U.S. Interior officials visit T.E.

Climate change a factor in large fires, officials say

By Matt Christensen
Times-News writer

Climate change is "a fact of life" that's affecting the severity of fires on public lands, Assistant Secretary of the Interior G. Stephen Allred told a group of local political and natural resources officials Friday at the Garden Cafe in Twin Falls.

Allred, in town to tour fire rehabilitation efforts with federal Bureau of Land Management Director James Caswell, said agencies must learn how nature adapts to climate change to better manage public lands.

But at least one local politician said the BLM isn't adapting enough.

"At the end of the day, if this fire rehab effort is 100 percent successful, we'll be no more fire-resistant than we were before," said state Rep. Burt Brackett, R-Hogansen.

Brackett, a rancher who lost cattle in the catastrophic Murphy Complex Fire that burned 653,000 acres in July, has been critical of the department's efforts to fight the blaze and rehabilitate the scorched land.

The department is using an 80 percent native seed mix to mend tens of thousands of acres — an effort to restore habitat and choke out cheatgrass, an invasive species highly susceptible to fire.

"In a perfect world, natives would be great," Brackett said. "But natives can't compete with cheatgrass."

The department's priority now is to get seed in the ground before cheatgrass can move in. Allred said in an interview after Friday's lunch meeting.

Bloody body found near Gooding

Two counties trying to ID victim

By Cass Friedman
Times-News writer

GOODING — You can find just about anything at this makeshift dump, peaty garbage, and dried out gravel pit.

A rotting bed mattress, a motorcycle gas tank, broken beer bottles, red shotgun shells and beer cups litter the land clinging to the banks of the Big Wood River, a three-minute drive northwest of Gooding. The public land, with dirt roads running through it like latticework, presents a rural void between several properties.

On Friday around 9 a.m., a hunter who came here looking for ducks, found a young man's body instead. "There is a bunch of blood," said Gooding County Sheriff Shaun Gough, before the body was removed and taken to Ada County for an autopsy. The preliminary autopsy finding on Friday determined the victim died from a .22-caliber bullet shot to the back of his head.

Deputies found several spent .22 cartridges, Gough said. But "because kids go down there to shoot all the time," it's impossible to say if they are evidence in the crime, Gough said.

IDAHO JUSTICE: MAGIC VALLEY STYLE

Supreme Court justices hold court in Twin Falls

By Cass Friedman
Times-News writer

Idaho Justice Roger Burdick stood on the sidewalk next to Stoshore Street. One moment he was hugging jury commissioner Jerry Woolley, talking shop. The next moment, he's waving at Magistrate Roger Harris, who exited the courthouse waving back and smiling.

This week's trip to Twin Falls to hear trial court appeals took three of the Idaho Supreme Court's five justices back to their beginnings, to see old friends and courtroom adversaries.

Idaho is just one of a few states that require their supreme court justices to travel the state, something they do six times a year. While in Twin Falls for three days, the justices heard a variety of appeal cases ranging from breach of contract disputes, insurance claims, and real estate disputes.

Each of them had climbed the judicial totem pole that led to the highest court of Idaho law. Three of them worked legal paths that started here in the Magic Valley.

One justice, Jim Jones, surveyed a portrait on the courthouse wall of Theron Ward. "A really good judge," Jones recalled from the many cases he argued in Ward's court. "I enjoyed working with him ...

when I won," he added with a chuckle.

And Justice Joel Horton, the court's most recent appointee after the departure of Linda Coppel-Trout, also revisited the courthouse where the former Twin Falls County deputy prosecutor

Police still investigating T.F. High bomb threat

District says school plans were followed for safety reasons

By Andrew Gates

In the wake of Thursday's bomb scare at Twin Falls High School, which evacuated students onto the football field for more than two hours, police have still not identified the voice of a caller who left the threatening voice message at the school. School district officials said parents were not notified directly by the district. They also confirmed cell phones were taken from students during the "evacuation" for security reasons.

China suspends exports of toys tainted with drug

BEIJING — China's government has suspended exports of toys covered with a toxic chemical that has been subject to recalls in many countries after sickening children, the state-run Xinhua News Agency reported. The government's quality control administration issued the export ban, sealed the toys at the sites where they were produced and ordered an investigation, Xinhua said in a brief report late Friday. The toys, which are sold as Aqua Dots in the United States and as Bindeez in Australia, were recalled in those countries as well as Britain, Malaysia, Singapore and elsewhere this past week after tests showed they were coated with the industrial chemical 1,4-butanediol. When ingested the chemical metabolizes into the "date-rage" drug gamma hydroxy butyrate, and may cause breathing problems, mental confusion, loss of consciousness and even death.

Broadway stagehands going on strike today

NEW YORK — Stagehands will go on strike today, apparently mistook the Long Island Rail Road tracks for a road Thursday evening, authorities said. Her car became stuck on the rails with a train fast approaching. She screamed that she couldn't get out of the car and needed help, said witness Jennifer Freirelmuth, 28. Police Lt. Cloereo, off duty from his job at the New York Police Department, and Anthony LoCloereo ran to the car as the crossing gates came down, Randi LoCloereo said. As the trains horn blared, the couple yanked open the door and pulled out the driver, who needed crutches to walk, Randi LoCloereo said. Moments later, a train plowed into the car, overturning it and dragging it a short distance. Neither the woman nor anyone on the train was hurt, authorities said.

Deputies found the only trace of evidence inside a pocket of the dead man's jeans, which the medium-build, dark complexioned man wore with a plain white T-shirt and a white baseball cap.

It came in the form of a pay stub belonging to a resident of Blaine County. "We think that's where he was from," Gough said.

The body, which was found about a football field's length south of 1700 South Road, had likely been lying there for less than 24 hours, Gough said. The hunter had gone to the same location Thursday morning and had not seen a body.

A dirt fire road leads south from 1700 South Road to the riverside area. Five local girls headed down the road after school Friday, goaded by their curiosity and rumors that a 16-year-old boy had been killed there Thursday night.

One of the girls, Faith Evans, lives nearby but said she heard no gun shots Thursday night. She said she went to sleep shortly after 9 p.m.

No weapon was found, Gough said. Besides hunting and shooting, the area is a popular haunt that Gooding High School students use mainly for smoking and drinking during the day and partying by night, teenager Kanessa Pullman said.

There used to be more parties, said Amanda Bento, before the road was fenced up for about six months. Two months ago it was reopened. As teenagers trickle back into their old stomping grounds, Bento said confidently, "I think we would have heard about a party going on there last night."

By Friday evening, deputies had enlisted the help of the Blaine County Sheriff's Office to help identify the victim.

The BLM purchased 1.2 million pounds of seed for the rehab effort, and two American Indian tribes—the Shoshone-Paiute and Shoshone-Bannock—plan to contribute sage and bitterbrush seedlings raised in recently built greenhouses.

More than $13 million was spent fighting the Murphy fire. More than $10.5 million has been spent on rehab, and officials expect another $4 million from the federal government.

In related fire news, Sen. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho, sent letters this week to federal secretaries of the Interior and Agriculture, requesting portions of newly appropriated funds for Idaho fire rehab efforts.

More than 900 Idaho fires burned 1.7 million acres of land this summer at a cost of $150 million. The Murphy Complex Fire was the state's largest in nearly a century.

and his old sparring partner, former public defender Mike Wood, had engaged in many battles.

"It was my opinion that the prosecutor's office noticeably mistook him and I was quite glad to see him leave," said Wood, who is now a private attorney.

When Burdick heard that, he couldn't help but laugh. "Mike usually tells it like it is," he said.

The trip brought up mixed feelings for at least Burdick. Chatting with his old pals, Burdick saw just how overburdened 5th District judges such as Randy Stoker and G. Richard Bevan have become working the daily accumulation of new cases, also known as the "rocket docket."

Burdick, who was a 5th District judge in Twin Falls County and also a Jerome

County prosecutor, said it troubles him to see good judges overworked and defendants forced into a backlog of cases waiting to be heard. It also causes victims to lay awake at night for longer periods wondering what outcome the case against a defendant will have.

Merck to pay out nearly $5 billion in Vioxx cases

By Molly Sehn
Los Angeles Times

Merck & Co.'s decision to pay $4.85 billion to settle tens of thousands of claims from patients who took the popular painkiller Vioxx could stiffen the resolve of other companies facing litigation over pharmaceutical products or other consumer goods.

The settlement, which was announced Friday, also might vindicate the drug maker's initial strategy of aggressively fighting virtually every injury claim, legal experts said.

Other corporate defendants that have stonewalled plaintiffs, including asbestos manufacturers, have ended up in bankruptcy. Merck pursued a more strategic approach — trying enough cases to get a sense of how juries valued the drug-related injuries and then opting for a comprehensive agreement limiting liability and allowing Merck to move on.

The nearly $5 billion fund, which could cover as many as 26,500 of the more than 30,000 claims filed against the company, "is actually a good settlement for Merck," said Benjamin Zipursky, a Fordham Law School professor who studies products liability.

Although the company has been hit with several multimillion-dollar verdicts, Merck won 12 of the 17 trials to date and has yet to pay out anything, while appealing its losses.

"Playing hardball can be a very smart idea sometimes," Zipursky said.

The deal covers most of the lawsuits filed against the company in U.S. courts, removing a millstone that has weighed on Merck since it pulled Vioxx off drugstore shelves three years ago.

The company withdrew the blockbuster painkiller, which racked up $2.5 billion in annual sales, in September 2004 after a study showed it doubled the risk of heart attack and stroke in patients taking it for more than 18 months.

At that point more than 20 million people in the United States had taken the drug. Individual payouts will depend on the number of people who qualify for the settlement, their age, health status, and the length of time they took the drug. Payments could start as early as August.

Plaintiffs dissatisfied with their offer still could opt to go to trial; but more than 85 percent of eligible claimants must decide to participate for the settlement to take effect.

Merck stressed that the agreement was not a class action settlement and that it was not admitting fault.

Lawyers for Merck and the plaintiffs forged the agreement in meetings over the last year with the four judges overseeing more than 95 percent of the current Vioxx cases nationwide.

police and school administrators canvassed the building.

The caller left the threat around 11:50 a.m. Thursday in Eden, operating a recording machine, saying the school had two hours until a bomb would go off. The students were kept on the field until about 2:10 p.m.

Twin Falls Police said Friday they are following up on leads and continuing to interview students. "So far there's nothing concrete," said Twin Falls Police Officer Brian Maughan.

Some students said their cell phones were confiscated by school staff during the evacuation and they were distressed that they could not call their parents. Other students had cell phones and were using them Thursday.

Twin Falls School District Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said there is a clear reason why staff took cell phones from students: safety.

"There's a number of factors we have to consider regarding cell phones," Dobbs said. "Cell phones are possible detonators."

And, there are other safety concerns. "We don't want to create mass panic and have numerous cars and parents on campus making it a worse situation," Dobbs said.

The district has emergency plans for different situations, including bomb threats, but they are not being disclosed.

"Parts of our plan, for safety reasons, we don't divulge," Dobbs said.

Some school plans warrant notifying parents immediately of certain situations, Dobbs said.

"In this situation we didn't believe it did," Dobbs said of Thursday's incident. "That moved down the list of priorities. Our first responsibility is to deal with the immediate safety of students."

Mass e-mails and phone calls are disseminated from the district in situations where school plans call for that, Dobbs said.

In Thursday's incident, front office staff remained on the job, answering phone calls.

"Anyone who called the school was able to be informed of the situation," Dobbs said.

Schools also rely on outside sources during situations like Thursday's bomb scare incident.

"Working with the media is also very important," Dobbs said. "In this particular case we received a lead... from one member of the media."

Immigrants are being ripped off by phone cards

By Laura Wides-Mimoz
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — They can be seen hanging behind the counter at the mini-mart. Those brightly colored phone cards for calling Latin America, Africa and Asia. Often, they are the only reliable way for immigrants to stay in touch with their families.

But many buyers of these cards are being ripped off to the tune of millions of dollars a year.

Some cards fail to deliver the promised minutes, charge on confusing fees that may not be listed in the microscopic print on the back of the card. Still others round up each call to the nearest three-minute mark.

"Sometimes they give you all the minutes. Sometimes they don't. Then you have to switch to a new card," said Augusto Revolorio, a Miami hotel grocery store clerk. He buys the $2 or $5 cards regularly to call his mother and four brothers in Guatemala.

Cards used by immigrants don't deliver the promised minutes
Magiclevel.com

"It costs me more to complain on the phone and be late for work, so I just rip up the card and buy a new one."

A 2004 study led by University of Georgia economics professor emeritus Julia Marlowe found that the cost-per-minute rates for prepaid calling cards were on average 87 percent higher than those advertised.

But because many immigrants like Revolorio don't have time or are afraid to go to authorities to complain—and the money they lose per card is small—little has been done to crack down.

"Every time I check, the telecommunications industry is a highly regulated industry. This one they don't want to regulate," said Gus West, head of the nonprofit Washington-based Hispanic Institute. That's beginning to change. In the past year, attorneys general in Florida, California and several other states have begun to take a closer look at the phone card industry, as has the Federal Trade Commission. In October, Rep. Eliot Engel, D-N.Y., introduced legislation to regulate the business.

The push comes in part from an unlikely source—communications giant IDT Corp. The Newark, N.J., company settled its own decade-long class-action lawsuit in January over allegations it failed to adequately disclose its charges. Now, it is leading the call for regulation at the state and federal level.

Norbert Dominguez of Miami said he buys about six $10 cards a month to stay in touch with his mother and 4-year-old daughter in Cuba. Each card promises 10 minutes but usually delivers fewer than 12, he said. That's an actual cost of about 83 cents a minute, versus the promised 55 cents. Still, it is cheaper than the typical long-distance telephone rate of $1.15 a minute.

"It's the cheapest way to call because other ways are very expensive, but in the end, they're still swindling us," Dominguez said.

Dominguez said he has complained with little success. "They give you a customer service rep, but it's never someone with authority," he said.

An AP reporter had a similar experience when asking about a hot-pink card $5 card emblazoned "Pa' Llamas" (For Calling) that delivered only 60 of 146 promised minutes to Central America. Miami-based Blackstone Calling Cards, the company that advertises and distributes the cards, referred the reporter to ADMA Telecom, which provides the actual connection.

"If you are calling for Nicaragua it could charge you the rate for Haiti. The caller has to call us and tell us that there was an inconvenience with the call, and we fix the problem," he said.

When pressed for more details, Ernesto referred the reporter to a supervisor, who in turn gave another phone number—Blackstone's.

House votes to protect 23 million Americans from alternative tax

By Jonathan Peterson and Richard Simon
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Capping a spirited debate, House members voted Friday to shield more than 23 million Americans from a tax increase this year under the alternative minimum tax—and hit up wealthy managers of investment firms such as private equity and hedge funds to pay for it.

The 216-193 vote, which closely followed party lines, escalated an emerging battle political over tax priorities, after years of Republican anti-tax fervor. While members of both parties overwhelmingly wish to defuse the alternative minimum tax, they have a sharp dispute on how to do it, and the future of the tax increase planned for rich investors is doubtful.

Many Democrats seek to shift the tax burden toward the richest Americans, while many Republicans argue that the bill was just the first step toward major tax increases that they say are sought by Democrats, who now control both houses of Congress.

"I feel like the little boy in Holland sticking his thumb in the dike," said Rep. Jim McCrery of Louisiana, senior Republican on the Ways and Means Committee. "If I'm not here today about to stick my thumb in the dike ... we're going to have a torrent, a flood of tax increases over the next 10 years."

Democrats contended that the proposal would restore fairness to the nation's tax structure.

"How can you possibly call it a tax increase when we're trying to bring some degree of equity to the system?" asked Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee and the main author of the tax plan.

The debate now shifts to the Senate, where the tax increase is extremely controversial, including among some Democrats who have received big campaign donations from investors who would face higher taxes under the plan. The Bush administration already has said it would veto a tax increase.

Meanwhile, the Internal Revenue Service has warned that action on the alternative minimum tax is required soon to prevent disruptions for 2007 taxpayers.

The tax was created in 1969 to guarantee that a small number of the nation's richest households pay at least some taxes. But because the provision was not indexed for inflation, it has threatened to pinch a growing number of Americans, forcing Congress to repeatedly adjust it.

It potentially looms over families who earn $75,000 or even less, although the biggest impact is on more affluent households.

The bill approved Friday would shelter millions of families from the alternative minimum tax while making up the lost tax revenue by requiring managers of investment partnerships, such as private equity funds, to pay ordinary income tax rates on more of their income, rather than a lower capital gains rate. In many cases, such as change on the treatment of income—known as "carried interest"—would raise the tax rate for well-heeled fund managers to 35 percent from the current 15 percent.

The bill also would restrict the ability of very affluent Americans, notably hedge fund managers, from reducing their tax rates through the use of offshore tax shelters.

Report says new helicopter overheats, isn't safe to fly on hot days

By Aaron C. Davis
Associated Press writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — The Army is spending $2.6 billion on hundreds of European-designed helicopters for homeland security and disaster relief that turn out to have a crucial flaw: They aren't safe to fly on hot days, according to an internal report obtained by The Associated Press.

While the Army scrambles to fix the problem — adding millions to the taxpayer cost — at least one high-ranking lawmaker is calling for the whole deal to be scrapped. During flight tests in Southern California in mid, 80-degree weather, cockpit temperatures in the UH-72A Lakota hovered above 104, a point at which the Army says the communication, navigation and flight control systems can overheat and shut down.

No cockpit equipment failed during the nearly 23 hours of testing, according to the Pentagon report, prepared in July. But the report concluded that the aircraft "is not effective for use in hot environments."

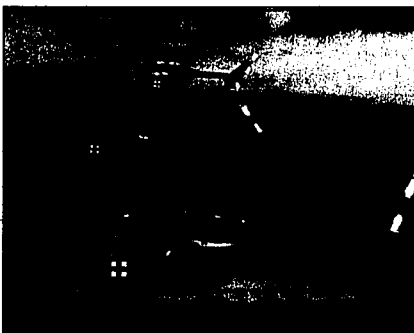

The Army told the AP that to fix the cockpit overheating problem, it will take the highly unusual step of adding air conditioners to many of the 322 helicopters ordered.

The retrofitting will cost at least $10 million and will come out of the Army's budget, according to the Army.

California Rep. Duncan Hunter, the ranking Republican on the House Armed Services Committee, told the AP that the light-weight helicopter will still have too many weaknesses.

"In my view, we would be well advised to terminate the planned buy of 322 Lakota helicopters and purchase instead additional Blackhawk helicopters," Hunter said in a letter this week to Army Secretary Pete Geren.

But Army spokesman Maj. Tom McCuin at the Pentagon said, "It's certainly a concern

This undated photo, provided by EADS North America, shows three UH-72A Lakota helicopters. The Army is spending $2.6 billion on a fleet of European-designed helicopters for homeland security and disaster relief missions that cannot be used in hot weather because their cockpits overheat, according to an internal report obtained by The Associated Press.

to people out there in the field now because it's hot in those cockpits, but it's being fixed."

The Army has received 12 of the Lakotas so far from the American Eurocopter Corp., a North American division of Germany's European Aeronautic Defence and Space Co., or EADS. Testing on the first six by an independent arm of the Pentagon revealed the problems. The rest of the choppers are scheduled for delivery to the active-duty Army and the National Guard over the next eight years.

The Lakota represents the Army's first major effort to adapt commercially available helicopters for military use. Air conditioning is standard in commercial versions of the aircraft, which have not had overheating problems. But the military usually avoids air conditioning in military aircraft to reduce weight and increase performance.

"We don't need air conditioning in the Blackhawks, so we didn't think it would be an issue" in the Lakota, McCuin said. "But when we got the helicopter into the desert, we realized it was a problem."

The Army plans to use the Lakota for such things as search-and-rescue missions in disaster areas, evacuation of injured people, reconnaissance, disaster relief and VIP tours for members of Congress and Army brass. All of its missions will be in the U.S. or other non-combat zones.

Blackhawks, Chinooks and other helicopters will still be available for more demanding duties, such as fighting wildfires or mass evacuations.

EADS spokesman Guy Hicks declined to comment directly on the criticism leveled against the aircraft. "We're proud of our partnership with the Army and the UH-72A, but we defer on anything to do with aircraft requirements and performance. It's the Army's program and they should address that," he said.

Five middle-aged legislators, living in the past

JEERS: This is 2007, right? Apparently nobody told state Rep. Steven Thayne, R-Emmett, who is chairman of the Idaho House of Representatives Family Task Force, an interim legislative committee that has prepared a draft report containing some astonishing recommendations:

- End no-fault divorce in Idaho, which allows a couple to split up without proof of fault.
- Review Idaho's use of restraining orders in domestic violence cases.
- Require a "family-impact statement" on proposed legislation.
- Don't tighten regulations on day-care centers with fewer than 13 children. Instead, the report calls for promoting a voluntary "quality rating system" for small child-care facilities.

The report does not mention early childhood education, meaning — we guess — that the task force doesn't think it's important.

Simply put, the five Republicans on this committee — Thayne; Rep. Dick Harwood of St. Maries; Rep. Janice McGeachin and Dean Mortimer of Idaho Falls, and Marv Hagedorn of Meridian — are out of touch with reality.

"Clearly, I think that the reality is our economy can't support having single-wage earners in every household," Rep. Brandon Durst of Boise, the lone Democrat on the panel, told the Idaho Statesman. "What's important is the quality of the family and the people in the family."

The interim committee was House Speaker Lawrence Denney's idea. It's supposed to find solutions to what Denney sees as the decline of the Idaho family. Controversially, the group is using the typical family of 1950 as its benchmark.

Too bad, because even June Cleaver, Barbara Anderson and Harriet Nelson have gone back to work.

JEERS: To the federal Environmental Protection Agency, for a provision in its new trout farm permits that allows producers to "trade" pollution credits to meet federal standards.

The new permits, scheduled to go into effect Dec. 1, require the industry to reduce by 40 percent the amount of phosphorus — a chemical byproduct of fish feces — discharged into the Snake River.

Pollution-credit trading, similar to the system used by the EPA in regulating air emissions from the nation's coal-fired power plants, allows trout producers in danger of exceeding individual caps to buy credits from a competitor operating below his allotment.

A 55-mile stretch of the river downstream from Twin Falls is the epicenter of the Idaho's $90 million-a-year farm-raised trout, catfish, caviar and alligator industry.

The trading program will be monitored by the state and an independent board. Credit prices will be negotiated between the buyer and seller and dictated by the market.

"What it really does is give these producers flexibility," Sharon Wilson, the EPA specialist who helped write the new rules, told The Associated Press. "There is a limit as to what they will be allowed to trade. But our overall goal is to reduce the pollutant load in the stream ... so if they want to pay someone else for the right to pollute a little more, that's fine with us."

It's a free-market solution that substitutes incentives for regulation.

JEERS: To the University of Idaho, which is spending $400,000 of the taxpayers' money to promote its third new slogan in less than two years.

"A Legacy of Leading" will replace the Moscow school's current slogans of "No Fences" and "Open Space. Open Minds."

Those short-lived taglines, complete with billboards on the sides of buses showing a person hopping a wire fence, were launched in late 2006 to replace "From Here You Can Go Anywhere." At the same time, the university ditched its 35-year-old "starburst" symbol.

The UI, where enrollment has dropped over the past three years, is trying to underscore its role as Idaho's top research school.

The new campaign will cost $900,000 this year, including $400,000 in state money and $500,000 from the private University of Idaho Foundation. Three new 30-second television ads will air Nov. 17, in time for Idaho's football game against Boise State University.

"They need to spend that money on different things, like scholarships and more financial aid for students," Luis Chavolla, a UI Junior, told the Moscow-Pullman Daily News. "Instead of spending more money on marketing, why don't they help the students who are already here?"

We've with Chavolla. Cost-effective education and course offerings that lead to careers attract students; just ask those at the College of Southern Idaho.

Of course, CSI would never squander $900,000 on public relations. It could find better uses for the money.

TODAY'S HAPPENINGS

Democrats, Republicans: We're all Americans

There is not much difference between the Democrat and Republican parties, but rather than seeing this as some conspiracy, I see it that most Americans hold roughly similar political views.

Of the general population, most don't even bother to vote, since they don't care who gets elected. Politicians of all stripes seek power to carry out whatever policies they support.

The first job of any politician in our system is to get elected, since being right does no good if you're not in office to influence public policy.

That dictators in the last century have murdered more than 150 million of their citizens and caused the death of another hundred million-plus in their wars of domination is not a minor detail to be overlooked, Mr. Shuckert.

When communism was a theoretical political system 120 years ago, it was seen as the answer to all social ills.

Read Chairman Mao's little red book or consider Stalin's murderous purges. Look at Honecrast or the Manson family to see what those forms of communism brought. There is no glossing over a political system that enforces its goals with murder.

Even the idealistic communes of the '60s didn't work.

Communism as a political system is a failure.

Rather than support any system which includes killing any number of opponents, I'd support a system which speaks to the right of the people to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Is the United States perfect? No, but we are a people that have acknowledged its mistakes and is actively working to bring about meaningful change. That's why we are the target of those who want to live free and those who want to destroy freedom.

Two men had different reactions to bomb

Several weeks after piloting the atomic bomb, which unleashed its devastation upon Hiroshima, Japan, U.S. Commander Paul "Warfield" Tibbets walked through and examined the swelled streets of Nagasaki where his comrades-in-arms had dropped the second bomb.

There "to sate his academic curiosity," Commander Tibbets nonchalantly purchased some souvenir rice bowls and wooden cup saucers, later remarking, "Damndest thing you ever saw."

Throughout his life, which ended only a few weeks ago, Commander Tibbets always maintained that surgically dropping these vaporizing bombs was a seminally patriotic mission which saved both sides millions of lives and from what would otherwise have been a long enduring horrendous battle.

Around the same time as Commander Tibbets' post-war walk, Navy skipper and Axis sub-chaser, Lawrence Ferlinghetti, who went on to become San Francisco's City Lights Bookstore founder, peacenik warrior and beat poet extraordinaire, hiked among the same Nagasaki ruins.

There he observed — as San Francisco Chronicle writer Paul McHugh reported last Veterans Day: "I saw a giant field of scorched mud.

It sprawled out to the horizon; three square miles looking like someone had worked it over with a huge blower torch.

A few sticks from buildings jutted up like black arms," Ferlinghetti says. "I found a teacup that seemed like it had human flesh fused into it. Just melted into the porcelain.

"In that instant," said the former submarine chaser Ferlinghetti, "I became a total pacifist."

What's God got to do with it?

WASHINGTON — When the founder of the Christian Coalition, who blames natural disasters on abortion, gives his support to a three-married, pro-abortion, pro-gay-rights Catholic, does religion really matter anymore?

Pat Robertson's endorsement Wednesday of Rudy Giuliani for president just shifted "strange bedfellows" into "the weird turn pro" category.

Robertson, who famously blamed Hurricane Katrina on our wanton ways — and urged the assassination of Venezuelan President Hugo Chavez — announced his vote of confidence, saying that Giuliani has "proven time and time again that he is a social conservative."

Except that Giuliani isn't and isn't, but that's OK because what Giuliani has proved time and again is that he was mayor of New York City on 9/11. And, as Robertson also said, Giuliani can be relied upon to defend the country against "the blood lust of Islamic terrorists."

Robertson's endorsement must have been a sticky moment for Giuliani, who couldn't rightly say, "no thanks," even if he might not relish being captured in the same frame with a man whose fellow evangelicals consider him only intermittently sane.

Generally speaking, politicians can move pretty quickly when they're about to be caught by the camera lens standing next to a fellow known for saying such things as liberal judges are a greater danger to America "than a few bearded terrorists who fly into buildings."

Then again, Robertson still holds sway with a daily average audience of almost 900,000 with his Christian Broadcasting Network's "The 700 Club."

And Giuliani shares Robertson's concern about liberal judges. If not his sense that they're more dangerous than terrorists. Every chance he gets, Giuliani assues conservative audiences that, if elected, he'll appoint strict constructionist judges.

To evangelicals such as Robertson, that promise can be understood to mean, "I'm really on your team, but I have to get elected, don't I?"

But even conservative judges and Giuliani's tough posture on terrorism fail to tell what many believe is really behind Robertson's anointing of the most liberal Republican candidate for president. The real issue isn't fetuses or embryos or same-sex unions or bearded bad guys.

It's Clintons.

When it comes to that old time religion, nothing quite sparks the evangelical spirit like the thought of Bill and Hillary back in the White House and all the attendant imagery forever tattooed on buttoned-up blimps.

Depending on one's view, Robertson is either unprincipled or brave. In fact, he has taken a courageous step by creating a crack in the conservative religious firmament. This at a time when religious conservatives have been threatening to stay home from the polls — or support a third-party candidate — rather than compromise principle.

Meeting in Salt Lake City recently, evangelical leaders discussed the third-party alternative. A Pew Research Center survey last month found that half of white evangelical Republicans would consider voting for a third-party candidate if Giuliani and Hillary face off next November.

But Robertson, for all his bluster and blunder, may have shifted the tectonic plates by giving evangelicals a green light to support Giuliani and forcing the question: Can evangelicals really afford to let Clinton win just so they can brag about being more virtuous than everyone else?

Michael Cromartie, director of the Evangelicals in Civic Life program at the Ethics and Public Policy Center, suggests Robertson's endorsement shows a growing pragmatic streak among religious conservatives. Many have learned, Cromartie says, that "politics is the art of making choices between relative goods and lesser evils.

Some evangelicals still insist they won't vote for Giuliani. Focus on the Family's James Dobson is one. Richard Land, president of the Southern Baptist Convention's Ethics and Religious Liberty Commission, is another.

Both have cited Giuliani's support for abortion and his multiple marriages.

Speaking to Newsweek last month, Land compared a vote for Giuliani to voting for a Kinsman and said, "I cannot vote for someone who believes that it's all right to stop a beating heart."

Land also has said that evangelicals might support Mitt Romney despite theological differences.

Cromartie agrees, but again, Hillary matters most.

"They just don't want her," he says of evangelicals.

So in 2008, if terror trumps bluster, and Hillary puts terror in evangelical hearts, what does religious conviction mean? Is religion primarily a matter of virtue — or of pragmatism?

Next November will tell. In the meantime, a glance at two recent surveys by the Pew Research Center provides a hint: Both parties' front-runners, Clinton and Giuliani, also lead among a broad spectrum of religious groups.

For now, it would appear that pragmatism is virtue, and religion on the right means beating Hillary.

U.S. ups pressure on Pakistan after Bhutto detained

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Pakistan quickly ended house arrest for opposition leader Benazir Bhutto on Friday as President Gen. Pervez Musharraf came under new U.S. pressure to end a crackdown that Washington fears is hurting the fight against Islamic extremism.

Earlier in the day, police threw up barbed wire around Bhutto's house to keep her from speaking at a rally to protest Musharraf's imposition of emergency rule, and security forces rounded up thousands of her supporters to block any mass demonstrations.

The action was a new blow to hopes the two U.S.-friendly leaders could form an alliance against militants—a rising threat underlined by a suicide bombing in northwest Pakistan that targeted the home of a Cabinet minister, who escaped with a slight injury. Bhutto twice tried to evade authorities in her car, telling police who surrounded her villa: "Do not raise hands on women. You are Muslims. This is un-Islamic." Officers blocked the former prime minister's way with an armored vehicle.

In Rawalpindi, the nearby garrison town where she had hoped to stage the rally, police fired tear gas at hundreds of Bhutto loyalists who staged wildcat protests and hurled stones. More than 100 were arrested.

The Bush administration called for the restrictions on

Bhutto

Bhutto to be lifted, and Pakistan's government said late Friday that she was again free to move about, although police barriers remained outside her house. Her supporters said she would try to leave this morning.

In Washington, where some lawmakers are calling for aid to Pakistan to be curtailed, U.S. officials again criticized Musharraf's crackdown.

"We remain concerned about the continued state of emergency and curtailment of basic freedoms, and urge Pakistani authorities to quickly return to constitutional order and democratic norms," Gordon Johndroe, a spokesman for the National Security Council, said in a statement.

As Musharraf's chief international backer, the Bush administration is deeply concerned about the deteriorating situation in Pakistan, a nuclear-armed nation of 160 million people that is on the front lines of the U.S.-led campaign against terrorist groups.

The suspension of the constitution last weekend has intensified the anger of moderate and secular Pakistanis who have become increasingly frustrated with military rule. At the same time, Islamic militants with ties to the Taliban and al-Qaida are stepping up violence, including suicide bombings and fighting in the northwest along the border with Afghanistan.

Musharraf cited the gains by extremists in the frontier region as one of the main reasons for his emergency decree, saying political unrest was undermining the fight against militants.

On Friday, a suicide bomber blew himself up at the home of Minister for Political Affairs Amir Muqam in the northwest city of Peshawar. Muqam was unhurt but four people died.

Defense Secretary Robert Gates said the turmoil could undermine the battle against Pakistani insurgents.

"The concern I have is that the longer the internal problems continue, the more distracted the Pakistani army and security services will be in terms of the internal situation rather than focusing on the terrorist threat in the frontier area," Gates told reporters while flying home from a weeklong visit to Asia.

Myanmar's Suu Kyi resigned to house arrest

YANGON, Myanmar (AP) — Myanmar opposition leader Aung San Suu Kyi said Friday that she is "very optimistic" about the U.N.-promoted effort to start talks between the military government and pro-democracy forces, but appeared resigned to remaining under house arrest.

Suu Kyi made her observations in a meeting with top executives of her National League for Democracy party, who were allowed contact with her for the first time in more than three years.

Suu Kyi looked fit, well and energetic like before. She is full of ideas," said party spokesman Nyan Win, who attended the hour-long meeting at a government guest house along with three top party members. Suu Kyi was taken to the guest house from her home nearby where she is kept under house arrest.

Their meeting, held far from the public and press, was permitted by the government after U.N. special envoy Ibrahim Gambari on Thursday completed a six-day visit to Myanmar to promote a dialogue between the ruling junta and Suu Kyi.

Nyan Win, speaking after he and his colleagues met for about an hour with Suu Kyi, said the 1991 Nobel peace laureate believes the military authorities now have the will to achieve national reconciliation.

He said she told her fellow

party leaders that the government's crackdown on September's mass pro-democracy demonstrations was "devastating for the NLD, the government and the people."

"She said a healing process such as the release of political prisoners is essential," according to Nyan Win, Myanmar held more than 1,100 political prisoners before the crackdown, and the number now is difficult to estimate. Thousands of people have been rounded up since late September, though the government says most have been released.

Suu Kyi also held talks with Aung Kyi, who was appointed the junta's "minister for relations" with the former Nobel Peace Prize winner last month amid the severe worldwide criticism of the junta.

Oakley hangs on for 1A title shot

By Zach Kyle
For the Times-News

COUNCIL — The Oakley Hornets advanced to the Idaho High School Football Class 1A Division I Championship for a chance at their first title since 1985 by slinging the Council Lumberjacks 27-24 Friday.

The Hornets held the slim lead with three minutes remaining in the semifinal game when Council recovered a Mitch Bedke fumble. The Lumberjacks drove the field, but Bedke redeemed himself as he picked off Council quarterback Keith Hell with 40 seconds remaining to preserve the Hornets victory.

"We're going to go into the state championship with a lot of confidence," Oakley coach Nick Greenwell said. "We've proven to everybody we can play four quarters. For seven weeks, we've been hearing we'd run out of gas once we met a team that took us into the fourth quarter. But our kids are in good shape, and they never stop fighting. I couldn't be more proud of them."

Every possession played its part in the see-saw game, but the final score that pushed Oakley over the hump came with five minutes remaining when Bedke, flushed from the pocket, scampered around several defenders and found Colton Washburn open for a 25-yard touchdown pass.

The play was set up by an 18-yard completion to Brian Habbit on third-and-20 followed by a Bedke run on fourth-and-2 to pick up the first down.

After running off a 10-game win streak — the previous seven by mercy rule — the Hornets had to scrap against the undefeated defending champion Lumberjacks. Time and again, the bigger Lumberjacks hammered the ball up

No. 19 Broncos try to ride streak back to BCS bowl

By Doug Alden
Associated Press writer

LOGAN, Utah — No. 19 Boise State wants to bust into the BCS for a second straight year.

Beating winless Utah State today wouldn't do much to get the Broncos back in the Bowl Championship Series, but a loss or even a poor showing could be a monumental setback.

Utah State (0-9, 0-5) has the second-longest losing streak in the Bowl Series division (formerly Division I-A) at 19 straight and only win in its final three games would help salvage something of the season.

Upsetting Boise State (8-1, 5-0) would be phenomenal for the Aggies.

The Broncos know this, mostly because rest of the WAC feels the same way about beating the team that has dominated the conference in recent years. Despite being targeted every week, the Broncos have lost just one of their last 45 conference games.

"We're way more concerned with ourselves than whoever we play," Boise State coach Chris Peterson said. "It's nice when you continually preach that message that it's about us. Every week, you're always looking for some sort of motivational tool and get them fired up, but really it comes down to just us taking care of our business."

The Broncos have a huge showdown Nov. 23 at No. 14 Hawaii, the WAC's other ranked team. But before either team can think about a winner-take-all conference title game, there are still a couple weeks to go. Peterson says he hasn't had to remind his players of that.

"If you're not totally prepared and have your edge, anything can happen," Peterson said. "There's always some issues we're trying to clean up. One week we might be making progress in a certain area, the next week we kind of slip in another area. There's always that moving puzzle."

Peterson noted Boise State's 69-67 win over Nevada on Oct. 14, when the Broncos needed four overtimes to keep their WAC winning streak intact. The Broncos beat Louisiana Tech 45-31 the following week and then Fresno State 34-21 last weekend. The victories were solid, but not overwhelming.

Kimberly quarterback Evan Jerke (10) is taken down by the Shelley defense during the Bulldogs' 45-15 loss in the Class 3A state semifinals Friday night at Holt Arena in Pocatello.

Russets mow over Bulldogs

Kimberly's unbeaten run ends in 3A semis

By David Bashore
For the Times-News

POCATELLO — The game started off on the wrong foot for Kimberly and just kept getting worse as the Bulldogs fell victim to Murphy's Law — and the Shelley Russets — in a 45-15 Class 3A state semifinal loss at Holt Arena on Friday.

It was by no means the telling moment, but it was a microcosm of the way the game went, when Kimberly's Cody Wadsworth kept an errant punt snap alive for Shelley's Cody Anderson to recover for a touchdown. On the point-after, the snap sailed above the holder's head, but Shelley kicker and quarterback Tanner Higham was alert and recovered the ball, throwing to wide-open A.J. Hansen for the two-point conversion.

Kimberly didn't make the discipline errors that the Russets did, but they did make three critical physical mistakes that led to 22 Shelley points.

Two first-half interceptions by senior quarterback Evan Jerke were converted into 14 Russet points, and the rout was on from there.

Even when junior running back Eric Marvin, who was limited to 49 yards on 13 carries due to a bum shoulder and a stiffing Shelley defense, scored in the third quarter to get the Bulldogs on the board, it was answered by a 37-yard bomb from Higham to Jordan Kidman on a fourth-down play.

The Bulldogs actually had the first clear chance of the game and looked poised to strike, driving all the way to the Shelley 10-yard line with the opening possession. But Jerke got a little too much air under a corner-route pass and the ball was picked off in the end zone.

On the next possession, Jerke made another ill-advised throw, trying to thread a ball into double coverage, and was picked off at the Shelley 10. Both interceptions were converted into Russet touchdowns, and allowed Shelley to dominate the time of possession battle in the first half.

The Russets showed they could score on the quick-strike — relatively speaking — when they plunged in their opening possession with a 1-yard sneak by Higham. Then they proved they could play ball control.

Shelley scored twice on 13-play drives in the second quarter and had its offense on the field for nearly 15 minutes of the first half, running 34 plays for a total of 249 yards. By comparison, Kimberly ran just 18 plays for 54 yards in 9:27 of possession in first

Bruins pluck Hawks in opener

Twin Falls girls beat Skyview 69-28

By Diane Philbin
Times-News writer

From the opening up to the final buzzer, it was all Twin Falls as the Bruins opened the 2007-08 season with a 69-28 outburst of the Class 4A Skyview-Hawks Friday night at Baun Gymnasium.

"It was great to finally start," said Twin Falls coach Nancy Jones. "The girls and coaches have all been willing. The girls came out strong. We ran the up-tempo game really well. The man-press worked causing turnovers and scoring. We were even able to put some new things in and the girls were able to adjust."

The Bruins scored 17 first-quarter points and their stifling defense held Skyview to a mere two points. The Hawks' first score came with slightly more than two minutes remaining as Hailee Day made a free throw. Sila Vast followed a minute later with the second Skyview point on another made free throw.

Twin Falls led at the break 38-12 and was up 53-24 after three quarters.

Twin Falls seniors Shereen Haggan and Kelly Wiseman led scoring with 13 points each. Junior Devan Matkin added a dozen points, five steals and four assists.

The Bruins recorded 23 boards with senior Amber Petersen leading with six.

Haggan came off the bench and was dominant on both ends of the court.

"I was mentally ready," said Haggan. "I think I played well. My mind set was there and I wanted the ball. We really played together."

For Skyview, Mylinda Cypriot led the Hawks with 12 points including a 3-pointer.

"We learned a lot about ourselves tonight," said Skyview coach Cyndi Pasta. "We got in foul trouble early and we couldn't make a layup. We know we are a better team and we will come back ready to play."

Idaho State hopes to play spoiler against No. 3 Montana

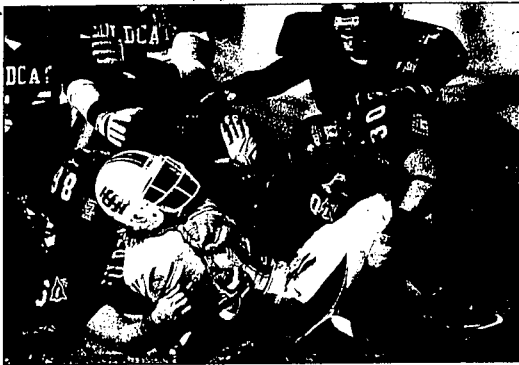

By Mark Liptak
Times-News correspondent

POCATELLO — They are akin to the Roman Empire of ancient times. They are atop the Big Sky Conference football world, all powerful, all encompassing. They are Montana, winners of 11 consecutive Big Sky football titles, either outright or shared. The Grizzlies will be headed to the Football Championship Series playoffs for a record 15th straight season.

They're also headed to Holt Arena today for a game with 3-5 Idaho State.

The Grizzlies come in ranked No. 3 in the nation and boast a 9-0 record. For a few weeks of the season, they were ranked as the top team in the country, Montana has won 14 straight conference games and 21 of its last 22 games.

What Montana has done eclipses other notable accomplishments in FCS (formerly Division I-AA) produced by schools like Georgia Southern in the 1980s and Appalachian State more recently. No other school in FCS has put up the wins for a longer period of time than the Griz and Bengal head coach John Zamberlin knows it.

"Some say when they step on the field they're arrogant, but that's not the case," said Zamberlin. "They've earned their right by what they've accomplished to be confident they are going to win every time they step on the field."

But surprisingly, shockingly to some, Montana hasn't played with the sense of urgency that past Griz teams have.

The Grizzlies have trailed at various points in most of their games this season. They haven't dominated teams in the Big Sky like they have in the past. One can make a case that the only conference game this year where Montana looked like its old self was the 52-7 game with Northern Colorado.

In three other wins for example, against Eastern Washington, Northern Arizona and Portland State, Montana came out on top by an average of just three points. That's not to say the Griz aren't capable. Running back Lex Hilliard, a year removed from his torn Achilles' injury has rushed for 872 yards and 12 touchdowns. Quarterback Cole Bergquist has completed 60 percent of his throws and tossed 15 touchdowns. The defense is allowing only 13 points a game.

Yet something seems missing and ISU hopes to take advantage of that playing at home before what should be the largest crowd of the season.

"This is a pride game," said Zamberlin. "That's what you talk to the kids about. We've got a chance to make a statement that we're trying to build something like Montana."

Zamberlin is sure to bring up ISU's stunning 43-40 double-overtime win over the Grizzlies in 2003 at Holt Arena as motivation as he tries to sell his team that it can be done.

Program coverage on 1270 AM KTFI starts at 2 p.m. with kickoff for the Bengals' second day set for 3 p.m.

Creamer opens 5-stroke lead

MOBILE, Ala. — Paula Creamer made a big move Friday at Magnolia Grove to take the lead in the LPGA Tour's only multiple winners this year.

After birdieing the final seven holes Thursday for a share of the lead in the Tournament of Champions, Creamer shot a bogey-free, 7-under 65 on Friday to open a five-stroke advantage at 12-under 132.

The 21-year-old Californian, the SBS Open winner in February for her lone victory of the season and third in three years, birdied three of the final four holes on the Crossings Course, rolling in a 35-footer on the par-4 18th.

Jin Joo Hong was second at 7 under after a 67. Annika Sorenstam (67) and Pat Hurst (69) were 6 under, and Karen Stupples (67) was another stroke back in the event limited to tournament winners from 2004-07 and active Hall of Famers.

Petersen was 4 under after a 71 that included two penalty strokes. She's coming off consecutive victories in South Korea and Thailand and has won three of her last four starts to raise her season victory total to five.

Ochoa, the defending champion, was 1 under after a 69.

Already the player of the year, Ochoa has won seven times this season and earned a record $3,337,993. Last year at Magnolia Grove, the Mexican star had weekend rounds of 63 and 65 for a 10-stroke victory and 21-under 267 total, both tournament records.

Petersen was penalized two strokes on the par-5 13th, the first for accidentally moving her ball while trying to remove a loose branch and Stadler shot a 69 to reach 11-under 133 on the Sheshan International course. Mickelson birdied four of the last five holes.

England's Ross Fisher (68) and Scotland's Simon Yates (66) were 8 under, and Fiji Singh (70) was another stroke back along with South Africa's Andrew McLardy (69).

COLUMBUS, Ohio — There's a countdown clock to the Michigan game inside top-ranked Ohio State's practice facility. As the Buckeyes walk around campus, friends, family and fellow students mention the annual regular-season finale with the Wolverines.

Even the Buckeyes keep an eye on their rivals.

"We go in after our game and we want to see what everyone else has done," linebacker Austin Spiller said.

"Obviously, Michigan is one of the first teams we look at, what they did that day. They're always in the back of our heads."

They're just not in the front part, at least not yet.

As much as everybody in scarlet and gray wants the showdown they call "The Game" to go here, first the Buckeyes (10-0, 6-0 Big Ten) have a tough test with Illinois (7-3, 4-2) today. Ohio State coach Jim Tressel said this week he'd seen no signs his players were looking past the Illini to the showdown on Nov. 17 at the Big House in Ann Arbor, Mich., that will determine the Big Ten championship.

Beat Illinois and Michigan and the Buckeyes are on their way to a second consecutive BCS national championship game.

"Our guys know how good Illinois is," Tressel said. "They faced them a little over a year ago. We've had them on a lot of films. We've gotten to see them a lot. They're at the top of the Big Ten with a lot of ability. That, to me, is what creates focus, is that you know what you're up against."

The Illini won just two games a year ago but took the Buckeyes — also No. 1 then — to the closing minutes before falling 17-10.

This year, coach Ron Zook's cat is deeper, stronger and more talented. The evidence is in their record, but also their approach.

"Last year, we were in the position to win but just couldn't get it done. We just had to get over that hump," Zook said. "We talked about it in the offseason a lot — about how we think we can win and now we have to go win. We have to go do it. Now when our guys go out on the field they have a sense of confidence that if they play the way they are capable of playing and do the things that we have coached them to do, they are going to succeed."

It was Illinois' defense, led by linebacker J. Leman, that held the Buckeyes and Helmsan Trophy-winning quarterback Troy Smith in check a year ago. Most of that unit is back again, including Leman and stellar cornerback Vontae Davis.

The Illini have 34 sacks, tied for 10th in the nation and just three behind Ohio State.

Before a game earlier this season, Leman introduced the defensive unit as the guys: "who put the pain in Champaign."

As good as the defense has been, most of the attention has gone to quarterback Juice Williams and running back Rashawn Mendonhall.

Williams is far from the most polished passer, but he is capable of beating teams with his legs or his arm. He needs just nine yards to break his own Illinois record for yards gained (76) by a quarterback and has a strong enough arm to make Big 12 plays down the field.

"That's where they can paralyze you is with their ability to hit a home run, because you have to have to have so many things covered," Tressel said.

Ascent in rankings means No. 5 Kansas no longer an underdog

STILLWATER, Okla. — After being down for so long, No. 5 Kansas has had to prove itself over and over again this season to earn respect and make itself a factor in the national championship picture.

Now the Jayhawks are so close to the top, the only thing left to prove is whether they can handle their new lofty status. Kansas gets a chance to answer that question Saturday night against Oklahoma State.

"It's great when you have a lot of people in your program because it means that the kids and everyone is doing something right. But we are making sure we take off track. Kansas coach Mark Mangino said, "We have a smart bunch of kids here that see what is taking place. They are enjoying it, but they are not caught up in it."

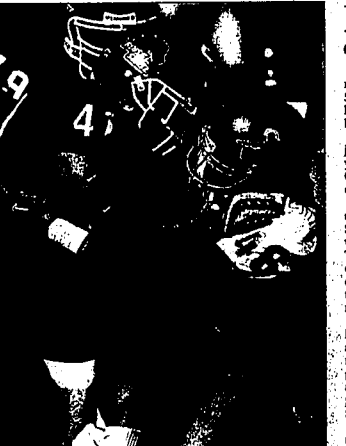

The Jayhawks (9-0, 5-0 Big 12), fourth in the BCS standings, get their first road test in the season against the Cowboys (5-4, 3-2), who are coming off a heartbreaking loss.

Oklahoma State had Texas down 21 points in the fourth quarter last week in Stillwater before losing 38-35. The Cowboys have won five straight against Kansas, including a 34-20 decision in Lawrence last season, when Adarius Bowman set a Big 12 record with 300 yards receiving.

The No. 19 Broncos face win-less Utah State today in Logan, Utah.

Broncos

Does that make them vulnerable today? Possibly, Utah State coach Brent Guy said, but not if the Aggies fall behind quickly.

"They're a team that will jump out and can jump on you fast if you make mistakes," Guy said. "That's the thing you can't do against Boise State."

Boise State's only loss this season was to Washington on Sept. 8. The Broncos have worked their way back into the Top 25 and are 20th in the latest BCS standings, which decide who can go where in the four biggest bowls and the national title game.

In order to guarantee a spot in the BCS for the second straight season — something no school from outside the guaranteed six conferences and Notre Dame has accomplished — the Broncos would need to win the WAC and be 12th or better in the BCS standings.

"They're a team that will jump out and can jump on you fast if you make mistakes."

— USU coach Brent Guy, on Boise State

Moving up eight spots is possible with three games remaining, but only if the Broncos win all of them and avoid close calls at Utah State on Saturday and at home next week against Idaho (1-9, 0-6).

The Broncos have gotten used to being heavy favorites. "I don't think it's hard to keep your edge. I think it's probably easier to keep your edge because you do not want to be upset by a team that shouldn't beat you," Boise State defensive back Mervyn Thuman said. "You don't want to lose your chance at a WAC championship on a team that you should beat."

The last time the Broncos played in the state was on Sept. 30, when they routed Utah — the original "BCS Busters" — 36-3. The orange-clad Boise fans were vastly outnumbered, yet much louder than the Utah supporters in the blowout.

Logan, which is about 85 miles north of Salt Lake City, is only half an hour south of the Idaho state line and Romney Stadium could be more full than it has been all season.

It will be the final home game for Utah State's seniors, whose careers have spanned two coaches, numerous assistants and very few wins.

"It hasn't been the plan that we wanted and we haven't had the years that we've wanted... receiver/kick returner Kevin Robinson said. "We say we're going to do something big, we didn't but you can't get mad at us for not fighting every single game."

Mitchell's report may not give full answer, but it's a start

For years, we've heard rumor upon rumor about which baseball players are using what. There's such a steady stream of accusations — and not nearly enough facts — that we barely miss an eyebrow anymore.

NANCY ARMOUR

All that's about to change. At least, let's hope so. Former Sen. George Mitchell is expected to unleash the results of his investigation into performance-enhancing drug use before the end of the year. After years of Major League Baseball trying to find its dirty little secret, we'll finally have an idea of just how bad the problem is.

Houston Rockets center Yao Ming, left, fights for a loose ball against Milwaukee Bucks forward Yi Jianlian, both from China, during first-half action Friday in Houston.

Yao gets best of Yi

HOUSTON — When it comes to basketball in China, Yao Ming is still the king. But Yi Jianlian's time could be coming soon. Yao and Yi each had their share of highlights in the much-anticipated first matchup of the country's greatest player and its top rising star, and Yao's Houston Rockets beat Yi's Milwaukee Bucks 104-88 on Friday night.

Yao had 28 points, 10 rebounds and three assists. Yi had 19 points and nine rebounds. The game was an enormous event in China, where it started early Saturday morning. It was being broadcast on 19 television networks, and NBA officials were expecting the largest-ever viewing audience for a game, well over 200 million.

As a bonus, those watching also got to see plenty of Tracy McGrady, who had 21 points, seven rebounds and eight assists, and Michael Redd, who had 26 points for Milwaukee.

The Bucks have lost eight straight games in Houston going back to 1999. SUIHS 106, HEAT 101. MIAMI — Steve Nash scored 11 straight points in the fourth quarter and finished with 30 to go with eight assists, and the Phoenix Suns added to Miami's season-opening misery.

Leandro Barbosa finished with 17 points, Raja Bell scored 16 and Shawn Marfan added 17 points and 24 rebounds for Phoenix, which shot 15-for-33 from 3-point range.

Shaquille O'Neal had season-highs of 25 points and 10 rebounds for Miami, which led by as many as 12 before falling to 0-5. SPURS 97, HORNETS 85. NEW ORLEANS — Tony Parker scored early, often and from all over the court, finishing with 27 points.

Tim Duncan had 24 points and 12 rebounds for San Antonio, while Manu Ginobili scored 14 and fellow Argentinean Fabricio Oberto added 13 points to help the Spurs maintain a double-digit lead through most of the second half.

MAGIC 112, KNICKS 102. NEW YORK — Dwight Howard had 22 points and 20 rebounds, Jameer Nelson added 24 points and 10 assists, and the Orlando Magic completed a perfect four-game road trip.

Hedo Turkoglu scored 12 of his 21 points in the fourth quarter for the Magic (5-1), off to their best start since also winning five of their first six in the 2002-03 season. Rashard Lewis also finished with 21.

WASHINGTON — Carmelo Anthony scored 12 consecutive Nuggets points Friday night in a third quarter in which the home team was based off the court, helping Denver end a three-game losing streak. Anthony finished with 32 points, and Marcus Camby had 13 points, 12 rebounds and seven assists for the Nuggets, who shot 51 percent.

Gilbert Arenas, still laboring on a surgically repaired left knee that was drained for a second time on Wednesday, finished with 16 points on 5-for-13 shooting. RAPTORS 105, 76ERS 103. PHILADELPHIA — Chris Bosh made 16 of 18 free throws, scored 25 points and had 10 rebounds to help the Toronto Raptors snap a three-game losing streak.

Anthony Parker scored 22 points, including a 3-pointer with 23.7 seconds remaining. TJ Ford had 16 for the Raptors. Andre Iguodala scored 17 of his 26 points in the second half and Lou Williams scored 19 of his 21 points in the fourth quarter for the Sixers.

BOCATS 96, PACERS 87. CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Emeka Okafor had 25 points and 23 rebounds, and Gerald Wallace scored 28 points. Okafor's second career 20-20 game was his best game since he turned down a contract offer from the Bobcats before the start of the season.

Jermaine O'Neal had 18 points, Troy Murphy scored 16 points each and Danny Granger added 15 for the Pacers. PISTONS 103, CLIPPERS 79. AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Chauncey Billups scored 23 points and Antonio McDyess added 14 to help the Pistons hand the Los Angeles Clippers their first loss.

Billups made five 3-pointers in the second half in a victory that left Boston as the NBA's lone unbeaten team. Nazr Mohammed came off the bench to score 15 points and Richard Hamilton added 10 and 10 assists.

No. 4 Kansas routs Louisiana-Monroe

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Sherron Collins scored 22 points and led a 17-2 run early in the second half and No. 4 Kansas swamped Louisiana-Monroe 107-78 on Friday night to win its 35th consecutive home opener. The Jayhawks (1-0), who led 47-35 at halftime, went up 75-45 on an inside move by Darnell Jackson, who had a career-high 21 points.

Consecutive 3-pointers by Collins raised the lead to 69-33 with 9:30 left. Then with 3:20 left, Jackson's basket made it 101-60. Kansas had not scored 100 points in an opener since 1991.

The Jayhawks had 19 points for the Warhawks (0-1). No. 7 TENNESSEE 80, TEMPLE 63. KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Julian Smith scored 14 points and Ramon Smith added 14 to lead Tennessee. Julian Smith was 5-for-9 from the field for the Volunteers (1-0), who have won nine straight openers overall and are 40-2 in home openers since 1965.

NO. 10 WASHINGTON ST. 68, E WASHINGTON 41. PULLMAN, Wash. — Aron Baynes scored 15 points and No. 10 Washington State beat Eastern Washington 68-41 on Friday night in the season opener before a sellout crowd of almost 12,000 that reflected the new buzz around a once-moribund program.

Washington State led 31-19 at halftime, then outlasted the Eagles 14-2 in the first minutes of the second half for a commanding 45-21 lead. Baynes had 10 points in that stretch. Derrick Low added 14 points for the Cougars (1-0) and Robbie Cowgill had 13.

Milan Stanoevic led Eastern Washington (0-1) with 11 points. NO. 13 DUKE 121, NC CENTRAL 56. DURHAM, N.C. — Taylor King scored 20 points while fellow rookie Kyle Singler added 15 to lead the Blue Devils to their eighth straight season-opening victory.

Nolan Smith, a third freshman, added 16 points for the Blue Devils, who improved to 26-2 in openers under Hall of Fame coach Mike Krzyzewski. Henderson scored 15 points and as Duke (1-0) finished with seven players in double figures.

NO. 16 TEXAS A&M 73, MONTESE STATE 50. COLLEGE STATION, Texas — Josh Carter scored 14 points and freshman DeAndre Jordan had 12 as coach Mark Turgeon won in his Texas A&M debut. It was Texas A&M's eighth straight win in a home opener.

Turgeon, who came to Texas A&M from Wichita State, took over in April after Billy Gillispie left for Kentucky. The 42-year-old takes over a program that rose from the Big 12 basement to the NCAA tournament round of 16 in the three seasons under Gillispie.

NO. 19 ARKANSAS 67, WOFFORD 45. FETTERVILLE, Ark. — Patrick Beverley, held without a field goal in the first half, finished with 15 points and Darion Townes scored all 14 of his in the second half to lead the Razorbacks in the coaching debut of John Pelphrey.

Majerus makes Saint Louis debut in 54-43 victory

PITTSBURGH — Kevin Lisch scored 24 points and Saint Louis won its debut under longtime Utah coach Rick Majerus, going on a 12-2 run to rebound from a half-time deficit and beat North Carolina A&T 54-43 Friday.

Tommy Liddell added 10 points and Luke Meyer had seven points and nine rebounds in the Hispanic College Fund Classic tournament at Pitt in which four teams play three games each in three days. Saint Louis meets No. 22 Pittsburgh on Sunday.

The Billikens (1-0) trailed 26-25 at the half, but a technical foul on A&T's Steven Rush started the decisive run. Lisch made the ensuing two free throws to put Saint Louis up 35-32 with about 13 minutes remaining. Lisch then hit a 3-pointer and a jumper, and Liddell added a 3-pointer while scoring on successive possessions that made it 45-34 with 7:54 minutes left.

Majerus had a 422-147 record in 20 seasons at Marquette, Ball State and Utah, and seventh best record among active coaches, but hadn't been on the sideline since health problems forced Majerus, who worked for several seasons as an ESPN commentator, is known for being animated, talkative and involved with every possession on the sideline. This game, he stood in front of his bench without once sitting down, calmly coaching his players without raising his voice or engaging in any long discussions with the officials.

Of course, any coach would find satisfaction with the way St. Louis clamped down defensively, limiting the Aggies (0-1) to 11 points in the final 14 minutes. Majerus was understandably worried about the out-of-town opener played before a nearly invisible audience — only about 100 fans were in the stands for the late-afternoon tipoff.

Also, Majerus said, "I'm used to starting the season against Our Lady of the Lake." He is 20-1 in season openers, losing only in 1995 to Kansas while at Utah.

Hendrick aiming for 1-2-3 sweep

AVONDALE, Ariz. (AP) — With 17 wins by his four drivers, Hendrick Motorsports has clearly been the most dominant team in NASCAR this season.
Newly crowned Kyle Busch can close the year with two strong runs, he could give the organization a clean sweep of the Nextel Cup standings.

Kyle Busch smiles as he waits in the garage area during practice for the Bank of America 500 on Oct. 11 at Lowe's Motor Speedway in Concord, N.C. Busch is fourth in the Nextel Cup standings.

But if it does, it will cement what everyone in the garage has known all season: Hendrick is in a league of its own right now.
Ray Evernham, who won three titles as a Hendrick crew chief, believes a promotion gave that organization an edge. The team jumped into the new, CoT and was clearly ahead of the competition when the car debuted.

"I've got to be honest with you, there's a lot of teams that are going through a lot of handshakes, whether it's new drivers, new sponsors," said Chad Klaus, crew chief for Johnson. "There's cutbacks in the industry right now. There's a lot of teams that are letting people go and there's a lot of turmoil in a lot of places."

"I'm happy that we're third," Hendrick said. "We'd rather be first, but I'm glad I'm not 10th or 15th or further back. With this car at this race track, it just seems like unless you're really found something good, it's hard to come up through the field."

Johnson will start fourth. "These masters of the open-wheeled Indy machines won't be starting near the front, though," Hornish, a three-time IndyCar Series champion, will be 26th on the starting grid in his Nextel Cup debut. He failed to qualify in his first six attempts, and his performance came one day after he told The Associated Press he will switch full-time to NASCAR next season.

NFL

With Raiders struggling, focus turns to when top pick Russell will play

ALAMEDA, Calif. (AP) — The calls for JaMarcus Russell to play have already started from disgruntled Raiders fans. The franchise quarterback said he's ready, and coach Lane Kiffin admits he often thinks about playing the rookie.
The question now is when do the Raiders actually turn their struggling offense over to Russell and begin to see whether they made the right decision by making him the No. 1 pick in the draft and guaranteeing him at least $29 million.

Oakland Raiders quarterback JaMarcus Russell passes during practice at the Raiders' football training facility in Alameda, Calif., on Sept. 12.

"You got to make sure JaMarcus is ready to play," Kiffin said. "This is our franchise, it's the guy you gave a lot of money to, picked first overall. You better make sure you have the right stuff around him, and he's ready to play at the right time and he knows what he's doing."

White Raiders fans have grown tired of watching Josh McCown and Daunte Culpepper struggle to move the offense on a team off to a 2-6 start, they will have to wait at least a little longer to see Russell.

McCown will start Sunday against Chicago and Culpepper will back him up. But Kiffin said there's a chance Russell would be the second quarterback soon, allowing him to use the rookie for a few drives early in the game if he chooses.

"Whatever he feels is necessary for the team and what we're going to go with," Russell said. "Coach, he calls the shots."

Complicating matters is that Russell missed all of training camp and the preseason in a contract dispute. He signed with the team three days after the season opener, missing valuable practice time.
During the season, Russell mostly is relegated to scout team duty in practice. He does come in for special sessions with practice squad players on Tuesdays and goes through the game plan in an empty stadium on Sunday mornings, pretending he's facing a real defense.

"It's just a matter of time before you get in there and have confidence to be yourself," Russell said. "I'm very competitive guy. I'm very confident in myself."

3 Indy 500 champions qualify for NASCAR race

AVONDALE, Ariz. (AP) — It was a good day for Indianapolis 500 winners in NASCAR qualifying.
Sam Hornish Jr. joined Jacques Villeneuve and Pablo Montoya as former Indy 500 winners to earn a spot in Sunday's Nextel Cup race at Phoenix International Raceway, marking the first time in NASCAR history three former Indy champions will be in the field.
Carl Edwards won his first pole in almost two years Friday by turning a fast lap of 137.773 mph around the mile oval in his Roush Fenway Ford. Martin Truex Jr., who had the pole last week in Texas and finished third, qualified second at 132.758.

It was Edwards' first pole start since Homestead in 2005.
"Three-thousandths of a second is a little tough to swallow," Truex said. "That's the third time we've been second by about that much this year."
Left: Gordon, who trails Hendrick Motorsports teammate Jimmie Johnson by 30 points in the Nextel Cup standings, qualified third in the race. Overcast conditions in the desert. Gordon is a three-time Phoenix pole winner and won here in April to tie the late Dale Earnhardt on his 12th career wins list.

Broncos release Rice

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — The Denver Broncos released veteran defensive lineman Simon Rice before the end of practice Friday.
The 33-year-old Rice signed a one-year, $3 million contract on Sept. 3. He chose Denver over St. Louis in part because of the opportunity to get more playing time after starting Ebenezer Ekuban sustained a season-ending Achilles injury in training camp.
"Under the current situation we felt like we were better with the younger players that we do have," coach Mike Shanahan said. "They give us the best chance to win and that's the direction we are going."

Rice could not be reached for comment Friday.
"He asked if it wasn't working out on both sides to let go, and they obliged him," said safety John Lynch, who played with Rice at Tampa Bay.
"I was disappointed it didn't work out," Lynch added, "but I feel partly responsible for feeling John to come here, and from the start it never worked out."
Rice, a 12-year veteran, has 121 career sacks, second only to Michael Strahan among active players.

Motorcyclist injured, cited in T.F. crash

Times-News
A motorcyclist who failed to yield pulling out of a parking lot Friday afternoon was struck by another vehicle, which then collided with a third vehicle waiting at a traffic light. Twin Falls police were still investigating the crash Friday afternoon, which sent the motorcyclist to St. Luke's Magic Valley Regional Medical Center with injuries. The cyclist, police said, pulled out in front of a sport utility vehicle while leaving the south exit of the parking lot of the Magic Valley Mall at about 1:30 p.m. The SUV, headed east on Pole Line Road, knocked the cyclist off of his bike and then struck a sedan stopped at the intersection of Pole Line and Locust Street. No other injuries were reported in the crash, and the cyclist was cited for failing to yield. Names of the drivers were not available as of Friday afternoon.

State takes another crack at nursing shortage

By Natio Poppino
Times-News writer

On Wednesday, a group of physicians, politicians and others in the state capitol field will sit down together with one goal: attract more nurses to Idaho.

To Idahoans following the state political arena, it may sound redundant — former Gov. Jim Risch commissioned a nursing task force in August 2006 to look at the same thing. But the chairwoman of the Nursing Workforce Advisory Council said her group will build upon the findings of that task force and the state's Nursing Workforce Center to find both short- and long-term solutions to the nursing problem.

"The nursing shortage is here now, and we think there needs to be some quick action done to solve this," chairwoman B.J. Swanson said on Thursday.

Swanson, the current vice-chairwoman of the Idaho Workforce Development Council, will lead the 22-member nursing council during the next two years as it studies ways to increase the state's ability to train, recruit and retain nurses.

The field is one of several that providers in the state, and the nation, have had difficulties finding workers for.

"The council was established by the Legislature last spring and will also oversee the work force center, which was operated through federal funds for three years until those grants ran out.

Both the center and the council now fall under the Idaho Department of Labor.

Council members — who include Claude Buttner, College of Southern Idaho chief academic officer, and state Rep. Fred Wood, R-Burley, who is medical director at Cassia Regional Medical Center — will have plenty to work with.

"The center collected information on the needs and realities of nursing care in the state over its three years in existence, and Risch's nursing task force made several recommendations, only a few of which were adopted by the Legislature.

Both the key to the problem, many agree, is education. Buttner, on vacation in France, said over e-mail that she hopes the council will find a way to provide more state money for nursing faculty, more affordable fees for nursing students and a way for working nurses to continue their educations without leaving their jobs and families. CSI has doubled the size of its nursing classes over the past two years, and Risch's task force recommended adding funds statewide for nursing faculty — though the suggestion has yet to be followed up on.

The council also needs to take a close look at why nurses leave the profession in the first place, Buttner said.

"Nursing is a great job," she said, "but if it is too stressful or too demanding, no matter how great the job and rewards are, people will not remain in the nursing workforce."

The council, Swanson said, will consider all possible ways to increase the number of nursing students in the state — even the idea of creating a new medical school, a concept mentioned in Gov. C.L. Butch's recent recommendations from this summer's health care summit.

"I think at this point everything is on the table," Swanson said.

Of course, that's assuming everyone shows up at the table. A spokesperson for Wood said he is on vacation until Friday, and he may not be the only one not to show.

Swanson said the meeting was scheduled on short notice and she hopes to conduct much of the work via e-mail and phone conferences in the future to save time and money.

The council is the latest in a string of summits and task forces charged with resolving issues facing the state.

Council member Susan Ault, executive director of Idaho Alliance of Leaders in Nursing, said the effectiveness of such groups probably varies. But this one, she said, has the advantage of building on previous efforts.

"If we can devise a plan and get everyone to agree to a long-range strategy, I think that would be a great accomplishment," she said.

Swanson agreed that the council's expiration in 2009 gives members a reason to keep on task.

"I think that's good, because it keeps everyone focused and moving in the right direction."

Seventy, fifth-grade students sitting wide-eyed on the carpeted floor of the library at Harrison Elementary School, wondered if today's war looks the same as past American conflicts.

A young girl with oversized glasses asked six senior members of the local Twin Falls post of the American Legion Friday if they had ever been in ambush. Another curious youngster wondered if the older men had driven in tanks or down in stealth fighter jets.

The veterans explained that many of the conflicts of their time — such as the Korean War, the Vietnam War and World War II — were different than the conflicts children see on television today.

One member of the local American Legion, Adjutant Dave Maroon, told the children that IEDs — or improvised explosive devices — are a newer phenomenon.

"This is kind of a whole new tactic," said Maroon.

Victor Dombrowski, a member of the American Legion, demonstrates how to properly fold an American flag to a group of fifth-graders Friday afternoon at Harrison Elementary in Twin Falls.

The local American Legion members, many of whom were retired from the United States Air Force, told the children they had not flown in stealth fighter jets.

"The legion members served during times of conflict, but they did not necessarily serve in a conflict."

Bob Schreckenberg, 90, told the children his military career was spent in the United States, "doing a lot of paperwork."

"You can't do anything without a piece of paper," Schreckenberg said.

He told the children they need to respect their country, their flag, their teachers and themselves.

"Look up high," Schreckenberg told his young audience sitting with their legs crossed beneath him.

Children were also curious about why military servicemen talk in code.

"If you can surprise an enemy ... that's an advantage," said Maroon.

Post members said Friday's visit was organized by Subway, which distributed free sandwiches, juice and cookies in honor of Veterans Day on Sunday.

Medical panel targets out-of-state EMTs

By Natio Poppino
Times-News writer

They fix scrapes and burns. They diagnose colds, and wrap sprained ankles. In helping wildland firefighters, they could be breaking the law.

No one was seriously hurt during south-central Idaho's two major fires this summer — the Murphy Complex and Castle Rock fires. But the state commission that regulates emergency medical physicians says emergency medical technicians who follow type 1 and 2 fire teams around the country would have violated state law if they'd patched anyone up.

The problem, Dr. David Kim said, is that EMTs are licensed at the state level. The techs who travel from state to state with firefighting teams may be licensed in Mississippi, but in Idaho, they have no right to practice medicine. Beyond that, he and other commissioners said, EMTs aren't trained to handle problems such as disease outbreaks and conditions normally handled by family practice physicians.

"An EMS provider is not trained to tell the difference between a cold and pneumonia," but they have to make such calls, anyway, said Dr. Keith Siverson, who with Kim is a commissioner with the Emergency Medical Services Physicians Commission.

A debate over how to solve that problem consumed much of the morning session of the commission's regular meeting Friday, held on the College of Southern Idaho campus to coincide with the Southern Idaho EMS Conference. Commission members charged with studying the problem clashed with U.S. Forest Service representative Gene Madden over what all parties said were chronic delays in addressing the problem at a national level.

By and large, both parties agreed on the issues: Little has been done to fix the problem, the result of tight budgets and other construction. But while Madden, a safety officer with a national incident management team in Florida, said things are starting to change, the commission said the Forest Service proposal doesn't go far enough and ignores the gap in EMT training.

"You're asking EMTs to do something they are not trained to do," said Kim, chairman of the commission.

In return, Madden stressed how the Forest Service has stepped up to tackle the issue all by itself, and how its complexities slow any sort of progress on it. According to a Forest Service briefing paper on the issue, a federal coordinating group worked on the problem in 2004, but progress had halted by spring 2006.

"This proposal is like eating the elephant one bite at a time," Madden said.

Both sides stressed that they wanted to cooperate, and Madden convinced the board to put off a state conference on the matter until the Forest Service had a chance to coordinate efforts better among the states. But Siverson said he was out of patience on the matter and would force a battle over state sovereignty issues if he had to.

"We're in a unique opportunity to provide leadership in this important area," Madden said, pointing out that the Forest Service is the largest federal land agency. "We need to do this, and we need to do this quickly."

Some oil in S.E. Bay spill will linger in water

Tides carry heavy fuel into Pacific, fouling coastline

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Most of the oil that spilled into San Francisco Bay when a container ship struck the Bay Bridge will never be retrieved and eventually will be absorbed into the ecosystem, authorities said Friday.

The U.S. Coast Guard, which was heading the response to the 58,000-gallon spill, acknowledged miscommunication with local officials, but insisted it didn't impede their efforts to corral the oil.

Tides carried the heavy fuel

An oil-soaked bird is treated at the International Bird Rescue Research Center in Cordelia, Calif., Friday. Some 58,000 gallons of oil spilled into San Francisco Bay after a container ship hit a tower of the Bay Bridge in San Francisco Wednesday.

that poured from the ship's oil tank under the Golden Gate Bridge and into the Pacific Ocean, fouling miles of coastline, closing several beaches, canceling weekend outdoor events and threatening thousands of birds and other marine life. It is believed to be the biggest spill in the bay since 1988.

Oil skimmers and shoreline cleanup crews continued mopping up the damage. But as the oil spreads and dissipates, crews will find "diminishing returns" in their skimming efforts, said Barry McFarley, whose private recovery firm the O'Brien Group was hired by the ship's owner to handle its response to the spill.

On Friday, 9,500 gallons of oil had been sucked up. Lt. Rob Roberts, an investigator with the California Department of Fish and Game, said by the weekend most of the oil will be beyond containment and capture. Most of the fuel will dissolve into the water, but some globules could remain and cause problems for birds for months.

"Oil and feathers don't mix," said Yvonne Adadasi, a wildlife biologist with the Department of Fish and Game. "This is not good for the birds."

Fish and Game officials said they have received hundreds of reports of oiled birds found on Bay Area beaches. So far, 73 live birds have been recovered and sent to a recovery center in Solano County; 17 were found dead.

Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger declared a state of emergency after meeting with state, federal and local officials overseeing the cleanup. The proclamation makes additional state personnel, funding and equipment available.

"This has done tremendous damage to the environment, to wildlife and to the birds," the governor said. "We have to clean up as quickly as possible."

City officials have said they weren't given accurate information about the size of the spill until 9 p.m. Wednesday, more than 12 hours after the accident.

A new set of Coast Guard logs that surfaced Friday suggested the agency had concluded by 4:39 p.m. that 58,000 gallons had spilled, rather than the 140 gallons reported earlier. That contradicted a different Coast Guard log obtained by The Associated Press on Thursday. It said that at 4:39 p.m., the Coast Guard believed 400 gallons had escaped.

Rear Adm. Craig Bone, the Coast Guard's top official in California, conceded the agency should have done a better job keeping local authorities informed.

Agency OKs improvements for Sun Valley ski area

KETCHUM (AP) — The U.S. Forest Service has approved a request by Sun Valley Co. for a 40-year extension of its operating permit for the central Idaho ski area on Bald Mountain, as well as additions that include a gondola and more snowmaking equipment.

Sawtooth National Forest Supervisor Jane Kollmeyer signed a record of decision earlier this week. There will be a 45-day appeal period for the proposed improvements.

The 3,332-acre ski area is on land administered by the Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management.

The 40-year permit, which begins Dec. 7, is not open to appeal, said Kurt Nelson, a district ranger with the Sawtooth National Forest. Sun Valley Co.'s 30-year operating permit for the ski area on 9,150-foot Bald Mountain on the western edge of Ketchum expires Dec. 1, he said.

"I believe my decision provides the best balance between the various social, resource and business needs on Bald Mountain," Kollmeyer told the Idaho Mountain Express. "My rationale for this decision is based on our desire to provide a greater range of recreational experiences within the ski area as users' expectations change, improve forest health and provide for long-term economic stability in the Wood River Valley."

About 2,000 acres of the ski area are on national forest lands, and another 1,287 are BLM. Officials with the BLM are expected to respond to Sun Valley Co.'s request in mid-December. That agency also has a 45-day appeal process.

The planned gondola would go from the River Run area to the Roundhouse, a day lodge midway up the mountain.

"The gondola is for year-round operation, not just winter operation," Jack Silbach, director of sales for Sun Valley Co., told The Associated Press on Friday.

He said that during the summer it would be used to take people up the mountain for weddings, conventions, and for the restaurant.

The additional snowmaking equipment would cover about 99 acres.

"The snowmaking is vital to the winter operation," he said. "It's the quality of the experience that the guests demand now even if Mother Nature doesn't help us. The snowmaking is an insurance policy. It helps us open and keeps us open."

BSU relents, gives OK for Veterans Day gun salute

BOISE (AP) — Boise State University officials, who earlier rejected a request from veterans to allow a 21-gun salute on Monday to mark Veterans Day, have now decided it can take place at Bronco Stadium.

School officials initially said they were concerned that gunshots on campus during classes could scare students and staff.

But late Thursday, officials gave the OK for the salute, though they still had concerns.

"We certainly promote Veterans Day activities, and yes we can send e-mails to all of our students and hand out fliers," BSU spokesman Frank Zang told KTUV television in Boise.

"Truthfully in this day and age not everyone reads their e-mail — it is hard to communicate with everyone."

The school already planned events that included a flag-raising ceremony, the national anthem, an armored Hussar on campus, and a speech by Brig. Gen. Alan Gayhart, deputy commanding general of the Idaho National Guard.

No charges in fatal shooting of hunter

COEUR D'ALENE — A northern Idaho man who shot and killed his hunting partner last month won't face criminal charges because investigators have ruled the shooting an accident.

Kootenai County Prosecutor Bill Douglas said James D. High didn't mean to kill 22-year-old David L. Howard when the two were hunting in a wooded area outside Bayview.

"I deemed this was an accident in which Mr. High didn't intend to kill his best friend," Douglas told the Coeur d'Alene Press on Thursday. "My heart goes out to both families. I think by making this hearing, it will assist with the healing process."

The decision not to prosecute High was supported by Susan Howard, David's mother.

"While I do feel it was gross neglect on James' part, the family doesn't feel that prosecution would be the right course of action," Howard said. "He's in a prison of his own. He'll have to live with it the rest of his life."

She said High and her son were lifelong friends and roommates. She said her family has met with High since the shooting.

"He is devastated by this and we're doing our best to help him through it," Susan Howard said. "Healing is what is important now."

Kootenai County sheriff's office detectives Howard and High were about 70 feet apart in thick brush when High shot Howard once in the side of the chest with a 300 Winchester Magnum rifle. Officials said the shot was fired about 15 minutes after sunrise.

"These two had hunted together a dozen times," Douglas said. "They had a system where one of them would signal the other if they saw a deer or elk. They would whistle at each other."

Apparently, Mr. High whistled, but David Howard either didn't hear it or didn't realize it was a whistle. Mr. High believed he was shooting at a deer with antlers.

Neither hunter was wearing hunter orange, but Douglas said it is unclear if that precaution might have prevented the shooting. He said alcohol was not a factor.

Sagittarius, avoid misunderstandings today

By Jeraldine Saunders

IF NOV. 10 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: The year to come will be exciting and give you a chance to spread your wings. With revolutionary Uranus forming a beneficial angle to your spot in the cosmos there is no limit to the success you can achieve. Release your life in positive ways, experiment with different lifestyle choices and bask in your 15 minutes of fame. Your wild popularity could create a misunderstanding with a loved one next March.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Sleep on it. There may be hidden catches in a recent plan or a scheme. Although you may be wildly popular and in demand, this isn't the right time to start a new romance or project.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The facts speak for themselves (May 21-June 20). Button up, buttercup. Endless chatter could get on someone's oh-so-sensitive nerves. Rather than asking you to quiet down, a friend might simply tune you out and ignore key information.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Hold your horses. Today's heavenly alignment may create a few situations that are somewhat tricky to navigate. Be slow to make major decisions, expensive purchases, or commitments.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't be so eager to appease the other guy. Your sympathy or guilt may be misplaced. If you let your imagination work at full throttle, you might develop a false picture of a situation or relationship.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Love and romance could seem merely an elusive dream this weekend. Parties may be boring and invitations could lose their allure.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): When someone leads, you will follow. Be willing to take a back seat and follow someone else's command that, for example, you may be in the mood to shirk routine household tasks today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Sit on the sidelines and wait for your turn to shine.

The mood might not be quite right for the amorous evening you planned with your favorite honey. Look for entertaining distractions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Sentiment or sympathy might cause a roadblock in relationships. Put off important partnership decisions or romantic proposals. Avoid possible misunderstandings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Good things come to those who wait. Although your financial situation could be an important area of concern this weekend, this just isn't the right time to make an important purchase.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Fly straight on till morning, like Peter Pan. A youthful outlook is the best defense against equibbles and misunderstandings this weekend. Remain friendly even in the face of opposition.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take the time to play "Truth or Dare." Some things may simply escape your understanding. You might be too sensitive for your own good so don't put all your cards out on the table.

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

By Bill Keane

Woman's miscarriage turns family's world upside down

DEAR ABBY: I have a 30-year-old daughter who was happily married to a man she loved. My daughter and son-in-law worked in information technology for many years and did well at it. Because of their intensive work schedules they decided to start a family only last year. When my daughter conceived, our families were overjoyed. Unfortunately, after only 2 1/2 months, my daughter miscarried. She was so upset about it that she decided to return to the country we had emigrated from.

Three months after that, she became involved with a man she knew from her childhood. She returned to the U.S. and said she wanted to separate from her husband. It was a shock to us and everyone who loves her. We tried to pacify her and begged her to seek counseling. She refused to discuss it. Without further discussion, she filed for divorce.

I am acquainted with the man she got involved with, his mother and I were close friends. He never completed his education, has no regular source of income and used to abuse his mother. I was shocked that my daughter would get involved with such a person—and so quickly.

I told my daughter to be patient, that if she wanted a separation from her husband, she could do it without getting involved with that young man. She is adamant that she will do as she likes. She says she wants to be independent of all family ties and lead her own life.

Please advise us. I don't know what our family and her husband should do.

—UNHAPPY MOTHER IN THE EAST

DEAR UNHAPPY MOTHER: It's sad, but sometimes marriages do end over the loss of a child. The grief is so deep that instead of drawing the parents together, it pulls them apart.

From what you have told me about your daughter's new love interest, she is making a huge mistake. However, because she refuses to accept counseling, I see no way to prevent it. Her husband may be able to slow down the divorce process, but he cannot stop it.

If you love your daughter, as I am sure you do, I can only advise you to be there for her in the coming months and years, because her road will not be an easy one.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne
Phillips

DEAR ABBY: One of my co-workers, "Alexa," has a habit of biting her nails and chewing on her cuticles when she's talking to people. I'm sure it's just a nervous habit, but I am concerned because her fingers bleed from chewing on them so often.

Alexa and I work in an office that deals with a lot of paperwork, and I often work directly with her on projects. The habit itself is one thing, but because her fingers are constantly bleeding, I'm worried about the health risks this may be presenting.

I cringe when I have to handle documents after Alexa does, and I become sick to my stomach when she chews her cuticles when we're conversing. How should I handle this?

—GROSSED OUT IN BALTIMORE

DEAR GROSSED OUT: Your co-worker appears to either be a nervous wreck or be suffering from OCD. Because she is bleeding on the documents others must work with, it's time to discuss this problem with her supervisor. Even if the woman is in the best of health, there is the "ick" factor to consider, and people should not have to handle documents that she has processed with saliva on her fingers.

Charges dropped against siblings who sparked scare by sprinkling flour to make running path

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP)—Charges have been dropped against two siblings who inadvertently caused a bioterrorism scare when they sprinkled flour in a parking lot to mark a trail for their offbeat running club.

New Haven, ophthalmologist Daniel Salchow, 38, and his sister, Dorothy, 31, who was visiting from Hamburg, Germany, had been charged with first-degree breach of peace, a felony.

The charges were dropped

Thursday after Daniel Salchow agreed he and his sister would donate $4,000 to local charities.

The siblings set off the scare by organizing a run for a local chapter of the Hash House Harriers, a worldwide group that bills itself as a "drinking club with a running problem."

"Hash" are given the task of marking a trail to direct runners, throwing in some dead ends and forks as challenges. In August, the Salchows decided to route runners through a parking lot.

The store was evacuated and remained closed the rest of the night. The incident prompted a massive response from police in New Haven and surrounding towns.

Daniel Salchow biked back to IKEA when he heard there was a problem and told officers the powder was just flour, which he said he and his sister have sprinkled everywhere from New York to California.

Italian musician uncovers music in Da Vinci's 'Last Supper'

By Ariel David
Associated Press writer

ROME — It's a new Da Vinci code, but this time it could be for real.

An Italian musician and computer technician claims to have uncovered musical notes encoded in Leonardo Da Vinci's "Last Supper," raising the possibility that the Renaissance genius might have left behind a somber composition to accompany the scene depicted in the 15th-century wall painting.

"It sounds like a requiem," Giovanni Maria Pala said. "It's like a soundtrack that emphasizes the passion of Jesus."

Painted from 1494 to 1498 in Milan's Church of Santa Maria delle Grazie, the "Last Supper" vividly depicts a key moment in the Gospel narrative: Jesus' last meal with the 12 Apostles before his arrest and crucifixion, and the shock of Christ's followers as they learn that one of them is about to betray him.

Pala, a 45-year-old musician who lives near the southern Italian city of Lecce, began studying Leonardo's painting in 2003, after hearing on a news program that researchers believed the artist and inventor had hidden a musical composition in the work.

"Afterward, I didn't hear anything more about it," he said in an interview with The Associated Press. "As a musician, I wanted to dig deeper."

In a book released Friday in Italy, Pala explains how he took elements of the painting that have symbolic value in Christian theology and interpreted them as musical clues.

Pala first saw that by drawing the five lines of a musical staff across the painting, the loaves of bread on the table as well as the hands of Jesus and the Apostles could each represent a musical note.

This fit the relation in Christian symbolism between the bread, representing the body of Christ, and the hands, which are used to bless the food, he said. But the notes made no sense musically until Pala realized that the score had to be read from right to left, following Leonardo's particular writing style.

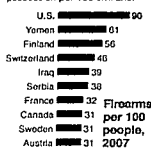

In his book — "La Musica Celata" ("The Hidden Music") — Pala also describes how he found what he says are other clues in the painting that reveal the slow rhythm of the composition and the duration of each note.

The result is a 40-second "hymn to God" that Pala said sounds best on a pipe organ. The instrument most commonly used in Leonardo's time for spiritual music. A short segment taken from a CD of the piece contained a Bach-like passage played on the organ.

Finland defends gun laws in wake of shooting

By Jari Tanner
Associated Press writer

HELSINKI, Finland — A teenage killer's deadly school rampage has put Finns on the defensive about their relationship to guns.

With 1.6 million firearms in private hands, the Nordic nation is an anomaly in Europe, lagging behind only the U.S. and Yemen in civilian gun ownership, studies show.

The government said Friday it would raise the minimum age for buying guns from 15 to 18, but insisted there was no need for sweeping changes to gun laws shaped by deep-rooted traditions of hunting in the sub-Arctic wilderness.

"If you look at the rate of homicides with firearms (in Finland), the figure is very low," Interior Ministry spokesman Ilkka Salmi said. "People using guns are hunters. They live in rural areas. It's part of the life over there."

International gun control activists have urged the Finns to rethink their laws in the wake of Wednesday's tragedy.

Finns are sensitive to their international image, and often complain their country is portrayed as a gloomy northern outpost of Europe, where long dark winters drive people to binge drinking, suicide or random outbursts of violence.

Wednesday's bloodshed did little to help. Pekka-Eric Auvinen, described by police as a bullied 18-year-old outcast, opened fire at his high school in southern Finland. He killed six students, a school nurse and the principal before ending his own life with a gunshot to the head.

"There are all kinds of people living in Finland, like everywhere else," said Tero Aaltonen, a customer in a Helsinki gun shop. "But I rather think it's the influence of the media and all the things people are exposed to that might make someone do a thing like that."

Auvinen, who had no previous criminal record and belonged to a shooting club in central Helsinki, shot the victims with a 22-caliber pistol that he bought from a local store days before the attack.

Police revealed Friday that Auvinen had settled for the pistol after being denied a license for a 9 mm semiautomatic handgun.

"The application was rejected because a 9 mm gun is considered too powerful ... for target practice shooting," Detective Superintendent Tero Hanpala told The Associated Press.

When faith meets War

Veterans, clergy talk about religion on the battlefield

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

When William Tecumseh Sherman said war is hell in 1879, he was speaking metaphorically. For many soldiers, though, the horrors of war force questions of religion and spirituality, heaven and hell.

"You've heard the old saying, 'There's never an atheist in a foxhole.' That's really true," said retired Maj. Bob Finney of Boise, adjutant of Idaho's Veterans of Foreign Wars. He served in Vietnam and Desert Storm. "Your mortality becomes real, you realize, 'I can be hurt, I can even be killed.' ... Once battle becomes real, people want to be closer to God."

The personal dangers of war force soldiers to confront their mortality sooner and more abruptly than they likely would have on the home front.

"You're here today, but maybe you're not here tomorrow. That's always on your mind, every day," said retired Army Master Sgt. Jim Adams, administrative support manager for the Idaho Division of Veterans Services, a Vietnam veteran. "If that's the case, a lot of folks got some religion that they never had before."

Some soldiers who weren't religious at home turned to a higher power in the war zone, while others reconnected with the faith of their parents, Adams said.

"You start thinking about things that Mom and Dad used to say to you, especially in my generation," Adams said. "The longer that people stay in a war zone, the more apt they are to start attending religious services."

OK to kill?

As their time on the front lengthens, soldiers see more death, and may have to kill. This can present an internal conflict to those who have been raised with the commandment, "Thou shalt not kill."

Elder Randy Hansen, president of the Twin Falls stake of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, has counseled veterans of the current conflicts in Afghanistan and Iraq. He said the biggest struggle for those soldiers is whether it is religiously acceptable to cause a death.

"We've had very deep discussions about, 'Is it OK to kill?'" Hansen said. "I've asked some very pointed questions."

The soldiers have told him that they have killed to immediately save their own lives or the lives of others, he said, and that this causes less internal struggle than when they are ordered to kill in other situations or other frames of mind. They have told Hansen they've seen other combatants who are aggressive and act out the Old Testament justice of an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth.

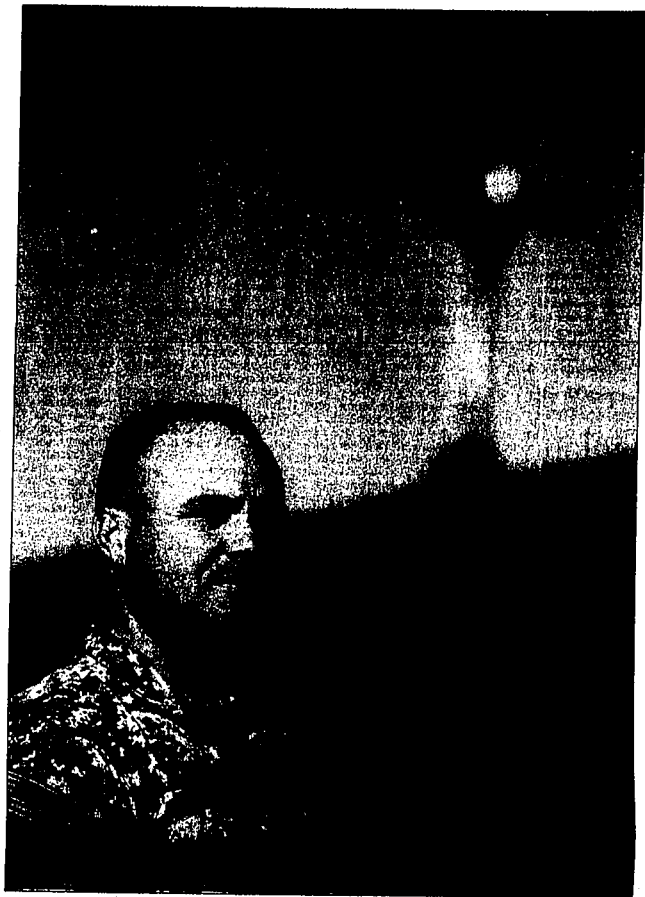

"It seems like those who have never gone to that point of anger and hatred deal with it so much better," Hansen said.

The men he has counseled have deep faith, he said, and other soldiers — some of whom have acted on aggressive or revengeful impulses — turn to them for spiritual counseling.

"It's not uncommon for these rough, callous guys to ask them to pray for them or counsel them in these moments of quiet when no one's around," Hansen said. "That's when they have to look inside themselves and turn to their own God and what their parents have taught them."

For the soldiers Hansen has counseled, the rightness of the war has not been a cause of internal conflict, even though it has become nationally contentious.

"Sometimes these guys, they turn on the news media, they're very angry, they're very disappointed, because they feel they are accom-

Sgt. 1st Class Steven Stephens of Twin Falls, who recruits for the Idaho Army National Guard, said he attended religious services more often when he was in Iraq in 2005 than he does now. In Iraq, the services were a comforting reminder of home, but now that he's back in Idaho, he prefers to find moments of quiet reflection while fishing.

"You've heard the old saying, 'There's never an atheist in a foxhole.' That's really true."

— Retired Maj. Bob Finney of Boise, adjutant of Idaho's Veterans of Foreign Wars

plishing some things and doing some good," he said. "They do feel they have done it for the right reason, they have not done it out of hate or spite."

In fact, he said, when the GIs come home, they feel guilty for having left fellow soldiers in harm's way.

All four he has counseled have served multiple tours.

The justness of a conflict is important when it comes to deciding whether killing is OK, said the Rev. Norbert Novak, father at the Monastery of the Ascension in Jerome.

"The first presumption is that war is only to be engaged in as a last resort," Novak said. The reasons for going to war must be considered, as must the conduct of the warring parties. "Killing noncombatants, destroying infrastructure, things of this nature out of proportion, would not be acceptable."

The conflict in Iraq is seen by the Roman Catholic Church's pope and bishops as preemptive, and is not approved, Novak said.

MORE THAN JUST A PRESENT

Charity brings gifts, gospel to poor children

By Melissa Devin
Times-News writer

A shoe box full of toothbrushes, pencils and hard candy might not inspire much excitement in an American child.

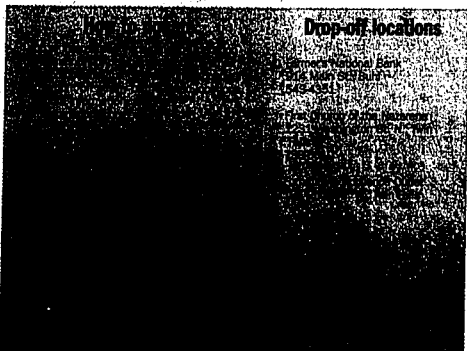

But for millions of impoverished children around the world, these everyday objects might be the only holiday presents they receive, courtesy of Operation Christmas Child.

"Some of them don't have much to look forward to," said Donna Vawter, the project's manager for Bridgeway Estates. "The things we take for granted are the things that can be really helpful to them."

The program, started in 1993 under the parent organization, Samaritan's Purse, collects shoe boxes filled with toiletries, school supplies, small toys and candy to deliver to children. Samaritan's Purse was founded by in 1970 by Franklin Graham, son of evangelist Billy Graham, to provide "spiritual and physical aid to hurting people around the world."

ORU leaders accused of lavish spending

TULSA, Okla. — A Beverly Hills house and country club membership. Vacations in Palm Springs and the South Seas. A closet as big as an apartment, stuffed with hundreds of pairs of shoes, suits, dresses and golf shoes.

People with close ties to TV evangelist Oral Roberts and his son, Richard, say they witnessed such extravaganzas years before a recent lawsuit accusing them of lavish spending engulfed the ministers and their debt-ridden university in scandal.

Harry McNevin said in a recent interview that he quit the Board of Regents at Oral Roberts University in disgust in 1987 after it became clear that the Roberts were dipping into the school's endowment fund for their personal use.

"We were dealing in millions," he said.

The luxurious ways of some of America's top evangelists have come under scrutiny on various fronts recently. Iowa Sen. Chuck Grassley announced a Senate investigation this week into whether six celebrity preachers violated their organizations' tax-exempt status by living lavishly on the backs of small donors.

The Roberts are not among the six. But those targeted include three members of the ORU Board of Regents: Creffo Dollar, Kenneth Copeland and Benny Hinn.

In the 1983 movie "Jesus to Gold," Richard Roberts' first wife, Patti, documented the jet-set lifestyle: a blue Mercedes as a Christmas gift for Richard, a Jaguar for her, Italian suits and Palm Beach vacations.

"We lived like characters in a novel or a made-for-TV movie about the beautiful people and I reveled in it," she wrote. "Having made a truce, albeit an uneasy one, with my conscience over the source of our wealth, I proceeded to enjoy its prerogatives with total abandon."

Richard Roberts, who is paid $228,000 a year as university president, has taken a leave of absence pending an investigation.

But he disputed the recent allegations of overspending, which are contained in a front-page, 11-page lawsuit filed by three former ORU professors, and said he pays personal expenses out of his pocket.

Interviewed on a flight about the university's leased Hawker 700 jet to a recent TV interview in New York, Roberts said the lawsuit amounts to "a personal character attack."

"There are people in the world who are against ministries," he said. "I think people are not hoping there's a Christian university in Tulsa."

The university declined comment on McNevin's accusation that endowment funds were tapped for personal spending. Endowments are supposed to be for major projects, not day-to-day operating expenses. The principal in an endowment is typically left untouched, and only the earnings are spent.

Oral Roberts University is more than $50 million in debt, its campus — dominated by a 60-foot bronze sculpture of praying hands — is starting to look shabby, and a long-promised student center remains in limbo.

University officials blame the debt on lack of major donors and the cost of maintenance on the 44-year-old, 5,700-student campus. Two more crippling blows came in the closing of ORU's law school and the City of Faith, a $250 million attempt by Oral Roberts in the late 1970s to build a great medical center and research institute. The City of Faith closed in 1991.

An endowment once estimated near $60 million now stands at around $34 million. (In contrast, Regent University in Virginia Beach, Va., founded in 1978 by televangelist Pat Robertson, has an endowment of more than $277 million, according to published reports.)

ORU's debt load, coupled with the lawsuit's allegations, has some students wondering where their $17,580 in tuition and fees winds up.

"I have sat here and wondered the last three and a half years where my money has gone — a new clothing line, golf cart repairs?" said Cornell Cross, a senior from Burlington, Vt.

McNevin said the ministry lost sight of the sacrifices made by countless donors who sent $5, $10 and $20 contributions to support the ministry and school. In 1980, a peak year, contributions totaled $60 million, and the ministry sent out so much mail that it needed its own ZIP code.

"It's as if you took their life's sweat and blood and with no hesitation, just poured it on the ground," McNevin said.

McNevin said the last straw came when the board practically "rubber-stamped" the use of millions in endowment money to buy a Beverly Hills property so that Oral Roberts could have a West Coast office and home. He said a country club membership was purchased along with the home.

"His idea was if he could get on the golf course with these people, he could get donations for the university," McNevin recalls.

Gift

Greenwald, 14, have made packing shoe boxes an annual Christmas tradition. The family has received thank you notes from appreciative children, and Mackenzie still exchanges letters with a girl in the Philippines who received her box.

Every year each girl puts together one box. This year, their packages included toothbrushes, small purses and a musical ringtone.

The recipients of the gifts aren't the only ones who benefit from the program. Picking out presents for others is fulfilling for the volunteers as well.

"It's a neat experience for kids to do the shoe boxes, I think, because they get to experience giving, and giving to someone who has a lot less than we have," Bentzer said. The girls realize that the children they're packing the boxes for aren't as fortunate as they are.

"My mom says it's their Christmas present," Hannah said.

Sandy Caudill, Operation Christmas Child coordinator for Farmer's National Bank in Buhl, agreed.

"It's wonderful. I think to share what we have, because we have so much," she said. "I guess that's what gets to me, is that we have so much and they have so little. We're just very blessed."

Sharon Welch, who manages the drop-off location for Furniture & Appliance Outlet, called the program "a blessing" and said the sense of donating and the fun of picking out presents for others is part of what makes the program so attractive.

"It's a way to be able to do something to help other people and it doesn't cost a lot of money," she said.

Against Operation Christmas Child, also claim the organization uses the gifts to pressure families into converting to Christianity and hide its heavy religious emphasis when soliciting aid from schools and the community.

Libby Gerde, the program coordinator for First Church of the Nazarene in Twin Falls, pointed out that most people know about the program's evangelical goals.

"It's Billy Graham ministries. How can they not be evangelicalist?" she said.

There's no attempt to hide Samaritan's Purse's religious affiliations on their website. Site visitors are asked participants to pray for "an abundance of shoe box gifts to reach more children with the gospel message" and that recipients "will make a commitment to Christ."

The criticism doesn't phase Welch.

"I don't feel like they're trying to lure anybody in," she said. "They're just trying to share the word, is all they're doing."

Bentzer, who hadn't heard any criticism, said she would donate to the program even without the religious ties. She said the Christian affiliation is "why a lot of churches participate, but anyone can donate."

Spreading the word

Although some disagree with the group's ministry, Operation Christmas Child has overwhelming support around the world. Last year alone, more than 7 million boxes were collected, with hundreds of those coming from Magic Valley.

"It always surprises me how many were loading up on the truck that day," said Gerdes, whose church collected around 400 boxes last year.

Welch, who hopes to collect 700 boxes, is pleased with the support the community has shown for the project.

"I feel like the Lord has put it in this area for a reason and I feel that every year it has grown more and more," she said.

Asking for cookies

A TLANTA — My first mistake was putting the cookies out too early.

The fund-raising luncheon at our church included dessert, which featured a justice cake in honor of priesthood and ending with a platter of cookies.

LORRAINE V. MURRAY

I somehow had ended up at the dessert table, guarding the cake until Father John arrived to cut the first slice.

As soon as the cookie platter showed up, a crowd of tiny children with big, shining eyes began clamoring for treats.

"Let's wait a few minutes," I advised, "until Father cuts the cake."

The cluster dissipated, although I believe I saw a few hands shoot out and grab a cookie first. In short order, more children appeared, and I went through my reasoned discourse once again:

"Just be patient. We're waiting for Father to arrive." Of course, telling children to be patient in the face of cookies is like asking the tide to reverse directions.

And one little boy apparently couldn't take it any longer.

He vamoosed as ordered, but showed up seconds later. About 5 years old, he stood eye level with the platter of cookies. Upon his face was written an expression that seemed to hint at the injustice that had ever been committed in the world.

Since he lacked, in my vocabulary, the words to describe the problem, he cut to the chase: "My mom bought a ticket," he explained, waving his arm passionately.

Of course, his mother had indeed purchased a ticket to the luncheon, and, in fact, the meal did include dessert.

Nowhere was it written that I'd have to stand guard over the goodies until the moment she deemed it appropriate to dole them out. But it wasn't the ticket that moved me. It was a rush of love for this little child, who wanted something so simple. Not just a cookie, but justice done.

Just ahead, I said. Vindictive, the boy grabbed a cookie in each fist and rushed away. Right behind him was another cluster of children, who had been waiting to see what the outcome would be.

The platter emptied in moments.

It is not easy being a child: You walk around in a world where you have multiple rules that have to be obeyed before you can get your just rewards.

You are told to be neat, be quiet and behave. If you are naughty, you have multiple rules that have to be obeyed before you can get your just rewards. And rather malicious people often get the goodies.

Like the little boy, we hope for justice.

But when it comes to heaven, we don't necessarily get an admission ticket for plunking big bucks into the collection basket. Or spending hours a day in prayer.

God's mercy is infinite. To those who ask forgiveness with a sincere heart, he will never say no. After all, it was Christ who said, "Ask and you shall receive."

This doesn't mean that we always get the fancy car, the big house or other material goodies that we might pray for.

But we always receive his mercy.

And when we stand before the heavenly banquet one day, eyeing the table and wondering how we know everything we have ever done. All the times we followed the rules and all the times we broke them. Still, he is a father, and he loves his children. And in the end, that is the real ticket to heaven. Trusting in the father's love. And simply remembering to ask.

Falling dollar spurs foreigners to buy American

Idaho benefits from technology and agricultural export growth

By Martin Crutinger
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The U.S. trade deficit fell to the lowest level in 28 months as a falling dollar spurred U.S. exports to an all-time high. The deficit with China jumped to the second highest level on record as imports of toys and other goods surged despite a rash of safety recalls.

Amid the national statistics, Idaho is standing out as the state continues to expand its export base. The state's dairy exports jumped 144 percent compared to the same quarter last year, and dairy products make up 54 percent of Idaho's overall exports.

"Idaho's exports are growing, and I'm sure that the weakening dollar has something to do with that," said Bibiana Nertney, communications director for Idaho

Commerce. "Technology is still Idaho's largest export, but in (south-central Idaho) dairy and beef are the largest exports."

The Commerce Department said Friday that the national deficit for September dipped by 0.6 percent from the previous month — to $56.5 billion. That was the narrowest trade imbalance since May 2005 and took economists by surprise. They had been forecasting the deficit would rise.

The improvement came from a 1.1 percent jump in U.S. exports, which climbed to a record $140.1 billion. The dollars' decline against many major currencies has made U.S. goods cheaper and more competitive in foreign markets. For September, sales of American-made cars, computers and farm products including corn, cotton, wheat and soybeans were all up.

Employees package 40 pound blocks of cheese Friday afternoon at Glanbia Foods Inc. in the Twin Falls factory.

China continues to be Idaho primary destination for exports, including the pork, beef and dairy that is produced in south-central Idaho.

Equipment and agricultural operations in the region, such as Cooper Equipment in Burley and Kodlak Northwest Inc. in Paul, are also contributing to Idaho's exports.

Imports rose nationwide in September, climbing by 0.6 percent to $196.6 billion, the second highest level on record. Imports of foreign-made cars, televisions and clothing were all up.

The deficit with China rose 5.5 percent to $23.8 billion, second only to a $24.4 billion deficit in October 2006. Imports surged to the second highest level on record, pushed up by big gains in imports of Chinese-made televisions, cell phones, computers and toys as retailers stocked their shelves for Christmas.

Those gains were occurring despite a string of high-profile recalls of Chinese products this year — everything from toys with lead paint to defective tires and chemical-tainted toothpaste and pet food ingredients.

Through September, the trade deficit is running at an annual rate of $70.3 billion, down by 7.4 percent from last year's $75.5 billion. Analysts believe that surging exports from a weaker dollar will lead to a narrowing of the deficit for the full year, breaking a string of five consecutive records.

While a falling dollar is good for exports, it raises worries that at some point foreigners will be less willing to purchase dollar-denominated investments such as U.S. stocks and bonds. Such a change in sentiment could send stock prices plunging and push up U.S. interest rates.

The deficit with Canada, America's largest trading partner, dropped by 3.2 percent to $4.9 billion while the imbalance with Mexico fell 9.3 percent to $6.3 billion.

Business highlights

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones industrial average fell more than 220 points. Bank of America Corp., JPMorgan Chase & Co. and Wachovia Corp. all said the ongoing credit crisis will cause another round of heavy losses during the fourth quarter.

Financial institutions took big hits during the third quarter as losses from subprime mortgages hurt their balance sheets, and these three companies were just the latest to report bad news that sent stocks lower.

Merck & Co.

TRENTON, N.J. — Merck & Co. said Friday it will pay $4.85 billion to end thousands of state and federal lawsuits over its painkiller Vioxx in one of the largest court settlements ever.

Company officials estimated the deal, if accepted, would end 45,000 to 50,000 personal injury lawsuits involving U.S. Vioxx users who suffered a heart attack or ischemic stroke, the type in which blood flow to the brain is blocked.

Merck executive vice president Kenneth Frazier called the agreement "responsible and reasonable" and allows Merck to better quantify its liability, once estimated as high as $50 billion.

Frannie Mae

WASHINGTON — Frannie Mae's third-quarter loss more than doubled to $1.4 billion, the mortgage finance company said Friday, while forecasting industry troubles through 2008 because of mounting home loan delinquencies.

Shares of Frannie Mae, the largest U.S. buyer and backer of home loans, recovered from a decline of more than 9 percent early in the day to finish at $49, a decrease of 80 cents, or 1.6 percent.

Oil prices

NEW YORK — Oil prices ended slightly higher Friday as markets took a breather ahead of options trading next week that's expected to trigger a run at $100 a barrel.

Light, sweet crude for December delivery on the New York Mercantile Exchange rose 86 cents to settle at $96.32 a barrel in New York, after hitting an earlier high of $96.65.

On Thursday, the contract fell 91 cents to settle at $95.46 after Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke said the housing slump and high oil prices will slow economic growth in coming months.

Sprint Nextel Corp., Clearwire Corp.

NEW YORK — Sprint Nextel Corp. and Clearwire Corp. on Friday said they have canceled their plan to combine the high-speed wireless networks they are building.

The breakup is a blow to the much smaller Clearwire, which already has a network in some parts of the country based on the WiMax technology. Sprint's buildup, using the same technology, would have complemented Clearwire's coverage.

Idaho energy lab tests hybrid plug-in cars in Seattle

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Fill it up, plug it in, then drive. And drive. And drive.

That's the dream, anyway, of an Idaho National Laboratory program testing 13 Toyota Prius hybrid cars retrofitted with mileage-boosting batteries that can be plugged into a regular household electrical outlet when they're not in use to give them more oomph on the roads.

It's part of a yearlong, $150,000 U.S. Department of Energy demonstration project aimed at judging the performance of plug-in hybrid electric vehicles in an urban area. Over the next 12 months, the converted cars owned by the city of Seattle, King County, Port of Seattle and the Puget Sound Clean Air Agency will drive the streets of Western Washington under the close scrutiny of INL researchers.

They'll be testing the car's performance, then sending that information to the Department of Energy as it tries to develop even more fuel efficient cars. So far, the cars' mileage per gallon has about doubled after being outfitted with lithium plug-in batteries, to 125 mpg in city driving conditions.

"We've done some testing where we've seen over 200 miles per gallon" under laboratory conditions, said Jim Francfort, who leads the INL's Advanced Vehicle Testing Activity program. "When you've got a lot of city driving, we're seeing 125 miles per gallon, plus."

Currently, there are 10 versions of hybrid cars available in North America, with versions from Toyota, Honda, Ford, Lexus, Mercury and Mazda. Hybrids generally use power from their gas-fueled engines or generated by banking to charge their batteries to propel them in rush-hour and city traffic. In higher-speed situations like highway driving, the engine kicks in. That's why hybrids get better gas mileage in city driving than at high speeds. Plug-in hybrids can get even better mileage, but they aren't cheap.

Holiday hires

Hickory Farm Employee Lana Getter greets a customer in the store. Getter is one of about a dozen employees needed by the company to run the store, which is only open from about mid-October through New Year's.

Local retailers load up on seasonal help

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

The backdrop to Buhl's downtown Halloween festivities couldn't have been better. The sun was out later and a touch of summer still lingered in the air. Rusted orange leaves, scattered on the sidewalk, crunched under the trick-or-treaters' feet.

While some may have thought the angels and other decorations that were already hung on street poles was jumping the gun, the same practice is being used by local retailers to fill the employment gap created by a seasonal increase in consumer traffic and a shortage of workers.

Like it or not — Christmas is on its way. At the Magic Valley Mall, an extra 200 employees are brought in for retailers' busiest season.

"It's a huge impact to employment," said the mall's Marketing Director Shellen Gilliland. "We usually have around 890 to 920 employees throughout the mall and for a regular holiday season that number can be 1100, though it just depends on the year."

With the Magic Valley's historically low unemployment rate, many hired on to help, like Lana Getter at the Hickory Farm store, are taking on an extra job. In all the store is run by about 14 part-time and two, full-time, employees.

"I'm a full-time waitress at Jackson's County Store in Buhl," Getter said. "I've been coming on to help here the past 15 years."

Holiday pay day wages

The median wage for retail cashiers in south central Idaho is $7.20 per hour and the retail salesperson median wage is $9.18 per hour

Source: Idaho Department of Labor Regional Economist Jan Roesser

The outlet is only open from mid-October to New Year's, or until their boxes of crackers, cheese balls and mints are sold out.

"When I came on it was such a fun job," Getter said. "Plus, the extra job gives me a little more spending money for Christmas."

When money is tight, shoppers don't purchase as much during the season, but Jan Roesser, regional economist with the Idaho Department of Labor, said the season should be a good one for retailers throughout the Magic Valley.

With record commodity prices for wheat, milk, alfalfa and corn and a good sugar beet crop Roesser said purchases are likely to be made.

"It is anticipated that when prices are universally up such as this year, then the producers can enjoy spending some of the profits," she said.

S. Korea's 'Mr. Toilet' builds commode-shaped house

Project is part of worldwide hygiene campaign

By Earl Herman
Associated Press writer

SUWON, South Korea — Sim Jae-duck has made his political career as South Korea's Mr. Toilet by beautifying public restrooms. Now he's got a home belittling his title: a toilet-shaped domicile complete with the latest in lavatory luxury.

Sim is building the two-story house set to be finished Sunday to commemorate the inaugural meeting later this month of the World Toilet Association. The group, supported by the South Korean government, aims no less than to launch a "toilet revolution," by getting people to open their bathroom doors for the sake of improving worldwide hygiene.

Representatives from 60 countries will gather in Seoul to spur the creation of national toilet associations of their own and spread the word about hygiene. Organizers argue the issue deserves greater attention and cite U.N. figures that some 2.5 billion people live without proper sanitation or water supplies.

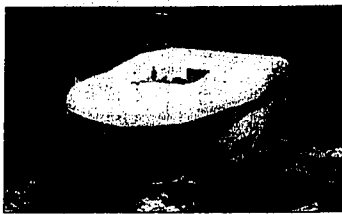

"The toilet revolution should start with talking about toilet issues freely," said Song Young-kwon, head of the organizing committee for the five-day conference that opens Nov. 21.

The Seoul conference will be accompanied by a toilet expo featuring exhibits to excite the public about the cause, including a "Hansel and Gretel" bathroom made from cookies and candy that gives presents to children when they flush, and a "toilet gallery cafe" where people can sit on colorful commodes while drinking tea.

Sim, a lawmaker in the National Assembly, hopes his house in his hometown Suwon, some 30 miles south of Seoul, will help bring attention to the cause and is seeking a guest to pay $50,000 to stay one night with the proceeds to benefit the association that hopes to work with developing nations to build more and better toilets.

Several candidates have already expressed interest, but Sim said he would choose someone who can appropriately represent his cause — with the proceeds set to fund his foundation's work. Visitors just wanting a glimpse inside the bowl will be charged a $1 donation.

Haewoojae, the world's one and only toilet house, is seen in Suwon, south of Seoul, South Korea, Friday. The two-story house, set to be finished Sunday, is being built to commemorate the inaugural meeting later this month of the World Toilet Association.

"Toilets stand central to people's lives," Sim said as workers scurried to put the finishing touches on the home — including installing the final toilet inside.

The toilet theme is central to the house named Haewoojae, or a "place to solve one's worries," shaped like a 24 1/2-foot-tall toilet bowl. Thinking of how to push forward his cause of having better hygiene and sanitation, Sim tore down his former home to build the $1.1 million building.

In case they had any doubt about who would choose to live here, a plaque inscribed "Mr. Toilet's House" greets visitors. As a former mayor of Suwon, Sim spearheaded a campaign to beautify the city's restrooms — part of a national push to spruce up the country's facilities for hosting events such as the 1988 Summer Olympics and 2002 World Cup.

A showpiece bathroom at the center of the 4,520-square-foot house is on display through a floor-to-ceiling window made of glass that turns opaque at the touch of a button.

HARD # 99

Fill in the grid so that every row, every column, and every 3x3 box contains the digits 1 through 9. That's all there is to it. There's no math involved. THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

"Civilizations, I believe, come to birth and proceed to grow by successfully responding to successive challenges."

NORTH 11-10-A K J 10 4 6 J 8 6 3 2 J 5 3

WEST 8 6 5 2 K Q 5 4 9 5 10 9 6 EAST A Q 7 3 A 2 Q 7 Q 7 4 2

SOUTH A 10 9 8 7 3 A K 10 4 A K 8

Today's deal comes from the world championships held in Estoril a couple of years ago. There are always two teams from North America permitted to compete, but they must always meet before the finals.

Vulnerable: Neither Dealer: South The bidding: South West North East 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♦♦ 1 ♠ 2 ♠ 2 ♠ 3 NT Pass 3 ♥ Pass 3 NT Pass 4 ♠ All pass *16+, any shape *0+7 points

Levin took a rather idiosyncratic approach in the auction, insisting on hearts rather than proposing diamonds as a possible trump suit.

Opening lead: Spade eight

BID WITH THE ACES

South holds: 8 6 5 2 K Q 5 4 9 5 10 9 6

South West North East 1 ♦ Dbl. Pass 7

ANSWER: Although it looks counterintuitive, it is correct to respond one spade here, planning to compete to two hearts if the opponents bid further in the minors.
