Future of grouse up in the air

Valley reacts to judge's decision

By Matt Christensen
Times-News writer

JEROME — When Tom Hemker, Idaho Department of Fish and Game's sage grouse manager, lugged burp sacks stuffed with bird wings into a shed Wednesday at the agency's Jerome office, he noticed the bags were a bit lighter than last year's.

Each fall, officials from across the state gather to tally grouse wings harvested by hunters. The wings indicate the health and population of the species, and data collected at each year's "wing bee" help authorities shape grouse-management policy. But the dozen or so scientists huddled in the cold shed probably knew the count would be light this year. Sage grouse numbers are down statewide, especially in Magic Valley, where summer wildfires devastated some of the nation's best grouse habitat.

Earlier this week in Boise, U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winmill rejected a 2004 federal decision not to list sage grouse under the Endangered Species Act. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Winmill said, failed to consider the expert opinions of its own scientists in forming its decision.

USDA losing money on ineffective farm loans

By Gilbert M. Gaul
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Under a program to create jobs in rural America, the U.S. Department of Agriculture guaranteed $1.6 billion in loans to Aztec Environmental Inc., an asbestos-removal company in Panama City, Fla.

Aztec did create jobs — for hundreds of workers from Guatemala. "Locals didn't want the work," said Debbie Livingston, one of the owners.

Three years later, in February, Aztec went out of business after a federal investigation into allegations of environmental abuses and the hiring of illegal immigrants. Now the USDA could lose hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The Aztec case is one example of the scores of troubled loans the USDA has backed in a little-known part of the agency's vast system of farm subsidies. Since the 1970s, the loan program has endorsed nearly $1.5 billion in losses while backing almost $14 billion in loan guarantees.

Actual losses are almost surely higher but USDA officials refuse to disclose losses on loans to

On the same day a shooter kills eight people and himself at an Omaha mall, CSI officials hold a mock shooting to be prepared

IN CASE IT HAPPENS HERE

Amid the chaos of tables and chairs scattered around the classroom of a mock disaster area, a paramedic from St. Luke's Magic Valley Regional Medical Center makes her way around a room full of students with fake wounds Wednesday afternoon during a drill at the College of Southern Idaho.

CSI emergency drill starts within hours of Omaha shootings

By Andrea Gates
Times-News writer

Irony was twisted by tragedy Wednesday afternoon as local students pretended to be victims of a mock shooting at the College of Southern Idaho.

It fell within hours of an actual mass shooting inside an Omaha, Neb., shopping mall. But the blood at CSI was not real.

Around 20 emergency medical service students sported elaborate fake injuries at 2:30 p.m. during a mock mass shooting exercise at the college.

The drill gained significance as fatal mass shootings in public places continue to make headlines across the nation and world.

"There's nothing saying our area isn't equally susceptible," said Stan Flint, a paramedic supervisor with Magic Valley Paramedics.

That's why the college collaborated with St. Luke's Magic Valley Regional Medical Center and local emergency responders.

"The goal is to push the system to the limit," said Gordon Kox, EMS program director at CSI.

Equipping local emergency responders for the real thing is central to the drill — just in case the worst happens here. People participating in the exercise were seemingly unaware of the Omaha tragedy that unfolded on the same day. They were focused on the mock tragedy in front of them.

OMAHA, Neb. — A man opened fire with a rifle at a busy department store Wednesday, killing eight people in an attack that made holiday shoppers run screaming through a mall and barricade themselves in dressing rooms.

'In big trouble' Global warming already threatening world's plants and animals

By Michael Casey
Associated Press writer

BALI, Indonesia — More than 3,000 flying foxes dropped dead, falling from trees in Australia. Giant squid migrated north to commercial fishing grounds off California, gobbling anchovy and hake. Butterflies have gone extinct in the Alps.

"While humans debate at U.N. climate change talks in Bali, global warming is already wreaking havoc with nature. Most plants and animals are affected, and the change is occurring too quickly for them to evolve.

"A hell of a lot of species are in big trouble," said Stephen E. Williams, the director of the Centre for Tropical Biodiversity & Climate Change at James Cook University in Australia.

"I don't think there is any doubt we will see a lot of (extinctions)," he said. "But even before a species goes extinct, there are a lot of impacts. Most of the species here in the wet tropics would be reduced to ... 15 percent of their current habitat."

Globally, 30 percent of the Earth's species could disappear if temperatures rise 4.5 degrees Fahrenheit — and up to 70 percent, if they rise 6.3 degrees Fahrenheit, a U.N. network of scientists reported last month.

It wouldn't be the first time. There have been five major extinctions in the last 520 million years, and four of them have been linked to warmer

Bush urges Iran to fully disclose the scope of its nuclear activities

OMAHA — President Bush, trying to keep pressure on Iran, called on Tehran Wednesday to "come clean" about the scope of its nuclear activities or else face diplomatic isolation.

Inside

Two days after a new intelligence report said that Iran had halted its nuclear weapons program a win four years ago, Bush demanded that Tehran detail its previous program to develop nuclear weapons "which the Iranian regime has yet to acknowledge."

"The Iranians have a strategic choice to make," he said. "They can come clean with the international community about the scope of their nuclear activities, and fully accept the long-standing offer to suspend their enrichment program and come to the table and negotiate, or they can continue on a path of isolation."

The administration is worried that the new National Intelligence Estimate — representing a consensus of all U.S. spy agencies — weakens its leverage over Iran and its ability to build global pressure on Tehran to stop its uranium enrichment program.

Bush, arriving here on a campaign fundraising trip, said he had consulted with members of his national security team, who gave him a report about what Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice and National Security Adviser Stephen Hadley have learned in talks during the past several days with their counterparts in Britain, Germany, France and Russia.

Phil' TV show crashed into a tree at a Hollywood church Wednesday, authorities said. Nineteen people suffered mostly minor injuries.

The chartered bus with 41 people on board was getting off a freeway around 10:15 a.m. when its brakes malfunctioned, police Lt. Roger Mora said.

The bus hit a parked car, crashed through a fence and hit a tree in the yard of the First Presbyterian Church of Hollywood.

The bus sheared one road tree, knocking it completely over, and came to rest at a second tree that kept it from hitting a building.

The driver told authorities she was unable to stop the bus, possibly because of a "loss of brakes," Humphrey said.

The driver, whose name was not immediately released, was listed in fair condition with leg injuries.

Children were given free entry to the zoo, and proceeds from sales of slices of the huge cake will go toward the zoo's foundation, officials said.

Tanker truck explosion releases river of burning fuel

EVERETT — Jolted from bed by a thunderous explosion, John Malone grabbed his pants and looked out the window to see a flaming river of fuel flowing toward his apartment from an overturned tanker truck.

"I just grabbed my girlfriend and her aunt and ran," said the 28-year-old machinist.

Malone was not hurt, and safety officials were surprised and grateful that no one else was either after the accident early Wednesday that spilled 9,400 gallons of burning fuel into a sleeping community, including Malone's.

Witnesses said a 10-foot wall of flame flowed through the neighborhood below a rotary where the tanker flipped, blowing up cars and destroying two triple-deckers, including Malone's.

Nearby residents were hastily evacuated, including about 84 residents of a senior-citizen complex and 10 to 12 families who lost their homes in the fire.

Firefighters initially were hampered by frozen hydrants and icy conditions, but they were able to contain the fire in this closely packed Boston suburb.

"We're alive," Malone said. "The other stuff you can get back."

Sage grouse

One member of the department, former Deputy Assistant Secretary Julie MacDonald, even went as far as intimidating scientists and tweaking reports to keep grouse off the list, Winnill said.

Winnill directed the Fish and Wildlife Service to reconsider its decision using the best available science.

Nearly all evidence shows grouse habitat is in decline. Most experts agree grouse numbers continue to fall. But how to best manage the species evades consensus, as this week's decision shows, even among members of the same management departments.

"I don't think they need to be listed in 2007," Hemker said outside the shed in Jerome. "There are still a lot of sage grouse in Idaho. Our numbers are still above what they were 10 years ago."

Magpie Valley officials aren't sure. "They'll be listed — there's no doubt in my mind," said Dave Parrish, head of Fish and Game's Magic Valley office. "We don't want to see them listed, but when you look at all the habitat we've lost, there's not really any other conclusion you can make."

About 75 prime grouse mating areas, called leks, were destroyed in southern Idaho by summer wildfires. To the east, oil and gas companies are destroying habitat, and their impacts are expected to only get worse.

West Nile virus devastated grouse populations in 2006, especially in Owyhee County, where officials closed hunting for a season.

Livestock grazing also destroys grouse habitat, says Harley-based Western Watersheds Project, an environmental group that brought the legal challenge to the federal decision.

"Our group is dedicated to protecting and restoring native habitat for wildlife, and the best way to do that is to get rid of grazing on public land," said Jon Marvel, who heads WWVP. Marvel said he applauds Winnill's decision, and he expects land management agencies to shift policy regardless of whether grouse are eventually listed.

Winnill's ruling worries Idaho's cattle industry, which grazes on grouse habitat, mostly on Bureau of Land Management land.

About 46 percent of the West's grouse habitat is on BLM-administered land.

"Obviously, we're disappointed in the decision," said Gooding resident Jeff Faulkner, president of the Idaho Cattle Association. "But we need to sit down and study what exactly it means."

Faulkner and other ranchers worry that if grouse are eventually listed, it'll spell economic disaster for Idaho's cattle industry. And once a species is listed, he said, it's extremely difficult to get it off the list. It is unclear how Fish and Wildlife will rethink its decision.

"What an odd process," Winnill wrote of the department's current method. "Right when the best science was most needed, it was locked out of the room."

Winnill said that he doubts the same flawed process could be used again to reconsider the listing of any species.

Fish and Wildlife's Boise office did not return calls for this story.

individual companies, even after they go out of business, arguing that it "could substantially harm" the companies' competitive positions.

More than three decades after the loan program was created, USDA officials still don't know if it works, and have gone to firms that have hired foreign workers instead of Americans. Millions more have gone to failing and bankrupt businesses. Most of the jobs are not new. Many are low-tech and low-wage.

In addition to the loan program, the USDA has handed out almost half a billion dollars in rural development grants to businesses and nonprofits since 2001.

Loan guarantees or grants have gone to a car wash in Millard, Nev.; a country club in Great Falls, Mont.; a theater in Smithfield, N.C.; a water park in Myrtle Beach, S.C.; an alligator hunter in Dade City, Fla.; snowmobile chases in Maline; and dozens of gas stations and convenience stores in Maryland, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Arkansas.

"You know, some people could argue a job at minimum wage is better than no job at all," said William Hagg, USDA's deputy administrator for business programs. "In a lot of rural areas, that's all there are."

In congressional testimony and news releases, USDA officials stress that the loan and grant programs have helped revitalize rural America by creating or saving 1.5 million jobs since 2001. But in some cases, creating a single job costs hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Meanwhile, the USDA's losses continue to climb. More than one-in-five loans — nearly 2,700 — result in a loss in the business and industry guaranteed loan program, the USDA's largest rural lending effort. Yet the USDA has asked for its money back from just 19 banks for fraud or mismanagement since 1974.

Congressional committees charged with overseeing USDA business programs rarely question the agency's claims or probe deeply into the programs. Instead, some lawmakers have aggressively lobbied for costly projects in their districts.

In 1999, members of Washington state's congressional delegation urged the USDA to guarantee a $20 million loan to a troubled sugar beet refinery near Moses Lake. The agency agreed, even though the borrower had already defaulted on other loans. Within months the plant failed, sticking taxpayers with a $12.1 million loss.

Thomas Dorr, USDA undersecretary for rural development said the USDA is developing new tools to measure the effectiveness of its business programs, and lately has begun to see more high-quality jobs created. He attributed the high loss rate to a handful of "aggressive lenders."

"We are making a legitimate effort to deal with all of these issues," Dorr said. "We've made a substantial change in how we go about doing our business and are much more concerned about creating value and not just giving out grants. I think that's beginning to show up."

Most Americans are unaware that the USDA is in the lending business. But while the programs represent a small fraction of USDA spending, which includes programs from farm subsidies to school lunches, the ones administered by the agency's Rural Business Cooperative Service account for more than $1 billion annually.

In 2006 alone, the USDA backed more than $766 million in private loans to businesses, guaranteeing up to 90 percent of the face value of some. It awarded $75 million in grants to nonprofits, local governments and businesses, including $100,000 to the agricultural plant Woleh's to market grape juice in Mexico. "We are essentially an investment bank for rural America," Dorr said in a speech in November 2006.

The efforts date to the 1930s, when rural credit was tight and unemployment was high. In 1946, the Farmers Home Administration Act authorized the USDA to insure bank loans. Over time, the initiative expanded, with additional types of loans and grants added to the mix.

Some economists, government groups and lenders contend that the USDA's efforts duplicate those of the Small Business Administration and other federal agencies. The USDA operates 50 state programs, each with its own staff.

"From our perspective, it's highly inefficient," said Anthony Wilkinson, the head of a trade group representing banks and lenders that participate in government-guaranteed loan programs. "We'd like to see it centralized with a few experts in one place, like the SBA does it. The amount of time takes to process applications gets dragged out. It's a bureaucratic nightmare."

In addition to providing support for businesses, the USDA also backs lending efforts for utilities and rural housing initiatives.

Ambulances from Magle Valley Paramedics, along with a Filer Quick Response Unit and Buhl Fire Department, streamed to and from the Aspen Building at CSI where the mock scenario was held.

A team of paramedics pushes a student on a gurney during a mock disaster at the College of Southern Idaho. The event at CSI was the largest collaboration of its kind that Flint and Koks said they could remember. Normal emergency medical functions were not interrupted by the exercise at CSI, Flint said.

U.S. teen births rise for first time in 15 years

By Mike Slobbe
Associated Press writer

ATLANTA — In a troubling reversal, the nation's teen birth rate rose for the first time in 15 years, surprising government health officials who had no immediate explanation. The birth rate had been dropping since its peak in 1991, although the decline had slowed in recent years. On Wednesday, government statisticians said it rose 3 percent from 2005 to 2006. U.S. health officials said it was possibly a one-year statistical blip and not the beginning of a new upward trend.

But several experts said they have been expecting a jump. They blame the increase on increased federal funding for abstinence-only health education programs that do not teach how to use condoms and other contraception. Some key sexually transmitted disease rates have been rising, including syphilis, gonorrhea and chlamydia. The rising teen pregnancy rate is part of the same phenomenon, said Dr. Carol Hogue, an Emory University professor of maternal and child health. "It's not rocket science," she said.

tropical seas, according to a study published last month in the Proceedings of the Royal Society B, a British scientific journal. The hardest hit will include plants and animals in colder climates or at higher elevations and those with limited ranges or little tolerance for temperature change, said Wendy Foden, a biologist with the World Conservation Union, which catalogs threatened species. Butterflies that lived at high altitudes in North America and southern France have vanished, and polar bears and penguins are watching their habitat melt away. The carbon dioxide emissions that are a leading cause of global warming also turn oceans more acidic, killing coral reefs and the microscopic plankton that blue whales and other marine mammals depend on for food.

"In the long run, every species will be affected," Foden said. A few will benefit, chiefly those that breed quickly, already exist in varied climates and are able to adapt swiftly to changing conditions, scientists said. Think cockroaches, pigeons and weeds. The spread of a deadly fungus that thrives in warmer conditions has decimated some frog populations in South America, Africa and Europe.

took his own life. Witnesses said the gunman fired down on shoppers from a third-floor balcony of the Van Maat store using what police said was an SKS assault rifle they found at the scene. "My knees rocked, I didn't know what to do, so I just ran with everybody else," said Kevin Kleins, 29, who was shopping with her 4-year-old daughter at the Westroads Mall, in a prosperous neighborhood on the city's west side. She said she hid in a dressing room with four other shoppers and an employee.

Paramedics rush one of the shooting victims out of Van Maat store at the Westroads Mall on Wednesday in Omaha, Neb. A man opened fire with a rifle at a busy department store Wednesday, killing eight people before taking his own life in an attack that made holiday shoppers run screaming through a mall and barricade themselves in dressing rooms. His family about a year ago and moved in with a friend's family in a house in a middle-class neighborhood in Bellevue, a suburb wedged between Omaha Air Force Base and the Missouri River, said Debora Maruca-Kovac, who along with her husband took in Hawkins, a friend of her sons. "When he first came in the house, he was introverted, a troubled young man who was like a lost pound puppy that nobody wanted," Maruca-Kovac told The Associated Press. Maruca-Kovac said Hawkins was fired from his job at a McDonald's this week and had recently broken up with a girlfriend. She said he phoned her about 1 p.m. on Wednesday, telling her that he had left a note for her in his bedroom. She tried to get him up, she told CNN.

She told the AP she called Hawkins' mother, went to the Maruca-Kovacs' house and retrieved the suicide note, in which Hawkins wrote that he was "sorry for everything."

would not be a burden on his family anymore and, most ominously "Now I'll be famous." Maruca-Kovac said she took the note to authorities and went to her job as a nurse at the Nebraska Medical Center. Hours later, Maruca-Kovac said, she saw victims being brought in. Police received a 911 call from someone inside the mall, and shots could be heard in the background, Sgt. Teresa Negron said. By the time officers arrived six minutes later, the shooting was over, she said. "We sent every available officer to the city of Omaha," Negron said. The Omaha World-Herald reported that the gunman had a military-style haircut and a black backpack, and wore a camouflage vest.

Defense Secretary Gates: Secure, stable Iraq within reach

By Lollita C. Baldor
Associated Press writer

Defense Secretary Robert Gates listens to translation during a joint-press conference with Iraqi Defense Minister Abdul-Qader al-Obaidi, not shown, Wednesday in Baghdad, Iraq.

BAGHDAD — U.S. military commanders in northern Iraq told Defense Secretary Robert Gates here Wednesday that they need more troops to battle increased attacks by al-Qaida terrorists who have fled north after being pushed out of the Baghdad region.

The call for the movement of Iraqi and U.S. forces into the north comes as Gates fulfilled the improved security in Baghdad and said a stable Iraq is within reach. Just before Gates spoke in the heavily fortified Green Zone, however, a car bomb exploded across the Tigris river in a largely Shiite Baghdad neighborhood, killing at least 14 people, police said.

Up in Mosul, Army Col. Tony Thomas, deputy commander of U.S. forces in the north, told reporters traveling with Gates that commanders would like more U.S. troops, as well as the return of 1,100 Iraqi troops who were sent to Baghdad as part of the military buildup there earlier this year. The plan could shift extra troops from other areas of the country that are more secure.

Thomas would not say how many troops are needed or where they would be deployed, but he said the U.S. needs more combat power to help stabilize a number of areas — including Diyala province, Mosul and Samarra — to help counter an uptick in violence, including suicide bombings. He said military leaders are still discussing the issue, and have made no final decisions.

Gates, who met with commanders in Mosul before heading to Baghdad for talks with Iraqi leaders, acknowledged the new challenges in the north.

"What I heard them say was that they ... did need some additional forces ... particularly west of the river," Gates, who appeared at a press briefing with Iraqi Defense Minister Abdul-Qader al-Obaidi. He said that as military operations in Baghdad pushed al-Qaida north, there was a "resulting increase in terrorist activities in Mosul and surrounding areas as al-Qaida tried to establish a new foothold."

Gates, who is using his latest unannounced trip to Iraq to assess whether the downturn in violence in parts of the country can be sustained, also said he believes a stable Iraq is within reach.

"In many parts of the nation, the positive developments have led to a growing sense of normalcy and hope," said Gates.

At the Pentagon, meanwhile, the top Marine general told reporters Wednesday that he has set aside his proposal to shift Marine forces from Iraq to Afghanistan, reflecting opposition from Gates.

"After discussion with the secretary and with my colleagues on the Joint Staff, there is a determination that right now the timing is not right to provide additional Marine forces to Afghanistan," said Gen. James T. Conway, the Marine Corps commandant.

Conway said he discussed the matter with Gates last week. Gates visited Afghanistan on Tuesday and was in Iraq on Wednesday, although he did not go to Iraq's Anbar province, where Marines operate.

In addressing the matter publicly for the first time, Conway said he was not disappointed by Gates' decision, given that the Marines have had considerable success in stabilizing that province.

"Personally discouraged? No," he said. "Frankly, our casualty count is going to continue to be lower and that is a good day," Conway said. He added that Gates fully understood why Conway made the proposal.

Gates, making his sixth visit to Iraq in the last year, acknowledged the precarious nature of any security gains in the country. And he said much work remains to be done to ensure Iraqi forces are ready to take over more program duties from U.S. troops. Iraqis who have been fighting insurgents on the local level must be integrated into Iraqi security forces, for example, he said.

"It is clear that a secure, stable Iraq is within reach," Gates said. However, he added, "We need to be patient."

Iran leader proclaims U.S. reversal a victory for his hard-line in nuclear faceoff with West

By Ali Akbar Dareini
Associated Press writer

TEHRAN, Iran — President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad on Wednesday called the dramatic U.S. turnaround in a new intelligence review a victory for Iran's nuclear program, suggesting it shows the success of his hard-line stance rejecting compromise.

But his more moderate opponents at home are hoping the assessment's conclusion that Tehran shelved its effort to develop atomic weapons will boost a diplomatic resolution of the nuclear stand-off with the West.

The political rivalry in Tehran could have important implications for what happens next in the dispute over Iran's nuclear program, now that the report has likely weakened two of the threats Washington held over Iran — more U.N. sanctions and the possibility of military action.

In past months, Ahmadinejad has faced a rising challenge from a more moderate camp centered around his top rival, former prime minister Manouchehr Mollasoltani. Rafsanjani's allies have increasingly been pushing Ahmadinejad for his hard-line positions, saying they are creating enemies for Iran in the West.

The head of the U.N. atomic watchdog agency said Wednesday that Iran had been "somewhat vindicated" by the U.S. review, and expressed hopes it would give a push to negotiations.

"I see this report as a window of opportunity," Mohamed ElBaradei of the International Atomic Energy Agency said. "It's a window of opportunity because it gives Iran a chance to have a window of opportunity."

suspend uranium enrichment and allow a monitoring program to ensure its nuclear facilities aren't used to produce atomic weapons. He told a crowd of thousands in the western province of Ilam that the U.S. report was a "declaration of victory for the Iranian nation against the world powers over the nuclear issue."

"Thanks to your resistances, a bomb shot was fired at the dreams of ill-wishers, and the truthfulness of the Iranian nation was once again proved by the ill-wishers themselves," Ahmadinejad said, drawing celebratory whistles from the crowd.

The report concluded Iran halted a nuclear weapons design program in late 2003 and said there was no evidence it had resumed. That was a dramatic change from a 2005 assessment saying Iran was actively trying to build a nuclear bomb.

Prosecutor announces new investigation against Sudanese government officials

By Alexandra Olson
Associated Press writer

UNITED NATIONS — The prosecutor of the International Criminal Court announced Wednesday he was opening an investigation against Sudanese government officials for what he called systematic attacks on refugees in Darfur.

Luis Moreno Ocampo said his office would also investigate violence against humanitarian workers and peacekeepers in Darfur, including an Oct. 29 attack on the Hoskanita military base that left 10 African Union soldiers dead and 1 missing. Rebels were blamed for that attack.

Ocampo urged the U.N. Security Council to demand that Sudan hand over acting humanitarian minister Ahmed Mohammed Harun, who was formerly in charge of security in Darfur and has been indicted for crimes against humanity.

He said the investigation would probe "who is maintaining Harun in a position to commit crimes" — raising the possibility of indictments against higher-level Sudanese officials. Ocampo did not mention any names but made clear no one would be immune, not only for harboring Harun but for the latest attacks against civilians.

"When will be a better time to arrest Harun? How many more women, girls have to be raped? How many more persons have to be killed?" Ocampo asked at a Security Council briefing. "What is at stake is, simply, the life or death of 2.5 million people."

Wolf politics don't mix with wolf management

Wolves are in Idaho to stay, but you have to wonder about a state management strategy that begins with the governor declaring that he wants the first wolf-hunting license.

With the federal government two months away from removing the animals from the Endangered Species List here, wolf politics is still very much entwined with wolf oversight.

If it stays that way, Idaho — and the wolves — are in for difficulty. James Caswell, director of the federal Bureau of Land Management, drew up a de-listing strategy for Idaho last year — when he was working for Gov. "Butch" Otter — that absolutely depends on the state Fish and Game calling the shots.

The agency would curb wolf-human conflict through controlled hunts, counting wolves as big game along with elk, deer and bear.

The government reintroduced wolves to the Rockies a decade ago. The recovery goal for Idaho was 300 wolves — a number reached in 2002, mostly because wolves had abundant food and few predators. Officials now estimate that about 700 wolves prowl Idaho — way too many to suit ranchers and hunters.

Otter has suggested hunters be allowed to kill all but 100 wolves statewide each year, the minimum population required by the feds. Fish and Game wants to maintain 15 breeding pairs, which could mean as few as 60 wolves or as many as several hundred.

But if the agency decides that it's biologically prudent to preserve more rather than fewer wolves, will wolf-country legislators clamor to dictate wolf numbers?

State management won't eliminate wolf-human conflict. The animals are predators, and they do come in contact with livestock and people. They also occasionally kill elk and other prized big game.

But Fish and Game must have a sensible blueprint for balancing wolf preservation against wildlife welfare and human activities.

It is essential that Idaho's politicians let the agency do its job.

Our view: Idaho's wolf management plan makes sense, but not if the Legislature ruins it.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

The facts are such stubborn things

WASHINGTON — At the White House news conference Tuesday, The Chicago Tribune's Mark Silva gingerly snuck up on a state-of-mind question.

"I can't help but read your body language this morning, Mr. President," he said. "You seem somehow dispirited, somewhat dispirited."

W. did look like a kid who'd just had his toys taken away. But he acted humorously exasperated, as he always does when the talk turns introspective.

MAUREEN DOWD

"This is like, all of a sudden, it's like Psychology 101, you know?" he said, as reporters laughed.

The reporter pressed on about whether the president was troubled about a possible "credibility gap" with the American people, given that the facts had failed him on Iraq and Iran and the Harry Field had charged that "the president is not leveling with the American people" on war spending.

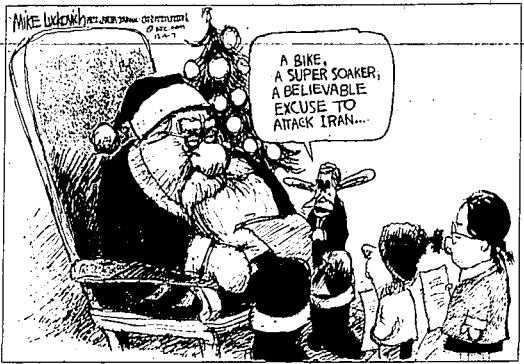

Even though Norman Podhoretz is conjuring up a "Seven Days in December" spy thriller scenario in which the intelligence agencies colluded to sabotage the president and prevent him from the noble mission of air strikes on Iran, W. insisted he felt "pretty good about life."

He said that the breathtaking and embarrassing news from the National Intelligence Estimate about Iran's nuclear capability — from "high confidence" in 2005 that the mullahs were developing a nuke to "high confidence" that they stopped the program in 2003 — somehow made it clear that he was right.

If W. can shape the intelligence to match his faith-based beliefs, as with Iraq, then he will believe the intelligence — no matter how incredible it is.

If he can't shape it to match his beliefs, as with Iran, then he will disregard the intelligence — no matter how credible it is.

Kennedy's 1960 'Catholic' speech

Editor's note: Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney will speak about the place his Mormon faith has in his view of government this morning at the George H.W. Bush Presidential Library in College Station, Texas. It's scheduled for 8:30 a.m. CNN, MSNBC and Fox News Channel will broadcast it live.

Money campaign spokesman Kevin Mahoney, in a statement, said, "This speech is an opportunity for Gov. Romney to share his views on religious liberty, the great tradition of religious tolerance we have played in the progress of our nation and how the governor's own faith would inform his presidency if he were elected. Gov. Romney understands that faith is an important issue to many Americans, and he personally feels this moment is the right moment for him to share his views with the nation."

On Sept. 12, 1960, Democratic presidential candidate John F. Kennedy gave a similar speech to the Houston Ministerial Association. Kennedy was only the second Catholic ever to be nominated by a major political party for president.

As a result of his dismay, he discovered that many southern Protestant groups believed that any Catholic had to obey the pope's commands unquestioningly. Kennedy finally decided to try to defeat the issue by meeting it head-on.

In Houston, according to one of his biographers, "he knocked religion out of the campaign as an intellectually respectable issue. His Catholicism, of course, could not be eradicated that easily, but Kennedy's meeting the issue forthrightly limited the damage to those whose prejudices would not respond to reason. And with his election that November, barriers to Catholics in American politics melted away."

Here is the text of Kennedy's speech:

John F. Kennedy

"I believe in an America that is officially neither Catholic, Protestant nor Jewish — where no public official either requests or accepts instructions on public policy from the pope, the National Council of Churches or any other ecclesiastical source — where no religious body seeks to impose its will directly or indirectly upon the general populace or the public acts of its officials — and where religious liberty is so indivisible that an act against one church is treated as an act against all.

"For, while this year it may be a Catholic against whom the finger of suspicion is pointed, in other years it has been, and may someday be again, a Jew or a Quaker or a Unitarian or a Baptist. It was Virginia's harassment of Baptist preachers, for example, that led to Jefferson's statute of religious freedom. Today, I may be the victim — but tomorrow it may be you — until the whole fabric of our harmonious society is ripped apart at a time of great national peril.

"Firstly, I believe in an America where religious intolerance will someday end — where all men and all churches are treated as equal — where every man has the same right to attend or not to attend the church of his choice — where there is no Catholic vote, no anti-Catholic vote, no bloc voting of any kind, and where Catholics, Protestants and Jews, both the lay and the pastoral level, will refrain from those attitudes of disdain and division which have so often marred their works in the past, and promote instead the American ideal of brotherhood.

"That is the kind of America in which I believe. And it represents the kind of presidency in which I believe — a great office that must be neither humbled by making it the instrument of any religious group, nor tarnished by arbitrarily withholding it, its occupancy from the members of any religious group. I believe in a president whose views on religion are his own private affair — neither imposed upon him by the nation or imposed by the nation upon him as a condition to holding that office.

"I would not look with favor upon a president working to subvert the First Amendment's guarantees of religious liberty (nor would our system of checks and balances permit him to do so). And neither do I look with favor upon those who would work to subvert Article VI of the Constitution by requiring a religious test — even by indirection — for if they disagree with that safeguard, they should be openly working to repeal it.

"I want a chief executive whose public acts are responsible to all and obligated to none — who can attend any ceremony, service or dinner his office may appropriately require him to fulfill — and whose fulfillment of his presidential office is not limited or conditioned by any religious oath, ritual or obligation.

"This is the kind of America I believe in — and this is the kind of America I fought for in the South Pacific and the kind my brother died for in Europe. No one suggested then that we might have a 'divided loyalty,' that we did not believe in liberty or that we belonged to a disloyal group that threatened the freedoms for which our forefathers died."

"And in fact this is the kind of America for which our forefathers died when they fled here to escape religious test oaths, that denied office to members of less favored churches, when they fought for the Constitution, the Bill of Rights, the Virginia Statute of Religious Freedom — and when they fought at the shrine I visited today — the Alamo. For side by side with Bowie and Crockett died Puentes and McCaffery and Bailey and Bedfilio and Carey — but no one knows whether they were Catholics or not. For there was no religious test there.

"I ask you tonight to follow in that tradition, to judge me on the basis of 14 years in the Congress ...

"But let me stress again that these are my views — for, contrary to common newspaper usage, I am not the Catholic candidate for president (but the candidate who happens also to be a Catholic). I do not speak for my church on public matters — and the church does not speak for me.

"Whatever issue may come before me as president, if I should be elected — on birth control, divorce, censorship, gambling or any other subject — I will make my decision in accordance with these views, in accordance with what my conscience tells me to be in the national interest, and without regard to outside religious pressure or dictate. And no power or threat of punishment could cause me to decide otherwise.

"But if the time should ever come — and I do not anticipate any conflict — when my office would require me to either violate my conscience, or violate the national interest, then I would resign the office, and I hope any other conscientious public servant would do likewise.

"But I do not intend to apologize for these views to my critics of either Catholic or Protestant faith, nor do I intend to disavow either my views or my church in order to win this election.

"If this election is decided on the basis that 40 million Americans lost their chance of being president on the day they were baptized, then it is the whole nation that will be the loser in the eyes of Catholics and non-Catholics around the world, in the eyes of history, and in the eyes of our own people.

"But if, on the other hand, I should win this election, I shall devote every effort of mind and spirit to fulfilling the oath of the Presidency — practically identical, I might add with the oath I have taken for 14 years in the Congress. For without reservation, I can, and I quote 'solemnly swear, that I will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States and will preserve, protect, and defend the Constitution so help me God.'"

By John F. Kennedy

"...While the so-called religious issue is necessarily and properly the chief topic here tonight, I want to emphasize from the outset that I believe that we have far more critical issues in the 1960 election: the spread of Communism; influence, until it now festers only 90 miles off the coast of Florida — the humiliating treatment of our president and vice president by those who no longer respect our power — the hungry children awaiting their turn to be fed; people who cannot pay their doctor's bills, the families forced to give up their farms — an America with too many slums, with too few schools, and late to the moon and outer space.

"These are the real issues which should decide this campaign. And they are not religious issues — far war and peace and ignorance, and despair know no religious barrier.

"But because I am a Catholic and no Catholic has ever been elected president, the real issues in this campaign have been obscured — perhaps deliberately, in some quarters, by those more than this. So it is apparently necessary for me to state once again — not what kind of church I believe in for that should be important only to me, but what kind of America I believe in.

"I believe in an America where the separation of church and state is absolute — where no Catholic prelate should be the president (should he be a Catholic) how to act and no Protestant minister would tell his parishioners for whom to vote — where no church or church school is given any public funds or political preference — and where no man is denied public office merely because his religion differs from the president who might appoint him or the people who might elect him.

"I believe in an America where the separation of church and state is absolute — where no Catholic prelate should be the president (should he be a Catholic) how to act and no Protestant minister would tell his parishioners for whom to vote — where no church or church school is given any public funds or political preference — and where no man is denied public office merely because his religion differs from the president who might appoint him or the people who might elect him.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

U.S. has easy way to get out of Iraq

The life of one American soldier is worth more than all Iraqis' ability to vote (something they may not want and probably will never do anyway). That's why I propose a way to get our people home without pouring multibillions of dollars more into a war we shouldn't be in anyway.

Our troops drive all our tanks and heavy armor and short-range weapons across the border into Iran, leave the keys in the ignition, turn around and come home. The audacity of thinking we could, by any means, solve racial or religious conflicts centuries old is an insult to them and makes of us an international laughing stock.

We could do the same thing between Iraq and Russia (Russia couldn't do it alone last time), Pakistan and India. It isn't like we've never done it before. We sold fighter planes both to Iraq and the Arab nations, which were then pitted against each other in deadly combat.

It might even gain us a reputation and countries like Turkey and Colombia might think twice about dumping tons of life-destroying drugs on our shores.

There are South American countries that play fast and loose with their laws, still come holding their hands out, crying about their social needs.

How can we expect our own younger generations to take responsibility for their actions when we don't demand that other countries do the same? VAUGHN PHELPS Twin Falls

Region has shortage of behavior challenged units

The Gooding care facility provides the only option for some families, thanks to the Behavior Challenged Unit, maybe the Times-News should write about that. Nate, is it your goal to put a local facility out of business? Have you personally gone to the Gooding care facility? Or to either of the other two facilities between Caldwell and the Magic Valley that have behavior challenged units? I haven't, but my mom had to look at the Caldwell facility and Gooding facility (with a registered nurse friend) and found the Gooding facility was hands down a better place for us to move my father, who turned 64 on Nov. 30 and has advanced Alzheimer's.

The real tragedy here is that none of the newer, modern facilities want to provide a behavior challenged unit. Due to his extremely young age, Sunrise Health in Boise (a hospital that specializes in treating Alzheimer's) could only release my father to a facility with a behavior challenged unit. This was after he apparently was placed in two Alzheimer's specialty units and had to repeatedly be admitted to their hospital several times because traditional Alzheimer's units apparently are not equipped to handle a man that, by all accounts, was still in prime physical condition.

Maybe, if you really want to do a service for the families that have to put loved ones in the Gooding care facility, you should put some pressure on the newer facilities to offer behavior challenged units, giving families more options instead of sentencing our loved ones to be taken care of in some of the oldest facilities in the state. Golden-Eagles face final three games of 2007

By Eric Larsen
Times-News writer

Relief is in sight. After two months of practice and nine games in 30 days, all that stands between the No. 8 College of Southern Idaho women's basketball team and a well-earned break is this weekend's trio of games in the Coca-Cola Classic in Twin Falls.

In three days, the 8-1 Golden Eagles will have a chance to focus on their studies, take a well-earned vacation, and practice without having to compete until Jan. 3. The Golden Eagles, along with head coach Randy Rogers, are already looking forward to a brief respite before the stretch run of the season.

"As a coach, I get to stop taking medication for about three weeks," Rogers joked. "Which is nice, because I have been heavily medicated since the season started.

First, there's the matter of this week's tournament schedule, which includes a few Pepto-Bismol games against 3-0 Yakima Valley Community College (Wash.) and 9-0 Sheridan College (Wyo.). Those two games sandwich Friday's contest against a 1-7 Northwest College (Wyo.) team that may give Rogers a break from the medicine cabinet.

However, Saturday's game comes against a Sheridan team averaging 81.1 points per game with an offense that has thus far caused opposing coaches plenty of nausea, heartburn, upset stomachs, indigestion and... Moving on.

The Golden Eagles have a recent history with today's opponent, as CSI has faced the Yaks the prior three seasons, winning all three contests. Rogers' 2006-07 squad topped YCC head coach Cody Butler's Yaks 72-62 in the most recent meeting. Gauri Andrea Blodgett and former Highland High standout Tatum Dixey return from that team but with no player taller than 6-foot. Yakima will enter the game with a decided height deficit.

"I think it's all on us," CSI sophomore guard Amy Higbee said. "We know what we need to do. It's just if we get it done. We just need to come together and we'll be awesome."

The Northwest College Trappers feature a pair of Latvian players in 6-8 sophomore guard Inga Briede and 5-11 freshman forward Gita Grava. While the Trappers have struggled early, Rogers knows his team can't prematurely look toward Saturday's game against Sheridan.

"All the scout on them is they're good and if you overlook them, they will beat you because

Bobcats hold off Bruins

By Zach Kyle
For the Times-News

BURLEY — Twin Falls fought from behind to pull within 10 of Burley in the fourth quarter, but Burley held enough to win comfortably, 72-60.

Colton Moon scored efficiently for Burley (8-0), hitting 5-of-7 from 3-point range on his way to 21 points. With 9 assists, he was just as dangerous passing the ball—often finding just enough daylight to hit streaking Bobcats for easy baskets.

"Colton did a great job looking up the court and hitting guys open in transition," Burley coach Jack Bagley said. "I thought Kyle Hepworth (11 points) did a fantastic job getting easy scores. That's how we want to do it. Colton sees the floor well, if we can get some guys open ahead of him, that's a great benefit."

"We basically played a better team," Twin Falls coach Matt Harr said. "I was happy with our effort in that we didn't quit. (The Bobcats) are the better team right now. We'll gauge our improvement on how we play against them next time."

Russel Crane led Twin Falls (1-7) with 17 points. Jake Hanchey and Bryant Ware each added eight for the Bruins.

Four Bobcats scored in double figures. Ben Searle had 15 and Jordan Hosteen had 13, including an 8-point first quarter performance in which he dominated the paint.

"After trailing 38-19 at halftime, the Bruins started hitting shots in the third quarter to make a dent in Burley's lead. Unable to work inside against Burley's height and athleticism, Twin Falls started connecting from outside, as Crane, Hanchey and Ryan Peterson all nailed 3-pointers. Although the hot shooting continued in the fourth, and Burley scored on several easy putbacks, Moon stuck a sneaky jumper and converted a driving lay-in, and Hepworth scored five points late to keep Burley in front."

Bagley said Burley's defense let down in the second half, during which Twin Falls outscored the Bobcats 41-34.

"To Twin Falls' credit, they never quit," Bagley said. "They battled back and made a game of it. They've got good players and good shooters. It took them a while to get going, and fortunately we had a big enough lead that it didn't Harr said the game swung in the fourth quarter when Moon knocked the ball loose from a Twin Falls guard. Both players chased the ball into the backcourt, but the Bruins were whistled for an over-and-back violation. Burley then went on a 6-0 run to seal the game.

"That's just a tip of the hat to how good a leader Colton Moon is," Harr said.

CSI women remain No. 8 in NJCAA poll

By Eric Larsen
Times-News writer

Wednesday was moving day in the NJCAA Division I Women's Basketball Poll, but the College of Southern Idaho women held steady at No. 8.

The 8-1 Golden Eagles were one of only six teams to keep their spots from last week's poll as the number of undefeated teams in the nation whittled itself down over the weekend.

Unbeaten Gulf Coast Community College (Fla.) retained the top spot in the nation by receiving all eight first-place votes while 8-0 Central Arizona College remained second, trailing Gulf Coast by only eight poll points.

Previous No. 3 and No. 4, Chipola College (Fla.) and Arkansas-Fort Smith, fell to sixth and seventh after suffering their respective first losses of the season. CSI trails Arkansas-Fort Smith by only one poll point heading into today's first day of the Coca-Cola Classic tournament in Twin Falls and a meeting with 3-0 Yakima Valley Community College (Wash.). CSI's game against Yakima Valley is the first of three this weekend.

"I just hope we can go into the offseason (break) at 11-1 and possibly tie in the top five in the rankings by the time Christmas comes around," CSI head coach Randy Rogers said. "That would be a great goal."

The Golden Eagles are led by the post trio of leading scorer Ania Burdick, leading

Top-ranked Tigers roll to road win over Buhl

By Diane Pihlin
Times-News writer

BUHL — The Jerome style of defense is intense, aggressive and intimidating.

The Tigers' full-court pressure, traps and in-your-face defense was on display Wednesday as the visiting Tigers pounded Buhl 50-28 in moving to 7-0. Jerome forced the Indians into 24 turnovers and limited Buhl to only 25 shots for the game.

Jerome senior guard Molly Reid hopes she is one of the players that brings the energy and intensity to a team that has great team chemistry.

"Just love this team," said Reid. "We all have one goal and we are taking it one game at a time and not thinking ahead. We are also a very deep team."

All the Jerome players were able to get in valuable minutes of playing time that will be important as the season winds down and the team gets involved in conference play, districts and state.

Said Reid: "Everyone works hard at practice and our bench players deserve the time."

Senior Jordan Burnham led the Tigers with a game-high 17 points. Burnham scored 10 of those points in the first half, more than the Indians scored in the first half as a team. Jerome was also 100 percent at the free-throw line, canning 11 of 11.

Jerome nose guard LaCale Pringle-Buchanan scored 10 points to Boise to face the Bishop Kelly Knights on Saturday.

"Bishop Kelly is 5-2," said Jerome assistant coach Scott Burton. "They are a good team that has beaten some good 5A teams."

Junior Aleigh Hunsaker led Buhl with five points.

"We had a huge number of turnovers," said Buhl coach Karen Peterson. "We had

Boise State rocks Idaho State

By Mark Liptak

POCATELLO — Idaho State head coach Joe O'Brien is a man of strong emotions, but after the beating Boise State put on his Bengal team all he could do was state the obvious.

"We got what you call a real butt whipping," O'Brien said.

Indeed the Broncos blasted the Bengals 93-61 in a game where the biggest ISU lead was 4-0 moments after the opening tip. After that the 6-2 Broncos did whatever they wanted. In particular, a Boise State team that likes to pound the ball inside did something different at Holt Arena. The Broncos shot 3-pointers and did "category well," nailing 15 of 25 from beyond the arc. Boise State shot a blistering 57 percent for the game and had a 20-point lead at halftime, 44-24.

"I told the kids I was very disappointed tonight in the way they played," said O'Brien. "We've been on the road forever and to have a home game against a cross-state rival and then to see the way they came out, with little energy, was just disappointing."

O'Brien took pains to say that his comments did not include Big Sky Player Of The Week Matt Stuckl. Stuckl dropped in 23 on the night to lead the 2-6 Bengals and was seen diving for loose balls late in the game with the issue well decided.

BSU's Tyler Tiedeman led the Broncos in scoring with 24 points, including 6 of 9 shooting from long range. Former College of Southern Idaho star Reggie Larry added 19 on 7 of 9 shooting, and Matt Nelson chipped in with 13 points and eight boards. The Broncos front line combined for 56 points and 18 rebounds. They also got 30 points off the bench.

But at least got a physical break now that they sorely need with 10 days between games. But the Bengals don't get a break in the schedule. The next two games are against a pair of top 10 clubs: ISU plays UCLA at Paulsen Pavilion on Dec. 15 then follows that with a home game against Washington State on Dec. 23.

Boise State's Reggie Larry, center, puts back a rebound basket over Idaho State's Chron Tatum (25) and Lucas Stojan (14) at Holt Arena in Pocatello on Wednesday.

Meth Project set to launch in January

About half of $2.7 million needed for media campaign raised

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — Eleven months of campaigning seems to have paid off for the Idaho Meth Project.

Debbie Field, director of the Idaho Office of Drug Policy, told a gathering of city and county officials Wednesday night that the $2.7 million media campaign will launch during the first week of January to coincide with Idaho Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's Jan. 7 State of the State address.

Field said she is hoping the campaign, modeled after a highly successful project in Montana and even using some of the same ads, will convince teenagers 12 to 17 not to try meth. About $1.4 million has been raised through private donations for the project, she said, enough to pay for the campaign for the first quarter of 2008 and one-half of the second.

"The pain people are experiencing in our state turned into a passion," she said, adding later that the money is about what she expected to raise since the project began earlier this year.

Field's presentation to the quarterly Twin Falls County meeting, attended by officials from Murtaugh to Filer, lacked the disturbing images, stories and videos of meth-addicted teens featured in some of her community presentations.

Instead, Field focused on numbers. Meth has a 95 percent addiction rate, she said. Taxpayers pay $55 a

Heredia-Juarez wants to withdraw guilty plea

Fifth District Judge Randy Stoker accepted attorney Greg Fuller's motion to withdraw from representing his client, Freely Heredia-Juarez, who pleaded guilty on Aug. 9 to murder, but who now says he wants to withdraw his guilty plea.

Heredia-Juarez's reasons for wanting to withdraw his plea remain unclear. But Stoker ruled that whatever Heredia-Juarez's underlying reasons are, his motion to withdraw his plea would not be heard until a later date when Heredia-Juarez will be represented by a new attorney.

Heredia-Juarez, along with James Roy John Jr., Michael Lee John and Nicole Lea Baker, was charged in the planned December 2006 murder of 19-year-old Jessie Aaron Coates.

Heredia-Juarez and John Jr. had participated in a spree of local robberies with Coates but grew concerned that Coates might expose their scheme, according to a Twin Falls County Sheriff's affidavit. Between Dec. 15 and 17, they, along with Michael John and his girlfriend Baker, drove Coates to the South Hills where Heredia-Juarez and John Jr. shot him.

Investigators say Coates died either from the bullet wound, freezing temperatures or both. His body stayed in the South Hills until a man walking his dogs found it the afternoon of Dec. 26.

Haemmerle wins seat on Hailey City Council

More than 700 Hailey voters went to the polls Tuesday for a run-off election between Stephanie Marvel and Fritz Haemmerle.

Haemmerle won Seat No. 4 on the City Council, garnering 466 of the 724 votes cast in the election. Marvel received 258 votes.

About 119 votes came from absentee ballots, according to City Clerk Heather Lawson.

Originally, three candidates — Haemmerle, Marvel and Geoff Moore — vied for Seat No. 4, with one candidate to return "a majority of ballots," or more than half the total votes. Haemmerle fell 76 votes short of attaining the majority in the first election.

Gun shots reported near O'Leary Junior High

Police received reports at 10:45 p.m. Tuesday of gun shots fired in the area of Vern C. O'Leary Junior High. But several officers who arrive on scene found no signs of property damage or any injuries, according to Twin Falls Police Capt. Matt Hicks.

The first caller, a man, reported hearing five shots fired. Then he saw vehicle turn southbound onto Eastland Drive and leave the scene. He could not describe the vehicle or provide a license plate number.

A second caller, a resident of Wildcat, in the southeast of the school, also reported hearing shots.

On Wednesday, police still had not received any reports of property damage or injuries.

Police warn of check scam

Twin Falls police warn that someone is trying to pass counterfeit travelers checks to local businesses.

Staff at local businesses should keep their eyes peeled for Visa and American Express travelers' checks in denominations of $500. If a customer tries to use this form of currency, it should be turned by calling the toll free number listed on the checks while holding on to the customer's identification card.

The department asks anyone with information about the counterfeiters to call Detective Sgt. Dave Helderman at 735-7292. Also, detectives offer to visit businesses to educated employees on crime problems that face businesses during the holidays.

A PLACE TO RELAX

Jessica Skollingsberg kisses her 1-year-old son Steven as they stand in the newly remodeled cubicle dedicated to breastfeeding at the Women, Infants and Children program in the South Central Public Health District building. Skollingsberg says the privacy of the 'comfort room' is a helpful alternative to using the car or a public restroom.

Health district streamlines, improves access to WIC office

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Successful breastfeeding can be a matter of ambiance.

Ask Jessica Skollingsberg, a remodeled nursing room at the South Central Public Health District offices in Twin Falls is a blessing, she said, and will give her a place to stop and feed her 1-year-old son Steven when she's out and about.

"Nursing in your car is not easy or fun," Skollingsberg said Tuesday as she toured the room.

It's still a little small, and its furnishings — two chairs — may need to be expanded. But the room, part of an office reshuffling, gives mothers a quick and accessible place to nurse their babies when they visit the health district's Women, Infants and Children program offices.

"I think they will see a difference. I really do," WIC program manager Maggi Machala said of the three-month, $30,000 effort to remodel the offices.

The changes are relatively simple. Along with the nursing room, labeled the "comfort room," the office gained a dedicated classroom and extra office space for clinical assistants. But they added up to a consolidated office that no longer has to share space with other programs run by the district.

The popular WIC program — which provides nutrition, parenting and other assistance to mothers — served more than 10,000 people across the district this year, Machala said, and will likely continue to grow. Classes were formerly held in a divided conference room that often saw competition for its use, and the former breastfeeding room was located deeper within the building. The remodel solved those problems, she said, and provided more space for the desks of clinical assistants such as Sandra Poz.

State health districts report surplus of flu vaccines

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Officials at the Central District Health Department thought they had planned ahead.

The district — which includes Boise, Mountain Home and McCall — had 1,500 leftover doses of flu vaccine from the 2006-07 winter flu season, and ordered 2,000 less doses for this fall than the year before. But now, with the flu season set to peak in February, officials still have nearly 3,000 unused doses sitting around — far more than they expected by this time, spokesman Dave Foisch said.

The ability of retail stores to acquire flu vaccines more quickly combined with manufacturing and shipment problems in the last few years and what appears to be a light flu season, seems to

Doris E. Grimsman Todd Brown

Doris E. Grimsman Todd Brown, 88, of Boise, joined her Heavenly Father the afternoon of Dec. 3, 2007, at her home due to natural causes.

Doris was born to John Edgar and Ruth Murch Kessler on Aug. 26, 1919, at home 12 miles south of Caldwell in the Riverside community. Two years later her brother, Jack Kessler, was born. They attended the grade schools in the valley and rode a school bus to Caldwell High School. Doris graduated in 1937. These were the years of the Great Depression. Her father died during their school years.

Doris worked for a time at the Canyon County Treasurer's and Assessor's offices and then for several years at Caxton Printers in Caldwell. In July 1941, she met Kenneth Grimsman, who was stationed at Gowen Field in the U.S. Army Air Force. He was transferred to Everett, Wash., on Dec. 7, 1941, following the Pearl Harbor attack. Doris went to Portland, Ore., in March 1942 to visit her cousin and her brother, Jack, who was working there at a war job. She was persuaded to remain in Portland and worked in the office of Willanette Iron and Steel until Kenneth returned from military in Alaska.

They were married July 31, 1943. They traveled to Tampa, Fla., where Kenneth was transferred. Then to Oklahoma City for six weeks and then back to Tampa to another field.

The next move was to Gulfport, Miss., where their daughter, Ruth, was born. Six weeks later, Kenneth received his first order to go to Kinning, China, where he was a crew chief of a plane in the Flying Tigers division. Meanwhile, he had received his travel orders to Doris and baby Ruth back to Caldwell, where they stayed with her mother until the war was officially over and Kenneth returned to Boise.

They moved to the Twin Falls area, where they farmed for four years. During that time their son, Richard, was born. They moved back to the Caldwell area, where they farmed for a while and then Kenneth had a massive heart attack.

He survived that after spending several months in the VA Hospital in Boise. Eventually, he was able to take barber training and later began barbering in Burley.

Doris had spent five years working in a medical clinic in Caldwell two years after their son, Thomas, was born. The children continued their schooling in Burley, and Doris worked for more than six years for Dr. L.M. Kelly in Burley. Then she began working for the Bureau of Land Management in the Land District until she retired in 1983. Two years later on Sept. 28, 1985, Kenneth died of a sudden heart attack. They had been married more than 42 years.

About a year and a half later, Doris met and married Walter Todd of Twin Falls. They had a happy life until he died of cancer on May 12, 1993.

During these years, Doris belonged to the Caldwell Business and Professional Women's Club and the Burley BPW Club, holding offices in each and writing articles for the local newspapers and special events. She also belonged to the Soroptimist International Clubs of Burley and then the Red Rock and was very active in them. She was an active member of the Burley Christian Church and then the First Baptist Church in Twin Falls. She was in their church choirs about 35 years.

After retirement, she joined the Pink Lady Volunteers at the Cassia Memorial Hospital in Burley and later at the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center in Twin Falls. In April 1996, Doris moved to Heatherwood Retirement Community (formerly Canby) in Boise. While there, she wrote many articles for their monthly newsletter including the new resident profiles. She loved living there and having so many friends and activities. She was near her family members and relatives in the Treasure Valley.

On April 15, 2000, she married Dr. George E. Brown who was a retired cardiologist who had moved to Heatherwood. He had his medical practice for close to 30 years in Twin Falls. He died on March 23, 2004, with complications following a stroke.

Doris dearly loved George and his five children and their families, as well as Walter Todd's family of a daughter and four stepchildren and their families. Above all, she loved her children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren. She enjoyed hobbies which included fishing, gardening in a mixed league and the traveling she did. Some memorable trips included cruises to the New England states to France, Ireland, Canada, Nova Scotia, to Alaska, Canada on the St. Lawrence River; trips to upstate New York when her daughter and family lived there to New York City, Atlanta, Ga.; Washington, D.C.; Branson, Mo.; California; Washington, Oregon; Grants, N.M.; Florida; Hawaii; Arizona; across the United States and numerous trips to Kansas.

Doris is survived by her brother, Jack (Betty) Kessler of Caldwell; daughter, Ruth and son, Richard, both in the Canyon County area; their children, Wyatt) Boss of Nampa; Deanna (Rodney) Horn, (Rennie) War of Boise, Fred, (Janice) Warr of Grants, N.M.; son, Thomas (Susan) Grimsman of Jerome, and their children, August Grimsman, Sossity (Dion) Grubs of Twin Falls, Steven and Magner of Sedro Woolley, Wash., Linda Grimsman (Gary) Waters, JoDee (Brian) Adams of Henefer, Utah, Tommy (Irad) Hutchinson of Malta, Idaho; and their families, Kenneth (Deanna) Grimsman and Trent Grimsman of the Burley-Heyburn area, and all their families; stepchildren, Pat Todd, George Halcomb of Boise, Todd Brown, Dr. of Twin Falls, Kay (Gene) Herrmann of Cincinnati, Ohio, Judy Bartlett of Kuna, Chris (Kim) Brown of Boise, Craig (Nicole) Brown of Meridian, and their families. She also had numerous cousins, nephews, nieces, their families or other relatives and many cherished friends. She was preceded in death by her parents, John and Grimsman; and her husband.

A celebration of life for Doris will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 8, at the Red Rock Christian Church in Boise.

In lieu of flowers, donations in the memory of Doris can be made to the Red Rock Christian Church or the Idaho Youth Ranch. Arrangements are under the direction of Cremation Society of Idaho.

RUPERT — Connie (Colleen) Timmons passed away this life Tuesday, Dec. 4, 2007, at Rosetta Assisted Living after a lengthy bout of Alzheimer's disease. Although we miss her passing, we celebrate the life she lived. Connie was born June 29, 1928, in Rupert to Raymond H. and Florence Bell May. She was raised and attended school in Rupert. She married Raymond Lee Timmons in June of 1950. Three children were born to this union, Connie, bravely at the age of 29, returned to school and received her degree in education. She taught second and third grades and Chapter One reading in the Rupert area for 20 years.

Connie is survived by her daughters, Lila (Jesse) Vaughn of Rupert and Patty (Gary) Eckhardt of American Park, four grandsons, Corey and Dustin Vaughn and Jason and Michael Alexander, and five great-grandchildren. She is preceded in death by her husband, Ray in 1995; and son, Rex Lee in 1977. She is also survived by a sister, Helen (Paul) Beeler, and a brother, Harold (Janene) May. She lost two sisters, Marge (Warren) McMillon and Bertha (John) Wilson; and her parents.

The funeral will be at 11 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 8, at the Trinity Lutheran Church, 909 Eighth St. in Rupert, with Pastor David Poovey officiating. Burial will follow at the Herrett Cemetery. A viewing will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday, Dec. 7, at the Hansen Mortuary, Rupert Chapel, 710 Sixth St., and one hour prior to the service Saturday at the church.

CSI students host annual Christmas show, auction

Students in the College of Southern Idaho's Cabinetmaking and Welding programs have scheduled their 18th annual Christmas show and auction. "Woodstock" to be held in the Rick Allen Community Room at the Herrett Center for Arts and Science.

The public is encouraged to visit the display from 1 to 9 p.m. Friday in the Herrett Center's Rick Allen Community Room. Additional viewing will be from 1 to 2:30 p.m. Saturday. Bidding begins at 2:30 p.m. Saturday.

More than 20 large woodcut items will be displayed and sold, including an 1890 style covered wagon bench, a maple executive desk, mahogany and cedar hope chests, an oak mission style table and end tables, and a bed frame crafted from logs of mountain mahogany. Other items include gun cases, armoires, chests of drawers, apothecary, fire-place mantle, fruit bowls and cutting boards. Welding students will be displaying decorative art works and other metal cutouts including cast cranks and trailer hitch covers. Money raised from the event will help the students attend next spring's Homebuilders Show in Orlando, Fla.

CSI Culinary Arts students will be selling special treats and refreshments during the viewing and auction portion of the event. They will also have elaborate gingerbread houses for sale.

Group donates to Jubilee House

Representatives of the Gezeers, a fraternal group of members of Valley Christian Church of Twin Falls, met recently to donate materials and labor to the Jubilee House. The home will serve as an alternative to jail for offenders who might otherwise fall through the cracks. A donated vintage Twin Falls house built in the 1930s is being upgraded in a first class renovation in preparation for the housing of 12 young women. The home is completely funded by voluntary contributions and is scheduled to open January 2008. It will be open to the public for viewing from 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday. Anyone wishing to donate to Jubilee House may contact Vicki Adams, 734-9514 or P.O. Box 4684, Twin Falls, ID, 83303.

Reimer back in custody; attorney seeks venue change

By Kelly Jackson
For the Times-News

HAIKY—The woman accused of firing two shots at her ex-boyfriend this summer while he was showering at his house just south of Ketchum will likely stand trial in a court outside of Idaho's Fifth Judicial District.

Blaine County 14, Jay Davis arrested last Monday, Nov. 26, that Deborah A. Reimer, 54, was back in custody in Gooding County jail.

Reimer, who faces the charge of second-degree attempted murder for allegedly firing two shots at her ex-boyfriend Robert "Bob" Dreyer while he was showering in his Meadows

Circle home the morning of July 18, fled after being released on bail. She was recently found hiding out in a motel in Pray, Okla., and returned to Blaine County custody on a $1 million warrant for her arrest.

Attorney Keith Roark, Reimer's public defender, appeared without his client during a status hearing in Blaine County Fifth Judicial District Court on Tuesday.

Due to the public attention and media coverage surrounding the case,

Roark

Roark informed presiding Judge R. Barry Wood that he intends to file a motion for a change of venue for the upcoming trial. He added that because of coverage appearing in the Times-News, he also intends to seek a venue outside of Twin Falls and the Fifth Judicial District altogether.

Reimer's jury trial is currently scheduled to begin Jan. 15 but Roark argued that due to anticipated discovery from the prosecution and other factors, he believed this date would come too soon for him to adequately prepare for the trial.

Wood scheduled another court hearing for Dec. 15 to review the status of the case.

Rupert votes to refund utility deposits

By Rich Greene
For the Times-News

RUPERT—Residential electric customers may have an extra $200 in their pockets next year, though the money was theirs to begin with.

As Mayor Audrey Newirth said at an ordinance reading passed at Tuesday night's City Council meeting, "that's been a while coming."

The ordinance establishes a method for collecting and refunding deposits associated with municipal-provided utilities. Previously, customers were refunded the $200 deposit only after service ended, which usually meant when they moved out of the city.

Customers will now be refunded their deposits "upon completion of 12 consecutive months of good payment history with the city of Rupert" or upon termination of municipal utility services.

Also, new customers will be refunded their deposits "upon application for service, proof of one year of regular, on-time payments with their preceding utility provider." Residents questioned the lack of a return policy at the March 6 council meeting.

Five months later, at the Aug. 21 meeting, Councilman Jim Bowers asked the council to once again address the issue, adding that he hoped a new plan could be in place by the start of the next fiscal year, Oct. 1.

City officials would make no promise as to when or what method will be used to return the deposits. However, the ordinance states existing customers who qualify for refunded deposits as of Tuesday will receive their deposits within six months.

Customers will have the option of having their deposit returned in the form of a cash payment or applied as credit to their utility bills.

Both Bowers and Heyburn already have deposit return policies in place. Rupert has close to 3,000 deposits on file, with some dating as far back as 1936.

The collected deposits vary in amount depending on the year they were taken. The deposit amount was doubled from $100 to $200 in 2002.

Rich Greene writes for the South Idaho Press.

Award

is open to all young people. The program aims at the awards it offers, he said, shine on a resume, and can help increase someone's competitiveness for college scholarships.

Students set goals in four areas: physical fitness, volunteer public service, personal development and exploration.

ration. An adult adviser helps students achieve goals.

Hours spent on each of the goals determine the grade of certificate or medal a young person receives. A gold medal, the highest honor, requires 400 hours of volunteer public service, 200 hours of personal development, 200 hours of physical fitness, and a minimum of four consecutive overnights of an expedition or exploration activity.

The minimum age to earn an award is 14; goals must be achieved by 24. Registration can occur six months after someone's 13th birthday.

The Congressional Award was introduced in Idaho in 1993 by Sens. Larry Craig and Dick Klemmure. Typically 20 to 40 young people from Twin Falls receive certificates or medals, and Idaho has a strong participation rate in the program, Dobbs said.

The national gold medal ceremony will be held June 19 in Washington, D.C. And a ceremony for the other medal and certificate recipients from the area will be held in February, Dobbs said.

WIC

Poz, who teaches WIC classes with her fellow assistants, said occasional over-scheduling would leave her classes in the building's smaller, more conference room. And they didn't always know where to go to feed their children.

"A lot of the moms were uncomfortable having to breastfeed in front of us," Poz said.

And WIC staff want them to nurse their children, Machala said. The practice comes with a host of health benefits, she said, including lower rates of obesity and Sudden Infant Death Syndrome and better teeth.

Once the rooms are fully furnished, an incomplete, she plans to open the computer rooms doors to everyone from CSI faculty and students to health district employees, many of whom already take advantage of the service.

"We've had at least two to three people every day," Machala said.

And they could have more. The program is already the second-largest in the state, she said, and barring financial cuts, is likely to grow even more given the large number of potential clients.

"We're not even meeting the full need."

prison for each of 3,331 male prisoners in jail because of meth.

And she focused on what she described as the incredible support the program has received from all areas of the state — the Magic Valley chief among them, she said. Some of the money raised, she emphasized, came from small donations and sales of "Not Even One" wristbands — the slogan also used for the Montana campaign. And Twin Falls Dr. David McCluskey, she said after her presentation, plans to seek $1 million from the state's Millennium Endowment Fund, money from its tobacco settlement, to largely finish off the fundraising for the year.

Montana's project moved the state from fifth in the nation in terms of methamphetamine trafficking and use to 39th in one year, Idaho took over that fifth-place ranking, Field said, and she hopes this project can accomplish the same thing.

Any long-term benefits from the campaign will require even more funds in the future. But Field said she thinks fundraising will become even easier once people see what the ads can do.

"We're going to be at it full-time," she said.

Her office has accomplished more than just fundraising, Field said. Idaho is now the only state with a set tool for assessing the level of drug use among its citizens, she said. And she's working to change state Medicaid rules so the service pays for drug treatment for those eligible.

Her work received kudos from at least a couple of those assembled. Wednesday evening, Twin Falls City Councilman David E. Johnson thanked Field for her work, and Regional Health and Welfare director John Hathaway applauded the establishment of an inter-agency council that reviews and approves all uses for anti-drug funding among the eight state agencies that receive it. "It's an opportunity to bring everybody into a coordinated effort," Hathaway said.

anything, but we're just worried: are people getting it or not?" Shanahan said Wednesday.

And as far as officials can tell, people are. Bruce Fox, spokesman for the South Central Public Health District, said people seem to be relying more on private companies such as grocery and big-box stores where they can get a shot while shopping.

Such stores, especially large chains, often get vaccine shipments much earlier than public agencies.

And shipments are plentiful this year: The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention estimated in November that a record 132 million doses of vaccine could be produced by the end of the flu season.

"Retail chains have just got so much buying power and clout that they can go to the manufacturers and come out with a better deal than we can,"

can't be used after this flu season, Fotsch said.

Some Idahoans may not have gotten the shots because the flu season has started out light.

But shipping delays that affect the health districts in recent years could have sent more people to private stores as well, Fotsch said. If the trend continues and his district can't use up the flu vaccine, it may have to buy even smaller amounts in the future.

"That kind of moves the whole process into the private sector, and maybe that's where it belongs," Fotsch said. "We have to be good stewards of the public's money."

That's left some health districts reexamining their roles.

Both the Twin Falls- and Boise-based districts advertise the vaccines heavily. Fotsch said his district sent nurses with the vaccines on Meals on Wheels stops. South Central Public Health District has stayed fairly on schedule, Fox said, though vaccinations slowed after Thanksgiving.

But Central District Health is approaching refugee groups in its area in an effort to use up the vaccine, which

Third round at Supreme Court for Guantanamo detainees

By Mark Sherman
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court struggled Wednesday over how much justice is enough for foreign terrorism suspects held at Guantanamo Bay, with the Bush administration resisting pleas for prompt court hearings.

Even if the court rules quickly and decisively for the detainees, the legal fight could still be around when a new president takes office in 13 months.

Most questions from the justices seemed to accept that the 305 men held at the U.S. naval base in Cuba, many for nearly six years, have some rights to challenge their detention.

Instead, the key question that emerged Wednesday was whether the limited court review created by the Bush administration and Congress in response to earlier Supreme Court rulings for the detainees is good enough.

The court's resolution of this matter, expected in a decision this spring, could determine whether the detainees receive prompt freedom for some or face many more months, even years, of legal proceedings and imprisonment. Justice Stephen Breyer tried to capture—the inadequacy of the review process when he spoke of a detainee who, after six years in jail, may want to argue that the Constitution says he must be charged or released. "I don't see anything," Breyer said, "that permits us to make that argument. So I'm asking you: Where can you make that argument?"

Solicitor General Paul Clement, the Bush administration's top Supreme Court lawyer, replied: "I'm not sure that he could make that argument."

The administration opened the detention facility at Guantanamo Bay shortly after the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks to hold enemy combatants, people suspected of ties to al-Qaida or the Taliban.

The court has twice ruled that people held there without charges can go into civilian courts to seek their freedom. Each time, the administration and Congress, then controlled by Republicans, has changed the law to try to close the courthouse doors to the detainees.

Two dozen protesters, some in prison-like orange jumpsuits, chanted and waved signs outside the court. "Restore habeas corpus!" they chanted, referring to the right to court review of the legality of detention.

Clement, in his written argument, said foreigners captured and held outside the United States "have no constitutional rights to petition our courts for a writ of habeas corpus."

Major U.S. airports offer flu shots to busy travelers at the gate; 'The convenience is great'

By Daniel Yee
Associated Press writer

ATLANTA — After taking off their shoes, emptying their pockets and passing through the security checkpoint, travelers at some major U.S. airports can now roll up a sleeve and get a flu shot.

"The convenience is great," Danny Manzoni, a busy, 53-year-old restaurant consultant, said after getting vaccinated Tuesday at a kiosk in front of an AirTrain gate at Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport. He said he had wanted to get a flu shot for three months but never had the time.

For years, some airports have been offering flu shots to airline passengers, before they cleared security. But many travelers were too afraid of missing their flights to stop.

So this year, airports in such cities as Atlanta, Chicago, Denver, Newark, N.J., and San Francisco are setting up "airside" health stations close to the gates, past the security checkpoints.

The shots typically take a few minutes and cost $15 to $35. So far, the airports in the five major cities have given out about 15,000 shots this season.

"It's helpful being on the airside because people don't know how long it's going to take getting through security so they don't want to take a risk of waiting in a medical clinic or being stuck in security and not making their plane," said Maureen Zampella, director of nursing and general operations manager of a service that is offering flu shots at the Newark airport. The vaccinations are seen as particularly convenient for those who travel frequently on business.

"They don't have time to go to the physician," said Dr. Dominic Mack, chief medical officer of the service offering shots in Atlanta. Airline passengers receiving the shots won't be protected right away. It takes about two weeks for a shot to offer full protection.

Getting vaccinated now offers plenty of time for the shot to take full effect before the peak flu season begins, typically after December.

Airport health officials said eventually they may offer other vaccinations, too, as well as cholesterol tests and screening for high blood pressure. "We're finding that where people are," said Michelle Smith, spokeswoman for Denver Health, which operates a clinic at the Denver airport.

Last year, Chicago's O'Hare Airport dispensed about 5,000 flu shots to passengers and employees from kiosks next to gates.

"It went over great," and the idea was expanded this year to Chicago's Midway, said Dr. John Zautke, medical director for the University of Illinois Medical Center at O'Hare. So far, O'Hare and Midway have vaccinated a total of about 9,500 people this year.

"Business travelers love it," Zautke said. "They are just thankful."

DEAR ABBY: As chairman of my high school reunion committee, I have been successful on a couple of occasions in finding old yearbooks on eBay. There's a large selection there. If she can't find them under the "yearbook" category, she should look under "annuals."

—KEN IN KANAB, UTAH

DEAR ABBY: For high school annuals, contact your local library. Old annuals are occasionally donated and sold at book sales by the Friends of the Library. The staff will alert whoever sorts donations to keep an eye out and let you know if the one you're looking for comes in.

—SONIA MURRAY, PRESIDENT, FRIENDS OF BILOXI LIBRARIES

DEAR ABBY: Many historical societies (and public libraries) keep documents such as city directories and yearbooks in an archive. While they normally aren't available for checking out, organizations—having reading rooms—where you can peruse the materials, and even take

DEAR ABBY: eBay or Craigslist? My brother found not only old yearbooks from his era, but class rings as well.

—PATI IN FREMONT, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: My old high school is now offering yearbooks on CDs, to be viewed in a slide show format. It was a preservation project that's now doing double duty by giving a lot of pleasure to former students whose yearbooks have disappeared for a variety of reasons. He'll should check to see if her alumni association is doing something similar.

—E.L.H. IN LAS VEGAS

DEAR ABBY: Most teachers who served as yearbook advisers kept a store of old yearbooks. I have made many an older grad happy who had lost one to fire or flood. Belle should contact the school. She might get lucky. (There might even be an extra in the school library.)

—BILL K., OAKLAND, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter from Belle K. in Cadillac, Mich. (Oct. 17), who had only the yearbook from her senior year... in high school... and would like to purchase yearbooks from the other three. She asked if there was some way to get her hands on them.

I have a similar problem. I grew up in one Oklahoma town and moved to another. 7 1/2 hours away, the summer between my junior and senior years, I have lost the yearbook from my sophomore year... the last in which a dear friend's photo appeared. She was killed in a car accident in January of our sophomore year. In addition to her class picture, one of her poems is featured in that yearbook.

It would mean the world to me to have that memento back, because the yearbook would be 34 years old. It's unlikely the school has any left. Can you suggest other options for digging those precious memories out of the ashes of time?

—MISSING THE MEMORIES IN OKLAHOMA DEAR MISSING: I don't have to. After Belle's letter and many caring readers offered wonderful suggestions. A sample:

DEAR ABBY: Belle should put an ad in the paper where her old high school is located. That's what I did, and I got a response right away. The wife of a former school counselor called and said she had sever-

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, Dec. 6, the 340th day of 2007. There are 25 days left in the year.

Today's highlight:

Fifty years ago, on Dec. 6, 1957, America's first attempt at putting a satellite into orbit failed as Vanguard TV3 rose only about four feet off the ground before crashing back down and exploding.

On this date:

- In 1790, Congress moved to Philadelphia from New York.
In 1889, Jefferson Davis, the first and only president of the Confederate States of America, died in New Orleans.
In 1907, the worst mining disaster in U.S. history occurred as 362 men and boys died in a coal mine explosion in Monongah, W.Va.
In 1917, some 2,000 people died when an explosives-laden French cargo ship collided with a Norwegian vessel at the harbor in Halifax, Nova Scotia, setting off a blast that devastated the city.
In 1921, British and Irish representatives signed a treaty in London providing for creation of an Irish Free State a year later on the same date.
In 1947, Everglades National Park in Florida was dedicated by President Truman.
In 1957, AFL-CIO members voted to expel the International Brotherhood of Teamsters. (The Teamsters were readmitted in 1987, but disaffiliated themselves from the AFL-CIO in 2005.)
In 1973, House Minority Leader Gerald R. Ford was sworn in as vice president, succeeding Spiro T. Agnew.
In 1982, 11 soldiers and six civilians were killed when an Irish National Liberation Army bomb exploded at a pub in Ballykelly, Northern Ireland.
In 1989, 14 women were shot to death at the University of Montreal's school of engineering by a man who then took his own life.
Ten years ago: At least 69 people were killed when a Russian military cargo plane crashed in the Siberian city of Irkutsk seconds after takeoff.

Five years ago: President Bush pushed Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill and economic adviser Larry Lindsey from their jobs in a Cabinet shake-up. Actress Winona Ryder was sentenced to community service as part of a probationary term for stealing more than $5,500 worth of merchandise from a Saks Fifth Avenue store in Beverly Hills, Calif. Ten Palestinians, including two U.N. employees, were killed when Israeli forces poured into a Gaza Strip refugee camp, searching for a fugitive militant. Anti-war activist Philip "Berrigan" Dietrich in Baltimore at age 79.

One year ago: The bipartisan Iraq Study Group concluded that President Bush's war policies had failed in almost every regard, and said the situation in Iraq was "grave and deteriorating." The Senate voted to confirm Robert Gates as a defense secretary. Searchers found the body of San Francisco resident James Kim in the Oregon mountains, two days after his wife and two daughters were rescued from their car (Kim had set out on foot to find help for his family).

With no more mice, famous eatery reopens

NEW YORK (AP) — The home of the $25,000 dessert is back in business, after health officials concluded it no longer home to mice and cockroaches. Serendipity 3, a popular tourist destination on Manhattan's East Side, was allowed to reopen Tuesday, about three weeks after the restaurant was shuttered because of rodent infestation. The famous sweet shop was closed Nov. 14 after it failed two inspections in a month. Inspectors spotted mouse droppings, fruit flies, house flies and more than 100 live cockroaches. City Health Department spokeswoman Jessica Caporretti said the restaurant had failed an inspection on Friday after mouse droppings were spotted. But it passed a followup inspection Monday night.

She said Wednesday that the agency will go back within 30 days for another inspection. Serendipity's delectable menu items sometimes have patrons standing in line for hours to get inside. Its $25,000 Frozzen Haute Chocolate — featuring top-grade cocoa, edible gold and shards of the luxury truffle — was declared the most expensive dessert by Guinness World Records.

Another southeast Idaho field infected with microscopic potato pest

Fields located in Bingham, Bonneville and Jefferson counties

By Keith Ridler
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Another field in southeastern Idaho is infected with a microscopic wormlike pest that attacks potato plants. The same pest closed some foreign markets to U.S. potato growers last year.

The eighth Idaho field since 2006 confirmed to have the potato cyst nematode is adjacent to two others already infected, officials said.

This latest "discovery" is not expected to have any ramifications for U.S. growers.

"It won't make a difference in terms of trade situations with other countries," said Larry Hawkins, a spokesman for the U.S. Department of Agriculture based in Sacramento, Calif. "We had anticipated that when we did our intensified sampling we might find some fields" with the nematodes.

He said extensive testing of Idaho fields since the initial discovery of the nematodes and restrictions on infected fields and other fields thought to be at risk allayed concerns of countries that import U.S. potatoes.

"We've been very successful in working with our foreign trading partners," Hawkins said. "They looked at the regulations that we had in place and felt they were sufficient to protect them."

The department's Nematology Laboratory in Beltsville, Md., confirmed the nematode in the 1.3-acre field through DNA testing last week. They were found in one of 125 fields that the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service deemed "associated" with the seven fields previously found to be infected.

The associated fields have some connection with the infected fields either through the same owner, the same machinery being used, or seeds from the same source, Hawkins said.

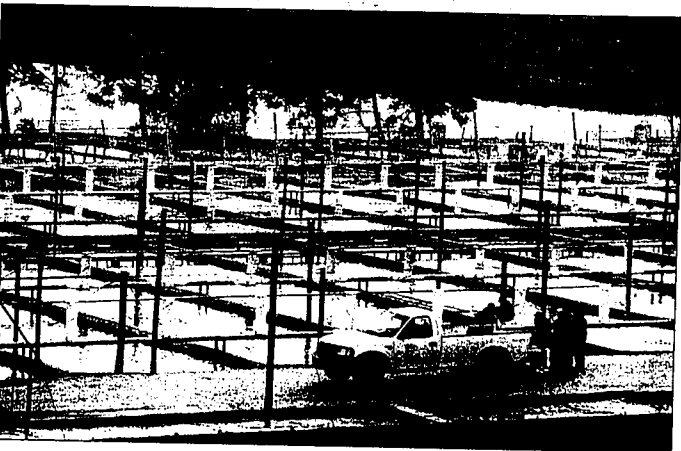

After the nematodes were first discovered last year, Japan banned all fresh U.S. potato imports, and Canada and Mexico banned all fresh potato imports from Idaho.

Earlier this year, Canada and Mexico lifted their bans. Japan still bans fresh potatoes from Idaho, but accepts them from other U.S. states, Hawkins said.

The worms feed at the roots of potato plants and can reduce crop production by 80 percent. Officials say the pest is not harmful to humans and doesn't have any effect on the potatoes themselves.

The eight infected fields total about 1,100 acres, Idaho Mike Cooper, deputy administrator at the Idaho Department of Agriculture,

Economic base of south-central Idaho in hands of water officials

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

The fate of south-central Idaho's agricultural economy is in the hands of the former Chief Justice of Idaho Gerald F. Schroeder, whose ruling will resolve a bitter debate over water rights.

Predicting how that resolution due early next year will impact the region's economy is difficult. There has never been an independent study of how altering water management would impact the local economy, and the parties in the water fight disagree dramatically on who would have to pay, and how big the bill might be.

Nowhere is the debate more apparent than in Buhl where Clear Springs Foods, the largest trout farm in North America, is fighting to maintain its senior water rights.

Clear Springs relies on its senior rights to provide enough spring water to raise more than 20 million pounds of trout annually. However, the business says it has been forced to cut production due to a water shortage.

Since 2002, the employee-owned company has lost more than $20 million in revenues at two of its trout farms near Buhl.

But Randy McMillan, vice-president of Clear Springs Foods, knows that his business concerns are only part of the story. The other party in the lawsuit, farmers who pump ground water, would also be hurt by a ruling that curtails their irrigation.

Both parties blame the current water crisis in large part on poor state management in the past, and both realize that Schroeder's decision could force one or both to reduce water consumption — at a significant financial cost — to preserve the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer.

That's where the agreement ends. Pampers estimate that annual revenue losses to farms would be between $1,000 to $1,200 per acre for the region's 591 junior water-rights holders — likely exceeding $20 million each year.

Financial institutions such as Buhl-based Farmers National Bank, which have portfolios that include loans to most of south-central Idaho agribusiness, say their losses could be in the hundreds of millions more due to potential loan delinquencies.

But precise estimates are impossible to calculate because of all the variables. Some farmers, for example, may be able to switch to less water-intensive land uses that would mitigate the economic damage.

But for Clear Springs, the options are far more limited.

"We need the (spring) water for its purity and its constant flow and temperature," McMillan said.

One alternative sometimes discussed would be re-use of water by filtering and pumping back into fish tanks, but McMillan said his fish cannot make it in recycled water.

"Nowhere else in the world does anyone raise trout using pump-back aquaculture — it simply doesn't work."

He said the wrong temperature or an impurity could kill an entire crop of Rainbow Trout.

With $50 million in annual revenues and more than 400 employees with full benefits, the loss of the company and its jobs would take years to overcome.

Clear Springs doesn't rely only on local fish, however. The company imports 17 percent of its fish from South America to compensate for the loss in farm production, and might continue to process imported fish here.

But the question remains: Who should be forced to curtail their water consumption, and what will the economic impact be on south-central Idaho?

"It's a big issue because if you shut down the pumpers, there will be large number of communities affected by it," said Lynn Tominaga, head of the Idaho Ground Water Appropriators. "And we just don't see where the economic losses to (surface-water users) are coming from — is it because of pumper or is it because of the drought we have had for five or six years."

Bush mortgage plan will freeze certain subprime interest rates for 5 years

By Martin Crutinger
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration has hammered out an agreement to freeze interest rates for certain subprime mortgages for five years to combat a soaring tide of foreclosures, congressional aides said Wednesday.

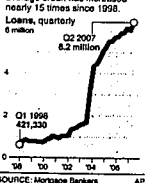

The aides, who spoke on condition of anonymity because the details have not yet been released, said the five-year moratorium represented a compromise between desires by banking regulators for a longer time frame of up to seven years and mortgage industry arguments that the freeze should last only one or two years.

Another person familiar with the matter said the rate-freeze plan would apply to borrowers with loans made at the start of 2005 through July 30 of this year with rates that are scheduled to rise between Jan. 1, 2008, and July 31, 2010.

The administration said President Bush will speak on Going for the market Shakira in

Real estate offices actively pursue Latino buyers

Shakira in pause mode

By Pat Marcantonio
Times-News writer

Alex Castaneda's office is warm with color and culture. Maroon and stone-hued painted walls. Aztec carvings on his shelf, along with a family photo. A Diego Rivera print.

Castaneda hopes that Latinos will feel welcome there. He is heading a new Hispanic division of Prudential Idaho Homes & Properties in Twin Falls. While other real estate offices have bilingual personnel, his office, which includes four bilingual staff members, is the first of its kind in the state, he said. He wanted a place where people, especially Latinos, can feel some ownership, where they can be greeted in Spanish if that is their language of choice. He saw it as a place to serve people who are underserved.

"We're excited about this venture," said Castaneda, an associate broker.

Spanish-speaking staff at real estate offices is not unique, but if that person is busy, then there is someone else to help the client, he said. "We found out the hard way."

Of the four people working there, two have real estate licenses, one is preparing to test and another is studying for a license.

While it is called the bilingual division, the services are for everyone, in addition to catering to Latino clients, he said.

"We want to make sure when anyone comes into the office they are greeted with a smiling face," Castaneda said. "We're not excluding; we're just targeting this group to help and bridge the gap, if you will."

Potential office owner Cindy Collins is thrilled with the new division.

"We think that is something really lacking in our community," she said.

Prudential Idaho Homes & Properties Associate Broker Alex Castaneda stands outside of his office in Twin Falls. Castaneda leads the Hispanic Division of the organization out of their new office along Falls Avenue East.

Buying power

Castaneda reports that about 80 percent of his clients are Latinos. About 10 percent are new buyers in the area and 70 percent are first-time homebuyers. And the number of Latinos buying homes is increasing. That may be surprising because they are the fastest growing and largest minority, not only in the state, but nation.

The buying power of Latinos in Idaho is estimated at almost $1.8 billion in 2005, accounting for almost 5 percent of the total buying power in the state, according to a report, Hispanic Buying Power in Idaho, released by the Idaho Commission on Hispanic Affairs. That was a 350 percent increase from 1990. By comparison, the buying power for all Idaho residents increased less than half that — 158 percent — in the same period. Buying power was defined as the total personal income of residents available after taxes for spending on everything from food, clothing and housing to vacations.

The Selig Center, which prepared the report, said that Latino households nationally spend 77 percent of their income on the essentials, while non-Latino households spend an average of 68 percent. About 85 percent of Latino households nationally go to housing, according to the report; compared with 32 percent of non-Latino households.

Reaching out to the Latino market

For about five years, Lezami Real Estate Co. has been promoting its bilingual services to Spanish-speaking people, said owner Sid Lezami.

Check out the HUD home buying Spanish site at <http://espanol.hud.gov/buying/index.cfm?lang=es>

Some Latinos hoping to buy homes may find obstacles standing in the way.

That may include not only language differences, but other things such as lack of credit needed to get into a home, said Ana Hernandez, special team media coordinator with U.S. Housing and Urban Development.

HUD, which administers loan programs, doesn't offer loans especially for Latinos, but hopes to help them become homebuyers through a Spanish-language Web site that provides tips on home buying, basic Q and A's on home buying, and counseling. There's even an interactive form to help families determine how much of a home they can afford.

Education is the key. "What we are promoting is reading the fine print," Hernandez said.

While home buying can be complicated and a bit scary for anyone, home buying provides stability for families in their community, she added.

"We want to make sure when anyone comes into the office, they are greeted with a smiling face."

Alex Castaneda, Hispanic division of Prudential Idaho Homes & Properties head

"The bilingual market is a good market. It is a good bunch of people who have a need of a home and we're trying to cater to that," he said.

In the past, language had been a barrier, but no more. There is even paperwork in Spanish, Lezami said. "I think there needs to be more of that."

In his 16 years in business, the Latino market has grown and continues to grow. His message to potential buyers goes to housing, according to the report; compared with 32 percent of non-Latino households.

"I think a lot of people didn't think they could buy. There is a lot of opportunities to buy," he said.

And Spanish is not the only language spoken at the Lezami office. It also has staff who speaks Bosnian and Russian. Scott Cook learned Spanish as a Mormon missionary in Venezuela and puts his skills to use as a real estate agent with the Western Real Estate Group in Jerome, where two other agents are bilingual.

Western has promoted its bilingual services in Spanish-language publications, on signs and elsewhere and those efforts have drawn clients.

"There is a huge need and a lot of Hispanics that are home buying," Cook said. Many of his clients are local and moving up to bigger homes.

Some people just feel more comfortable doing business in Spanish and they can help, he added.

Jolene Smith, the broker-owner of Select Realty in Burley, believes the Latino market is so important that she is going to learn Spanish, and offer more services in Spanish on her business' Web site.

"Because it is a big market,

I would be foolish not to do that," she said.

Rewarding work

Castaneda is very involved in the community, serving on several boards, including Region IV Development, Hispanic Heritage Fiesta and Magic Valley Rehabilitation Services, the latter of which he is president.

Now in his seventh year in real estate, he says is a big advocate of making sure that not only Latino clients, but everyone has information about obtaining a good loan. The Idaho Financing and Finance Association recently honored him with an award, citing his awareness about the importance of education and working closely with local lenders to help facilitate the process for first-time homebuyers.

"It's really self-fulfilling, very rewarding," he said.

Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Shakira was sick of being a celebrity. Colombia's successful singer-songwriter had just come off her "Oral Fixation" tour earlier this year, taking her to 140 cities on five continents to perform for 2.5 million fans. But even stardom can be a drag.

So she put away her sequined gowns and hip-hugging pants, donned jeans and sneakers, tucked her famous shock of dyed hair under a cap and went undercover as a summer student at the University of California, Los Angeles. She enrolled in a history of Western civilization course under her middle and last names, Isabel Moharak, telling classmates she was just visiting from Colombia.

"Oh, I was such a respite for me," Shakira said. "I felt that I needed to put a brake on everything, to escape from the celebrity life and reclaim a normal life for a while. It was very healthy for me."

Her decompression from rock star to common coed was not just therapeutic, it coincided with the creative burst she required to compose new songs for the film "Love in the Time of Cholera," which opened Friday. This is the first time she has written music for a movie, a challenge she assumed in honor of her compatriot, mentor and "dear friend," Gabriel Garcia Marquez, the Nobel laureate whose novel of love and irrational devotion is the basis for the movie.

The work marks a radical departure for Shakira, from electrified pop/rock to gentle, Latin American folk styles. The songs — a bolero and a traditional Andean tune — are almost period pieces, tailored to the film's geesed setting in Cartagena circa 1900.

Shakira is arguably the most successful bicultural star Latin America has produced and she's been adept at straddling English- and Spanish-speaking worlds with her seductive pop fusion that draws on her Middle Eastern heritage. But those songs required her to tap into deep cultural roots, to reconnect with the music she was raised on in Barranquilla, music that still makes her cry and that instantly touches her soul, like a memory.

"It was refreshing, because it allowed me to leave the pop universe for a moment and not think about the Top 10 on the radio, and not think about..." She pauses. "And simply not think. To just let the sensibility flow from these stories, let those Garcia Marquez metaphors connect with the deepest part of me and allow the music to be born from all of that."

She is speaking in Spanish in the equally genteel setting of a pain restaurant at the Bel Air Hotel. She looks relaxed and casual, wearing a tank top and jeans, her hair loose and a bit disheveled, showing dark roots under a dyed, reddish brown crown. She accentuates the color contrast by fidgeting with a long, naturally dark strand that she pulls down along her neck and twists at her shoulder.

Without much make up, she looks more like that average girl in history class than a salubrious superstar. Now 30, she appears somehow younger than when I met her in 2001 on the eve of releasing her first English-language album, "Laundry Service," a smash that launched her global career. At that time, everything about her seemed more calculated — her appearance, her poses, her wardrobe, her answers. Today, Shakira doesn't have much more to prove, so she can let her hair down, somewhat. When her handler signaled that time was up after only 20 minutes, she whispered conspiratorially with a coquettish chuckle, "We'll just steal a few more minutes. Then she went on to talk for an hour."

Shakira, who writes her own songs in Spanish and English, speaks at times as if she's writing out sentences in long hair, like the character of Florentina Ariza (Javier Bardem) writing his first love letter to the woman for whom he would wait a half-century. Fermina Uribbe (Giovanna Mezzogiorno). It's as if she has an automatic editor in her brain, scanning for the right words, selecting, deleting selected again.

When she talks about Colombia, she taps into a florid Castilian that flows in long passages, like the novel, which she calls "one of the last great love stories of our time." The film's cool reviews seem beside the point in light of her passion for it as a vehicle to provide a positive image of her country, one not of guerrillas and drug lords but of "starry nights and long silences by the sea." That is the Colombia I wanted to share with the world, for that I felt it was a privilege to be involved in this project.

Garcia Marquez himself still makes her cry and that instantly touches her soul, like a memory. "It was refreshing, because it allowed me to leave the pop universe for a moment and not think about the Top 10 on the radio, and not think about..." She pauses. "And simply not think. To just let the sensibility flow from these stories, let those Garcia Marquez metaphors connect with the deepest part of me and allow the music to be born from all of that."

CASE NO. CV-07-3717 ANOTHER SUMMONS

STATEWIDE COLLECTIONS, INC., Plaintiff, vs. MICHAEL D EASLEY JR HEATHER EASLEY AKA POVALANSKI, spouse Defendant.

NOTICE: YOU HAVE BEEN SEED BY THE ABOVE NAMED PLAINTIFF. THE COURT MAY ENTER JUDGMENT AGAINST YOU WITHOUT FURTHER NOTICE UNLESS YOU RESPOND WITHIN 20 DAYS. READ THE INFORMATION BELOW. TO: MICHAEL D EASLEY JR AND HEATHER EASLEY AKA POVALANSKI

You are hereby notified that in order to defend this lawsuit, an appropriate written response must be filed with the above designated court within 20 days after service of Summons to you. If you fail to respond, the court may enter judgment against you as demanded by the Plaintiff in the Complaint.

A copy of the Complaint is served with this Summons. If you wish to seek the advice or representation of an attorney in this matter, you should do so promptly so that your written response, if any, may be filed in time and other legal rights protected.

An appropriate written response requires compliance with Rule 10(a)(1) and other Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure and shall also include: 1. The title number of this case. 2. If your response is an answer to the Complaint. It must contain admissions or denials of the separate allegations of the Complaint, and other defenses you may claim. 3. Your signature, mailing address, and telephone number, or the signature, mailing address and telephone number of your attorney. 4. Proof of mailing or delivery of a copy of your response to Plaintiff's attorney, as designated above.

To determine whether you must pay a filing fee with your response, contact the clerk of the above named court. DATED this 5th day of November 2007. K. GLASCOCK, Clerk By Deputy, Magistrate Court

Fill in the grid so that every row, every column, and every 3x3 box contains the digits 1 through 9. That's all there is to it. There's no math involved. The grid has numbers, but nothing has to add up to anything else. You solve the puzzle with reasoning and logic. Find the answers for todays puzzle on page E-10.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

"I'd let my golden chances pass me by." - Oscar Hammerstein II

At the Desyptees Club the negative double has started to make inroads over the old-fashioned penalty double. However, if you could see what some of the players overall on you might agree that keeping the penalty double makes better sense.

Handwritten bridge scores for North, West, and East players.

Both sides needed to establish their long suits, each side having to allow their opponents in twice during the process. West led the club nine, and when East inserted the queen, South held off. Declarer won the club 10 continuation with the jack and immediately set about the diamond suit.

See the difference if East allows West's club nine to hold. South must win with the jack, or he never gets his second club trick. Now when he plays a diamond, West must ignore the mantra "second hand low" and rise with the ace to return his second club. Whether declarer wins this round or the next, East still has the diamond king as an entry to run the established clubs.

Worse still, East later realized that at the end of trick one he could still have beaten the hand on a heart shift.

See Nov. 29 on the Twin Falls campus.

Sure, I could have bought more with my money at a local merchant. But I suspect I'll get plentiful satisfaction from my handmade pottery purchases: a covered casserole and a not-quite-round dish of vibrant red, and a blue cream set with an unusual delicacy of line. No regrets.

Monday, I found two great things. Pandora's, which may be the new restaurant, and the Gene Loranger Trio, which offered ideal music for dining. Listen closely, and it's well played and interesting; don't, and it's great conversation background. One quibble: With four musicians, this wasn't a trio.

A sweet Suite

'The Nutcracker' comes to Twin Falls

BY ARIEL HANSEN
Times-News writer

A light dusting of snow glistened in early-morning sun as the baby mice arrived in the anteroom, skittering out of their warm, oversized coats and into tiny ballet slippers. From the studio next door, the strident strains of Tchaikovsky's "The Nutcracker" burst from speakers, causing squeals from the girls as they joined their instructor for rehearsal on Dec. 1 at Julie's Jazzworks in Twin Falls.

The Ballet Idaho production of "The Nutcracker," including more than 40 young local dancers, is for one performance only.

When: 7:30 p.m. Wednesday
Where: The College of Southern Idaho Fine Arts auditorium
Tickets: $18 for adults and $12 for children. They can be purchased at the CSI Fine Arts box office from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, online at tickets.csi.edu or by calling 732-9286.

Hallie: A separate performance, with children from the Wood River Valley, is scheduled for 7 p.m. Tuesday. See the story on this page for more information about that performance.

The little dancers are among about 40 local children participating in Wednesday's Ballet Idaho performance of "The Nutcracker," which is perhaps the most famous Christmas ballet. It has been performed for more than 100 years, with companies across the U.S. and across the world, telling the story of Clara, her stern uncle Drosselmeyer, an evil mouse king and the brought-to-life Nutcracker prince who whisks Clara into the fantastic land of the Sugar Plum Fairy.

Although the lead parts in Ballet Idaho's performances across the state are played by the company's professional dancers, each performance incorporates young local dancers, from the tiny baby mice to the teenage party guests.

"I really like dancing with all the professional dancers," said Stephanie Brunelle, 14, who has been dancing for nine years. "When you see the professionals, you say, 'I want to be like you.'"

Stephanie has played all the youth parts over the past five years, including baby mouse, angel, party guest and soldier. With other accomplished dancers, she was supposed to play a flower this year, but the part was cut from the

Ballet Idaho plans stop in Sun Valley

For the Times-News

Don't think you can't make "The Nutcracker" part of your holidays this year just because Sun Valley Ballet School is performing it this year.

If your holiday season isn't complete without the Sugar Plum Fairy, you can catch her in action at 7 p.m. Tuesday at The Community Campus Theatre.

Twenty-five professional dancers from the Boise-based Ballet Idaho will perform the beloved children's classic in a performance sponsored by the College of Southern Idaho Blaine County Center and Hallie Rotary.

"We're very excited about it. It will be a very professional presentation. Yet, at the same time, it will have many local children—5-year-olds through teenagers," said Jenny Emery Davidson, who heads up the local CSI center.

Cantata at the Festival of Trees

GOODING — Rick Strickland did not plan to be a conductor, or even a professional musician. He went through the Gooding school system and was in the marching band, jazz band and choruses. But, to a great degree, "It just happened," Strickland said. Considering all that Strickland has accomplished musically and how much practice is involved, that seems a modest statement.

Among his achievements is starting a popular Christmas tradition in Gooding, a cantata that involves vocalists and instrumentalists from across the region. This year, the cantata will be performed the weekend of Dec. 14.

For Strickland, the path to the cantata hasn't been direct.

After high school, he went to college for "a couple of years."

Then he dropped out of college and played music professionally in the northwestern states and other areas. Along the way, he added electric guitar to the list of instruments he plays.

"Then I went back to Idaho and started college again as a freshman at the University of Idaho," Strickland said. "Some folks said I should play cello. So, I took up cello in Moscow."

After receiving his degree, Strickland came back to southern Idaho and taught school and managed the family farm. He played cello in the Magic Valley

A special performance—with choral only, will be given at 3 p.m. Sunday at the Gooding County Memorial Hospital Foundation's Festival of Trees, in the Round Building on the Idaho School for the Deaf and the Blind campus in Gooding.

Now Strickland has a real estate business and is involved in music as the Gooding Methodist Church Choir director. He also is first chair cellist with the Magic Valley Symphony Orchestra.

community would like to participate.

Now the cantata chorale members are from many area churches, including people from the community who just love to sing.

In recent years a community orchestra has been added. According to Strickland, this year's concert will have more than 50 singers and will have a 22-person orchestra.

soloists this year are:

- Vance McEhan
 - Debbie Accomando (alternate)
 - Jenni Andrus
 - Jessica McLean (alternate)
 - Nancy Kestl
 - Sharon Strickland and Duke Morton will serve as narrators.
- This year's concert features "Ceremony of Candles," by Joseph M. Martin, music Strickland said he was led to.
- "I played the CD of 'Ceremony of Candles' in my car just by accident and I loved it," Strickland said. "I didn't even know how it got there. Just played it randomly."

"I've really been blessed to have so many people to help so that we can pull this off," Strickland said.

'Little Mermaid' swims into Sun Valley

BY KAREN BOSSICK
For the Times-News

Put on your tutus. We're going under the sea for the Sun Valley Ballet School's presentation of "The Little Mermaid."

The schools' 11 dancers will turn into moving representations of fire and water, mermaids and sea horses, for the school's original version of the Hans Christian Andersen classic.

Under the sea?

What: Sun Valley Ballet School presents "The Little Mermaid"

When: 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday, matinees at 2 p.m. Saturday and 3 p.m. Sunday

Where: nextStage Theatre in Ketchum

Tickets: General admission is $15 for adults and $10 for children, available at Chapter One Bookstore in Ketchum and Blaine County Fitness in Halley.

The ballet will be performed Friday through Sunday at the nextStage Theatre.

"We tried to stick as close to the original story as possible," said Sherry Horton, who choreographed the ballet. "Most of it's based on the Hans Christian Andersen version with a little bit of Disney thrown in."

The ballet stars the Little Mermaid, portrayed by graduating senior Allison Rust.

Rust has danced with the ballet school for most of her life and has already performed starring roles as the Snow Queen, Russian Swan, Twix and Chinese Tea Peddler in "The Nutcracker," the cowardly lion in "The Wizard of Oz" and Snow White in the ballet by the same name.

"She's perfect for the role," said Horton. "She's got that body type. She's the package. She's embraced the role."

Horton created a new soundtrack for the ballet, featuring music by such composers as Igor Stravinsky and Claude Debussy.

"I listened to compositions with water in the title and went from there," she said. Iremaine Irember, a professional dancer who will perform as the Prince, contributed some lifts that he learned performing in Broadway shows.

He has performed with The Columbia City Ballet in South Carolina and on Broadway in "La Cage Aux Folles."

Senior company dancer Nina Hirner will play the Sea Witch. Other senior company dancers performing solo roles are Kelsey Brunson, Tanner Dredge, Allison Sher, Kathryn Condit, Charlie Lewallen, Austin Sutton, Ross Clifford and Bove Bergdahl.

Nadia Firner created costumes for the mermaids, sea horses, fire and water.

Heldi Albrecht did the backdrop. And Chip Booth will employ moving lights and other unusual effects to make the performance seem as if it's taking place underwater.

This will be the first December in 26 years that Horton hasn't been involved with the classic holiday ballet of "The Nutcracker."

But she's OK with it.

"It's really a nice feeling to be doing something different," she said. "As much as I like 'Nutcracker,' I've been doing it every year since the fourth grade, either as a dancer or a director. I've been working on 'The Little Mermaid' for six months and I'm ready to show it off."

Laughter to fight hunger

Play benefits Buhl Food Pantry

BY CANDACE BALTZ-SMYLIE
Times-News correspondent

A Buhl man is hoping to use his skills as a clown to feed the hungry.

"A Red Christmas: Remembering Red Skelton" will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday at the Buhl High School Auditorium. The play will include stories such as "Freddie the Freeloader" and other holiday-themed characters by the late American clown.

Skelton is best known for his work on television and radio between 1937 and 1971. According to his fan Web page, Skelton appeared in more than 30 Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer films during the 1940s and 1950s.

"He's so down to earth; the humor is clean, he never relied on four-letter words," said Jerry Peters, the star of the play and president of the West End Minors Association which oversees the Buhl Food Pantry. "I grew up with him and met him in the '60s after he passed away no one else really made me laugh like he did. Red Skelton always hit that button."

The production will include a stand-up routine and miming, said Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Christine Garrison.

"Jerry has depicted Red Skelton for a long, long time. It is something he does very well," said Garrison, who is selling tickets out of her Chamber of Commerce office for the event. "I'll be attending, most definitely."

Peters has been a professional clown for more than 40 years while also working as a minister.

"I do it on the side now. I hope to go back into it full-time after I retire," he said.

In the meantime, Peters said he wants to use his experience and Skelton's humor to benefit Buhl's hungry population. Ticket sales go to benefit the Food Pantry, which serves about 200 people every week, said Peters.

"Right now in Idaho about 80,000 children go to bed hungry every night," Peters said. "They get breakfast and lunch at school but they don't get dinner at home. Seniors are close behind them. There is no reason to go hungry in this country."

Raising money to help feed these hungry people, the performance blends the compassion with humor.

"If you can make people laugh and forget their troubles for one minute — let them sit back and relax, no let the world bother them — then you have done your job," Peters said. "That's Fred's philosophy, and that's I heard it, I thought, 'Yeah. That's my philosophy, too.'"

Hockenberry will direct Sun Valley Writers' Conference

Times-News

The Sun Valley Writers' Conference, an annual gathering of writers, announced the hiring of John Hockenberry, a Peabody and Emmy award winner, as its new program director.

Hockenberry, an author, contributing editor to Wired magazine and co-host of a new, unnamed Public Radio international morning talk show, lives in New York.

Next year's Sun Valley conference will include such luminaries as Carl Hiaasen, Amy Bloom, Timothy Egan, James Geary, Maira Kalman, George Packer, Martha Rudnitz, Kati Marton and Walter Mosley.

The conference is held each year at the Sun Valley Resort, scheduled to begin Aug. 22.

A night with the piano man

AMANDA MURPHY
Times News Contributor

You know those wonderful classical piano pieces we've all known, or at least have been familiar with our whole lives — yet we've stumbled that we actually have never learned the title or even the composer? We imagine it was Beethoven or Mozart or one of those other fine fellows.

But wouldn't it be nice to occasionally stun our companions with a proper identification, to dazzle them with a certain depth of knowledge gained only by experiencing the music with a master performer? If this sounds like you, mark Wednesday down on your holiday calendar.

The Herrett Center Forum Lecture Series with the Idaho Humanities Council present Del Parkinson in concert. He will be performing several of the most beloved selections of Frederick Chopin.

"What is unique about this presentation is that it is a combination of a lecture and a concert," said Allen Frost, Herrett Center board member.

Wednesday's performance is part of the monthly lecture series that is held at the Herrett Center September through May. Last December, Parkinson performed the works of Gershwin, and there was such a positive response that the Herrett Center was eager to invite him back. "I will be performing some of (Chopin's) best-known pieces. These include the 'Minute Waltz,' the 'Revolutionary Etude,' and the 'Heroic Polonaise,'" Parkinson said. "Audiences seem to really enjoy listening to his music. I tell a little about the background of the composing of the piece and I tell the audience what to listen for as I play it. It seems to be more enjoyable for an audience to know what to listen for when they hear classical music."

Del Parkinson will perform several of the most beloved selections of Frederick Chopin on Wednesday.

son, 12, who has been dancing for three years. They chatted about the difficulty of being part of a garage band for a few minutes, then talked about what they like about "The Nutcracker." Whitney said she particularly likes the costumes, and enjoys wearing a dress with she dances. Helping the baby mice backstage is another favorite moment during the performance. Of course, there are a few nerves, too. "Right before, I get a little butterflies in my stomach because I'm so excited to go out there," Whitney said.

When it's time for the performance, though, the dancers will have had numerous rehearsals under the watchful eye of Julie's Jazzworks instructor Danielle Essma. She is firm when the dancers make mistakes, but quick to praise when they complete a sequence correctly.

"Your minds have to be sharp, you have to remember," Essma said to the angels. "Brenna, you have to remember the other arm, and Courtney, you forgot a part, but that's OK, just remember next time."

Essma demonstrates proper technique for the dancers, reminding them to hit each move crisply.

"You have to hit every mark. To look excellent, you have to dance excellent," she said. Then: "Good! You are doing 10 times better than 10 minutes ago."

Although audiences can expect many familiar scenes, set to the usual music, this year's "Nutcracker" will be a bit different than previous years, said organizers.

"The Mouse King will appear on a pirate ship in the guise of Erol Flynn, and the entertainment at the court of the Sugar Plum Fairy will include a variety of international dances as well as Mother Sunflower and her Ladybugs — the latter played by local kids. The artistic director's goal was to appeal to children's sense of fantasy.

What is unchanged is the impact that performing in such an ambitious ballet will have on the dancers from southern Idaho.

"This is one of the only opportunities (we will) have to dance with the professionals," Stephanie said — unless some of these young dancers go on to dance professionally.

For the baby mice, though, a career in dance isn't their main thought as they rehearse. No, that would be keeping in step with the other mice, remembering how many little hops to take before they turn, and the last impression they will make on the audience: As they run toward the side of the stage, scrunching at the air, one at a time the little girls leap into the air and squeak.

A good-natured admonition from Essma: "Only one squeak!"

This First Friday comes with lights

BY ARIEL HANSEN
Times-News writer

With Christmas shopping in full swing and lights and festive rated windows brightening festivity to downtown Twin Falls, it's the perfect time to check out First Friday.

Leading the party is the 13th annual Historic Downtown Festival of Lights Parade, beginning at 6 p.m. Friday.

"It's just a great opportunity to come down and enjoy the fun of the season," said Shawn Barigar, president of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce. "There is a ton of stuff going on downtown."

The parade is expected to include between 20 and 25 floats, featuring Santa Claus on a fire truck. The parade route is from Krengle's True Value Hardware (628 Main Ave. S.) to the Magic Valley Alternative High School parking lot (512 Main Ave. N.).

For parade details, call the chamber at 733-3974.

Once the parade is over, wander downtown to experience a variety of activities and performances.

At Vinifera Wine Shop (138 Main Ave. S.), the rock 'n' roll band Mirage will rock up a storm, 7-9 p.m.

"They're old guys that do rock music, and it's always a big draw," said Arlin Hillarides, owner of Vinifera. She will also have drink specials. "We have our most melted cider and we do have a slice of the week, Terrazas Reserve Malbec."

At Rudy's—A Cook's Paradise (147 Main Ave. W.), chef Eric Etesvold will whip up some delicious treats.

"We usually don't know what the food is that will be served, but probably something warm and hearty," said Aubrey Fisher, sales associate at Rudy's.

Ibrahim Faye's painting "Mother and her Children" is done in oils on glass. This 18-by-24-inch work will be for sale for $560 at Galeria Pequena starting during this month's First Friday festivities in downtown Twin Falls.

Playing to accompany that hearty food will be Kenny Saunders and Joel Kaserman, playing stringed instruments in a country/folk/bluegrass style, 6-9 p.m.

At Hands On and The Divine Grind (147 Shoshone St. N.), CoffeeHouse Night features teen guitarist and singer Ethan Tucker.

"He just came out with his album, and I just want to support him," said Robin Dober, owner of Hands On. "It seems to have a popular appeal."

While listening to Tucker, enjoy painting with no studio fees. Then stop next door at The Divine Grind, where owner Nicole Morona will have wintry drinks, flavored with eggnog, peppermint and pumpkin. All the profits from that night's drink sales between 5:30 and 9:30 p.m. will benefit Safe Kids of Magic Valley.

"We're trying to raise money for car seats for babies," Marona said.

At Jensen Ringmakers (109 Main Ave. E.), two Mountain Home artists will be featured, with photography by Jerry

For more local art, try an opening reception at the Magic Valley Arts Council and Fall Museum Gallery of Fine Art (132 Main Ave. S.). In the Galeria Pequena, see the unique glass paintings of Ibrahim Faye, a native of Senegal in western Africa.

"He is a tremendous artist," said Stacy Madsen, executive director of the arts council. "It gives us a different cultural perspective than we commonly see."

Faye's pieces, which are painted in reverse on glass, depict scenes of his native Senegal, including women caring for children, and individuals waiting for the bus or doing chores. They are depicted in bright, primal colors, with a folk art appeal. Faye will also play native African drums during the exhibit, 7-9 p.m.

Quartet's album earns critical acclaim

Times-News

Last month, The Bill Anschell Quartet played for Twin Falls audiences to celebrate the release of its latest album, "One More Mile."

That album just received applause from a critic for allaboutjazz.com.

The critic, John Barrow, noted that Twin Falls saxophonist Brent Jensen fits in well with Seattleites Bill Anschell, a pianist, Jeff Johnson, a bassist, and John Dishop, a drummer.

It is as though they are "musical soul-mates," Barrow wrote.

"Jensen is a well-rounded improviser who can get things cooking in a variety of styles and tempos," Barrow wrote. "With his warm-toned soprano saxophone front and center, he moves easily from a laid-back flow ('Sweet and Lovely') to a more hard-driving, angular approach ('Punt')."

Barrow praised the album as gracefully spontaneous and intriguing. "One More Mile" has a cohesive feel from start to finish. As a quartet, Jensen and company sound like an established working group. The music is lively, inventive and hecks on for repeated listening," Barrow wrote.

National Novel Writing Month a success in Twin Falls

BY ABRIEL HANSEN
Times-News writer

At the beginning of November, you may remember, several Magic Valley residents gathered at Madro Javo Tuscany in Twin Falls to kick off National Novel Writing Month.

"They all had a goal of finishing 50,000 words by the end of that month. With November now a memory, how did they do? Pretty darn good. Everyone the Times-News could reach out from that original group had met the goal, and all were enthusiastic about reaching for it again next November.

"I bit on the last day," said Mackdy Fehلمان, who wrote a science fiction/fantasy novel called "Farsaken Games." "Some of it was really great, and some of it was really, really not."

Fehلمان described the process as "exuberant imperfection," a phrase she said she cribbed from the founder of NaNoWriMo. "Pretty much diamonds in the rough."

Fehلمان said she expects to revise the novel over the next year and try to get it published.

She encourages others to take part in the event, even if it seems daunting. "It seems crazy at first, but at the end it's really worth it."

This year's National Novel Writing Month proved successful for Magic Valley participants, with many completing the 50,000-word goal.

NaNoWriMo

National Novel Writing Month is only in November, but local writers use the group's Web site to coordinate other southern Idaho writing events and gatherings. Visit the site at www.nanowrimo.org. Information on the Twin Falls chapter: Tarry West, terencewest@gmail.com

Danae West, who struggled with pneumonia during the month, said the illness was a mixed blessing.

"I did manage to spend enough time at home that I could finish my novel," she said. All 50,089 words of it. "I figure I met the goal, even if it was just by 69 words."

West's book a mystery that follows the characters established in a novel she previously published, already has interest from her publisher. It is tentatively called "Death by Hallot Box," though West said that title may change depending on market research.

"When I turned it a couple days ago, it turned out to be a pretty good first draft," she said. She also enjoyed the NaNoWriMo experience, meeting with others who were churning out more than a thousand words a day.

"I would definitely tell people you have to be committed to make it, but as long as you can make yourself sit down and write them, then anybody can write a book," West said.

The ballet, which features music by Russian composer Peter Tchaikovsky, is the magical story of a wooden nutcracker doll that is transformed into a handsome prince. He takes a young girl named Clara on a fantastic journey to the Land of Snow to thank her for saving him in a battle with the Rat King.

Together, they meet the Snow Queen and King and travel through the Kingdom of Sweets where she is entertained by a Sugar Plum Fairy, graceful Candel Flowers, Gumdrops, Candy Canes and Russian Sugar Twists.

The kids who will perform in Tuesday's production auditioned before two of the company's ballerinas so the whole thing has been an educational, as well as a fun, thing for them, Davidson added. They've been rehearsing with Ilirije Neely of Footlite Dance since they were chosen.

The stage will be quite spectacular, involving a full day of set-up, Davidson said. The costumes and props will be just as spectacular. And there will even be pyrotechnics involved.

The stars include Leonomis Puno-Gallion and Yun Kyung Kim, a Korean dancer who has danced throughout the United States, China, Japan, and Italy.

A Christmas Cantata

West End Community Singers present pair of concerts

BY BLAIR KOCH

Times-News correspondent

West End Community Singers' Christmas Cantata

Performances:
8 p.m., Wednesday, Buhi
Methodist Church,
3 p.m. Dec. 16, Clover Lutheran Church.
Admission is by donation.

As the four-part harmony to "Silent Night" comes to a close, you can't help but feel joyous bumps and reverence for the spirit of Christmas. If the West End Community Singers can accomplish this during rehearsal, it's hard to even imagine how you would feel after an actual concert.

Don't miss your upcoming chance as the group will present its cantata, "Once Upon a Night." The cantata relates the Christmas story as told by the apostle Luke, unfolded in song with music composed by Pepper Christoph.

Director Gary Held describes the concert as an opportunity for people to hear original, traditional music with familiar themes in a different setting.

"It's the Christmas story sung by people who like to sing," Held said. "The setting for the concerts are old country churches."

The 70-member choir has regularly drawn a packed crowd to its 23 years of Christmas concerts.

"This is celebrating Christmas, getting into the music, it's the best part," said Kate Woods of Buhi.

"Singing during rehearsals is as much fun as the concert."

The concert will conclude the same way every presentation does, by the singers' rendition of "Silent Night."

"It's always been a favorite," Woods said.

Following each presentation will be a free-will offering and refreshments.

Not just any old Christmas concert

Magie Valley Chorale plays traditional with a twist

AMANDA MURPHY
Times News correspondent

It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas all over the Magie Valley, and there is nothing that says, or rings, Christmas more than the classic carols we all know and love.

It is in that spirit that the Magie Valley Chorale and the Hallelujah Handbells proudly present "Traditional Christmas Arrangements by the Great Ministers" this weekend at The College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Building auditorium.

The Magie Valley Chorale is a large and dynamic group composed of young and old alike, and their experience level runs a similar gamut. Milton Baruss and his wife Sandra have been in the choir since the 1970s and look forward to this event every year.

"It is a fun group of people who meet once a week to have a good time singing," Milton Baruss says. "We also put on an Easter concert and one on Mother's Day, but the Christmas concert has been our cornerstone."

Echoing a similar sentiment is two-year member Brooke Woods.

"It is such a wonderful event.

We start meeting in August, and rehearse once a week for two hours. Just last month we went caroling at the Twin Falls Care Center," she said. "There is something about Christmas music: No matter when you hear it, it's joyous."

Membership in the chorale is voluntary and students can participate in the group for college credit. That is something that Dana Bradley, a soprano and recent returnee to the chorale, wishes she had known about when she was a student at CSI.

"It's wonderful that they can receive credit for the time they spend in the choir," she said.

"For me, rejoining the group after being away has allowed me to see all these wonderful things around the Magie Valley," Brooke Woods said.

As if great music, good company, and a group called the Hallelujah Handbells weren't enough, Woods offers up this last enticing promise.

"There will be a lot of traditional Christmas music, but there are a few that you won't be expecting and 'Silent Night' will be performed in a way you've never heard it before," Woods said.

"There are incredibly talented people in this group, and then there are also those of us who just really love to sing," Bradley said.

"Anyone is welcome to join," Baruss said. "We just ask them to sing on pitch."

Judging by their long-standing tradition and a growing, loyal audience, the members of Magie Valley Chorale can safely say that their mission has been accomplished.

"There was a good turnout last year and we look forward to an even bigger response this year as we have been promoting it all over the valley."

Dessert Theater tonight at Twin Falls High School

BY CANDACE BALZ-SMYLE
Times News correspondent

If you go...

Dessert Theater runs tonight through Saturday in the Roper Auditorium at Twin Falls High School. Tickets are $5 at the door and include dessert. Seating is limited to 116 and could sell out. Curtain is at 7:30 p.m., but organizers encourage the audience to arrive as early as 6:30 p.m. for the best pick of desserts and seats.

work hard to prepare for it. The best thing about it is when they come back they get to show it to the public at Dessert Theater."

The drama team, which just returned from four days at state championships, immediately began work on this week's Dessert Theater, a compilation of the team's interpretive pieces used for the competition season. Audience members pay $5 a seat, choose a homemade dessert and sit in for a series of short monologues and interpretive pieces performed by Twin Falls High drama students.

"It's kind of a precursor to our full shows. But a lot of those shows are kind of one-note; they are comedies and that's it," Hay-cock said. "Dessert Theater has a variety of performances. Some of it is original, serious, humorous. It's fun to see the audience see how talented and versatile these students are. We always sell out."

Four of the student performers qualified to compete at state; two of them won awards. Savannah Wilson, a junior, placed third with a piece she prepared for the Solo Audition category. The category requires students to pick multiple scripts that contrast; Wilson uses a humorous script about a person in AA and a serious one

'SUPERBAD'

It's the love story that's shocking

BY CARINA CHOCANO
Los Angeles Times

Since the dawn of youth culture, when it was first determined that adolescents were not to be trusted to play themselves, teens on screens have been glamorized or caricatured, stripped of complexity and much of their clothes and pressed upon to do things like vote on baked goods in order to best-advice bona fides to the world.

As amusing as this kind of thing can be, it can also be alienating to the currently and formerly young.

It was, in fact, the overwhelming busyness that inspired Seth Rogen to write a comedy with his childhood friend Evan Goldberg, something that would reflect the experiences of real kids like them.

By the time "Superbad" went into production about a decade later, Rogen was past the age at which he could credibly play the character of Seth, a high school senior on the eve of graduation, and the role went to his buddy and "Knocked-Up" cohort, Jonah Hill. Not that the passage of time made a difference — the movie's appal leaps across generations in a single bound.

Wide-eyed and sincere as it is hilariously, unrepentantly profane, the movie aims to express what it's like to stare down the barrel of your first fony into adulthood, and it's not afraid to be honest about it. It's the opposite of teensploitation. What with everyone so focused on the mundaneness, though, it comes as a complete surprise to find that

"Superbad" is in fact a love story.

"Superbad" was produced by Judd Apatow, and his influence is evident. But unlike his recent megahits "Knocked Up" and "The 40-Year-Old Virgin," not to mention other recent buddy comedies such as "Blades of Glory," the movie doesn't require the suspension of disbelief that more high-concept comedies do. As wild and action-packed as it is, the film is at its core the emotionally realistic story of a relationship.

As for the movie's much-discussed crudeness — it seems that every summer a new comedy heists another recent comedy in recorded instances of what the MPAA so coyly calls "language," and every summer the media pounces. (See also: "Wedding Crashers," "Borat," etc.) I guess we know an angle when we see one, because nothing else explains this endlessly recurring, suspiciously disingenuous collective surprise at the role of profanity in picaresque comedy — you'd think that after at least four centuries we'd be used to it by now.

In light of this, I hope it's not damning the movie with the wrong kind of praise to say that for a film so deliciously smutty, "Superbad" is supercute.

about the victims of drunken driving.

"I picked the pieces because I wanted them to contrast as much as possible," Wilson said. "I chose the first one because it's really sarcastic and I'm a sarcastic person so I wanted to play to my strengths for competition, and then I found the second one about the serious side and it was a perfect contrast."

Dakota Cardinet, a junior, also competed at state last weekend and will perform her piece at Dessert Theater. Cardinet wrote an original script about William Shakespeare and some little-known adventures of his youth.

"I tie going hunting with his dad and his dad is a big, strong guy, but William is kind of a wussy guy that just wants to write," said Cardinet.

"William and his dad are hunting fairies, but William misses and shoots down Santa Claus instead."

Cardinet's piece is good and very funny, Haycock said.

CSI students to sell their wares at annual Christmas event

BY VIRGINIA HUTCHINS
Times-News writer

Saturday is your chance to own artistry in metal and wood.

The College of Southern Idaho's cabinetmaking and welding students crafted the furniture and metalwork that's for sale this weekend at their annual Christmas Auction. The event helps fund students' educational trips and travel to competitions.

Furniture includes pieces such as chests, cabinets, tables, a gun case, a desk and a bed — among others — crafted of various woods with high-end techniques and materials such as mortise and tenon joints or quartersawn oak.

Welding students, meanwhile, will offer for auction about 35 pieces, including coat racks, decorative metal cutouts and wall hangings, metal sunflowers and other sculptures, a bigbath and trailer hitch covers, for example. Expect a bigger selection of welded wares at this year's auction than in the past.

The college's culinary arts students will serve free appetizers.

"There is a lot of talent in our classes here at CSI," said freshman Marion Frix, president of the college's Woodstock Club and the Skills Association.

The wares will be displayed from 1 to 9 p.m. Friday in the Rick Allen conference room at the Herrett Center for Arts and Science on the CSI campus. Absentee bids can be made on Friday.

day and live-auction action begins at 2:30 that afternoon. Organizers will set a base price for each item that covers the cost of materials.

For information: CSI cabinetmaking professor Kenneth Triplett at 732-6335, or welding instructor John Peterson at 732-6372.
