One look at the members of Twin Falls' Because of Jesus Ministries makes its obvious these aren't your typical postincarceration counselors

Nearly all of them have been involved at some point in illegal gangs. Most know the inside of our nation's drug culture. Some have killed people.

The support group's style may be unorthodox. But it may also be part of a larger solution to blems stemming from Idaho's exploding prison population.

Anthony Lopez, 32, the founder of Because of Jesus, has been in and out of prison since age 8. After his 2006 release, he began his ministry to ex-convicts and prison inmates, reaching out to those who seemed least open to his message. But he knew

N ... How your LAWMAKERS VOTED

Bush Impeachment: Members voted, 251-166, to send to committee a resolution by Rep. Dennis Kuclnich, D-Ohio, presenting 35 articles of impeachment against President Bush. A yes vote was to effectively kill the measure (H Res 1258) by sending it to oblivion in the Indiciary Committee.

Jobless Benefits: Members passed, 217-185, a bill (HR 5749) providing 13 more weeks of jobless checks for those who have used up their initial allotments, or 26 more weeks in states with at least a 6 percent unemployment rate. A yes vote backed a bill that would add 56.2 billion to the 2008 deficit.

Amtrak Expansion: Members approved, 311-104, a $14.9 billion rail-passenger budget for 2009-2013 that provides $9.9 billion for Amtrak, about twice the agency's pre-2007 budget level. A yes vote backed a bill (II 16003) that also provides $5 billion for state-trun intercity passenger service.

Windfall-Profits Tax Senators failed, 51-43, to reach 60 votes needed to end GOP blockage of a hill (S $044) that would levy a 25 percent tax on oil-company profits judged unreasonable by historical standards. A yes vote backed a bill that also would repeal $17 billion in oil-firm tax breaks.

Medicare Payments: Senators failed, 54-39, to reach 60 votes needed to end GOP blockage of a bill (S 310)) that would avert the administration's planned 10.6 percent cut in Medicare payments to doctors set for fully 1. A yes vote was to advance a bill slightly raising those payments next year.

$55 Billion Tax Breaks: Senators failed, 50-44, to reach 60 votes for debating a bill granting $55.5 billion

Small business loans remain within reach despite tightened requirements

Small business loans remain readily available in south-central Idaho, thanks in large part to the cautious lending practices of local banks. However, those same loans may also be more difficult to obtain due to tighter lending requirements. Ierry Mottern, assistant loan counselor with the College of Southern Idaho's Small Business Development Center, said a rising number of small-business loan delinquencies in other parts of the nation is forcing lenders to look closer at prospective borrowers. "The business environment has been changing for s on me to the contraction of the said of the contraction of the said of the contraction of the said of the contraction of the con time, but it's just starting to trickle down to our economy. Mottern said. "Witting a plan may be different than it was a few weeks ago. A small business is going to have to prove that it's going to be viable before a bank will give them a loan."

As the economy grew at a record-breaking pace before early 2007, national banks were packaging small-business loans worth billions of dollars each year. To boost loan volume and allow faster access to capital, many relaxed their underwriting practices.

They developed what we in the industry call "liar loans," said Mick D i v i n.

But the loans, which were given attractive names such as Business Credit Express and Fast Capital, Indiana and the loans and the laghty competitive banking industry because they would quickly boost profolios. The Bank of America, for example, reported during an investor's meeting that in 2007 its portfolio standibusiness from a year earlier — topping out at nearly $15 billion.

But less than a year later the bottom seemed to fail out from under many small businesses.

In April, the Bank of America announced that it was discontinuing its Business Credit Express program. Other banks quickly followed. But many people in rural areas, including south-central Idaho, are largely unaware of small business loan problems because the high-risk boans were uncommon in their area.

For example, express loans, which sometimes granted as much as $100.00 with little more than a credit check were rure in the Magic However, Divin sald that regardless of their availability, SBA underwriting requirements have been tightened because of rising delinquencies stemming from express loans in other parts of the nation.

"We can't count solely on equity anymore," Divin sald. 'A start-up is going to need more, and it's going to require a strong business plan."

The week ahead

(AP) The summer heat has hit Wall Street, and everyone's nervous about investment banks' financial results. At this point last year, reports were surfacing about investors balling out of a Beor Steams Cos. fund that bet heavily on tisky mortgages. A few days later, Beor Steams committed more than $3 billion worth of leans to keep the fund from sinking — a more that revealed to Investors how much spiking mortgage defaults could cost the banks exposed to them. Wall Street at the time called the ensuing turmoil in the debt markets the "summer credit crunch." Well, the summer of 2008 is at hand. And the crunch is still here. Certainly, a lot has happened between then and now. The Federal Reserve has slashed rates and boosted lending, which has helped the debt markets recover a bit. Several banks have kicked CEOs and other high-level executives out of the comer offices. And JPMongan Chase & Co. bought the toppling Bear Staams. But credit remains light, and investors remain anxious. Lehman Brothers Holdings Inc. is under scrutiny for making missteps similar to those made by Bear Steams. After revealing a nearly $3 billion loss for the Marcht-oMay period last week and then replacing its chief financial and chief operating officers, Lehman is scheduled to release its official quarterly results Monday.

The median salary figure of about SA emillion means half the CEOs At million means half the CEOs and the many standard more than that and half made less.
There were some signs companies were pulling back on pay at the top: Out of the 316 companies in the AP survey that had the same CEO two years running, about two-fifths lowered the total pay package for their CEOs. However, the primary culprit for some was failing stock prices that cut into the value of the shares included in pay or ute snares included in pay packages.

In many more cases, overall pay ballooned.
Rick Wagoner, chief executive of General Motors Corp., announced earlier this month the company had to close four plants that make trucks and SUVs because of laggling demand as fuel prices soar. That followed the posting a $39 billion loss in 2007, a year when its stock price fell by about 19 percent, without adjusting for dividends.

And Wagoner? His pay rose 64 percent, to $15.7 million.
Last year was rocky for the economy and the stock market, making it a useful test of a concept called pay for performance — a term companies use to sell shareholders on the idea CEOs are being paid based on how well the company does.
According to this concept, trotted out frequently by the compensation committees of corporate boards in their proxy statements, a big chunk of CEO pay is considered "at risk," meaning it could disappear if CEOs don't meet established metrics. But the AP analysis found that CEO pay rose and fell regardless of the direction of a company's stock price or nrofits.

California's same-sex weddings are expected to affect other states

Assoclated Press writer

NEW YORK — After wedding-day celebrations subside, gay and lesbian couples from other states who marry starting this week in California face sobering challenges.

Many will return home to states which explicitly reject same-sex unions. Major gayrights groups are urging them not to rush into lawsuits demanding that their marriages be recognized. Lawyers warn that they may have difficulty divorcing if things go avery.

"This is a very serious undertaking," said Richard Williams, a Chleago lawyer who has been helping local same-sex couples weigh their same-sex couples weigh their options.

"It may not be accepted here in Illinois, but it is legal, it is real," Williams said. "If you to California and get married, there are potential problems and pitfalls that you have to think about."

Likely areas of contention could include inheritance, medical decision-making, health and pension benefits, and child custody.

Starting Monday, California will become the second state after Massachusetts to allow same-sex marriages, but the first to do so without any residency requirements. No one knows how many out-of-state couples will head there to wed, but for some it's an opportunity that's impossible to pass up.
"It's something we did not wed, but for some it's an opportunity that's impossible to pass up.

"It's something we did not want to miss," said inga Sarda-Sorensen of New York City, who plans a wedding in Mailbu in mid-September with her partner of 10 years, Jennic Talley.

As New Yorkers, they've aiready gained some rights as registered domestic partners since 2004, but they view marriage as a big advance.
"When Jennic would tell co-workers we're domestic partners since 2004, but they you marriage have been some since 2004, but they you marriage in the since 2004 but they don't really get what that means, "Sarda-Sorensen said. "When she told them she was going to California to get married, it was jubilation and hugs all around."

New Yorkers heading west for weddings have n big advantage over most other non-California same-sex couples. New York Gov. David Paterson has stipulated that state law requires recognition of legal marriages performed elsewhere, including same-sex unifons. unions. Most other states worried that their court vic-tory in California could be off-set by defeats elsewhere, a coalition of nine national gayrights groups last week issued an appeal — titled "Make Change, Not Lawsuits" — to gays and lesbians considering gays and leshians considering California marriages.

"Couples who want to should get married, and ask — sometimes demand — that family, friends, neighbors, businesses, employers and the community treat their marriages with respect, the statement said.

"But one thing couples shouldn'd do is just size the federal government or, if they are from other states, go sue their home state or their employer to recognize their marriage or open up the health plan," it added. Bad rulings will make it much more difficult for us to with marriage, and will certainly make it take much honger." Conservative legal groups opposed to same-sex marriage questioned whether that appeal would be heeded.

"We expect a large scale of lawsuits in various states across the country," said Austin Nimocks, senior legal counsel with the Alliance Defense Fund, "Obviously these groups want to go ahead in a cohesive strategy — but don't think they'll he able to stop everybody."

"Worried about possible legal chaos, attorneys general from several states asked California to postpone the start of same-sex marriage until after Nov. 4 voting on a state failor measce marriage until after Nov. 4 voting on a state failor measce marriage qualif after Nov. 4 voting on a state failor measterminate and the such unions. The request was denied.

Shannon Minter, legal direc-tor of the National Center for Lesbian Rights, said litigation by newly married same-sex couples "should be an absolute last resort" — reserved only for cases where there is grievous injustice and Minter also noted that same-sex couples marrying in California could find themselves with no efficient way to dissolve the marriage if it breaks down. States that don't recognize same-sex marriages might refuse to grant a divorce, and California—while lacking a residency requirement for marriage—does have one for divorces.

this month all but guarantees there wonth be a new Mini-Cassia airport anytime soon.

P&Z commissioners have recommended expanding Heyburn's infpact zone to include property the City Council annexed in May in a move that compromised Burley's pursuit of a new airport.

Heyburn added about 320 acres of the proposed new impact zone in May at the request of Bincoe Farms, which owns the land. Annexation and simultaneous commercial zoning designation of the land may have ended Burley's chance to acquire if or the location of a new air-its riven ecoit for the location of a new airport.

The property in question, about two square miles of agriculture-dominated land, extends from 550 W. to 850 W., and from Interstate 84 to 250 S. Before the Heyburn City Council can ratify the recommendation of its own Planning and Zoning commissioners, the proposal must pass through Minidoka County's Planning and Zoning Commission and be agreed upon by county commissioners.

Commission and be agreed upon by county commissioners.

City impact zones are areas contiguous to but outside of city limits. By including those areas in their impact zones, cities increase their control over a variative frontier issues of feet in their impact zones. ety of zoning issues affecting them.

The Heyburn P&Z/s action came just as Jim Primm, who is developing the B3-acre River's Edge commercial-industrial park in Burley, was lamenting the lack of runways that can support private airplanes used by many business executives — the folks who make the decisions on whether or not to invest in the Mini-Cassia area. "It takes them a day to get to Burley." Primm told the South Idaho Pæss last week. "If we had an airport right there it would cut at least three hours travel time a day."

We're talking about the economic future of all of Minico and Cassia counties, not just Burley. NIMBY—the "not-in-my-back yard" philosophy — is costing the two counties jobs and economic development.

The search for a new airport site will continue, but probably with the same outcome unless Mini-Cas communities come to the conclusion — and soon — that they make up an integrated economy from the perspective of potential employers and investors.

The reaction from the agri-culture community was sum-marized nearly by one farmer who sald "It's about damn time."

I can't say exactly when or why the Times-News lost sight of agriculture. That was before my time here. But I can tell you how we decided what kind of section was needed to better reflect the $1.5 billion-a-year economi powerhouse all around us.

After some preliminary dis-cussion around the office, Business Editor Joshua Palmer decided to find out what, exactly, people in Agribusiness would like to see Agribusiness would like to see in the paper. As he was reporting firm-related stories, he took a few minutes from various interviews to quiz industry leaders. What they suggested is what you see in Tuesday Agribusiness. But one sentiment he uncovered was a suprise. Several people said they viewed reinvigorated agriculture coverage as a matter of fairness.

I was on dismounted patrols, meaning walking on foot. I was point man a a team leader at the time. They told us the road was clear so we headed down the route and about 300 the route and about 300 meters down the road I stepped on a pressure-plate IED (integrated explosive device). You know what's funny? I woke up on the edge of a canal and my only thought was "Did I have to milk (cows) today?" Se. I was knocked out and when I woke up a random memory hit me. The IED was made to destroy a up-armored Humwee, but only one rocket and the blasting cap went off throwing me about eight feet and knocking me out. The medic was amazed that I didn't have a single scratch on me. All I got was a headache. Crazy, buth't I didn't get a Purple Heart because I sustained no injuries but I'm just happy to have all my limbs. It never even hit me that I almost got messed up until later, though, I guess God really does watch out for his own. I thank God he let me walk away from it and other attacks on us.

I see a lot of changes over here soon with us getting a mew president in 2000. The parade was anything

The parade was any but western. It was painfully obvious that the parade organizers have no requirement that the entrants follow a western theme or that there are any requirements or restrictions at all. It appeared that anything and everything was accepted.

expenses that anything and everything was accepted. It is no wonder that participation is falling off as was reported in the Times-News. Several parade watchers around us had the same comments. There is nothing wrong with any parade because it gives people something to look forward to and a place to go, but call it what it is. In this case, it is a catch-all for anyone who wants to walk or ride down the street. It's time for a name change. Anything but Western Days.

Before investing in a new regional airport, we should take a look at what is happening with fuel costs and the airline industry. We might be better to invest in rail transport on the local and regional level. A positive step would be incorporating energy education in our schools' curriculum so our children can understand the value of energy efficiency and conservation and hopefully move some along career paths in those areas.

City Engineer Tom Hellen said in a later interview that when "conjunctive use" brings groundwater and surface water rights under one umbrella, the city's wells will be its newest water rights and will be susceptible to shut-off. Halley owns a surface water right from the Big Wood River with a priority date in 1883 that has no restrictions for irrigation usage or total annu-

One of IDWRs primary concerns for the project is its potential effect on the Big Wood River depending on the timing and location of the report. Brockway said more analysis would have to be done to determine the best timing for the recharge.

Brockway said he estimates the IDWR approval process for the recharge project could take between 24 and 30 months.

GOP recommends open primary

Republicans reverse course

ASAODPOINT — Republicans at their state convention voted to recommend keeping the GOP primary open to all voters, a reversal of efforts the last two years to close the parry primary. The narrow 199 to 192 vote prompted advocates of the closed primary to cry foul, saying delegates to the convention had been manipulated to stack the deck in favor open primary supporters.

vention had been manipulardet o stack the deck in favor of open primary supporters.

The vote is only a recommendation to the state central committee. Changing the party rule to support an open primary still would require a vote of those party leaders.

The closeness of the vote illustrates just how divided members of the states dominant party are on the Issue of how to elect Democrats.

Some say a three-quarters Republican majority in the 105-member Idaho Legislature and an all GOD slate of statewide elected officers including Gov. C.L.

Butch' Otter is a sign the existing open GOP primary has worked well for the party. Others including Rod Beck, a chief backer of closing the primary, and social conserva-tives say that's allowed moderates and Democrats to cross party lines to elect GOP candi-dates who aren't faithful to the dates who arent fathful to the party platform.

"I think its indicative of the divisibeness, the fact that there's no real clear mandate one way or another, 'said state Sen. Joe Stegner, a delegate from Lewiston, of the vote, 'It' really means the party has a lot of work to do to find some-thing that has the solid sup-port of the rank and file of the Republican Party."

The vote is a marked departure from two years ago, when state Republican Convention delegates in Idaho Falls over-whelmingly backed a plan to end Idaho's open primary. Since then, the state GOP central committee has also voted to close the primary. When asked what changed, Party Chairman Kirk Sullivan said the landscape has shifted. "Two years ago we had 100 percent different people, in a different environment," said Sullivan, an open primary supporter. "This group made up their own minds based on what happened in the rules committee." Despite the vote, Sullivan

Despite the vote, Sullivan still plans to pursue a lawsuit filed by the Idaho Republican Party in April against Secretary of State Ben Ysursa to close the primary, barring a new direc-tion from the central committion from the central committee.

After the vote, closed primary backers pointed fingers at Sullivan and other members of the party's establishment, accusing them of tomfoolery in getting delegates named to the convention.
For instance, Beck said local party leaders in Canyon and Kootenal counties picked slates of delegates heavy on
open-primary supporters, ruther than allowing delegates to be chosen individually.
In addition, Beck said state

"That vote is not determina-tive at all," Beck said. "That vote is just a good job by our opposition forces to lock out opposition forces to lock out people who supported our efforts and not let them be properly considered as a dele-property considered as a delegate."

McGee countered that there was nothing improper about the way delegates from Canyon County were vetted and approved.

"If including young people in the political process in the state of I daho is 'manipulation,' then I'm guilty as charged,' he said.

Norm Semanko, who defeated Sullivan for the party chalmanship in a vote later Saturday, said the closely divided issue calls for renewed resolve among Idaho Republicans to develop a priresolve among Idaho Republicans to develop a pri-mary system that everybody in the party can accept.

Davidson, a Paul supporter, won attention by spearheading a successful campaign to pass three pro-marijuana ballot initiatives in Halley. Davidson had strong support, however, including from state Sen. Steve Baer, R-Blackfoot.

BOISE (AP) — Norm Semanko ousted Kirk Sullivan to become the new Idaho Republican chairman as social conservatives, libertarian-leaning Ron Paul supporters and closed primary advocates overcame party establishment efforts to keep their boss in power. Semanko, a lawyer and lobbyist, won a secret ballot on Saturday.

The election was the culmination of a long, sometimes

Saudi oil chief to address reports of oil increase

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) Saudi Arabia's oil minister — Saudi Arabia's oil minister today will address reports that the world's largest oil-producting country is set to raise production by about 500,000 barrels per day, his adviser said. The increase would bring Saudi Arabia's oil production to 10 million barrels a day, the country's highest ever, according to reports by The New York Times and the Middle East Economic Survey an Industry mublication. Area cowboys and cowgirls make good showing

The weather was cold and windy for the first four days of the idaho High School Rodeo Finals in Pocatello but as the temperature rose on Thursday and Friday, the times appeared to get faster and the scores higher. As a result, five cowboys and cowgirls from the Magle Valley left the Bannock County Falirgrounds with saddles loaded in their rucks along with their first State Championship buckles. Brady Manning was the winner in boys cutting. Cheyenna Roblinson placed first in breaktway, bastin Parke was the best in calf roping, Montana Barlow tops in bull riding, and Bailey Tubbs bettering the rest of the competition in saddle brone.

Tubbs from Filer was only one of two riders to make a ride in the first two goes, scoring a 78 in the first go and a 75 in the second go the added a 74-point ride on Saturday for a total of 227 points with the closest competitor trailing by 62 points. Tubbs will be making his first trip to nationals as the State Champion after a second place finish last year. He had a fourth- and second-place finish list year. Tiger Woods celebrates after scoring an eagle on the N 13 hole during the third round of the U.S. Open at Torrey Pines Golf Course in San Diego on Saturday.

Wounded Tiger roars into lead

SAN DIEGO — The U.S. Open went prime time, and so did Tiger Woods. With unbeamble pain and three unforgettable shots, Woods, turned in one of his most memo-rable performances in a major Saturday by hol-ing two long eagle patts, chipping in for birdle and somehow taking a one-shot lead over Lee Metanord.

and somehow taking a one-shot lead over Lee Westwood.
Right when some 50,000 fans at Torrey Pines thought they had seen it all. Woods knocked in a 30-foot eagle on the 18th for a 1-under 70 and his ris 54-hole lead in the U.S. Open since he won at Bethpage Black in 2002.
That he made it to the finish line was nearly as impressive as a magical array of shot out. His tender left kinee first buckled on the 15th hole, and Woods used his club as a cane to get down the fairway. Imping along while trying to stay in the hunt. He played the final six holes in 4 under — and that included a bogey — and will play in the final group for the sixth time in the steight majors.
This time he has the lead, and he has never some a major with a limp. But he has never won a major with a limp. either.

Woods was at 3-under 210, one of only three players still under par.
As spectacular as Woods played, Westwood got it done with steady golf so often required at this major. He holed a short birdle putt on the par-5 13th and finished with flee straight pars, missing a 4-foot birdle on the last hole for a 70.

Worker dies after touching high-voltage wire at Cowboys stadium

DALIAS — An electrician working at the new Dalias Cowbrys stadium died Saturday when he touched a high-voltage line, the second serious accident at the construction site in less than a week.

The man was standing on a hadder and performing an electrical test when he touched the power line, said Neal Strasser, a battalion chief with the Arlington Fire Department.

The man became wedged between the ladder and the stadium wall. A co-worker carried him to the ground and tried to revive him, Strasser said.

The Tarrant County Medical Examiner's Web site identified the man as Timothy Mackinnon, 45, of Arlington. He worked for JMIG Electric, a subcontractor hired by the stadium's general contractor, Manhattan Construction.

The accident happened around 11 a.m. The department received an emergency call at 11:05 a.m. and arrived within five minutes, but revival attempts at the scene were unsuccessful, Mackinnon was pronounced dead at Arlington Memorial Hospital.

Johnson practices with Bengals

CINCINNATI — Receiver Chad Johnson fully participated in drills for the first time Saturday as the Cincinnati Bengals wrapped up their minicamp.

The disgrunted receiver limited himself to a few drills during workouts on Thursday and Friday, complaining through his agent that he has a had ankle. He looked fine during a workout on Saturday, catching passes from Carson Palmet.

He declined to talk to the media again, other than to say "Vote for Obama" as he walked off the field — apparently throwing his support behind Democratic presidential candidate Barack Obama.

Lakers trying to regroup from colossal collapse

El. SEGUNDO. Calif. — There was no other option, so the Lakers assembled at their training facility Friday morning, trying to leave behind one of the worst loss-es in the franchise's 60-year existence.

There was equally little success in dealing with the aftermath.

Ronny Turlaf wasn't his ebuillent self. Luke Walton was notably quiet.

Kobe Bryant and Derek Fisher, veterans who had experienced unpalatable situations in the past, seemed to be the only ones able to compartmentalize Thursday nigbt's 97-91 loss to Boston in Game 4 of the NIBA Finals, ready to move forward.

Taking in the scene, Coach Phil Jackson looked around the room and, after some Game 4 video analysis, told everyone to go home. Practice was canceled.

Try to forget what happened Thursday night, with an emphasis on try.

"Just in the checking out how the guys were and how they felt, I just felt it was a good felea." Jackson said.

Jackson was the only member of the Lakers who spoke to reporters Friday, sitting on a podium at a roller-hocker rink next to the Lakers training facility. The odds are formidable, as expected after a Lakers team surrendered a 24-point lead and made history by allowing the largest Finals comeback since Ellas Sports bureau became the leagues official stat-keeper in the 1970-71 season.

If it was greeome for Lakers fans to watch, it was more horrifying for the players.

"Just told them as a team, they had their heart ripped out," Jackson said. "It's tough to receive from that, but they will. This thing is not over, and we want to force the action, want to continue to force the play."

The 35-year-old from England has ver had this good an opportunity in a major.

"It will be nice going out last tomorrow and having a chance," Westwood said. Woods, grimacing with every step over the final hour in sunshine, lightly pumped his fist and smiled when his 30-foot eagle on the final hole broke sharply to the right down the hill and straightened in time to fall into the cup for his third eagle of the tournament.

There were other reasons to look so

There were done to the content.

"I'm done," Woods said, "It was nice that I could finish this round."

The U.S. Open was broadcast in prime time, and Woods played the leading role with a six-hole stretch that was equal part drama, comedy and even selence fiction — the last six holes were out of this world.

Woods was five shots behind standing at the back of the 13th preen, facing a dangerously quick putt down the ridge from 70 feet. It was reminiscent of his putt on the 17th green at Sawgrass in 2001, minus the Island. The line was perfect, speeding down the slope and bending sharply to the left in the final foot for an unlikely eagle.

Woods turned and pumped both fists, walking his high property of the standard of the property of the left in the final foot for an unlikely eagle.

was the tee shot two holes later where the pain could no longer be dis-guised. He took his hand off the driver guised. He took as haind on the drived immediately on the 15th and bent to the ground, balancing himself with his right finger twice. Two holes later, he again failed to get through the swing and sent his tee shot well to the right, again doubling over.

He braced each step with the club as he walked, putting drama into every shot.

Woods put his approach on the 17th into thick grass between a bunker and the green, giving him an awkward stance with his weight on the palnful felf side. The flop shot came out hot, and Woods looke donceame out hot, and Woods looke donceame of the hot woods looke to came out hot, and I took one hop and disappeared in the bottom of the cup, and Woods broke into embarrassing laughter as caddie Steve Williams held out his hand to help him onto the green. That put Woods him onto the green. That put Woods within one shot going to the par-5 18th, and he manufactured a cut shot to hit a fairway for the first time since the 10th hole.

He followed that with another cut shot, this time with a 5-wood, and the pain returned. Even as the ball descended against blue skies, Woods winced and stared at the ground, never seeing that it finished in the middle of the green.

Park lodging not easy to find this year

Over the past few years, visitors to U.S. national parks have been able to land last-minute lodging with relative ease. This summer? Not so have been able to land last-minute lodging with relative case. This summer? Not so simple.

Taking advantage of the weak dollar, international travelers have been descend-ing upon the most popular parks in greater numbers than sustal, according to park lodg-ing officials. And by most accounts, Americans are opt-ing for close-to-home ger-saways instead of heading overseas. That means more competition for the rooms at the park you want to visit.

So what if you want to visit.

So what if you want to visit.

So what if you want to visit anational park this summer but haven't made reserva-tions? These tips could help get you into the wild.

Book now. Many park lodges sell out months in advance, but you may get lucky. Check with the parks dinks available at upsgoy! to see how far out you can book then reserve when the rooms are up for grain.

Or take advantage of fast-minute cancellations. Tour operators book rooms far in advance; if a tour doesn't fil.

days before it starts. Keep in nind, though, that this toric will be tongher to use this summer. Tours are especially popular, and fewer rooms are being released, says Kevin Dilliman, director of central reservations for Xanterra, which handles lodging at a handful of national parks. Still, monitor park Web sites for such last-minute spots.

• Stay at lodges farther from the park's main attractions. At the Grand Canyon, for example, many visitors want rooms at the historic. Por-room El Tovar Hotel on the South Rim, whereas the 278-room motel-style Masswik Lodge a quarternile away often has better availability. Dilman says.

• Just show up. It's a bold move, but travelers can sometimes nab a bed courtesy of a last-minute cancellation or no-show.

Rooms are generally last-minute cancellation or a no-show.

Rooms are generally released around 4 or 6 p.m. This is a greater gamble at a big-name park like Yosemite, which saw 3.5 million visitors in 2007, than at Texas's Big Bend, which had 365,000 fourists.

• Pitch a tent, For around $200 a night, you can have your own slab of land, Some campsites accept reservations, while many others are first-come, first-served. Go to the campsite early on the day you want to stay over to reserve your spot and have cash in hand; most don't accept plastic. Check the parks Web site or the National Park Reservation Service (800-305-2267, recreation,gov), which books spots at dozens of parks.

Visit during the summer's shoulder seasons. Early Inne and September have fewer visitors, thus lodging is easier and September have fewer visitors, thus lodging is easier to come by.

• Look for interesting options. Just because you're visiting a national park doesn't mean you have to stay in a cabin, hotel or lodge. What about a tepee on a cattle ranch? The Grand Canyon West Ranch (800-359-8727, grand-canyon-ranch-com), along the western rim in Meadview Ariz, has those for $109 a night, including meals. B&Bs. such as the Windwhlsper IRBs (435-646-162, windwhlsper IRBs (435-646-162), windwhlsper Rbs (435-646-164), and Bryce Canyon national parks, are also popular. THE ACES ON BRIDGE® in a bid suit, then I don't believe Dear Mr. Wolff:

Dear Mr. Wolf:
In duplicate bridge, should the third hand (the partner of the opening leader) always play high at trick one? My partner and I have been getting some low scores when our opponents make one more trick than the other declarers. Third-Hand Advice, Albany, Ga.

Third-Hand Advir-Albany, Ga.

ANSWER: Third hand generally plays high to avoid finessing against partner—unless dummy's holding indicates that a fensess against dummy is appropriate. For example, against a suit contract, partner leads a low card, dummy has J-7-2, and you have Q-9-3 or K-9-3. You should surely put in the nine when dummy plays low (the right play whenever partner has the 10-. If you rolding was Q-10-2 or K-10-2, it would be automatic to play the 10, or course. automatic to play the 10, of course

Dear Mr. Wolf:

I held ★ 4-2, ▼ K-10-9-7-5-3-2,

★ K-3, ★ A-8. My partner opened one diamond, which was doubled on my right. What should I have bid? I redoubled to show 10 HCP.
thinking that I could bid my-suit later on, but LHO bid one spade, my partner bid two clubs, and RHO jumped to four spades. I then guessed to bid five hearts—down three Admittedly, my partner's 1-0-7-5 nine-count was not what I was hoping to buy Boubled Over, Tepelo, Miss.

ANSWER: It is a good rule to bid your long suits after a double, no matter what strength you have Only redouble when you can handle all the likely actions by your LIIO in response to the double. With your holding, bid hearts (which most people these days play as forcing), planning to describe your hand later. With your majors switched, you would hold the boss suit and might risk a redouble, but I still prefer bidding my suit(s). my suit(s).

Dear Mr. Wolff-

Dear Mr. Wolff: Can you clarify whether all jump bids by declarer are forcing to game? If the bid is a jump-shift, then I can understand that it is forcing to game, but if the jump is 820

WANTED TO BUY good used 1000 gal propane tank. 208-431-4867 ANTED TO BUY Jazzy Pride XL power chair, parts only or ANSWER; Jump rebids, either in your own suit or in support of partner's suit, as opposed to jump shifts, are not foreing. However, once the other hand has shown limit values or more, perhaps by a two-level response, the auction does become foreing.

Dear Mr. Wolff:
When I used to play duplicate bridge, I would announce, "Partner, I am going to make a skip did" A player in a recent local social game said that statement is against the rules, True?
System Updar, tielevar, Wash.

the rule is correct. For example: 1

- 1 NT - 3 by opener is not forcing to game, is it?

Jumpy, Seneca, S.C.

ANSWER: Whether you say "stop," "skip," or use your wording, you are doing the right thing. At a duplicate club you can also put out the "Stop" card if you have one.
The idea is to draw your LHO's attention to the jump to prevent him from acting prematurely and to force him to pause whether he has an easy action or not.

Dear Mr. Wolff:
I held & J-9.7-5-3-2, $\frac{3}{2}, $\frac{3}{2}, $\frac{3}{2}, $\frac{4}{3}.2, $\frac{4}{3}.2

ANSWER: Double is not an option; you need more values. Pass is pessimistic, although this is surely only a part-score deal. That leaves two hearts, for which I'd prefer a third heart or a better doubleton, and two spades, which is my choice. Even facing a singleton spade, you might be able to score a lot of your small trumps.

ickie Barnhill has five chairs

Vickie Barnhill has five chairs around her dining room table, even though there are only four in her family. The reason? Her father, Jim Beat, is a regular fixture at her house outside I'win Falls. He's no longer invited over for dinner, Vickie sald. He's expected. Jim, 62, has been a rock for his daughter during the past decade despite being the primary caregiver for his wife in the years before her death. "I am in awe of my father," Vickie wrote while nominating him for the Times-News Father's Day article.

Jim's wife, Jamis, died of complications from multiple sclerosis in 2005. After Janis! 1986 diagnosis, Jim found himself filling in when Vickie needed motherly advice, and having the long phone conver-sations that Janis had before.

Vickle had her first child the same year Janis got sick, so she found herself coming to Jim for parenting help and venting, Jim stepped into Janis' mothering role while caring for her full time and—until his wife could no longer hold up her head—carrying he'r to the truck for rides in the country. Toward the end when he couldn't look after her at their Twin Falls home anymore, he visited her every day nt a Rupert care facility. "I want everybody to know what he did for my mother," Vickle sald, While she milses Janis, she is grateful for the relationship she now has with Jim because of her mother's illness.

About the Rev. John Ellis of Twin Falls:

"Besides all the normal fatherly things like his compassion, loving his children, etc., he will always be extra special to me because 22 years ago, he donated one of his kildneys to my sister whose own had failed."

— daughter Nancy Bowman

About R. Jerry Johnson of Twin Falls:

"An extraordinary, endearing man who is truly an inspiration to many," adulting the state of adulting the fauthiers Sheryl Jewell, Terry Sanders and JD Sparks, and sons Tom Johnson and Kent Johnson, Kewin Johnson and Kent Johnson

About Marshall Talbot of Kimberly:

"Dad was also an example of how to help others in need. He always gives to others even when he hasn't much to give. If it isn't mowing someone's lawn, it's crawling under a trailer to fix pipes or sitting and listening to us kids or giving good advice or slipping a $20 bill to someone."

— daughter Tina Strader

About Doug Reynolds of Hazelton:

of Hazelton:

"He is a wonderful father, grandfather and friend to all that know him. He is the most giving person I have ever met. We joke if he was a millionaire one day he would not have it the next because he would give it all away to family and friends."

Tots to have social network site

meant for children ages birth to 5. Think of it as Facebook for toddlers.

On June 24, TotSpot is scheduled to make its national adebut. On it, moms and dads can create free pages about their children, posting photos and videos and dates of their first smiles, first steps and first day of kindergarren. They can invite friends and relatives— and even parents of other bables from the play group— to view them. Just like Facebook. TotSpot is the brainchild of who else? — two 20-something tharvard grafe from the class of 2007. They were convinced the world needs yet another social networking site, this one for the bib-and-bottle-tending crowd.

site, this one for the bib-and-bottle-tending crowd.
"The network of friends that you would share things with professionally could be different from the network of people you want to share stuff about your children," explains Adam Karz, who is from Long Island.
Karz started the site with Adam Kaiz, who is from Long Island.

Katz started the site with Michael Broukhim of Los Angeles, whom he met at the Harvard University campus newspaper. The two wanted to do something entrepre-neurial after graduation. We got a sense parents wanted a very simple and easy way to share stuff with their friends," Katz says.

There won't be ads on the children's pages; Katz says they lope to profit from turning sites into keepsake books. Seven-mont-old Maddox Wohl of Plaintieva wheady has a page, because his mother is one of the people who was invited to preview the site as it works out its kinks for its national launch.

"Because of that. I have such a really close bond with my dad," Vickies said.
Now that his grandchildren Lindsey, 9, and Brandon, 12, are older, Jim helps them with homework and plays with them like he did with Vickie when she was young. Jim, a full-time electrician, fluids time to help build school projects and teach Lindsey photography. He even took the kids on their first fishing trip, where Lindsey caught a fish with a gumny worm.

After dinner, the family often plays games or just sits around and talks, lim treats the children affectionately, much like he did Vickie and her brother. Mark.

Dan and Maggie Miller's guests arrived for an engagement party, but they got the whole wedding.

Believing they'd arrived to celebrate the couple's recent betrothal, guests were greeted betrothal, guests were greeted by a weedfing cake in the hallway. Maggie in a long white gown and the news — surprise! — that they were there to winess the marriage.

Surprise weddings turn the traditional surprise party on its head by keeping guests in the dark and hosts in the know. While still rare, they are growing in popularity among cover in the continuous proposition of the work of the continuous manner.

"My best friend and I had always talked about what our weddings would be like; who would be the maid of honor, the best best what kind of would be the maid of honor, the bridesmaids, what kind of dresses we'd have," said Maggie, 25. "By the time I got to the point I was actually going to get married, I didn't want to deal with all that stuff."

want to deal with all that stuff."

She and her flance, both busy medical students, had considered avoiding the pomp altogether and getting married at city hall. The St. Louis natives decided, however, that because most of their friends and family would be in town for the holidays, they could hold a New Year's Eve soirce and include loved ones without getting bogged down in the details of place settings and floral arrangements.

The couple took their vows standing on the living room couch, needing the extra height to be visible above the nearly 100 astonished guests. "Some people were really

Surprise weddings have become more prevalent in the past several years, according to Los Angeles County wedding officiate Chris Robinson. He has been marrying conples for about 15 years but said he only encountered couples wanting to make it a surprise within the past five. Often, he said, people who opt for a surprise are seeking an antidotte to the "Bridedzillar syndrome, in which the brideto-be declicates many months and a small fortune to creating a perfect, and perfectly extrawagant, wedding.

Long-established couples who do not want a houseful of immecessary presents, and those moving on to second or immercessary presents, and those moving on to second or hird marriages with the need for lawish ceremonies already out of their systems, also might consider surprise weddings, Oliveira said.

Such was the case for Marc Andriola, whose second wife, Carla, wanted to Invite about 150 people to her haby shower and have that many guests return a few months later for the wedding.

"There was no way we could alford two events of that magnitude around the same time," he said. "When I suggested we combine them, at first Carla didn't like it, but she started getting into the idea of the surprise."

The invitation to a baby shower was enough to draw carla's extended family from Peru to the couple's home-town of Cliffon, NJ. After sneaking the priest in through the back of the VPW hall they'd rented, Carla first dropped the bomb in Spanish that their wedding mounts.

Marc translated for English-speaking guests.
"There was a wave of vows," as everyone started to get it," she sald. "It was so emotional."

The couple needn't have worried that their excitement would give away the surprise, said Ed Gianquinto, a guest at the wedding.
"Marc was a confirmed bachelor, it was always fun to hreak his chops a little and say, You've got to do the right thing." he sald. "Little did we know he was planning it the know he was planning it the whole time."

Think safety first for your children

We worry so much about ar children, regardless of their ages.

I shook my head in disbeand candidate. Tegaratess of their ages.

I shook my head in disbelief after bearing about a 2-year-old girl causing her own death recently when, reaching for a remote control, she publied a 25-inch television down on herself.

And I can't imagine the pain — haunting so many families — after the arradgment of a 17-year-old youth who crashed his father's car, killing his two passengers and a third person, a passenger in another car.

"As kids get older, the dangers don't just stop," says Alison Hhodes, a self-proclaimed Safety Mom. They just get vorse.

Other than thost, askill-proclaimed Safety Mom. They just get vorse.

Other than thost askill away their keys. I'm not sure about how to get our young people to drive slower and with more care. The teen was driving 85 mph when he crashed.

Every time I hear screeching tires, images of my children, driving or as passengers, flash before my eyes. Four of my five kild drivand, thank heaven, we've been tucky so far. Nothing more than inconsequential fender benders.

We probably were lucky.

We probably were lucky, too, when our children were younger. Like Rhodes says, parents are just too busy, too wrapped up in other things to make home safety a priority. But what could be more important than our own chilsay my wife and 1 were dren?

I say my wife and I were lucky as young parents because one of us was always home with the kids. We worked different shifts, and we always had one eye on the children.

But Rhodes, a Wilton, Conn., mother who lost a son to sudden infant death syndrome, says all parents always think they'll never let their children out of their sight. "That's what every grandparent, thinks." says Rhodes, whose Web sites, www.thesafetymon.com and www.peckahoobabbidoldesafety lessue. "They say to themselves, 'it can't happen to us."

But of course, it can't happen to us."

But, of course, it can.

Instead of just worrying about our children, we should move to make our homes and cars a little safer. Just look around, use some common sense.

"So many first-time parents are thinking about the design of the baby's new room or baby clothes," Rhodes says, "and they never take a second to consider child safety before the baby is child safety before the baby is born.

We really should be proactive."

For example, long cords on blinds and window coverings, electrical outlets and stairwells can be dangerous to children. The cords can cause strangulation; outlets cant cause electrical shock; and stairwells can be invitations to deadly falls. Preventive measures include adjusting the length of the cord, using outlet covers or plastic inserts that fit into the plug opening, and installing plastic inserts that fit into the plug opening, and installing child safety gates.

Als for common sense, well, and the safety gates with the safety gates in the percent of new parents show up with their car safety seats uninstalled," she says. "And studies show 80 percent of the parents who do have them installed have them installed have them installed incorrectly."

them installed have tnem installed incorrectly." Rhodes says it's all about taking time to think and act. In some instances, it's fine to think small. When our old-est two were toddlers, they'd often empty the bottom shelves of our kitchen cup-boards to play with mixing bowls and utensils. We quickly made sure all the contents of all the lower cup-boards and vanities in our house were childproof. We moved anything that could-be dangerous to places they could not reach. Rhodes also says parents should think about health risks. The Back to Sleep cam-paign, which promotes put-ting lofants to sleep on their backs, has reduced SIDs deaths by 50 percent. Even banking the stem-cell rich blood from a baby unbilli-cal. cord to fight disease.

"You just don't think things will happen to your baby," Rhodes says, "It's not the nat-ural order of things."

and order of things."
Again, as parents, we should know better.
"In this country," I say to Rhodes, "we need a license-for virtually everything—except for having children."
"That's true." she saws

"That's true," she says, "And sometimes it's frightening."

He laughed. Like every other smoker I know, he said, "Yeah, I should quit." So, now we are in the front of the building by the Subway. The sun is out, a pretty day. An overhanging pot of petunias threatens to clunk us on the head, People on celiphones zoom by, and if they look our way, I feel, or imagine, scorn. "No!" I want to say, "it's not me! I'm not smoking!" Putting aside obvious questions of health, niconie addiction and secondinea dismoke, I'm gerting a crash course in what it feels like to be an outcast. Last I left off with smoking, back in the 1980s, it was an integrated thing. I don't remember ever having to go anywhere to smoke. I remember grad school professors who let you smoke in class, and I remember light ling up on airplanes. Smoking was fun. Everyone had a cigarette burn somewhere on the seat of his or her car. We smoked out of boredom and because it seemed to go with clinking here. It wasn't very complicated. Out here by the Subway, everyone in our little smoking group is silent. I want to ske them questions. I want to know if it's worth the inconvenience, how they justify the habit. I want to know they do in the rain, how that they do in the rain, how they manage umbrellas, matches. I want to know if they smoke if, they of their lines with they amoke if, they of their lines with they manage umbrellas. they smoke in front of their children, or If they hide children, or if they hide somewhere out by the garage. We have marginalized these people. I have to wonder if it's a good thing. I know, we should probably wag our fingers at them, tell them they have marginalized themselves. Outcasts! Do they find some appeal in the role? A woman in a business suit has joined us from the office building, and a kid in shorts with a sun tattoo on his call has come out of Subway and it up, "Thought it was supposed to rain today," the woman says." Thope so, because I finally got my grass seed down." Soon, we are all talking grass seed. Shade. Pescue. Kentucky Blue. The woman says she has a patch of exposed dirt on account of her dog. We talk dogs. The kid with the tattoo has not entered the conversation. My with the tattoo has not entered the conversation. My friend ly light lividere. An older gdy with a gut and suspenders is listening, tapping ashes, listening, and finally says: "Well, i wish i still had a yard. My wife moved us into a retirement place. Do I look like I'm retired!" No, we tell him, he doesnt. He says the retirement place isn't really that bad. Except he had to give his dog away. No pets allowed.

"That sucks," the kid with the tattoo says. "Man, that really sucks.
"It's all right," the older guy says, lighting another cigarette. "It's all workable," We stand in the silence, as you do in the aftermath of a lic.

A skinny woman in heels walks up, "It says no smoking under canopy," she says, pointing to the sign.
The smokers look at her, is anyone going to say any-thing? Apparently not. "The canopy is over there," I say, feeling like Jesus defending the lepers. "And we're over here."

"The smoke is getting sucked in under the canopy," the worman suys, pointing up. We all look up. I don't see anything. I give her a glare like. Come on, lady. Like, your sanctimony is most unbecoming. The smokers simply slide, as if this is nothing new, farther toward Subway. I stay

In my spot, out of some principle I don't quite understand since I am not smoking. The small shove from the self-righteous one opens all the smokers to more talking. And more cigarettes. My friend is laughting and going on and on about what he thinks of our fair city. We learn that the tattoo kid is studying economics.

Pelosi has a mom's-eye view

By Marylou Tousignant and Brenna Maloney The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - She's the ghest-ranking woman offihighest-ranking woman offi-cial in U.S. history—the first female speaker of the House of Representatives and secof Representatives and second in line to the presidency. But Nancy Pelosi says none of that tops being a mother and grandmother. The California Democrat, whose father was mayor of Baltimore when she was growing up, sat down recently with us to talk about her remarkable life.

doing to make the future better for the children, whether it's their ... health, their education, the economic security of their families, a clean environment in which they can thrive, a world at peace."

Q: What does it mean to be the first female speaker?

A: "It's very big. The communications that I received from all over the world were very telling. Of course I heard from women and girls about how excited they were. Older women my age who said, "I never thought I'd see the day." I never thought I'd see the day can do anything! ... Fathers who were so proud of what the prospects would be for their daughters now that this

My father was mayor from when I was in first grade to when I went away to college, so we all had our responsibilities to courteously respond to the needs of the people of Baltimore."

Q: Did that make you want to go into politics?

A: "No. I didn't ever think of it, (though) I loved the bases. ... I liked the excitement of campaigns, but I never thought of it for me. Never. It was just one of those things that, as time went by, one thing led to another."

Q: What was life like with five older brothers? A: "It was great. I highly recommend it. I had to hold A: It was great. I highly recommend it. I had to hold my own because they were very protective. I liked my independence, so I had to assert that from time to time. We used to have an MYOB club — Mind Your Own Beeswax — because they were always asking, 'Where are you going with!' "MYOB!"

Q: How did they react to your being elected speaker?

A: "My colleagues said, 'Vour parents would be so proud.' It jarred me ab to be optoned it jarred me about the so proud it jarred me ab the because my parents didn't raise me to be speaker, or even to run for office. They raised me to be holy and good — that was their meas-ure of success. "So my brothers were

Answer: I have done everything I think I ever wanted to do. I have done some modelling. I put out my first album called "The Dreamer." I have done two movies, I have done two movies, I have done lots of TV shows, and two Broadway shows, "Rent" and "Bombay Dreams."

Q: How did you feel when you found out you were leaving "American Idol"?

A: I had a feeling the week before that I was going to be voted off. When I set off to do the show, I never wanted to win, I just wanted to do something that would get me exposure; I wanted to get record deal. I figured everybody in the entertainment field would watch the show, and that would give me a chance to start living out my dream. I got a record deal, so It was all right!

Q: Do you like writing?

Jonas Brothers rock around the Disney clock in 'Camp Rock' By Jacqueline Cutler Zap2it

"Camp Rock" is the sort of movie that could have been made 50 years ago.

And that's a grand thing especially for teenagers who don't need any more inappropriate behavior modeled for them. Had this been made then, the resident heartthrob would have been Elvis, not a rock group. This two-hour film nominally stars the Jonas Brothers. For those who do not have a female teenager in the house, they are the latest Jersey boys to send teenage girls all over the world into a tizzy. Doubt it? Watch this with a teenage girl. She will inevitably grow even sillier when they take the stage.

And there will be plenty

Regardless of how this lovely little movie is promoted, it belongs to Demi Lovato, slated to star in an upcoming Disney sitcom, "Welcome to Mollywood."

Her character, Mitchie Torres, desperately wants to attend Camp Rock, yet she's made out to be a poor girl. This is a bone to pick with the movie: Mitchie's dad owns a hardware store, and Mom has a catering business. The opening credits have her trying on outfits in her own room in their house. This is not a poor girl.

What do you make of the rumors that Shania Twain and her music-producer husband, Robert "Mutt" Lange, split over his affair with another woman?-Justin Verner, Hartwell, Ga. Mutt, 59, says he and Sha-Ania, 42, simply grew apart after 14 years of marriage. The reclusive producer broke his usu-anonymous sources who claimed Murt had an affair with Marie-Anne Thiébaud, his secretary. Now he and Shania-who collaborated on Come on Over, the best-selling CD of all time by a woman-must decide how to split more than $500 million and custody of their son, Eia, 6.

I read that Tom Cruise and Ka-Ltie Holmes spent a fortune on an over-the-top birthday party for Suri. True?-G. Thurman, Sun City, Calif.

False. The Cruises celebrated Suri's second birthday with a low-key affair for 22 family members. They had balloons and a cake but not-as reported-celebrity DJ Mark Ronson. Instead, they played Suri's favorite music, including songs from Hairspray, then attended a performance of My Fair Lady.

Poitier, 81, says simply: "It's A healthy first that we've had both a woman and an African-American as viable candidates."

Incidentally, he tells us nothing could coax him out of retirement. Instead, he's focusing on his extended family and recently published Life Beyond Measure, a series of letters to his first great-grandchild, Ayele, 2.

What's the latest on Steve Fossett, who disappeared in Nevada last September?-Joe Hevel, De Soto, Kan.

A In February, a judge in Chicago— where Fossett built his fortune as a commodities trader-declared the adventurer officially dead at 63, freeing his assets. Nevada is expected to ask Fossett's widow. Peggy, to help pay the $687,000 cost of its massive search-and-rescue effort. The mystery sural silence to speak out against the rounding Fossett's final solo flight already is the stuff of legend-like the disappearance of aviatrix Amelia Earhart over the Pacific in 1937.

We hadn't seen much of Gwvneth Paltrow since she wed British rocker Chris Martin, Is Iron Man the start of a comeback? —K. Samper, Oakland, Calif. Yes, Now 35 and the mom of Apple, 4, and Moses, 2. Gwyneth has been making a bold "I'm back and better than ever" statement with a newly toned body, shorter hairstyle, and midthigh miniskirts. And her work in the upcoming film Two Lovers proves that her talent is as timeless as her beauty.

Why does David Letterman Lwear white socks with dark suits?-Clifford Doke, Manassas, Va. A There are two things Letterman doesn't like to talk about: Regina Lasko, the mother of his son, Harry, 4; and his socks. If we were shrinks, we'd speculate that Dave's mom made him wear white socks as a kid-though his assistant says Dave's socks these days are gray, not white.

ELCOME TO PARADISE! Pierce Brosnan lifts his glass to toast me and his wife of six years, Keely. We're at their oceanfront Hawaiian home. dining on salade niçoise and pasta with locally grown mushrooms. The setting is stunning, and the views of nature are spectacular. Brosnan is not kidding about lifestyle on the north coast of Kauai being bliss. In this glamorous atmosphere, he is looking movie-star handsome in seersucker shorts and flip-flops, and Keely's hair is still wet from a swim in the sea.

"Living here has been very insular and rewarding," Brosnan says with a smile, "It has allowed me to be a father who can sit quietly with my two young sons, Dylan and Paris [ages 11 and 7]. I paint, and they paint. And we play guitar, We play ukulele. My wife is an ace gardener, and the kids get in the mud with her. You can have a very simple life here."

His onscreen life has been very different, given that he seems to have spent much of it in a tuxedo. The '80s TV series Remington Steele helped create his reputation as a suave rogue, and playing James Bond in four hit movies established Brosnan as a jet-setting ladies' man. The Thomas Crown Affair also helped seal his image as a first-class man of style.

"It's a hard game, the movie game," he says, relaxed now, with his dog sleeping at his feet. "You're judged constantly. You have to be as tough as old boots. You have to keep up as an actor-physically. emotionally, spiritually, mentally-just to be there, because, when the opportunity comes around, the door can close so quickly. 'Do you sing?' Of course I sing. 'Do you sky dive?' Of course I do. 'Do vou fight?' Yeah. 'Are you a lover?' Are you kidding? 'What are you?'

So that's ingrained in me, as an actor, to be prepared, I suppose,"

But Brosnan wasn't prepared when he got a phone call out of the blue about four years ago saying his tenure as 007 was done. Daniel Craig would take over the part of James Bond. "I didn't see that coming," he says. "I thought we were going to do a fifth film. And I was going to take a gracious bow off the stage. Instead of that, you are just told, 'Goodbye.' That's the way it goes down in life. It's as hard and as fast as that. I had done my contract. They had invited me back, and they changed their mind. It's business."

The implication was that Brosnan, now 55, was too old for the part. Women in the movie business are used to hearing that, but not a guy who's still a leading man, "That was a shock, yes," he says with a laugh. "I never thought of myself as being too old. It was startling to hear such things said abour oneself, especially when you thought you were going down that particular avenue, and then the door gets slammed in your face."

Shaken and stirred but not bitter, Brosnan now thinks passing the Bond baton was a blessing. "Oh, it turned out very lucky," he says. "Within the space of the punch and the pain of being passed over or rejected or the bottom of your world falling out.

within that same breath came this liberation of, 'I'm free. I can do anything I want.' It's up to me to have the guts to make the next stage of my career as interesting and as exciting and unexpected as possible."

ROSNAN HAS ALWAYS KEPT HIS CAREER varied, taking on roles from suave to seedy. He's shown his range in movies like Evelyn, The Matador, and Seraphim Falls. Soon we'll see the biggest stretch of his career (think sparkly blue spandex bell bottoms), when he serenades Meryl Streep in the screen version of the popular musical Mamma Mial It opens July 18.

Romance we expected, but declaring his love in song? You have to wonder if the prospect of belting out "S.O.S." and those other very familiar ABBA songs was daunting. "Well, everybody has danced to this music," says Brosnan, "so I just went for it. They said 'Meryl Streep, filming in Greece all summer,' and I said 'yes." "He shakes his head. "Not to say I wasn't terrified to my core."

Just picture Brosnan on the beach, singing to the waves along with his iPod. "I walked up and down the coast and sang karaoke to my own voice for about six weeks. Went to New York for the first rehearsals, and I sounded dreadful. I quietly freaked out, and with my newfound brayado. I made a pig's ear of it. So I went back homeand listened and sang some more." He grins triumphantly. "In the end, they liked it so much they added a verse to my bie sone."

The vocals were one kind of challenge. The costumes were even scarier. "It was a hoot," he recalls. "To look at this outfit and say to yourself, 'I'm going to put this on and walk out there in platform shoes and camp around singing.' I just told myself we were in too deep to go back."

He chuckles. "You have to be able to make fun of your own dignity. You've got to let the movie make fun of your dignity. To let it rip is brilliantly exhilarating."

Though he loves his laid-back life in Hawaii, Brosnan admits he's ready to go back to the mainland. "I'm a worker," he,says. "Every job I got I had to to been lucky, but I've worked hard at it.

fight for. I've been lucky, but I've worked hard at it. I love making movies. I love the adventure of being an actor. I have to stay sharp." dren by a previous husband.)
Brosnan defines himself as a "working actor" who's never lost of lift. "Having endured, I suppose, playing James Bond, and not playing James Bond, that makes you thick-skinned," he says. "But I had that skin beforehand anyway, because I had the philosophy that I was going to be successful and hopefully successful without being detrimental to myself as a person.

"You struggle with money. You struggle without money. You struggle with love. You struggle without love. But is how you manage. You have to keep laughing, you have to be fun to be with, and you have to live with syle—not fancy-schmancy, but in a way which is present and meaningful and has some beauty to it."

He leans forward with enthusiasm. "You've got to be a fighting rooster, man," says Brosnan. "You've got to get out there and preen those feathers and look like you know what you're doing and hope you know what you're doing and have a good time."

The Dangers Of Hands-Free Phones

Some states have banned drivers from using handheld phones in an effort to reduce accidents. But recent studies found that any type of cellphone use makes a driver four times as likely to suffer a serious crash. "When you're having a phone conversation, the brain is less engaged in the task of driving," says Arthur Goodwin of the University of North Carolina Highway Safety Research Center, "That increases the risk of being involved in an accident." Tell us: Should drivers be banned from using all cellphones? Vote at Parade.com.

What causes a refucee cricie?

Conflicts like those in Iraq and Darfur are the greatest source of refugees. But some experts believe we may have up to 200 million more in the next century due to climate change.

How are survivors of natural disasters different from refugees of conflicts?

Refugees of conflicts flee their countries to find safety. Survivors of disasters generally want to rebuild quickly. One of the best ways to help is to give building materials or agricultural tools. Returning to normalcy depends on the page of reconstruction and the use of schools and temples to restore a sense of community.

What are the challenges of helping disaster victims?

We have to get food and water in quickly and stop the spread of disease. That's always a logistical challenge, but the repressive government in Burma has made everything more difficult. Many countries don't recognize the Responsibility To Protect Doctrine. which says that other nations can step in to provide assistance if a government fails to protect its own citizens.

MEN'S You Can Survive Cancer (I Did) By Dr. Mark Liponis

S A HARD-DRIVING YOUNG doctor, I was focused on building a secure future for my family. My parents, the children of Greek immigrants, had taught me that hard work and a strong will created the path to success, and I was intent on getting there soon. At 36, I wasn't prepared for the detour life was about to throw at me-cancer Suddenly, my identity as protector and provider for my family was seriously shaken. For the first time, I experienced what it was like to feel vulnerable and anxious about the future. In light of my new diagnosis, the world seemed to turn more slowly. I cherished each breath, each moment with my wife and three young children.

Today, after 13 years and successful treatment, I can talk more easily about that period in my life. I learned a lot about cancer from being a patient. I learned that I had misconceptions about the illness, and I learned what I had to do to overcome it Misconception No. I: Doctors are special In a strange way, I thought that becoming a doctor was somehow like finding the immunity idol on Survivor-you couldn't get the diseases you study. I was wrong, of course. Doctors can get sick just like evcrybody else.

In my case, I was diagnosed with an apple-sized tumor in my left kidney. Surgery to remove the kidney and the growth was advised.

Survival instincts are

The tumor had been growing-but I was determined

powerful. My first reaction was more a visceral gut feeling than a thought: "I will be OK. This will not kill me." Maybe I was optimistic because I felt perfectly fine. I didn't feel sick in any way.

my diagnosis, I thought every little Misconception No. 2: People with cancer always feel sick The only ominous symptom I had was a single episode of painless. bloody urine during a late shift in the ER one night. Of course, after twitch or twinge I felt must be the cancer. But in fact my biggest new symptom was that I couldn't sleep. Too many questions, worries, and fears about the future swam through my mind. I couldn't wait for my doctors' appointments to have my questions answered. I wanted to know the best way to cure my cancer. I also wanted to know how long it had been growing in my kidney.

Misconception No. 3: Cancer grows and spreads rapidly

I was quickly scheduled for surgery to remove my kidney and surrounding lymph nodes. I resigned myself to the need to try to cut out this deadly tumor. I thought about my family and job, how important my role as provider was to my identity, and I decided not to tell anyone but my wife.

I was shocked when my second question was answered: The tumor had been growing for about 15 years! Of course I did the math and was distressed to think that I could have contracted this cancer when I was only 21 years old.

Misconception No. 4: Cancer is uncommon in young people

I learned that I was not the exception but, rather, the rule. Like other diseases, cancer has its roots in youth. In fact, essentially we all are "cancer survivors." Mutations in the DNA of any of our 100 trillion cells occur constantly in all of us, and new cancer cells & are a common occurrence even in young adults.

However, these microscopic cancers almost never become lethal tumors. The primary reason is that our immune system detects them early on and sunffs them out before they have a chance to grow. In some cases, the tumors kill themselves through mutations they develop or because they lack a blood supply to sustain their growth. Only cancer cells that develop a "cloaking mechanism" to evade the immune system, or tumors that develop their own blood supply, can successfully grow into potentially lethal tumors.

Misconception No. 5: You can cure cancer only with surgery, chemotherapy, or radiation

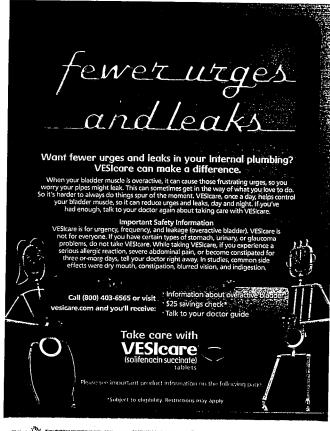

This was perhaps my most important lesson. Standard medical treatment is just one part of overcoming cancer. Surviving is a four-part process that includes treatment, healing, prevention, and life extension. But the steps many of us associate with cancer prevention (a healthy diet, exercise, proper sleep, stress management, smoking cessation, and moderation of habits) are also critical during the stages of treatment, healing, and the years that follow, I learned that these are the most effective ways of keeping microscopic cancer cells from growing into serious tumors.

They say that what doesn't kill you makes you stronger. I'm not sure I believe that. But perhaps what doesn't kill you makes you smarter. I hope you can learn from my experience without having to go through a health crisis of your own.

Dr. Mark Liponis is the author of "Ultralongevity" and medical director of Canyon Ranch spas.

HETHER YOUR GOAL is to look like an iron man or simply (and more realistically) to shape up and improve your health, there are a lot of myths and misconceptions that can get in your way. Here, we separate fact from fiction to help you get the best results.

Myth Crunches will get rid of my spare tire Reality Everyone stores extra weight differently, but the gut is one of the most common problem areas for men. Even if you do a gazillion stomach crunches and sit-ups, you won't burn enough calories to lose the fat around your middle and see the muscles you've built up underneath. To get flatter, more defined abs, you need to cut calories and add more overall exercise. Stick to a lowfat diet of lean protein and healthy carbs while doing a combination of cardio and strength-training. But keep in mind that you still need to do some stomach exercises

Myth The fastest way to build muscle is to do more rens with lighter weights.

Reality If you're looking to bulk up quickly, follow this general rule: Heavier resistance with fewer reps will build up your muscles faster. If you're just looking to shape up.

however, doing more reps with lighter weights has benefits too. including improving your muscular endurance. ("Heavy" weights are those you can use for only cight able you to do 12 to 20 reps.) The best fitness plan includes a combination of both, to enhance strength and endurance. Another reason to do both: If you always lift the same amount of weight (light or heavy) for the same number of repetitions, your body will acclimate, and progress will be slow or nonexistent.

Muth Real men don't take voca classes

Reality Boredom is one of the main reasons neonle ston exercising, and yet most men are resistant to taking classes at a gym-desnite the fact that they are one of the best ways to stay osyched and active. The benefits are not just psychological: When you do the same exercises all the time, your muscles adjust, and you hit a plateau. Changing things up will challenge your muscles and make them stronger. The social interaction also keeps many people from giving up or dropping out. And for those of you who think voga is just for long-limbed women who can twist themselves into pretzels, think again. Even one voga class a week can help you remain limber, reduce stress, and prevent injury. (Need proof? Many pro athletes have taken it up.)

Myth Working out hard on weekends will keep me in shape.

Reality Being a weekend warrior may sound like a good plan for those of you too busy to get to the gym during the week, but the . idea that you can pound your body for hours to make up for a week's

Edamame

Mood is affected by a combination of factors, including brain chemistry, life events, and the foods you eat.

Of these, only diet is under your control. Fiberrich carbohydrates such as oats and edamame (green soybeans in the pool) help prevent mood fluctuations by keeping your blood-sugar, levels steady. Edamame also contain protein, which further helps stabilize blood sugar, and omega-3 fatty acids, which have been shown to help combat depression. You can find them in just about any Japanese restaurant. They often come heavily salted, so request them "nude" or lightly coated. You also can buy frozen edamame pods at health-food stores and many supermarkets. Take 'em home, boil, drain, and enjoyl INVESTIONY These days, it seems you can't say enough about the health benefits of whether say enough about the health benefits of blueberries. But did you know that much of their power lies in their color? That deep blue hue is caused by flavonoids—natural compounds that protect the brain's memory-carrying cells (neurons) from the negative effects of oxidation and inflammation. Buy firm-fleshed berries or, off-season, try frozen, unsweretened varieties. Eat with plain yogurt, as a topping for cereal, or right out of the bow!

Lentils For Energy Rich in fiber and protein—both of which are digested slowly—lentils provide a steady source of energy. They're also a good source of several B vitamins essential to energy production, as well as iron, which helps red blood cells carry oxygen. Try whipping up a big batch of lentil soup, and you'll have a hearty lunch for days.

All the sound without all the wires.

Just plug it in and hear what you've been missing. With the Bose Wave* music system, there are no stacks of components. No tangle of wires. No dials to adjust. Advanced Bose technologies inside this small system work together to fill the room with the acclaimed performance that has made Bose the most respected name in sound. Stephen Williams of Newsday says, "the equipment disappears...And whar's left is music that's much, much bigger than you'd expect." Clear, realistic sound that you may have only thought possible from a much larger, more complicated stereo. In fact, Forbes FYI reports that "you'll think you're listening to a...sound system that costs five times more."

HINK OF SPECTACULAR BRITISH-BORN singer Leona Lewis as an "Eliza Doolittle" for our time. Her accent in conversation is pure East London Cockney but transforms into a gloriously clear My Fair Lady voice when she sings. When I asked about this startling change, she lauched.

"I know, it's really weird," the 23-year-old singer said, hardly offended but truly amused by the contradiction. "People tell moghat all the time. I think it's the trained singer's ear. I sing what I hear in the song. Talking, I speak the sounds in my head."

Lewis won The X Factor, Britain's big 160l show, and held the No. 1 spot on the Billboard charts this spring with her song "Bloeding Lova." She was in New York recently but developed a sore throat, forcing her to change our breakfast plans and fly back to London. The next day, she sent

When we finally did talk, Leona had just been struck in rushhour London traffic in her Mini Cooper. She's already been on Opah and Letterman, so I asked her about the pressures of overnight fame. How does a young performer manage to avoid the kind of train wreck Grammywinner Amy Winehouse tragically seems to have become?

she said. "Amy is an amazing artist and so talented," Leona replied." A performer's privacy is taken away. The media are always there. You can't make your mistakes in private. I have the advantage of a great support structure. I get honest opinions from my family and friends. They aren't always telling me what I want to hear, but the truth helps keep my head straight."

After her TV win, Leona was taken in hand by Simon Cowell and American music big shot Clive Davis. "Is it fair to label them your 'godfathers?" I asked. "More like uncles," she said with a laugh.

Does it irritate her to be compared over and over to Mariah Carey and Whitney Houston? "It's amazing," Leona replied. "It's exceedingly gratifying, because they're so great."

Believe me, Leona is no diva. The people who know her best say she's a sweetheart. The rest of us are learning that, too.
