PRESERVING THE PAST ...

Plans for renovating the site of the former Hunt Camp could soon be under way after the U.S. Senate passed a bill authorizing the National Park Service to expand the boundaries of the Minidoka Internment National Monument.

Bill would quadruple size of Minidoka monument

By Nate Poppinga
Staff writer

The U.S. Senate has passed a bill that would expand the Minidoka Internment National Monument, the site of the former Hunt Camp. The bill, first proposed by U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho, and later merged into another presented by fellow Sen. Larry Craig, would quadruple the size of the monument and tie it to a similar site in Washington state. It now goes to the House for consideration.

Tami DeGrosky, the temporary site superintendent for the National Park Service, said the bill would give the service authority to acquire several segments of former internment camp land owned by two federal agencies and the private, non-profit Conservation Fund. The land would provide the park service with the space it needs to begin refurbishing the camp and rebuilding a barracks block. In all, the monument would gain nearly 220 acres, three times its existing size.

The improvements will be funded through a combination of National Park Service money and private donations, DeGrosky said. Advocacy group Friends of Minidoka Inc. is working to locate pieces of the historic barracks to move back on-site, and will conduct fundraising efforts as well. The park service itself has a basic budget of $180,000, though DeGrosky said the bill would add additional funds to it.

The area in green is the current site of the Minidoka Internment National Monument. If a bill to expand the monument passes the U.S. House of Representatives and signed by President Bush, then land in the other colored areas would be added to the monument giving it almost 220 more acres, and quadrupling the total size of the monument.

Along with the renovations, the park service plans to hire dedicated staff for the monument. Staff would also be hired for a national historic site at Bainbridge Island, Wash., that would become tied to the Minidoka monument.

Local and national groups applauded the Senate's action, including the Conservation Fund. Floyd Mori, the national executive director for the Japanese American Citizens League, said he thinks the improvements will tie the camp together more closely with the local community. He said he expects the House and President Bush to easily approve the bill this year, the 20th anniversary of a civil liberties act that provided apologies and redress to those interned in the camps. "We're pleased (Minidoka)

Pool of 12 jurors, three alternates to be whittled down from 350 candidates

By Rebecca Boone
Associated Press writer

BOISE — His guilt is beyond question, his crime beyond comprehension. The issue for the jury is whether Joseph Edward Duncan III deserves to die for kidnapping two young siblings in a bloodbath at their home and whisking them away to the remote wilderness of western Montana, where he tortured them, raped them, and killed the 9-year-old boy.

Some 350 candidates are expected to show up at a convention center downtown today, when attorneys will begin to whittle the pool down to the 12 jurors plus three alternates who will decide Duncan's fate. Duncan pleaded guilty in December to 10 federal charges, three of which

Don't charge for parking, create more space, Times-News survey finds

By Jared S. Hopkins

Area residents said the parking system in downtown Twin Falls is ineffective, needs more spots and they are staunchly against being charged for parking their vehicles, according to a recent online survey by the Times-News.

Almost all of the nearly 50 respondents answered "yes" to whether there are problems in the city's parking system, with the principal complaint being a lack of sufficient parking space — regardless of whether there's a fee. The surveys yielded a handful of possible solutions, including building a parking garage and eliminating parking meters altogether.

The nearly 50 comments are from an online, two-part survey at www.magicvalley.com. They were in response to a Times-News article published last

Waterboarding: Team-building or torture? Court will decide in Provo case

Manager used technique on employee to try and 'motivate' team to make sales

By Karl Vick
The Washington Post

PROVO, Utah — No one really disputes that Chad Hudgens was waterboarded outside a Provo office park last May 29, right before lunch, by his boss.

There is also general agreement that Hudgens volunteered for the "team-building exercise," that he lay on his back with his head downhill, and that co-workers knelt on either side of him, pinning the young sales rep down while his supervisor poured water from a gallon jug over his nose and mouth.

And it's widely acknowledged that the supervisor, Joshua Christopherson, then told the assembled sales team, whose numbers had been lagging: "You saw how hard Chad fought for air right there. I want you to go back inside and fight that hard to make sales."

What's at issue in the lawsuit Hudgens filed against his former employers — just as in the ongoing global debate over the CIA's waterboarding of terrorism suspects — is the question of intent.

Prosper Inc. maintains that what the supervisor did, while unauthorized, overzealous and misguided, falls far short of torture, and in fact was not nearly as bad as Hudgens makes out in his quest for damages.

"We're not the mean waterboarding company that people think we are," said George Brunt, general counsel for the firm, which sells a combination of online and personal-dress instruction packaged as "coaching" and "training" for $3,000 to $15,000 — to customers who are solicited by telephone.

The morning Hudgens said he thought he was going to drown, his team was calling on behalf of "Trump University," pitching real estate instruction to people who had attended a Trump seminar. Prosper is doing well, with 500 employees and clients in 70 countries, senior executives said in an interview.

George Brunt, general counsel for Prosper Inc. on the incident

"We're not the mean waterboarding company that people think we are."

"I don't know if this would even be an issue if it weren't for Guantanamo Bay."

"... look at the damage (waterboarding) did to America's reputation. And it's going to hurt our image."

Iraqi government dismisses 1,300 soldiers and policemen

BAGHDAD — Iraq's government moved Sunday to restore discipline within the ranks of the security forces, sacking more than 1,300 soldiers and policemen who deserted during recent fighting against Shiite militias in Basra.

At the same time, Iraq's Cabinet ratcheted up the pressure on anti-American Shiite cleric Muqtada al-Sadr by approving draft legislation barring political parties with militias from participating in upcoming provincial elections.

Al-Sadr, who heads the country's biggest militia, the Mahdi Army, has been under intense pressure from Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki, also a Shiite, to disband the Mahdi Army or face political isolation.

Al-Sadr's followers are eager to take part in the local elections because they believe they can take power away from rival Shiite parties in the vast, oil-rich Shiite heartland of southern Iraq. And in a new move to stem the flow of money to armed groups, the government ordered a crackdown on militiamen controlling state-run and private gas stations.

Mothers from polygamous sect write letter to Texas gov.

SAN ANGELO — The mothers of children removed from a polygamous sect's ranch in West Texas after an abuse allegation are appealing to Gov. Rick Perry for help, saying some of their children have become sick and even required hospitalization.

In the letter, a copy of which was obtained by The Associated Press, the mothers from the Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints also say children are 'horrified' by physical examinations they have undergone while in state custody.

The mothers said the letter was mailed Saturday. Perry spokesman Robert Black said Sunday that he had not seen the letter and couldn't comment.

Some 416 children were rounded up and placed in emergency custody 11 days ago after a domestic violence hot line recorded a complaint from a 16-year-old girl. She said she was physically and sexually abused by her 50-year-old husband.

The one-page letter, signed by three women who claim they represent others, says about 15 mothers were away from the property when their

Sludge tested in poor neighborhoods as lead-poisoning fix

BALTIMORE — Scientists using federal grants spread fertilizer made from human and industrial wastes on yards in poor, black neighborhoods to test whether it might protect children from lead poisoning in the soil. Families were assured the sludge was safe and were never told about any harmful ingredients.

Nine low-income families in Baltimore row houses agreed to let researchers till the sewage sludge into their yards and plant new grass. In exchange, they were given free coupons as well as the free lavas as part of a study published in 2005 and funded by the Housing and Urban Development Department.

The Associated Press reviewed grant documents obtained under the Freedom of Information Act and interviewed researchers. No one involved with the $446,231 grant for the two-year study would identify the participants, citing privacy concerns. There is no evidence there was ever any medical follow-up.

Huge crowd expected to greet pope at White House on Wednesday

The leader of the world's Roman Catholics has been to the White House only once in history. That changes this week, and President Bush is pulling out all the stops; driving out to a suburban military base to meet Pope Benedict XVI's plane, bringing a giant audience to the South Lawn and hosting a fancy East River dinner.

These are all firsts. Bush has never before been a visiting leader the honor of picking him up at the airport. In fact, no president has done so. And the Air Force has the typical landing spot for modern leaders.

A crowd of up to 12,000 is due at the White House on Wednesday morning for the pope's official, pomp-filled arrival ceremony. It will feature the U.S. and Holy See anthems, a 21-gun salute, and the U.S. Army Old Guard rifle and Drum Corps. Both men will make remarks before their Oval Office meeting and a send-off for his popemobile bound toward Pennsylvania Avenue.

The White House crowd will be the largest of Bush's presidency.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, April 14, the 105th day of 2008. There are 261 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight: On April 14, 1865, President Lincoln was shot and mortally wounded by John Wilkes Booth while attending the comedy 'Our American Cousin' at Ford's Theatre in Washington. (Lincoln died the following morning.)

On this date: In 1775, the first American society for the abolition of slavery was formed in Philadelphia.

In 1828, the first edition of Noah Webster's 'American Dictionary of the English Language' was published.

In 1912, the British liner RMS Titanic collided with an iceberg in the North Atlantic and began sinking.

In 1939, the John Steinbeck novel 'The Grapes of Wrath' was first published.

In 1981, the first test flight of America's first operational space shuttle, the Columbia, ended successfully with a landing at Edwards Air Force Base in California.

In 1986, Americans got first word of a U.S. air raid on Libya. (Because of the time difference, it was the early morning of April 15 when the attack occurred.)

Ten years ago: Despite international pleas for leniency, the state of Virginia executed Angel Francisco Beard, a Paraguayan convicted of murder. President Clinton moderated a town meeting on race with an all-star panel of sports figures. The Grand Forks (N.D.) Herald won the 1998 Pulitzer Prize for public service.

Five years ago: Saddam Hussein's hometown of Tikrit fell with unexpectedly high resistance, the last Iraqi city to succumb to overpowering U.S.-led ground and air forces. U.S. commandos in Baghdad captured Abu Abbas, leader of the Palestinian group that killed an American on the hijacked cruise liner Achille Lauro in 1985.

One year ago: Riot police beat and detained protesters as they gathered in an official ban and attempted to stage a rally in Moscow against Russian President Vladimir Putin's government.

Keep your ears close to the rail, Capricorn

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

IF APRIL 14 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You might have more energy than you know what to do with in the next six months. Funnel your excess liveliness and enthusiasm into a regular exercise routine or participate in regular sports. Your unbridled enthusiasm can land you in hot water during August when others may be more critical than usual and you should be cautious about starting new projects. October and December are your best months for romantic commitments or for advancing your career or reputation.

position to take advantage of a huge opportunity. Your image and your standing among colleagues could undergo a dramatic change. GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Follow your impulses and pursue what you perceive to be the most attractive choice. This could be a wonderful time to discuss long-term plans with a prospective partner. CANCER (June 21-July 22): Focus on the tasks before you and do not be distracted by your own inner feelings of inadequacy. Rewards await those who persevere. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): It takes two to tango. It may be time to partner with someone to pursue matters of business, or career; this can create a mutual benefit for both of you. Don't be afraid to demonstrate your confidence.

VirGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): No one will give you what you want unless you make your desires known. It is a good day to finalize contracts, make promises and seal a pending deal.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A strong presentation will make a good first impression in matters of business and romance. Let your personality flow without self-consciousness and you'll find you are in high demand. SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Have no fear about launching a new venture or in regards to entering into agreements or partnerships. A little trust in your colleagues will yield solid benefits in the immediate future. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): To receive the benefit of someone's wisdom and experience, you must be willing to accept it. You are the student — and with the knowledge gained, you can become the master. PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A situation may seem hopeless, but assistance is waiting if you are willing to ask for it. Clouded insights may make the problem seem more difficult than it really is.

will remain a permanent reminder that the Constitution of our country is a very important document to adhere to," Mori said.

Roy Prescott, a rancher and former Jerome County commissioner who sponsors the barbecue during an annual pilgrimage to the site, praised how the bill would advance and improve the site.

"It's real good for the monument out here," he said.
Jerome County Commission Chairman Charlie Howell said he welcomed the news, information on which he said the commission sought during the controversial permitting process for the Big Sky Farms feedlot once planned nearby.

"I think it's fine," he said. "Anything else that we can do to attract tourists into the county ..."

That permit was eventually rejected, and Don McFarland, the owner of the property, was reported in February to be in talks to sell the land while challenging the county's decision in court. The rejection was good news to the park service. DeGrosky said, but the agency is still keeping an eye on the situation.

The new landowner could easily request that that permit be granted again," she said. "I think, you know, there's always a chance that somebody will want to do that out there."

could bring the death penalty: kidnapping resulting in death, sexual exploitation of a child resulting in death, and using a firearm in a crime of violence resulting in death.

U.S. District Judge Edward Lodge has imposed extraordinary secrecy restrictions, including a gag order on all lawyers and court personnel, possibly hoping to avoid contaminating the jury pool as much as possible. Nearly half of the 375 documents filed in the case remain under seal.

Even so, finding 15 people who know little about the case — or about how the community has rallied around Shasta Greene, the sole survivor of Duncan's brutal spree in 2005 — and can decide impartially is a tall order.

"That's the problem in a small, sparsely populated state like Idaho," said Stephanos Bibas, a professor of law at the University of Pennsylvania law school and a former federal prosecutor. "There's a huge fear of contaminating the jury because you just don't get many multiple murder-molestation cases there. So people have likely been hearing about this case endlessly."

Duncan was a convicted pedophile — originally from Tacoma, Wash., when he saw Shasta, then 11, and her brother Dylan outside their home in the resort town of Coeur d'Alene. He begun stalking the family, and one night in mid-May 2005, he entered the house, bound and killed three members of the family with a claw hammer: Brenda Greene, her son Slade Greene, and her fiance Mark McKenzie. Duncan drove away with Shasta and Dylan.

For the next several weeks, Duncan sexually abused and tortured the children, in some cases videotaping the acts. He eventually shot Dylan with a saved-off shotgun, leaving the boy's body at a campsite in the Lolo National Forest. Duncan brought Shasta back to Coeur d'Alene, where they stopped to eat at a Denny's restaurant around 2 a.m. on July 2, 2005. A waitress recognized Shasta and called police.

Duncan was charged with the Coeur d'Alene murders in Idaho state court, and in 2006 pleaded guilty to three counts of first-degree murder and three counts of first-degree kidnapping. He agreed to cooperate with investigators in his pending federal case.

He was sentenced to life in prison without parole for the kidnappings. But the sentence on the murder counts was deferred until the federal case is closed. If federal prosecutors fail to win a death sentence, Duncan will be returned to Kootenai County, where a jury will be impaneled for a death penalty hearing. Prosecutor Bill Douglas has said,

"A jury will be tempted to see him as a monster, and the last thing the defense wants is for them to think of him as a monster."

— Stephanos Bibas, a professor of law at the University of Pennsylvania Law School and a former federal prosecutor

Aside from the potential death-penalty charges, Duncan pleaded guilty federally to kidnapping, two counts of aggravated sexual abuse of a minor, being a felon in possession of a firearm, transportation of a stolen firearm, possession of an unregistered firearm and transportation of a stolen vehicle.

While prosecutors try to prove that Duncan deserves execution, defense attorneys are expected to try to show that he was the product of a troubled childhood and should be sentenced to life in prison.

"A jury will be tempted to see him as a monster, and the last thing the defense wants is for them to think of him as a monster," Bibas said. "They'll try to at least put in context what caused him to do this, pointing out if the defendant has a history himself of being abused, beaten or mentally impaired in some way."

Shasta Greene appears to be holding up well, but she suffers from stress, said family friend Midge Smoek. Shasta, now 11, normally spends every Tuesday night visiting Smoek.

"Last time I saw her she was really, really happy because they told her she wouldn't have to testify. I hope they can stick with their promise to keep her from testifying," Smoek said.

Duncan also has been charged in California with the 1997 slaying of 10-year-old Anthony Martinez in Indio, Calif. Prosecutors also intend to seek the death penalty there. Duncan has denied involvement in that crime, and Shasta's affidavit she'll have to go to California to testify in that case, Smoek said.

In addition, Duncan is a suspect in the 1996 Seattle-area killings of 9-year-old Carmen Cathias and 11-year-old Saumigui White.

Regardless of the outcome of the federal case in Idaho, Smoek wonders whether the trauma will ever end for Shasta or her father, Steve Greene.
"I think Steve understands that it's not going to be over, but I don't know what she's going to do," Smoek said. "When she's mad, she says, 'It's never going to be over.'"

Parking

week regarding a private study — presented to the Twin Falls City Council last week — that found the parking system to be ineffective, its rules unenforceable and in general disregarded by the community.

"There's inadequate parking that you have to hunt for and then pay for," wrote one survey participant.

Common responses were that charging for parking is a deterrent to visit downtown, particularly for shopping and dining purposes; an unnecessary tax because there's been little success in downtown development; and is so problematic that store employees abuse the system.

"Why should we (pay) when we can go another three miles and park for free at the big mall?" wrote another person. "They don't charge for parking."

It costs 25 cents per hour to park at a meter. There are about 260 metered spaces, and at least 23 lack meters and many more are broken, according to the study.

The study found meter enforcement is ineffective and that the meters have failed to live up to the goal of creating parking turnover by charging; but if employees use the spaces, potential customers are discouraged from visiting due to a lack of parking.

"The city should not charge to park downtown because there is no point," wrote one person.

"Everywhere else you go and park you don't have to pay, and so I don't see why we should have to pay to park downtown."

The city, which last week officially assumed the functions of the Downtown Business Improvement District, has prepared broad ways to fix the situation but is undecided on a long-term solution. In the interim, enforcement and meter duties will be assumed by the Twin Falls Police Department.

Still, almost a dozen people said that despite the inconvenience of paying for parking, the money goes towards improvements and maintenance — similar rationale given by the city for charging.

"I enjoy the landscaping and flowers and if it's going to cost me a whopping 25 cents to eat lunch for an hour, then so be it," wrote one.

The study found meter collection to be inconsistent — it likely hasn't been done since October 2007. The BID typically receives $65,000 and $70,000 in revenue from parking — a figure officials said will drop this year.

Others suggested a fee parking garage, creating a system that charges only during business hours, having special tags drivers purchase instead of using meters and balancing the fee-parking with free parking if equally enforced.

The city's parking lots have a mix of leased spaces, two-hour customer parking and reserved spaces for businesses. Survey respondents complained that these rules are not enforced; private functions downtown force people to use spots privately leased; and store employees and businesses aren't following the rules.

"One comment offered insight into the study's finding that the parking system is not respected."

"I wouldn't mind paying but I've never paid and don't ever plan on it," the comment read. "I've parked downtown there a thousand times and have yet to pay once. I don't think anybody I know pays."

Mini-Cassia blossoms five years after Simplot

Post-Simplot recovery started with CSI

By Rich Greene
Staff writer

HEYBURN — When the J.T. Simplot Co. announced the closing of its Heyburn potato processing plant in 2003, the move sent waves across the Snake River, leaving more than 600 people unemployed.

More than five years later, there are signs those waves have subsided into ripples. A combination of help from a community college, funding from federal grants and the arrival of new economic activity has caused the community to be optimistic about the future.

Tricia L. McCoy-Buckley was one of the last to be let go from Simplot. She worked in the payroll office and, after 14 years of ensuring that her fellow employees and friends received their wages, she cut her last check in 2004. A single mother of two, McCoy-Buckley was 30 years old when the plant closed down.

"I was scared," McCoy-Buckley recalled.

Heyburn Mayor George Anderson said he remembers those feelings shared across Mini-Cassia and how those harsh feelings even led to protests outside the home of his predecessor, Mayor Cleo Cheney.

"You cannot lose that many jobs at one time without it having a huge impact," said Mark Mair, chairman of the Mini-Cassia Economic Development Commission.

Burley prepares for ethanol plant impact

Train transports, traffic raise concerns

By Sven Berg
Staff writer

HEYBURN — Now that production has started, Pacific Ethanol's Burley plant is — at least temporarily — the largest ethanol plant in the western United States.

Plant Manager Lee Phillips said that status won't last long. Already larger plants are under construction throughout the West, but the 60 million gallons the Pacific plant is expected to produce per year makes Burley a major ethanol center.

That scale of production has raised controversy in the Magic Valley, especially among residents of Burley. One of the most commonly-voiced concerns is that trains carrying corn to the plant and block away from it will block intersections in the city, creating a nuisance for drivers and possibly delaying emergency services. Corn trains are expected to come and go about once a week, and train traffic carrying ethanol may be more frequent.

Burley City Councilman Dennis Dexter said corn trains will be more than a mile long, meaning they could block every railroad intersection within the city limits if they stop in the wrong spot. To lower the chances of a train stoppage, Pacific built a railroad track loop on its property to hold trains until they are ready to depart.

Still, concerns linger

City Council considers tournament to raise money for course

By Jared S. Hopkins
Staff writer

The Twin Falls City Council will consider tonight a proposal to hold a golf tournament July 12 at the Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course to raise money for the facility to begin several maintenance projects.

For years, the golf course has suffered from low revenue — the course has lost money for more than a decade — while it fights for general fund money with other departments. The city is responsible for the landscaping and maintenance component of the course while most other tasks are contracted out to and overseen by the course professional, Mike Hamblin.

City officials are hoping to raise more than $12,000 from the weekend event in July. There will be 25 four-person teams with a $300 entry fee per team. The Twin Falls Community Foundation Board has ruled that all entry fees and donations could be channeled through the foundation to allow for tax credits, according to a city staff report.

Among the scheduled improvements are remodeling of the bathrooms; redesigning several tee boxes; adding some trees; and re-seeding and general landscaping.

The golf course always needs enhancements and the tournament would be another opportunity to raise money — but in a fun way, said Twin Falls Parks and Recreation Director Dennis Bowyer.

"You can never have enough money for improvements," said Bowyer. "You could get $1 million for improvements and then next year you'd still need to make improvements."

The idea comes via recommendation from a sub-committee of the Golf Commission. Hamblin supports the idea.

The city could potentially lose $2,000 in green fee revenue — the day is not one of Hamblin's personal days for private tournaments, Bowyer said — but would save money in the long-term by not having to fund the projects later on, according to a city staff report.

The meeting is at 5 p.m. at City Council Chambers at 305 3rd Avenue East. Meetings are open to the public.

Other agenda items include:

- The appointment of seven members to the Historic Downtown Business Improvement District Board.

- A request by the Greater Twin Falls Association of Realtors seeking $4,000 for a Fourth of July fireworks show. The city last year pledged $6,500 towards a $30,000 show. This year's show is estimated to cost the same amount of money but last longer, according to organizers.

Man arrested in connection to stabbing

Staff report

A 31-year-old California man was arrested Saturday night in connection with a stabbing of a 27-year old woman from near center in the evening, police said.

Tobias L. Millard of Loma Linda, Calif., was arrested just after 9 p.m. after police found Scott Adams, 27, of Hagerman, stabbed four times in the back, chest and leg at 3028 Chisholm Drive.

Adams was conscious and alert and was air-lifted to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center. Police did not have an update on his condition by Sunday evening.

"We have several 'lifelong acquaintances,' police said. The incident is still under investigation.

Gooding turns 100

Celebratory open house held today

By Blair Koch
Correspondent

Gooding city turns 100 years old today.

And to celebrate, the Gooding Chamber of Commerce Centennial Committee will host an open house at City Hall to kick off a variety of events.

Residents can visit with Mayor Duke Morton at City Hall during the open house, as well as view photos of past mayors, historical documents and a centennial quilt.

"The committee will also release a schedule of activities into its next century," Morton said. "It's important to have a way for residents to visit Gooding's past, but it's also an opportunity for them to help mold its future. As Gooding moves into its next century, Morton said, it's important for residents to feel they have open communication with their local government.

"I think it's a great idea," Morton said. "So often people lose sight of what is going on within their city government, and this provides a way to get back into it. It's important to meet those people running the city — to know who they are, so residents can openly speak to them."

The city is poised for growth, Morton said, but faces challenges similar to other rural areas.

"Of course growth is an issue — like, how are we going to grow, how do we manage growth and water, the infrastructure," he asked. "We also have some very exciting things to look forward to, like the new hospital."

As the city enters a new era, the centennial will offer Gooding an opportunity to reflect on its first 100 years, said Chamber Board

Gooding's birthday

The Gooding Chamber of Commerce Centennial Committee will hold an open house today from 3-6 p.m. at City Hall at 308 Fifth Ave. W.

Member Jim Schuettger, "Other cities aren't so lucky," Schuettger said. "But our quality of life in Gooding continues to make it a great place to live."

Things in Gooding are very different than they were when the city was first settled, said Gooding County Historical Society President Sharon Cheney.

"I think this is about celebrating 100 years of success," she said. "This area started as a dream and people worked very, very hard to see Gooding happen."

City Hall is located at 308 5th Avenue West.

Two Filer students selected as Merit Scholar finalists

By John E. Swayze
Correspondent

FILER — Tearsa Williams and David Albertson have joined an elite group of students.

The two Filer High School seniors have been selected from among 16,000 semifinalist applicants nationwide as finalists in the 2007-08 National Merit Scholar Program.

Sponsored by hundreds of corporate organizations and universities, including Bristol-Myers Squibb Foundation, Dow Jones Foundation, Emory University and George Washington University, the program is open to high school students who have demonstrated outstanding academic achievement.

Both scholars say there's nothing out of the ordinary about their study habits and spend about 1.5 hours a day on daily homework assignments. But high SAT scores in

ISU sees more students but fewer credit hours

POCATELLO (AP) — Despite more students, Idaho State University has seen drop in the number of credit hours being taken, a decrease that has cost the school several million dollars.

Last year, school officials said, enrollment had increased 4.2 percent to 13,200 students. But they also said the number of credit hours fell 9 percent to 137,000.

Total student enrollment counts everyone who is taking a class at ISU, including high school students enrolled in the school's Early College Program.

Total credit hours are the number of billable credits students are taking at the school. That accounts for about $45 million in revenue for the school in tuition and fees. Credit hours are also used to determine how much money the school gets from the state.

"We're attempting to shift focus," Steven Nelchisel, ISU director of enrollment planning, told the Idaho State Journal. "We need to start talking about credit hours."

Officials at Idaho State say Brigham Young University-Idaho in Rexburg, 71 miles to the northeast and which seven years ago switched from a two-year junior college to a four-year school, is causing Idaho State some student loss.

Officials at BYU-Idaho say they are likely reducing enrollment at other colleges because students don't have to leave to finish their degrees elsewhere.

"The biggest thing we've seen is ISU and other universities don't get the transfer students from us anymore," said Rob Garrett, BYU-Idaho director of admissions. "But we're not seeing ISU students flock up here."

Nelchisel said an analysis of how many prospective students the school might be losing has not been done.

scholarships are available.

"We took the test as juniors," Albertson said. "My study habits aren't that great. I just seem to be really good at taking tests and try not to get behind."

A committee of college administrators and high school counselors evaluate the applications and reduce the number of finalists down to about 10. Merit Scholar winners. Results will be announced by the National Merit Scholar Program during April, May and July.

Students who do not advance to the semifinalist or finalist rounds are given commended status certificates and may still be eligible for special corporate scholarships.

Finalists are chosen based on academic performance and leadership ability. Williams currently serves as an officer in her school's student government.

"This year I'm student body representative to our district school board and treasurer of the Art Club," she said. "I really don't know what to expect, but I'll just take it (Merit Scholarship) as it comes."

After high school graduation this spring, Albertson plans to attend the College of Idaho in Caldwell.

"I'm thinking about majors in environmental engineering or music," he said. "I haven't really decided, but right now I could go for about anything."

Williams is set to further her education with a focus on the visual art in Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah.

"I just found out I've been accepted into the BYU photography department," she said. "I really like art and especially the instantaneous visual results of digital photography."

Simplet

Options for those laid off were limited at the time, but one that did surface was grant money from the federal Workforce Investment Act (WIA). The WIA grants could pay for retraining and education for the unemployed workforce.

"I knew I had this opportunity to go back to school and it wasn't going to come again," said McCoy-Buckley, who used the money to attend the College of Southern Idaho.

McCoy-Buckley said she was able to earn an associate degree without having to leave CSI's Mini-Cassia campus until her last semester. The school's location allowed her to remain in the area and assisted with the flexibility she needed to raise her kids.

Representatives from CSI had attended the first layoff meetings at Simplet to talk to the employees about the grant options available.

"When Simplet shut down is when we peaked in numbers at the Mini-Cassia Center," said Lyle Bloxham, an academic and financial aid adviser at the school.

Bloxham said although many workers did not commute to the center, those who did went on to have better jobs.

As for McCoy-Buckley, she not only earned her associate degree; she also went on to attend Idaho State University. On May 10, she will graduate with a four-year teaching degree, having spent the past year student-teaching at Heyburn Elementary.

"She's just the tip of the iceberg," Bloxham said of the former Simplet workers who benefited from CSI.

Maier called CSI a key contributor in the collaborative recovery effort of the community. He said the school has not only been valuable in retraining the workforce, but also as a selling point to business relocation.

"When we have a company that comes in and CSI is at the table, there are resources they are able to bring to bear that are so valuable," he said.

Maier said other factors that have led to the recovery effort are aggressive recruiting from city leaders and workers' desire to stay in the area.

"They've taken two jobs and stayed here. They know they're raising their kids in a great community with great school systems to go," Maier said.

Those workers, termed "underemployed," are now part of the attraction for many businesses looking for what Maier calls "not just people, but people with fantastic work ethics." He said with the addition of Renova Energy to the tax base for Heyburn and Mindok County and an announced 1,000 new jobs created from various new businesses, the future is looking bright.

"We're survivors," Maier said of Mini-Cassia's recovery.

McCoy-Buckley, the now 31-year-old elementary school teacher, said her comeback story will probably not sink in until she begins setting up her first classroom.

"Now, instead of just having a job I'll have a career that I'll love," she said.

regarding the time moving trains will block intersections. A curve north of the Main Street-West/Occidental Avenue intersection limits train traffic to 10 mph. At that speed, Pacific's corn trains will take about seven-and-a-half minutes to pass a given point. That delay has some residents' worried about traffic congestion, especially at peak hours.

To minimize delays, Doster suggested working with traffic to encourage the arrival and departure of trains at non-peak hours. But Pacific officials say they can only request a delivery timetable — whether the request is honored is decided by the owner of the railroad, Union Pacific.

Union Pacific said it has limited control over arrival and departure times.

"Freight trains are not like passenger trains, where you can put them on a schedule; it really depends on the trains," Union Pacific spokeswoman Zoe Richmond said. "When it comes to setting the when and the where, it really up to the customer."

Another concern related to Pacific's operations is its environmental impact. Idaho Department of Environmental Quality senior engineer Dave Pitman said the plant will emit some pollutants, including volatile organic compounds and small amounts of formaldehyde and acetaldehyde.

But Pitman said Pacific's emissions will be less toxic than emissions produced by fossil-fuel plants such as coal-fired power plants and the level of organic compounds emitted will be far lower than what is discharged by larger plants like the Pullrich pulp and paper mill in Lewiston.

"It's more like a brewery," he said. "It's a natural process that's occurring."

Crapo digs a compromise out of the Owyhee wilderness

Nothing is ever certain in the politics of wilderness, but a bill introduced by U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo last week may actually have a chance of becoming a law that protects the Owyhee canyon-lands. The Owyhee Public Lands Management Act of 2008 would create a new 807-square-mile wilderness while opening other previously off-limits areas to motorized recreation, live-stock grazing and other activities.

It would also provide private ranchers with cash and federal land in exchange for giving up private land and surrendering grazing rights on some public land.

Crapo's previous wilderness bill, in 2006, put the amount to be given to ranchers at $15 million, but it's unclear how much money is involved in the current legislation.

The Wilderness Society is on board this time, as are some groups that represent ranching interests.

More importantly, so — apparently — is Idaho's other Republican senator, Larry Craig. Previously he was Senator No when it came to wilderness legislation.

When Crapo introduced Owyhee legislation two years ago, Craig wanted all the money needed to designate such wilderness to be provided before the bill became law. But Crapo consulted Craig from the start in redrafting the bill, and thinks the senator's concerns won't be a problem this time.

The first hurdle will be the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee and its Public Lands and Forest Subcommittee, chaired by Oregon Democrat Ron Wyden. Hearings are scheduled to start April 22.

Wyden and the committee's overall chairman, Sen. Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M., are ardent wilderness supporters, but they're sure to hear criticism of the bill from some extreme environmentalists.

And then there's Crapo's fellow Republican, Sen. Tom Coburn of Oklahoma, who has threatened to filibuster any legislation that contains new federal spending.

But this version of the Owyhee bill enjoys as close to consensus as is likely for wilderness legislation. And if it makes headway in the Senate it can't help but bolster Rep. Mike Simpson's Central Idaho Economic Development and Recreation Act, which is pending before the House Committee on Natural Resources.

CHEDRA is a much more complicated piece of legislation, a knife-edge compromise among environmentalists, off-road vehicle groups and residents of the Sawtooth Valley. Two years ago, CHEDRA survived the objections of Craig and then congressman — and now governor — C.L. "Butch" Otter. The leadership of the GOP who ran the House and Senate at the time, agreed on the details and CHEDRA was attached to another bill. But at the last minute, then-Speaker of the House Dennis Hastert of Illinois pulled the plug in favor of legislation that benefited his state.

Now the Democrats, who as a group are more wilderness-friendly, control Congress. Simpson has kept CHEDRA alive by hard work and strategic concessions, the same kind of horse-trading Crapo had to do to make the Owyhee wilderness bill viable again.

Maybe — just maybe — they'll get to stand behind President Bush when he signs both bills into law later this year.

Racism is more than skin-deep

To my horror, I turn out to be a racist. The University of Chicago offers an online psychological test in which you encounter a series of 100 black or white men, holding either guns or cell phones. You're supposed to shoot the gunmen and holster your gun for the others.

I shot armed blacks in an average of 0.673 seconds, while I waited slightly longer — .694 seconds — to shoot armed whites. Conversely, I holstered my gun more quickly when encountering unarmed whites than unarmed blacks.

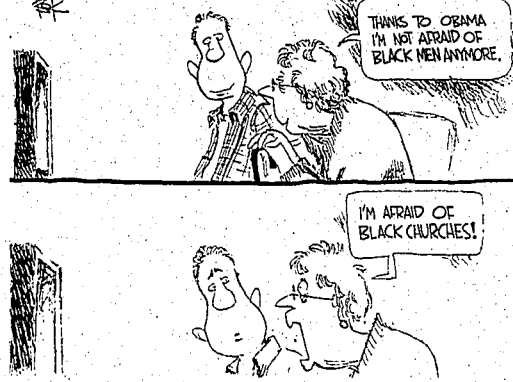

Take the test yourself and you should bias as well. Most whites and many blacks are more quick to shoot blacks, no matter how egalitarian they profess to be.

Harvard has a similar battery of psychological tests online (I have links to all of these from my blog, nytimes.com/ontheground, and my Facebook page, facebook.com/kristof). These "implicit attitude tests" very cleverly show that a stunningly large proportion of people who honestly believe themselves to be egalitarian unconsciously associate good with white and bad with black.

The unconscious is playing a political role this year, but the evidence is overwhelming that most Americans have unconscious biases both against blacks and against women in executive roles.

At first glance, it may seem like Barack Obama would face a sterner impediment than Hillary Clinton. Experiments have shown that the brain categorizes people by race in less than 100 milliseconds (one-tenth of a second), about 50 milliseconds before determining sex. And evolutionary psychologists believe we're hard-wired to be suspicious of people outside our own group, to save our ancestors from blithely greeting enemy tribes of cave men. In contrast, there's no hard-wired hostility toward women, though men may have a hard-wired desire to control and impregnate them.

Yet racism may also be easier to override than sexism. For example, one experiment found it easy for whites to admire black doctors. Meanwhile, whites categorize black doctors whom they dislike as "blacks."

In another experiment, researchers had blacks and whites in sports jerseys as if they belonged to two basketball teams. People looking at the photos logged the players in their memories more by team than by race, recalling a player's jersey color but not necessarily his or her race. But only very rarely did people forget whether a player was male or female.

"We can make categorization-by-race go away, but we could never make gender categorization go away," said John Tooby, a scholar at the University of California,

Santa Barbara, who ran the experiment. Looking at the challenges that black and female candidates face in overcoming unconscious bias, he added: "Based on the underlying psychology and anthropology, I think it's more difficult for a woman, though not impossible."

The challenge for women competing in politics or business is less misogyny than their unconscious sexism: Americans don't hate women, but they do frequently stereotype them as warm and friendly, creating a mismatch with the stereotypical tool of leaders as tough and strong. Six voters (women as well as men, though a bit less so) may feel that a female candidate is not the right person for the job because of biases they're not even aware of.

"I don't have to be a cynic of this," said Niranjan Dasgupta, a psychology professor at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. "All I think is that this person isn't a good fit for a tough leadership job." Women have lost 10 percent of top jobs at American foundations but are still vastly underrepresented among political and corporate leaders — and one factor may be that those who are seen as jobs requiring particular toughness. Our unconscious may feel more of a mismatch when a woman competes to be president or a CEO than when she aims to lead a foundation or a university.

Women face a related challenge: Those viewed as tough and strong are also typically perceived as cold and unfeeling. Many experiments have found that women have trouble being perceived as both nice and competent.

But biases are not immutable. Research subjects who were asked to think of a strong woman then showed less implicit bias about men and women. And students exposed to a large number of female professors also experienced a reduction in gender stereotypes.

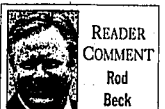

Maybe the impact of this presidential contest won't be measured just in national policies, but also in progress in the deepest recesses of our own minds.

GOP candidates should be chosen by Republicans

The Idaho Legislature adjourned April 2 without passing an issue important to most Idaho Republicans providing a severely abbreviated nomination for Idaho Republican rules that prohibit Democrats and other non-Republicans from participation in the selection of Idaho Republican candidates. This issue has been debated and voted on at least three times by the Idaho Republican Party, including the 2006 Idaho Republican Convention, two official meetings of the State Central Committee (the governing body of the Idaho Republican Party) and has been supported each time with large majorities (the last vote was more than 70 percent favorable on the issue).

The state Senate passed a bill the last day of the session that would change the candidate selection process somewhat but did not provide for the full implementation of Idaho Republican rules to stop Democrats and non-Republicans from participation in the selection of Republican candidates.

John Miller of The Associated Press wrote an article that appeared in several daily papers attempting to describe the state Senate vote on the candidate selection bill. Unfortunately, the AP account included editorial comments and information that was not factual. My purpose in writing this piece is to correct the record.

The AP article called me and others associated with this issue the "members of the party's secret information wing," then correctly pointed out that "70 percent of the party's central committee in January favored" our efforts and "pledged to sue if the 2008 Legislature didn't make the changes the central committee majority sought." It's clear the AP considers most Republicans "arch-conservatives." This was the last time you read the AP or any establishment paper reference Democrats as liberal, much less as ultra-liberal or any hyphenated liberal!

The AP then manufactured a "fracture" between those of us favoring the Republican rule on candidate selection (70 percent of the State Central Committee) and what the AP calls, "Idaho's GOP mainstream." The AP must believe that politicians as "Idaho's GOP mainstream" because a majority of the Idaho Legislature is not in favor of the candidate selection rules of the Idaho Republican Party. However, the GOP Central Committee overwhelmingly favors this proposal.

Amazingly, the AP then concludes that one of the reasons myself and others are pursuing the full implementation of the Idaho GOP rules on candidate selection is because of the abortion issue. The Idaho Republican Party's platform is proudly pro-life, and so am I. However, one goal of providing a candidate selection process for the Idaho GOP that would not allow Democrats a voice in selecting our candidates has nothing to do with the abortion issue. For the AP or anyone to suggest that is simply not true, at all.

Because the Idaho Legislature failed to provide a mechanism for the Idaho GOP to maintain our constitutional rights of freedom of association, we are forced to petition a federal court. I am convinced the U.S. Constitution is on our side. At least the U.S. Supreme Court agrees with us on this one.

Israeli leaders snub Carter during trip to Mideast

By Amy Teibel
Associated Press writer

JERUSALEM — Former President Jimmy Carter brooked the first Israeli-Arab peace deal, but he's getting a cool reception in Israel during his latest visit to the Mideast. Israeli leaders are shunning the globe-trotting peacekeeper for planning to meet with Khaled Mashal, the head of Israel's arch-enemy Hamas, and comparing the Jewish state's policies to apartheid.

A schedule released by the Atlanta-based Carter Center showed no plans for the former president to meet any of Israel's key players: Prime Minister Ehud Olmert, Foreign Minister Tzipi Livni or Defense Minister Ehud Barak during this week's visit, which began Sunday. The only high-ranking official on Carter's schedule was Israel's ceremonial head of state, President Shimon Peres. The 83-year-old former U.S. leader held a closed meeting with Peres shortly after arriving Sunday. A senior Israeli official said "scheduling problems" was the official reason given for the high-profile snub — even though Olmert recently took time to chat with "Prison Break" star Wentworth Miller. But the real reason for the cold shoulder is Carter's plan to meet with Mashal when his Carter Center delegation travels later this week to Damascus, Syria, the Israeli official said. Israel's leader are not publicly criticizing Carter out of respect for his former position as U.S. president, the official added. He spoke on condition of anonymity because his explanation went beyond the official position.

Former U.S. President Jimmy Carter, left, speaks with Noam Schalit, the father of captured Israeli soldier Cpl. Gilad Schalit, during their meeting in Jerusalem, Sunday. Carter said he feels "quite at ease" about meeting Hamas militants over the objections of Washington because the Palestinian group is essential to a future peace with Israel.

"I don't know if this would even be an issue if it weren't for Guantanamo Bay," Brunt said. "How many times did the CIA even do waterboarding? Three times?" added Dave Ellis, the company's president. "But look at the damage it did to America's reputation," Brunt pointed out. "And it's going to hurt our image."

Indeed, Hudgens's lawsuit, filed Jan. 17 in Provo, suggests the testosterone-polluted setting of the David Mamet play "Glengarry Glen Ross." Hudgens alleged that if the 10-person sales team went a day without a sale, members had to work the next day standing up; Christopherson took away their chairs. The team leader also threatened to draw a mustache in permanent marker on the face of sales people for "negativity," Hudgens said. Christopherson kept on his desk a piece of wood, "the 2-by-4 of motivation," he said.

Brunt and Ellis dispute all this. "When you meet Josh, Brunt said, 'he's a nice, sensitive guy.' Hudgens agreed that Christopherson was "an unpleasant guy; everybody there likes him." But he added: "It is a big pressure cooker in there, I'll tell you." He said low performers were threatened with "the Cure Team" — two weeks to improve or you're fired.

Last last May, the all-male sales team was having "a rough week." Christopherson called the men into the break room and announced, "We're going to do an exercise." He asked for a volunteer.

Hudgens raised his hand. "Keep in mind," he said, "the last time we did a team-building exercise outside, we did an egg toss." Prosper maintains that Christopherson explained what would happen next, and Hudgens knew what he was in for, even handling his cellphone and keys to his workers before lying down. Hudgens insists he had no clue.

"So they held me down," Hudgens said, "and the next thing I know, Josh has a gallon jug of water and he's pouring it on my face. I can't scream because the water's going down my throat. And halfway through he stopped for a second. I tried to mumble the words, 'Stop, knock it off.' I tried to get that out and he continued to pour."

"I'm not getting any air," Hudgens said. "Toward the end, I'm starting to black out. I'm getting very dizzy, lightheaded. The sensation that's going through my head is, 'I'm going to drown.' That is the oft-described whole point of waterboarding, though Hudgens said he was not then familiar with the word. He said that what he told a friend in the human relations office two hours later, after "coughing, choking, mucus" was: "My team just tried to kill me." Only later, after describing the experience to a former employer, was he told: "Keep in mind, he was waterboarded." "I said, 'What's waterboarding?' And the only difference was, instead of lying on a board, I was lying on a grassy hill." Christopherson did not know the term, either, Brunt said. "He thought it had something to do with water skiing."

He said Christopherson told the executives that he was inspired by reading about the Greek philosopher Socrates, who is said to have once held a student's head under water, then told him he must want to learn as badly as he wanted air.

"We don't know what he was thinking, but we know that he wasn't thinking waterboarding, or tortures," Brunt said. Christopherson, suspended for two weeks while the company investigated the incident, is back on the job. The company declined to allow interviews with him or other employees.

"The sales team leaders were very focused here," Brunt said. "There was an incident, so it's not fabricated. There was a training exercise. He did lie down on a hill. The entire exercise lasted less than 20 seconds. A little bit of water was poured and then Josh would stop and say, 'Are you okay?'"

On eve of hearings, documents show feds failing to take action on drugs in water

By Martha Mendoza
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — A White House task force that was supposed to devise a federal plan to research the issue of pharmaceuticals in drinking water has missed its deadline and failed to produce mandated reports and recommendations for coordination among numerous federal agencies, according to documents obtained by The Associated Press.

More than 70 pages of the task force's documents, including e-mails and weekly reports, were released under the Freedom of Information Act as a Senate subcommittee prepares to convene a hearing Tuesday prompted by an AP investigation about trace concentrations of drugs in America's drinking water.

The working group on pharmaceuticals in the environment was formed two years ago through the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy. The panel has met several times for briefings and is aware of public concern about pharmaceuticals in water supplies, according to the documents. In a weekly report dated March 24, 2006, then-task force coordinator Kevin Geiss, wrote: "There has been considerable congressional interest in this topic."

But it is impossible to track any possible progress by the group because the White House has classified task force agendas and minutes as internal documents, and therefore cannot be released, said spokeswoman Kristin Scuderi. The group's annual report is in draft form and therefore also cannot be released at this time, she added.

Time for Some Financial Spring Cleaning?

You may or may not engage in many of the typical activities of "spring cleaning" — dusting, cluttering the attic, reorganizing your closets, touching up the paint, etc. — but you can almost certainly benefit from "sprucing up" your financial situation.

As you survey your financial landscape, what areas might you want to tidy up? Here are a few suggestions:

- Clear your portfolio of "redundant" investments. Over time, you may have built a sizable investment portfolio. But if you have too many investments that look alike, you may actually be hindering your progress toward your goals. After all, if you own a dozen stocks of companies in the same industry, they're all likely to be buffeted by the same economic forces. Look for opportunities to replace some of these "redundancies" with different types of securities, taking into account your risk tolerance and time horizon.
- Organize your financial records. If you're like those of us who file our taxes at the last minute, now is the perfect time to organize your financial records, because you've probably got them close at hand. And it's not just a matter of having your brokerage and 401(k) statements in nice, neat piles. Once you've got these documents together, you might see opportunities to consolidate some of your accounts. For example, you may have IRAs with different banks and financial services companies. By moving them all to one provider, and possibly rolling over an old 401(k) into an IRA, you could save some fees and reduce your paperwork. But, more importantly, you may find that such a move actually helps you better manage your investments. You'll know exactly what you're invested in, and it will be easier to follow a single investment strategy. Also, with all your IRAs in one place, it will be much easier for you to manage the required minimum distributions you must start taking when you turn 70-1/2. (These distributions are not required for Roth IRAs.)
- Review your "systematic" investments. Many years ago, you might have started systematically moving money from your checking account into an investment. But perhaps the circumstances of your life have changed and this money could better be used elsewhere. Scrutinize your automatic investments to see if they still make sense for you.
- Check your beneficiaries. Beneficiary designations on financial documents — insurance policies, IRAs, 401(k)s, etc. — are extremely important, because they supersede even the instructions in your will. Over time, your family situation may have changed, through death, divorce, remarriage or the birth of new children, so you should periodically review all your beneficiary designations.
- Examine your insurance coverage. When you have a young family, you need a certain amount of life insurance coverage to provide for some major expenses — such as your mortgage, college for your kids, perhaps some retirement funds for your spouse. But when your children have grown, your mortgage is paid and your spouse has decades' worth of retirement savings, your insurance needs may change considerably. At the same time, you may find other uses for insurance. Take some time and review your insurance coverage with your financial advisor.

By following these "spring cleaning" suggestions, you can help put your financial house in order for the seasons to follow. Take action soon.

Delta, Northwest eye Tuesday to announce combination deal

ATLANTA — Delta and Northwest could announce a combination as early as Tuesday that would create the world's biggest airline, but pilot contract issues still loomed and there was no guarantee the deal would move ahead, three people familiar with the talks said Sunday.

The people, who spoke on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the situation, said officials were mobilizing for an announcement provided the boards of the two companies give final approval to a deal. The boards of both companies have been having ongoing merger-related conversations. They could meet Monday to discuss moving ahead with a deal, a person familiar with the talks said.

It was increasingly likely the two airlines would proceed without a prearranged seniority integration agreement between their pilots unions, so the main issue that remained was whether Delta pilots were willing to make changes to their contract to give Delta more flexibility after a combination, one of the people said.

Delta may be willing to give incentives to Delta pilots to make changes to their contract, another person familiar with the talks said.

Hadley: 'Cop-out' to skip Olympic opening ceremonies

It would be a "cop-out" for countries to skip the opening ceremonies at the Beijing Olympics as a way of protesting China's crackdown in Tibet, President Bush's national security adviser said Sunday.

"This kind of 'quiet diplomacy' that the U.S. is practicing is a better way to send a message to China's leaders rather than 'frontal confrontation,'" Stephen Hadley said.

President Bush has given no indication he will skip the event. "I don't view the Olympics as a political event," Bush said this past week. "I view it as a sporting event." The White House has not yet said whether he will attend the opening ceremony on Aug. 8.

"We haven't worked out the details of his schedule at this point in time, but from his vantage point, if you listen to what he said, he has no reason not to go," Hadley said in a broadcast interview Sunday. "Because what he has said is we need to be using diplomacy."

Calling a boycott issue "a bit of a red herring," Hadley added: "I think, unfortunately, a lot of countries say, 'Well, I've said that we are not going to the opening ceremonies, we've checked the box on Tibet.' That's a cop-out."

"If other countries are concerned about Tibet, they ought to do what we are doing through quiet diplomacy, send the message clearly to the Chinese that this is an opportunity with the whole world watching to show that they take into account and are determined to treat their citizens with dignity and respect. They would put pressure on the Chinese authorities quietly to meet with representatives of the Dalai Lama and use this as an opportunity to help resolve that situation," he said.

World Bank leader urges action on mounting food prices

The president of the World Bank on Sunday urged immediate action to deal with mounting food prices that have caused hunger and deadly violence in several countries.

Robert Zoellick said the international community has "to put our money where our mouths is" and act now to help hungry people. "It is as stark as that."

He called on governments to rapidly carry out commitments to provide the U.N. World Food Program with $500 million in emergency aid it needs by May 1.

"It is critical that governments confirm their commitments as soon as possible and others begin to commit," Zoellick said. Prices have only risen further since the WFP issued that appeal, so it is urgent that governments step up, he said.

After a meeting of the bank's policy-setting committee, Zoellick said that the fall of the government in Haiti over the weekend after a wave of deadly rioting and looting over food prices underscores the importance of quick international action. A U.N. police officer was killed Saturday in Haiti's capital.

entrusted to UNESCO. He demanded an internal investigation.

UNESCO Director General Koichiro Matsuura said it was "completely incomprehensible and inappropriate" that some of the organization's "most important and successful collections" were ordered destroyed, including histories of humanity and Africa, and surveys of ancient monuments.

UNESCO inquiring into destruction of 100,000 books

PARIS — For more than two decades, 250 historians and specialists labored to produce the first six volumes of the General History of Latin America, an exhaustive work financed by UNESCO, the United Nations organization created to preserve global culture and heritage.

Then, over the course of two years, UNESCO paid to destroy many of those books and nearly 100,000 others by turning them to pulp, according to an external audit.

"This is the intellectual organization of the United Nations system," Aziza Liemani, Morocco's ambassador to UNESCO, said in an interview. "How could an employee of UNESCO make a decision to destroy these books?"

Homero Aridjis, Mexico's ambassador, said at the organization's executive council meeting this past week. "This is not only a blow to the culture and knowledge of entire populations and nations, it contradicts the mandate

Success for Wilson and Hutchison in District VI rodeo

By Diane Philbin
Staff writer

FILER — As the sun began to set on top No. 6 for the District VI Saturday afternoon, the girls all-around leader, Kindee Wilson had claimed yet another pair of wins in goat tying and barrel racing. This gave the Filer cowgirl a district-high of seven firsts for the season.

After Wilson won the goat tying Friday night with the fastest time of the season at 7.03 seconds, Wilson came back on Saturday heading that time with a run of 6.74.

Wilson's time was more than a second quicker than the time of 8.06 by Kelli Kindig of Minico. In winning the barrels, Wilson had a run of 18.181 seconds edging the Kimberly's Megan Crist's time of 18.272.

Luce Hutchison also picked up two victories as the Raft River cowboy tied Colton Bedke of Oakley for a first place win in bull riding, and teamed with Brandon Mullins of Oakley to grab the team roping title with a 16.93-second run beating the second place team of Coy Tolle and Jessica Launth of Bimley at 21.17.

Hutchison and Bedke were asked who had the better ride since both were scored 61 points and each contestant gave the nod to the other guy. "My bull had me out of position and threw a lot at me," said Bedke. Hutchison agreed that his bull almost got the best of him as well. "He came around both ways and threw in a twist," said Hutchison.

Cody Westworth of Kimberly finished third with a 56-point ride and Eldredge of Filer was fourth with a score of 50.

Just minutes earlier, Eldredge had what could have been a near wreck in team roping with his partner, Katie Vierstra of Filer.

After the header — Vierstra had roped the steer and went to turn away from her partner — the animal cut back in front of Eldredge putting the cowboy and his horse in a very dangerous position.

Vierstra reacted quickly letting her rope and steer loose eliminating what could have been a major catastrophe. "I always have to protect my horse," said Eldredge.

The reigning district queen, Halli Stutzman of Kimberly showed her riding talent winning the poles with a time of 21.295 seconds. Her time was only .002 seconds behind the fastest run recorded by Darby Lither of Filer at the opening rodeo at the College of Southern Idaho. Paige Yore of Declo was second at 21.663 and Wilson finished third at 21.711. In breakaway, Yore beat the field at 2.70 seconds followed by Vierstra at 3.47.

On the boys side, Chase Bries of Declo roped his steer in 10.83 seconds to beat the 12.80 time of Chisum Hughes of Filer in calf roping. With only four

'Master'ful win for Immelman

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Trevor Immelman has never felt better. Four months after he had a tumor removed from his back, Immelman handled the wind and pressure of Augusta National for better than anyone chasing him Sunday to win the Masters, the first South African in a green jacket in 30 years.

Immelman held it together around Amen Corner and stretched his lead to as many as six shots on the back nine, taking the life out of a Masters that began with so much hype.

A two-putt par on the final hole gave him a 3-over 75, matching the highest final round by a Masters champion. Even so, it was good enough for a three-shot victory over Tiger Woods, whose hopes for a calendar Grand Slam ended with a thud.

Woods never got within five shots of the lead when he was on the course, twice missed birdie putts inside 8 feet and had to settle for a 72 and his second consecutive runner-up finish in the Masters.

"I learned my lesson there with the press," said Woods, who started the talk about a Grand Slam by stating three months ago that winning all four majors in the same year was "nearly within reason."

The only slam possibilities now belong to Immelman, a 29-year-old with a polished swing, who finally realized his potential in the wicked wind of Augusta and a final round that yielded only four rounds under par.

Immelman, who finished at 8-under 208, started the week by playing a practice round with his boy's hood idol, Gary Player, who won his third Masters in 1978 and set a record by playing for the 51st time.

Player told Immelman he was good enough to win the green jacket, and he left him a voice-mail Saturday night that Immelman played on his

Even Woods isn't immune on back nine

AUGUSTA, Ga. — If the millions watching from their living room couches weren't paying close attention Sunday, they might have thought this was quite a Masters.

Trevor Immelman made a hole-in-one, Tiger Woods chipped one from nowhere and the ball hung on the edge of the hole before dropping.

TIM DAHLBERG

Great shots were breaking out all over the back nine, and with each one the raars seemed only to get louder. Unfortunately, none was from this year.

Hard to blame CBS for showing highlights of previous Masters even while this one was going on. A senior bowling tournament would have been more interesting than this smoozer.

By the time Immelman gagged his way in, almost everyone had already gagged and gone home. He didn't so much win this green jacket as inherit it, and even the great Woods wasn't able to do anything about it.

Listen to the hushed tones of those who worship in the cathedral of golf that is Augusta National, and they'll tell you the Masters doesn't begin until the back nine on Sunday. On this Sunday, they might as well

Vest takes opener at Magic Valley Speedway

By Linda Brittain
Correspondent

It had been quite a while since Rob Vest made the sharp left turn into the Magic Valley Speedway winner's circle after a much-contested race. On Saturday he didn't waste any time, securing the first victory of the Pepsi Premier division for the 2008 season.

"I felt great," Vest said. "I really wanted to win and dedicate the race to my new son, Quintin. But when I saw Shelby (Stroebel) so far ahead of me I didn't think I had a chance to catch him. We had to be a little aggressive to get where we were at — keeping Shelby behind us — but we just had to do it, there were too many lap cars in front of us."

Vest started from the 10th position for the inaugural main event after finishing first in his heat. Stroebel, who started the 50-lap race from the pole position, gained an extensive lead over the rest of the pack by lap 10 while the No. 29 car of Stevie Fisher and the No. 70 car of Mike Greco fought for second position.

Meanwhile, Vest steadily picked his way through the field and was up to second at lap 20. Before long, lap traffic began to come into play and soon Stroebel found Vest right at his driver's side door. With seven laps remaining in the race, heavy lap traffic presented Stroebel and Vest with the problem of having to find some way around the slower cars — but Vest finally made his move, squeezing his way between the cars of Kenny Vanderham and Dan Pehrson.

Stroebel soon made his way around as well, but the pair then came up on the cars of Cliff Chester and Jonathan Coover. With two laps remaining in the race, the No. 22 car of Chester was sent spinning into the infield in Turn 2 — and Vest was able to pull ahead and finish more than a half-second over runner-up Stroebel.

"I was watching the scoreboard, but I didn't really realize how close he (Vest) was getting," Stroebel said. "Rob and I were racing side-by-side and we were getting caught up in lap traffic and basically we were just trying to see which of them was going to go ahead."

Pitz wins first Pony Stocks race

Josh Pitz won the first Pony Stocks main event race of the season after battling with pole sitter Randy Grubbs for most of the contest. The No. 21 car of Brent Abbott followed the pair, closely waiting for one of the two to make a mistake, but Pitz was able to make his car stick in the outside groove while Grubbs held his ground on the inside

Rob Vest (27) makes his move to squeeze between Dan Pehrson (72) and Kenny Vanderham (12) late in the Pepsi Premier Series main event race at Magic Valley Speedway while Shelby Stroebel (24) tries to stick as close to Vest as possible. Vest went on to capture the win.

Roddick beats Mathieu to send U.S. past France into Davis Cup semis

By Mike Cranston
Associated Press writer

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — Andy Roddick proved dominant again in the Davis Cup, sending the defending champion United States past France on Sunday and into the semifinals against Spain.

Behind a blistering serve, Roddick defeated Paul-Henri Mathieu 6-2, 6-3, 6-2 for the deciding victory in the best-of-five quarterfinal. This was Roddick's second singles victory in three days.

A day after a loss by the No. 1 doubles team of Bob and Mike Bryan kept France's hopes alive, Roddick was never threatened in giving the Americans an insurmountable 3-1 lead. While he was held to 17 aces, he lost only 13 points on his serve to improve to 10-0 in clinching situations for the U.S.

"I think everyone makes a big deal about the 10-0 thing," Roddick said. "I have to be up 2-1 in order to clinch, so I've been put in good positions a lot of times."

Roddick wrapped up the sixth straight Davis Cup victory for the U.S., including last year's win over Russia in the final, with a one-down the middle. He then made a lap around the court with the American flag and his teammates.

In a concluding singles match that had no bearing on the outcome, James Blake defeated Richard Gasquet 6-7 (4), 6-4, 6-1 for a 4-1 final score.

Next up for the U.S. is a road matchup against Rafael Nadal and Spain in the semifinals Sept. 19-21, which almost certainly will be on clay.

"I know it's not convenient for us. I know we're not going to be the favorites," Roddick said. "But I know we're going to go and we're going to try. The thing about this tennis is we don't play when it's convenient. That's probably different from some of the other countries."

In other quarterfinals, Russia eliminated the Czech Republic 3-2, and Argentina ousted Sweden 4-1. Spain advanced Saturday by defeating Germany and led 1-0 Sunday.

Roddick broke Mathieu five times and won in just more than 90 minutes. He had 30 aces in a straight-sets win over Michael Llodra on Friday and never faced a break point against Mathieu.

Roddick wasn't broken in two matches on the quick, indoor hard-court suited to his style.

"I wasn't giving him anything," Roddick said. "The points he was winning he was having to step up and crank two or three balls to the corners and really exorcise his demons."

Boston overcomes New York 8-5

BOSTON — A wild DuSable Matsuzaka labored through five innings before the Boston Red Sox's over-worked bullpen balked him out for a stoppy 8-5 win over the New York Yankees on Sunday night.

Matsuzaka surrendered 13 runs after leading just long enough to get the win as he tossed six shutouts — at least one in each inning. But Yankees starter Phil Hughes (2-2) was even worse. The 25-year-old career has been on a roller coaster, and finishing a career-high seven innings.

WHITE SOX 11, TIGERS 0
TIGERS' J.D. Dethlefsen and Paul Konerko each hit grand slams to help Detroit capture the season opener, 11-0, in Sunday's Detroit Tigers 11-0 win Sunday.

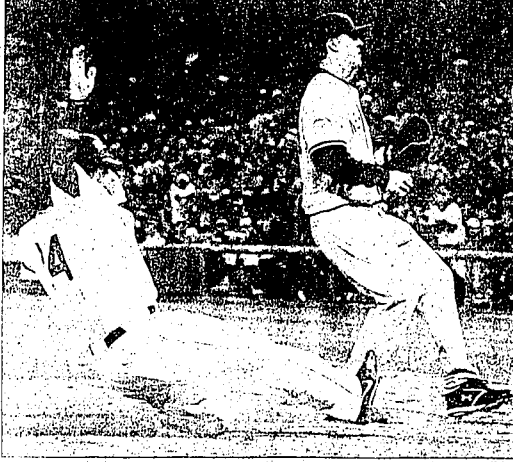

Konerko's homer came in the third off Jhonny Pagan and Roddick's grand slam, his second this season, came in the fifth against Zach Lutz as the White Sox won for the 10th time in as games over Detroit, the preseason favorite to win the AL Central.

ROYALS 5, TWINS 1
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Brian Buntcher threw his second career complete game and outpitched Francisco Lirio, who was making his first start since 2006, to help end a three-game skid.

INDIANS 7, ATHLETICS 1
CLEVELAND — Cliff Lee's quick and efficient pitching in the yard and on the mound helped the Indians to a five-game winning streak.

RAVS 6, ORIOLES 2
BALTIMORE — The Baltimore Orioles allowed nine runs over six innings in their major league debut and fell 6-2 to the Red Sox.

Los Angeles Lakers' Kobe Bryant, right, scores a basket under the block of San Antonio Spurs Tim Duncan during the second quarter of a basketball game in Los Angeles, Sunday. Bryant finished with 20 points and the Lakers won 106-85.

Bryant, Lakers rout Spurs, move closer to top seed

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Lakers took sole possession of the Western Conference lead Sunday. One more win and they're assured of keeping it.

MVP candidate Kobe Bryant had 20 points, five rebounds and five assists before sitting out the fourth quarter, and the Lakers routed the defending NBA champion, San Antonio Spurs 106-85, for their seventh win in eight games.

NUGGETS 111, ROCKETS 94
DENVER — Allen Iverson scored 33 points, JR Smith scored 23 points, and Denver earned a win away from capturing a playoff spot.

All the Nuggets have to do now to reach the playoffs for the 10th straight time is beat Los Angeles on Wednesday night at home. Denver (49-32) moved a half-game ahead of Golden State for the eighth and final playoff spot in the Western Conference.

SUPERSONICS 99, MAVERICKS 95

SEATTLE — Rookie Kevin Durant scored twice in the final 15 seconds, and the Sonics won what could be the team's last in Seattle. The team might be playing in Oklahoma City next season and is putting the finishing touches on the worst record in franchise history.

The Sonics outshined and outplayed the playing-hot Mavericks, giving their fans something to be proud of. Earl Watson led Seattle with 21 points and 10 assists, while Nick Collison had 10 points and 11 rebounds as Seattle scored the final 10 points and handed Dallas, a second straight loss.

MAGIC 104, BULLS 84
CHICAGO — DeLoe Parkright scored 21 points, and Orlando Magic reached the 50-win mark for the first time in 12 years.

Dwight Howard added 19 points even though he sat out the fourth quarter, and Rashard Lewis added 18.

Orlando got a much-needed win after dropping six of 10 and losing to former-bound New York and Minnesota in that span. In between, the Magic captured their most lopsided win of the season when they beat Chicago 115-83 at home on Wednesday.

CAVALIERS 84, HEAR 76

CLEVELAND — Daniel Gibson made a 3-pointer and three straight free throws early in the fourth quarter to give Cleveland some cushion while LeBron James rested, and the Cavaliers moved closer to the Sox's No. 4 seed.

Delonte West scored 10 points, Zhaquan Braggins had 11 and 11 rebounds, and James finished with 13 points, 11 rebounds and seven assists for the Cavaliers, who didn't play well again but had enough to hold off the pathetic Heat.

PISTONS 91, RAPTORS 84

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Mich. — Rodney Stuckey scored 14 points, Ison Maheshell had 14 as Detroit won without playing its starters in the fourth quarter.

The loss drops Toronto (40-30) into a tie with Philadelphia 1-1 over the Eastern Conference's sixth seed with two games left, although the Raptors have the tiebreaker.

Savard's OT goal leads Bruins victory over Canadiens

BOSTON — Marc Savard came off the bench on a delayed penalty to score with 9:57 remaining on Sunday night and the Boston Bruins beat the Montreal Canadiens for the first time this season, winning 2-1 in Game 3 of their first-round playoff series.

Tim Thomas made 27 saves, stopping several shots at close range in overtime, and Milan Lucic also scored for Boston.

Alex Kowalev had a power-play goal and Carey Price stopped 29 shots for the Canadiens, who had beaten the Bruins in all eight games in the regular season and the first two of their best-of-seven playoff series.

DEVILS 4, RANGERS 3, OT
NEW YORK — John Madden scored 6:01 into overtime to get the New Jersey Devils back into their first-round series against the New York Rangers.

New Jersey beat the Rangers for just the second time in 11 games this season, and will look to tie the series in Game 1 on Wednesday night.

FLYERS 2, CAPITALS 0
WASHINGTON — Martin Brodeur kicked Alex Ovechkin's power-play wrist shot away in the first period, used the handle of his stick to deflect Alexander Semin's breakaway attempt in the second, and sprawled on his back while corralling the puck with his left arm to thwart Dave Steckel in the third.

Concerned stepmom can help bolster shy girl's self-esteem

DEAR ABBY: My 14-year-old stepdaughter, "Nicki," is sweet, sensitive, shy and artistic. Through no fault of her own she is two grades behind in school. She's not anti-social, but has few friends at school because of the age difference. The friends she does have take advantage of her, and she spends time with her only when she has spending money. They also borrow her things and do not return them. Nicki loves to talk about how many friends she has, but she'll also mention that they don't like her sometimes. She is socially inept with her mother for the most part, but when she visits she seems starved for attention. I try to tell her to stand up for herself, but she thinks if she does she'll lose her "friends." Her mother also has low self-esteem, and I think she has passed this on to Nicki. Is there anything I can do to bolster my step-daughter's self-esteem? And what can I say about my friends without overstepping my boundaries? — LOST STEPMOM IN PALAU

DEAR LOST STEPMOM: It is not unkind of for parents who are socially receptive to pass that trait on to their children. After all, children learn by example — and that's where you may be able to help your stepdaughter. The more time Nicki spends with you, the more she will see how you appropriately handle social situations and contemporaries. You should also share your thought process with her before and/or after you have done so. This will give her coping mechanisms in dealing with her own life. Although it may be tempting, do not put down her classmates. If you do, it that way she can meet others with whom she has something in common, and who won't have preconceived ideas about her status. # THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"What a fool Honesty is! and Trust, his sworn brother, a very simple gentleman!"
— William Shakespeare

In October of this year the World Championships return to Beijing, so I'm showing hands this week from the last World Championships there, in 1995.

When this hand occurred in the quarterfinals of the Marlboro Venice Cup between the USA-I and USA-II women (USA always has two teams that qualify for the initial phases of the event), both tables finished up in the inferior contract of three no-trump rather than the excellent five diamonds. Both received the lead of a spade around to the king.

It is now giving a moment's thought to what declarer's best line is now. Would you rather play a straightforward percentage line, or go for the psychological line? I suppose a lot depends on the quality of your opponents. The unsuccessful declarer for USA-II postponed deciding which minor to play on until the last minute. She cashed four rounds of hearts, on which West, Carol Simon, threw a discouraging diamond, and an encouraging club. After a lot of thought, South decided to believe the defenders and took the diamond finesse, going two down.

In the other room Rosanne Polack could see that if hearts did not behave, a simple diamond finesse would not necessarily be enough. She decided instead to play for her best combination shot by laying down the diamond ace at trick two, then taking the top hearts. Finally she took the club finesse and ended up with 11 tricks. I think USA-I earned their swing on this board, don't you?

ANSWER: This auction should look for a lead other than a spade. Partner had a chance to raise spades if that were the right lead. I suspect partner has a good suit on the side with an entry. My guess, given this auction, is that his suit is hearts, so I would lead the heart six.
