion service to be spoken or sung during the collection of alms.

Because of that, the Offering is also a tradition in religious and classical music, usually an instrumental piece played by the organist or a hymn sung by the choir while the tithes are being gathered.

In most Protestant congregations, the Offering is also an integral part of the Sunday service, also accompanied by music.

"Two couples will collect the offerings and bring them to the front of the church, where the plates remain for the rest of the service," Vedder said. An offering is also gathered in religious education classes for children at Immanuel, then taken to the Sunday service and placed along with the adults' donations in the collection plates.

"It gets the kids involved in the process without our having to collect their contributions too during the service," he said.

Collection plates — or baskets — range from ornate to ordinary.

"We have a variety, just different ones that we've added over the years," Woodcock said.

"We've used our collection plates for a long time," Vedder said. "They even went through the fire."

An arson-caused blaze burned part of Immanuel just before Christmas in 2000.

"But the plates themselves don't have any special significance," he said.

Peters said the offering is one of the principal reasons that Christians gather to worship.

"It's a time to offer our very best gifts, as God has offered his very best gifts to us."

Senator Kerry says religion has place in politics

By Sasha Issenberg
The Boston Globe

WASHINGTON — Senator John F. Kerry defended the place of religious discussion in America's political life Wednesday, even as the 2004 Democratic presidential nominee decried the "unitary assertion of rectitude" by certain Christian figures and the "explicitly" of religion "he said played a role in his loss to President Bush, who garnered disproportionate support from the most devout voters.

The Massachusetts Democrat, whose Catholic faith at times was an issue in his presidential campaigns, said it was "fair game" to expect candidates to discuss theology, and said he should have done so more prominently in 2004.

"I have to be influenced by your value system and beliefs."

He called upon Democrats running for president this year to be more forthright in discussing their religious backgrounds with voters, and identified domestic and global poverty, the environment, abortion, and the rules of war as issues in which scriptural language and values could be used to rally religious-minded voters to traditionally Democratic policies.

Kerry's father was Catholic and his mother Protestant, but she converted and guided Kerry in his faith.

As a teenage altar boy, he said, he was "unbelievably immersed in my religion" and as a soldier in Vietnam discovered a "necessary and immediate" version of it: "Protect me, and I'll be good," he joked.

But in 2004, Kerry came under fire from four Catholic bishops, who said they would deny him Holy Communion because he supported abortion rights. Other Catholic politicians have faced similar reactions from church leaders.

Kerry challenged the bishops who contested his position on abortion, but acknowledged he could have been more forceful in asserting the complexity of his background — in approaching the subject.

"For John F. Kennedy, the challenge was to prove he wasn't too Catholic to be president," Kerry said. "Mine was to prove I was Catholic enough."

Since Kennedy's election, Kerry said, the religion has changed. "The Catholicism I grew up with is quite different than the Catholicism we have today," Kerry said, citing how the religion brought by the Vatican II conference and the rise of evangelical Catholicism in the United States.

He also said people have become more comfortable talking openly about their faith — even in New England, where politicians would rarely discuss their personal experience of religion.

RELIGION LETTERS

Belief doesn't require proof

Often, we hear someone say Islam is trying to force its religion onto the rest of the world. In many countries, the same is said about the Christian religion.

It's really something what some people will believe, especially the suicide bombers.

"We have to give credit to some scientists for they will not believe anything unless it can be proven to be true.

It never has been easy to prove what is true, for it is impossible to prove that two and two makes four to someone that hasn't learned how to count.

Fawell's Heaven not for everyone

Lowell Grace managed to get his knickers in quite a twist over my Times-News article, "Fawell's Heaven," and South Idaho Press letter about Jerry Falwell's libelous use of the Bible to validate his racist and homophobic beliefs.

Beliefs he pushed mindlessly, and my belief that the Bible is irrelevant and wholly useless when used to determine moral behavior.

In a letter to the South Idaho Press, Lowell claimed that Falwell, "... will have a nice place in the Heaven that John doesn't believe in." Surprisingly, he's partially correct.

Why, in the name of all things sacred, beautiful and truthful, would I want to go to a heaven where the likes of a repentant Falwell, Orr Roberts and Pat Robertson; Hitler, Stalin and Mao; and every pimp, pedester and pedophile who ever tampered with the life of an infant, child or adolescent could be among the forgiven?

Churches in New Orleans make recovery part of the mission

By Neola Banejee
New York Times News Service

NEW ORLEANS — Two months after the Rev. Lance Eikenberry stepped out of First Street United Methodist Church, Hurricane Katrina struck.

Even, newly ordained, quickly picked up skills few in the pulpit typically need. He learned how to restore a church whose roof had peeled off and whose bell tower had been knocked askew. He played host to hundreds of volunteers who came to get and rebuild. And most recently — and reluctantly — he took on the role of deacon.

"I'd rather be doing something else," Eden said. "But when you hear stories like the Good Samaritan or about how Jesus walks into the temple and overturns the tables of the money-changers, it charges us as a church to make sure justice is done for all people."

First Street's community development corporation owns 28 properties in Central City, a neighborhood of candy-colored bungalows, many of which were destroyed to acquire 20 more for moderate- to low-income housing.

"New Orleans' patchy recovery has largely bypassed places where the working class and poor lived, like Central City and the Lower Ninth Ward. Many former residents lack the means to return to their churches and groups with religious affiliations, citing Scripture's call to help the stranger and the neighbor, have taken on the task of building affordable housing.

Beginning in the first weeks after the storm, religious groups have played a critical role in the recovery: those outside New Orleans sent volunteers to help, and those in the city sometimes housed, supplied and fed workers and returning residents.

The emerging projects range from a plan by Providence Community Housing to build 7,000 units of affordable housing to one by Stronger Hope Baptist Church, which is still rebuilding its own flooded sanctuary, to acquire and restore perhaps a half-dozen properties in Central City.

"The only thing that has worked in the recovery has been the church," said Joe

Givens, consultant for the Samuel DeWitt Proctor Conference, a national ecumenical group of black churches. "Their volunteers did the gutting, and then the salvage work, and the next step in the progression is that churches have to be part of the rebuilding."

About 105,000 dwellings, 71 percent of the housing stock, were damaged or destroyed in Orleans Parish by Hurricane Katrina, or about 71 percent of the housing stock, said Gregory C. Rignamar, a New Orleans demographer expert. About 56 percent of the city's population has returned, Rignamar said, but settlement has been uneven.

Some 77 percent of residents have returned to the Ninth Ward, for instance, just 7 percent of residents have come back.

Tithing

only to Jews, Jesus, they contend, said that he came to fulfill the law, which they believe came from God, and therefore Christians are no longer obligated to pay a minimum amount. They should give only as God specifically directs them to do (which may be more or less than 10 percent).

There has also been controversy over the introduction of "tithing" to members of many evangelical churches in North America, spearheaded by mega-churches. These covenants require giving 10 percent to the church as a condition of membership. Prospective members must sign a contract and are interviewed regarding their faith, including tithing.

Some of these covenants say they form of accountability. Foes argue these requirements are a form of financial "extortion." Actual collection procedures vary from church to church, from the common, strictly voluntary practice of "passing the plate" in Catholic and mainline Protestant churches, to more coercive tithing in some conservative Protestant churches (as well as the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints), to membership fees set practices in many Jewish congregations.

God on the Web

Portal offers video, social networking

By David Sarno
Los Angeles Times

Can you believe GodTube.com? The upstart Christian Web site became the nation's fastest-growing Web property for August, according to ComScore's Media Matrix. Its 77 million unique visitors represented a 273 percent increase in traffic over the previous month. In September, the number of visitors leveled off, but the average user's stay nearly doubled to 7.7 minutes, ComScore said.

Then last week, GodTube became the first religious Web site to offer the hot-tick social media trinity: user-generated video (a la YouTube), social networking (a la MySpace and Facebook) and Web blogging (a la Blogger.com).

GodTube's success at this time is the most trafficked Christian Web site is trumped only by a second boast that by the sheer volume of video watched by its users — 1.5 million hours last month — it now the world's largest broadcaster of Christian video.

Similar efforts from Judaism and Islam have launched recently and more are cropping up. But GodTube seems to have friends in especially high places.

GodTube's partners include, as Chief Executive Chris Wyatt puts it, "the who's who" of U.S. Christianity. "Everyone's onboard," he said, "the premiere ministries, megachurches and Christian retailers." Although GodTube, based in Plano, Texas, has yet to release the complete list of its more than 50 major business partners, they include such powerhouses as Garden Grove's 10,000-member Crystal Cathedral in Orange County, Calif., the late Rev. Jerry Falwell's Liberty University in Virginia and leading Christian publisher Thomas Nelson Inc. of Nashville, Tenn.

Despite its partnerships with nonprofit religious organizations, GodTube is not a church. It is a media company with a thoroughly planned business model. The model includes selling religious and secular advertising, charging subscription fees to ministries that want to broadcast more frequently and selling anonymous demographic data "off the back end" — allowing marketers and media producers a clearer picture of who's watching their programming. Indeed, its broadband Internet becomes more widely available in the U.S. and worldwide, entrepreneurs are finding that the business of online religion is a lucrative one.

"We're very much a for-profit organization," said Rieza Aslan, a religious scholar at University of California, Santa Barbara and media analyst who is an executive officer at Mecca.com, a growing online community for Muslims. "We are very excited to essentially go into a completely uncharted market," he said, speaking of the Muslim world.

Mecca.com, said Aslan, will focus its commercial efforts on Hajj tourism — that is, pilgrimages to Mecca itself and selling branded products (like Saudi Arabia's Mecca-Cola) to members who might not have access through conventional markets.

Religion on the Internet is nothing new — churches have been using e-mail and bulletin board services for more than a decade, and sacred texts have long been accessible via online databases. More recently, sites such as MyChurch.org, Nasceeb.com and CircleofFaith.com have created Web communities where worshippers can virtually congregate.

But with a sleek, youth-friendly interface and more interactive video technology than you can shake a crook at, GodTube is trying to take networked religion to the next level. "We call it Jesus 2.0," said Wyatt, a former CBS television producer turned seminary student and seeming wellspring of catchy slogans and product names that came up with "GodTube" as well as the name of the site's new live video function: the GodCaster.

The GodCaster allows churches and ministers to stream live events — services, concerts, debates and entertainment programming — to whoever in the world wants to watch. Now worshippers can pick a congregation based more on personal or religious preference than physical location, and with the site's video-conferencing software, they can participate in Bible studies and social groups without ever getting out of their bathtubs.

Does this mean the brick-and-mortar church will go the way of, say, the brick-and-mortar music industry?

Not exactly, said Heidi Campbell, a communications professor at Texas A&M who studies links between new media and religion. As society becomes increasingly connected, "we're seeing that people are not dropping out of off-line institutions" but rather "they're using the Internet as a supplement to — not a substitute for — religious participation."

United Methodist council: Transgender minister may keep job

By Michelle Locke
Associated Press writer

Methodist Church in Baltimore as the Rev. Ann Gonder.

BERKELEY, Calif. — A council of the United Methodist Church has decided to allow a transgender minister to retain his job, but it stopped short of addressing whether a change of gender violates the denomination's rules.

At a session over the weekend in San Francisco, the United Methodist Judicial Council considered whether to remove the Rev. Drew Phoenix from his post. The council allowed Phoenix to stay on the job, referring to a church policy stating that a clergyperson in good standing can't be terminated unless there has been administrative or judicial action, according to the ruling, posted on the church's Web site.

"The adjective placed in front of the noun 'clergy person' does not matter," the council ruled. "What matters is that clergy persons, once ordained and admitted to membership in full connection, cannot have that standing changed without being accorded fair process."

In a related ruling, the council said all name changes should be treated the same regardless of the reason.

Phoenix, who learned of the ruling Tuesday, said he was "happily surprised."

Before undergoing surgery and hormone therapy, Phoenix spent five years as minister at St. John's United Phoenix was reappointed this spring by Bishop John Schol of the Methodist's Baltimore-Washington Annual Conference, who noted that the denomination's Book of Discipline said nothing about transgender clergy.

The United Methodist Church bars appointing "practicing" gay clergy and does not support same-sex unions. The issue of whether the church can have a transgender minister may yet be addressed by the church's legislative body, which meets next spring in Fort Worth, Texas.

Phoenix said he has sometimes been discouraged by negative reaction to his status but thinks that staying on the job is a way to change minds.

"I've always been hopeful that the church will open its doors more and be more inclusive of the community, and I believe that happens when those of us that are in that community just keep showing up," he said.

The judicial council met without its president, surgeon general nominee James Holsinger.

Holsinger, a Kentucky doctor who has been criticized by gay rights groups for such things as a 1991 paper in which he says gay sex was unnatural and unhealthy, bowed out of the meeting, saying his nomination could become a distraction.

Religious leaders call for action on global warming

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition of religious leaders urged Congress on Wednesday to ensure that the poor and most vulnerable are protected from the effects of climate change.

The appeals come as lawmakers in the coming months plan to consider legislation that would combat global warming.

The representatives from groups such as the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, National Association of Evangelicals, National Council of Churches and the Union for Reform Judaism said Congress should require a reduction in greenhouse gas emissions.

A compromise bill proposed by Sens. Joe Lieberman, a Democrat, and John Warner, R-Va., was expected to advance from a Senate Environment and Public Works subcommittee on Thursday.

The religious leaders planned to press the bill's sponsors "to strengthen and improve protections for the poor and vulnerable as the legislation moves forward," said Paul Gorman, executive director of the National Religious Partnership for the Environment.

The church leaders, in a conference call with reporters, outlined their priorities for the legislation.

They include helping low-income families deal with the impact of higher energy prices that result from new climate policies and making sure that vulnerable people are shielded from the environmental effects of global warming.

"I've tried what the experts suggest: medications, lights and exercise. This year, I decided to try prayer."

"I trust what Anthony Bloom says in 'Beginning to Pray': 'God is there at the point of greatest tension, at the breaking point, at the center of the storm.'"

"Picking up the Bible, I started reading the Gospels again, beginning with the one by Saint John, who describes Christ as 'the light of the world.'"

"The light shines in the darkness," Saint John assures us, "and the darkness has not overcome it."

Over and over, Jesus is called the light of the world, the one who can banish darkness and calm storms.

In truth, some things only God can handle. So as the days grow shorter and the fingers of winter stretch nearer, I am putting a new plan into practice:

Reading Scripture every night and holding that simple prayer in my heart: "Jesus, take the wheel."

Lorraine Murray works in the Pitts Theology Library in the Candler School of Theology at Emory University. She writes her column for The Atlanta Journal-Constitution.

The phone will be ringing today, Capricorn

IF NOV. 3 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Remember that you can't please all the people all the time. For the next few months you may be restless within existing relationships or dissatisfied with your job or career. A romantic partnership could be temporarily up in the air or you could sense a lack of appreciation where business is concerned. Avoid making major changes and decisions between now and December as the answer to your prayers will arrive in March or April.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Act Invincible. You possess more than your usual share of creative energy. Hold off on major purchases or investments. Relationships could be disrupted by unforeseen misunderstandings.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take a stand. When you know something requires action you don't have time to quibble over the details. This is a good day to tinker with the bicycle or use the hammer to hang a few shelves.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Actions speak louder than any words. You may need to take steps to protect your piggy bank. Scan your checking account statements for errors and look for holes in your pockets.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Walk the line. There may be an occasion when you must stand your ground or defend your rights. Concentrate on physical fitness by working out at the gym or engaging in sports.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Build your strength. Do some pushups or situps or work on your yoga positions. Your leadership abilities and health will improve if you exercise mind and body in equal amounts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Use plain old common sense to balance the budget. Some unexpected expenses might drain a few dollars from the piggy bank. Pass up an expensive outing to counteract temporary costs.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It is a perfect day for domestic chores and routine exercise. You prefer to lie others lead by no one takes above you. money and financial health as much as you do. Defend your net worth.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Early morning laziness must be banished. Exercise will clear the cobwebs and put you in a better frame of mind. Be decisive and forthright for the best success this weekend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Unexpected phone calls may break up the monotony. It is easy to muster up the extra energy to tackle personal matters such as signing up for an exercise class or clearing out the garage.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Frequent interruptions and sudden changes in plans might distract you from the tranquil meeting you planned. Exciting ideas are in the air and the phone may be ringing off the hook.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The rain in Spain stays mainly in the plain. Be sure to enunciate clearly and make your meaning clear as a bell.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do your own thing. Physical work will burn off nervous energy. Being creative may not win you blue ribbons but you will enjoy a sense of accomplishment when efforts create a pleasing picture.

Persistent co-worker won't take the hint to back off uncomfortable. Tell her she should go ahead and see her son on her own and forget about you.

When you do receive an invitation to visit your son and daughter-in-law, do not utter a word about it to this woman, or she will start up again.

right there in the office.

Gloria has never even met my son, yet she has endless opinions about him. This is really rubbing me the wrong way.

This woman fails to recognize that this is a touchy issue with me and doesn't get the hint. I have tried, "Well, that's a very personal question" to no avail. What can I politely say to get her to back off without causing strain in the office?

My son is a very private person and is involved in starting up a new business. He had plainly told me and my husband—and all of the other relatives — that we can visit only when an invitation is extended. That message was pretty clear to me and my husband, and we have honored his wishes.

Gloria, with whom I have worked for years, is constantly after me about going to visit our sons. "Any invitations yet?" she's always asking loudly.

When I tell her "No," she bellows, "Well, I think that's preposterous!" Then she goes on to spout her opinion of my son. If I did this to her, World War III would erupt

Pets that saved owners honored

By Richard Pye Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — When Debbie Parkhurst choked on a piece of agly of 2007. There are 58 days left in the year. Standard Time returns early Sunday; clocks go back one hour.

dog and cat from a burning building.

Neither Parkhurst nor Keesling could explain their pets' timely heroics, though Parkhurst suggested her pooch's Heimlich maneuver might have been guided by divine intervention.

Both pets were themselves rescued in infancy — Toby as a 4-week-old puppy tossed into a garbage bin to die, and Winnie as a week-old orphan hiding under a barn, so helpless that Keesling's husband, Eric, had to feed her milk with an eyedropper.

As the Keeslings recalled it, a gas-driven pump being used to remove flood waters from their basement in New Castle, Ind., last March malfunctioned, spraying carbon monoxide through the house.

By the time Winnie moved into rescue mode, the couple's 14-year-old son, Michael, was already unconscious.

"Winnie" jumped on the bed and was clamped at me, with a kind of angry growl," Cathy Keesling said. "When I woke up I felt like a T-bar had hit me across the head."

State police and sheriff's officers responding to her 911 call said the family was only minutes from death, judging by the amount of poisonous gas in the house.

Debbie Parkhurst's husband, Kevin, was at his job at a Wilmington, Del., chemical firm when she took a midday break from making jewelry and bit into an apple.

"As the Keeslings recalled it, I was in panic when Toby jumped on me. He never dove that, but he did, and saved my life."

In addition, five humans were honored Thursday for their actions toward animals in the past year, including a Bronx firefighter who saved a
