Second debate focuses on crisis

By Charles Babington
Associated Press writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Barack Obama and John McCain clashed repeatedly over the causes and cures for the worst economic crisis in 80 years Tuesday night in a debate in which Republican McCain called for a sweeping $300 billion program to shield homeowners from mortgage foreclosure.

"It's my proposal. It's not Sen. Obama's proposal," McCain said at the outset of a debate he hoped could revive his fortunes in a presidential race trending toward his rival.

New copper mine planned in Nevada

By Nita Proppino
Times-News writer

A subsidiary of a Canadian company wants to reopen a long-neglected copper mine in just a few years, officials confirmed this week. Enxco International plans to branch out from its current site near Contact, Nev., to another site that has not been mined in nearly a century, said Art Small, Enxco chief project manager based in Filer. Enxco bought the newer site just six to eight months ago.

Both sites represent recent moves by the company to capitalize on higher copper prices, Small said. The metal has jumped from 67 cents per pound to as high as $4, he said, largely driven by development in China and other Asian markets. Even though that price is now closer to $2.50 a pound, the benefits are still worth studying the rocks 15 miles south of Jackpot.

"It's never been thoroughly drilled," Small said.

The newer mine, 12 miles east of the Contact site, was first claimed in 1880, Small said. But it only produced a little bit of copper ore, and certainly much less than Contact — which was mined as late as World War II.

U.S. retirement accounts have lost $2 trillion — so far

By Julia Hirschfeld Davis
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Americans' retirement plans have lost as much as $2 trillion in the past 15 months — about 20 percent of their value — Congress' top budget analyst estimated Tuesday as lawmakers began investigating how turmoil in the financial industry is whittling away workers' nest eggs.

The upheaval that has engulfed financial firms and sent the stock market plummeting is also devastating people's savings, forcing families to hold off on major purchases and even delay retirement, Peter Orszag, the head

River of Stone

HERE TO WORK
By Cassidy Friedman
Times-News writer

Suddenly, we were celebrities. On top of the world. Standing on the south side of the river in the shadow of Twin Falls Dam, Raady Hill seemed to be enjoying my tales of life and near death as much as I was enjoying the attention.

I was also luxuriating in clean clothes, a recent shower and even a shave.

As we waited for the most recent patch on our cut-rate inflatable boat to dry, I passed the time with Hill, an Idaho Power manager who met us at the dam to lead us down a meandering private road to a point where we could launch.

It was a glorious morning. Hill seemed in no hurry to get back to his office. He wanted to hear stories from our foolhardy mission to travel 57 miles from Milner Dam through the Snake River Canyon to Upper Salmon Falls Dam.

Word of our adventure preceded us. We had become the chief topic of talk among the Idaho Power workers who best know the rugged upper canyon. Some had made trips to the river just to see if they could spot us, and those who did sent messages through their work networks.

Some may have even said nice things about us.

As we waited to launch on our fourth day, I used the many rips and holes in the raft as a road map to tell of the high and low points of the trip. Each hole represented a close call, but not all close calls had holes.

The night before, just upriver, my brother Nick Coley, photographer Justin Jackson and I had capsize in the final rapid above the dam's reservoir.

We thought the rapids there were nothing.

It wasn't the last time that we would be wrong about the river of stone.

After clearing the rapids and righting our raft we had peddled the final 1.5 miles to the boat ramp at the dam.

Harnessing the power of the Snake

By Cassidy Friedman
Times-News writer

For a century, technicians have harnessed fluctuations in the Snake River Canyon's water level to create the power that the Magic Valley needs. But the power generators don't determine water levels — they just work them.

"This whole river is always in a state of flux and none of that is because of Idaho Power," said Dan

Olmstead, spokesman for the utility. "The whole canyon from where you start to the finish — it won't be the same."

One of T.F.'s most wanted arrested

12 Twin Falls apartments evacuated

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

Four Twin Falls Sheriff's officers lead Jacob DeGarmo, 21, away from the apartment complex where he holed up for more than four hours Tuesday while officers tried to arrest him for probation violators.

Twelve apartments were evacuated Tuesday by Twin Falls law enforcement authorities during a high-risk arrest that took at least four hours.

Twin Falls city and county officers arrested 21-year-old Jacob DeGarmo, at 250 Juniper St., apartment 5, on probation violations stemming from original charges of burglary and eluding an officer, said Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office spokeswoman Lori Nebeker.

As a security precaution, authorities evacuated the 12 apartments surrounding the one where they found DeGarmo, one of Twin Falls County's most wanted, Nebeker said.

Police believed DeGarmo

could have had weapons, but it was unclear Tuesday night if any were found.

More information may be available today, said Nebeker.

Law enforcement officers first tried calling DeGarmo, but ultimately sent in a police K-9 unit, Nebeker said. The incident started at 1:30 p.m. and ended by about 5:45 p.m.

DeGarmo's warrants are about two weeks old, and carries $75,000 bond on each charge, said Nebeker.

Tenants of the evacuated apartments on the corner of Juniper and Shoup streets were allowed to return home after DeGarmo was arrested.

DeGarmo, clad in jeans and a black Zook York T-shirt, was led out of the apartment in handcuffs by more than four officers.

Mine

So they've signaled the Bureau of Land Management that they want to start drilling in a mix of private and federal land, triggering an environmental study of the area, said Jim Lindsay, a BLM geologist with the agency's field office in Wells, Nev.

Studies will be required for both the exploration and mining phases of the project, and Small said it could be four or five years before the process is finished. In the meantime, the company can continue work on the private land already cleared with the state of Nevada.

The site covers about 4,000 acres stretching from Middle Snake Mountain to Tijuana John Peak, Small said.

Even though Enproex hasn't filed its official proposal yet — it expected in a couple of months — Lindsay said the company has been very good about working with him to predict and address any environmental issues. The goal, he said, is to avoid the need for the company to conduct mitigation later.

The company knows there are a "whole host" of environmental problems yet to be resolved, Small said, though not all of them will be known until the environmental study is done. One thing he doesn't expect to find is mercury, which he said did not show up when the site was assayed.

Idaho environmental groups and others have criticized Nevada mines as contributing to mercury problems in the northern state, and Nevada has recently worked with several mines to clean them up.

Other focuses of the study will include possible effects on surface water in the area and the nearby Jarbidge Wilderness Area, Lindsay said. Unlike many copper mines, it looks like sulfites may not be a problem, he said, meaning the company won't have to deal with acidic drainage.

"It's looking like it might be a real reasonable project if they find enough resource there," Lindsay said.

Though the mine is in Nevada, it could be a boon for the Twin Falls area because of the jobs it will create, Small said. The company's current drilling crews largely come from Twin Falls, he said, and as many as 100 people could be employed in the mine — though the company won't have an exact number until it finishes studying the mine.

Lindsay agreed, pointing out that mine-work pays well and that the worker pool has dried up in Nevada.

"We don't have enough people to cover the jobs we've got," he said.

Debate

In one pointed confrontation on foreign policy, Obama blithely challenged McCain's accusations. "This is a guy who sang bomb, bomb, bomb, bomb, bomb, who called for the annihilation of North Korea — that I don't think is an example of speaking softly."

The debate was the second of three between the two major party rivals, and the only one to feature a format in which voters seated a few feet away posed questions to the candidates.

They were polite, but the strain of the campaign showed. At one point, McCain referred to Obama as "that one," rather than speaking his name.

They debated on a stage at Belmont University four weeks before Election Day in a race that has lately favored Obama, both in national polls and in surveys in pivotal battleground states.

Not surprisingly, many of the questions dealt with an economy in trouble.

Obama said the current crisis was the "final verdict" on the failed economic policies of the last eight years," that President Bush pursued and were "supported by Sen. McCain."

He contended that Bush, McCain and others had favored deregulation of the financial industry, predicting that would "let market-rum wild and prosperity would rain down on all of us. It didn't happen."

McCain's pledge to have the government help individual homeowners avoid foreclosure went considerably beyond the $700 billion bailout that recently cleared Congress. While he said bailout money should be used to help homeowners, the bailout legislation merely gave the Treasury Department authority to purchase mortgages directly.

Chicken Little is running our nation's economy

Is there any other institution in America except Wall Street that is driven chiefly by rumor and panic?

Your workplace? The University of Idaho football program? "Iron Chef"? True enough, but none of those are multitrillion-dollar enterprises controlling everything from whether you have a job to whether you can ever afford to retire from it.

Imagine if a trucking company operated like Wall Street. A driver would walk into the office one morning and say, "Charlie, I got a flat tire."

The office manager would gasp, "Was it a nail that did it?"

"I think so," the driver would reply.

"Shut down the fleet!" Charlie would exclaim. "There may be other nails out there."

Or consider a farm run like Wall Street.

"Doris, I'm gonna plow the South 40 today," Farmer Brown would say to his wife one morning.

"But there's a 50 percent chance of rain," Doris would warn.

"Oh! In that case, I better just plow the South 20."

Much of our financial system at the moment is paralyzed by the fear that someone, somewhere may be hiding a bad mortgage. Is it you?

Are you now or have you ever paid interest and but no principal on your home loan? Did you get your mortgage from a lender that also offered car-title loans? Did you buy a six-figure house on a four-figure income?

If so, we need you to call Wall Street right away and say you're really sorry. You'll also need to reveal whether the CEOs of Lehman Brothers, Bear Stearns or Washington Mutual talked you into a Alt-A mortgage.

And you must promise never again to borrow anything—including trouble—from an institution that has "bank" or "payday loans" in the title.

After you've done that, please make out a check in the amount of $2,455 and send it to Secretary of the Treasury Henry Paulson. It's your share of the $700 billion bailout.

And hurry. We're all hurting these days.

I, for example, used to be able to feed my family steak once in awhile. Now we have to buy meat from the clearance case at Ralph's Pretty Good Grocery.

It's a subtitle: JUST ASKIN': The Dow Jones Industrial Average has fallen 1,034 points, or 10 percent, since Congress approved and President Bush signed the bailout package last Friday.

How much more would it cost to get someone on Wall Street to actually buy a stock?

Steve Crump can be reached at 735-3223.

AROUND THE VALLEY

New Web site explains possible pandemic

Idaho health officials have unveiled a new Web site they hope will help businesses, families and others prepare for a possible future flu pandemic.

A pandemic — mass infection by a flu strain — could close schools, overtax hospitals and keep as many as 40 percent of workers home, according to a news release. Officials estimate a serious pandemic flu strain could infect 450,000 Idahoans and kill 9,000. The Web site is intended to provide reliable information on past pandemics and ways to prepare for a future one.

The avian flu virus, H5N1, is widely expected to cause the next pandemic, though it is not capable of doing so yet. For more information: <http://www.PanFluIdaho.org>.

Feds seek input on peppergrass problem

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is once again looking for public comment on sicklepod peppergrass, a rare, herbaceous plant found exclusively in southwestern Idaho. Officials are re-examining whether the plant should be listed as an endangered species after a federal judge ruled in June that the agency wrongly downplayed scientific evidence in a previous decision. The 30-day public comment period will end at midnight Eastern time on Oct. 23.

Comments can be sent to Public Comments Processing, Attn: RIN 1018-A150 Division of Policy and Directives Management, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, 4401 N. Fairfax Drive, Suite 222, Arlington, VA 22203. They can also be submitted by visiting <http://www.regulations.gov> and following the instructions.

E-mails or faxes will not be accepted. All comments will be posted on the Web site above, including personal information. Comments must include first and last name, city, state, country, and ZIP code.

F&G investigates poached moose

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game is looking for information as to who may have killed and wasted a bull moose just more than one week ago.

According to a release put out Tuesday, the moose was killed on Sept. 26 or 27, north of Fairfield in the Rosetta Creek drainage of Big Game Unit 44 near Warswick Hot Springs. The site was near Forest Service Road 471.

Anyone with information is asked to call the Citizens Against Poaching Hotline at 600-632-5999, or the Magic Valley Regional Office at 208-324-4359. Callers may remain anonymous and a reward may be issued for information leading to a conviction.

Elmore Co. holds first hearing on nuke rezone

The company behind a proposed nuclear plant in Elmore County will argue tonight that the plant fits with the county's comprehensive plan and would benefit the largely rural area at the first part of a county rezoning hearing.

Alternate Energy Holdings Inc. filed in August to rezone 1,400 acres of farmland for the plant's future site. Tonight is the first of four public hearings on the application, said company spokesman Martin Infante.

The reasoning for its application, and supporters of the rezoning will have their chance to testify. Opponents of the application will be able to speak Oct. 22 and 29, and AEHI will have a chance to rebut their testimony on Nov. 5. Tonight's hearing will be at 6:30 p.m. at the Mountain Home Junior High School Gymnasium.

ADVENTURE CONTINUED FROM A1

They were bitter miles directly into a furious east wind that churned the normally placid reservoir into punishing whitecaps. If we missed a stroke with our paddles, the raft instantly stalled. If we stopped to rest, the wind hurled us back.

Wet, cold, exhausted, we grew to hate the people in ski boats who buzzed around us, their wakes tossing us sideways as they sipped sodas and generally ignored our existence. They were on the river to play. We were hard at work.

At last, we fought our way around a bend and slowly approached the dock where our "boss" waited, looking relaxed in business clothes and Ray-Ban Aviators.

He had sent us on this fool's errand. But he also came with hot sandwiches, cold beer and the suggestion that we go home and sleep in beds tonight.

We decided to forgive him.

The canyon's own bit of China

We returned to the river 50 feet below the Twin Falls, thanks to Hill's help in guiding us through an access tunnel cut through a cliff. Few people ever visit the base of the 120-foot falls, but at least one young man is known to have gotten there the hard way.

Dean Ohray, a former power plant supervisor, tells of the time he was sitting on the porch of a company-provided house that overlooks the dam's staircase, the only way to reach the pool at the base of the dam.

"He was stunned to see a young man walk up the stairs, which are closed to the public. A kid showed up at the top of the stairs soaking wet and bedraggled-looking," said Hill, who was told the story by his former boss.

The boy wasn't injured, but "he didn't remember anything."

Just then the boy's father arrived, frantic from searching for his son, who had disappeared minutes earlier while swimming above the falls.

The boy's name has been lost to time, but "the only logical explanation is that he went over the falls," Hill said.

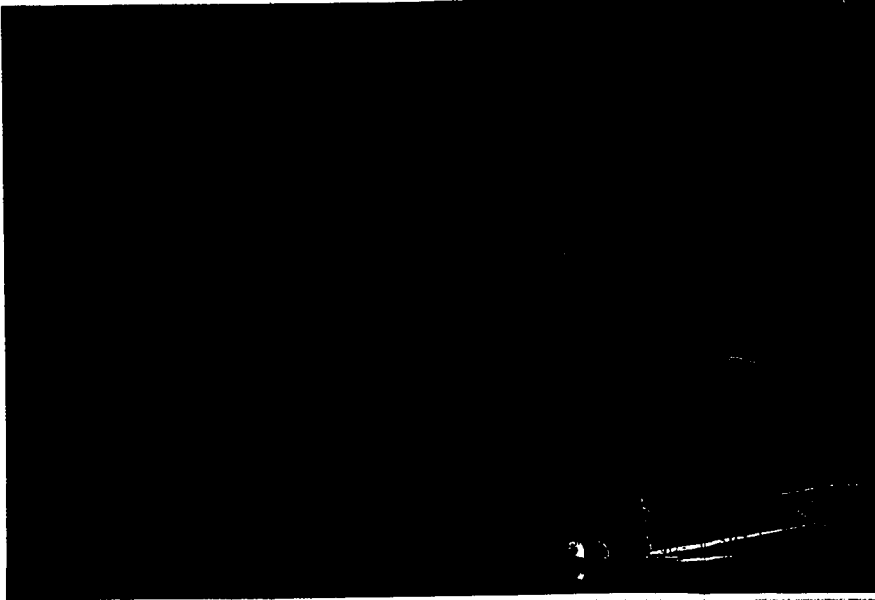

A half-mile down the river we found China Camp, a tiny mining settlement from the 1870s gold rush in the canyon. We toured its three-foot-tall stone ruins, located several feet above the river's north bank. Covered in poison ivy, they are said to be some of the oldest surviving frontier structures in southern Idaho.

China Camp was first claimed by miner Ralph Bledsoe, who may have come to agree with what one of his disillusioned fellows said to say about striking it rich in the canyon: "The view of Shoshone Falls was far more rewarding than the gold prospects."

But by some accounts, Bledsoe's claim was one of the richest bars in the river, and he was able to sell it to "the leader of the Chinese, Mon-Chu."

Mon-Chu, it seemed, had a lot of friends. Ron James, a Robert Stewart Junior High teacher who has excavated the site, estimates that as many as 400 Chinese immigrants worked claims in the canyon prior to 1880, when China Camp was abandoned and largely forgotten.

The site was rediscovered in 1988, and James' excavations have turned up coins from Hong Kong, opium smoking paraphernalia, mining tools and the remains of a bundle of Ayer's Sassailla — notable because doctors in the 1800s thought a dose of the carbonated soda could purify the blood of deadly mercury, which miners used to concentrate gold flakes in their pans.

Bledsoe was happy to sell his claim to Mon-Chu, but few white settlers were happy to meet their Chinese neighbors.

In 1870, one in three residents of the Idaho Territory was a Chinese immigrant, and half of all miners were Chinese. They were considered second-class citizens, and often faced discrimination and brutal treatment at the hands of whites, who would take pot-shots at the miners from the canyon rim.

After the gold played out, the Chinese either left of their own accord or were forcefully urged to move on. China Camp is now owned by Twin Falls artist Gary Stone.

Settlement, death and tourism

In slack water downstream from China Camp we decided to kick back and literally go ahead. Soon we would be at the most famous spot on the river.

In 1886, Charles Dewey opened the 23-room Little Dewey House Hotel on the spot in Shoshone Falls Park where tourists now park their cars. Railroad officials helped market the new tourist destination, noting that it was just 25 miles from the rail line at Shoshone. They also made up a romantic ghost story about an Indian lover who jumped to their death into the falls, where "the maiden comes when the moon is bright and crouches upon the rock, the tyegee playing with her long black hair."

For 51 a night tourists could be abed and listen to the roar of the falls. Business picked up after artists began to paint the falls, and publish pictures and books such as Edward Roberts' 1898 "Shoshone and other Western Wonders."

The first real tragedy at the falls involved Tom Bell, a fiddle-playing Scotsman who ferried miners and supplies across the river above it. In 1881, he was rowing Mon-Chu and two other Chinese across the river when an oar snapped, leaving them helplessly against the current. Some accounts have one man swimming to safety while the others could not. It's said the Bell, who may have had a few too many drinks that day, stood in the bow of his boat, tucked his fiddle under his chin and played his own dirge as they went over.

Not everyone who has gone over the falls did so by accident. The day after the dedication of Milner Dam in 1905, fellow namesake Harry Wilson was said to have been "tanked up on squirrel whiskey" stripped bare and jumped from a ledge to the river, 212 feet below. Only slightly bruised, he later said he wanted to demonstrate his abilities as a professional daredevil and stunt man.

And in the late 1920s, after Idaho Power had set up 30 colored floodlights to decorate the popular tourist attraction, Al Fausset of Monroe, Wash., drew 5,000 spectators to see him plunge over in an orange canvas canoe. The fact that he survived pleased few: The river seemed wimpy and his slow descent suggested he was actually lowered on a wire.

A bit farther downstream and nearly a half-century later, another showman would again fall to wow his audience. On Sept. 8, 1974, stunt rider Evel Knievel strapped himself into a rocket-powered "sky cycle" and didn't even come close to clearing the canyon. Unimpressed and believing that Evel had popped his chute while still on the launch ramp, unsatisfied patrons rioted in Shoshone Falls Park, burning out-houses and pillaging beer trucks.

In trouble again

Hill met us again at Shoshone Falls. This time he was on the north side of the river, at the private docks of Country Club Estates, a small but unique housing subdivision in a notch in the canyon wall overlooking Shoshone Falls.

Reservoir. His Idaho power co-worker, Gregory Dobey, said that we were alone, again, and in trouble, again.

And we hadn't even met the neo-Nazi yet.

As we carried our boat around the falls, we again met our boss, who had motored over to meet us and to help us on the journey.

As we were alone, again, and in trouble, again.

And we hadn't even met the neo-Nazi yet.

As we carried our boat around the falls, we again met our boss, who had motored over to meet us and to help us on the journey.

As we were alone, again, and in trouble, again.

And we hadn't even met the neo-Nazi yet.

As we carried our boat around the falls, we again met our boss, who had motored over to meet us and to help us on the journey.

As we were alone, again, and in trouble, again.

Northwest gas line to run south of Idaho's southern border

By Doug McHardo
Elko Daily Free Press

ELKO, Nev. — Plans to construct a $3 billion, 600-mile natural gas pipeline from Opal 11th, Wyo., to Malin, Ore., are on the fast track, according to El Paso Corp. executives Richard Wheatley and Daniel Gredvig.

The project in Elko County, Nev. is well north of Interstate 80 and the property, from Wyoming to Oregon, involves a patchwork of private landowners and government land managers.

Roughly 370 of the 680 miles will be in Nevada as the pipeline runs across the top of the state, just south of the Idaho/Nevada border.

The project is significant on many levels, not the least of which is the fact it will be the first pipeline to carry the fuel west from the Rocky Mountain gas fields in Wyoming, Colorado, Utah and New Mexico. All other pipelines, whether operating or in the planning stage, run in an easterly direction.

"This provides benefits for Rocky Mountain gas producers as well as western end users," said Wheatley, managing director of investor and gas relations for the multi-billion-dollar Houston-based firm.

The front-end beneficiaries will be the producers, who need a westerly outlet as bad as the west needs natural gas to meet that demand, Gredvig said end users will be located all along the route.

It will be an "open access" pipeline, said Wheatley, meaning communities and private business could tap into the line virtually anywhere along its path, with the customer paying to hook in.

This access, said Wheatley, could conceivably provide for economic development and attract businesses to areas that were natural gas.

The company is in the middle of an expedited permitting effort with a go-live date pegged at March 2011. El Paso Corp. has opened an Elko office and representatives like Wheatley and Gredvig have held town hall meetings across the route, including one in Elko several months ago.

At the same time, issues regarding permits from the U.S. Energy Regulatory Commission and other state and federal agencies are under review.

"We hope to have EIRC and other permitting done by 2009, but it could go into 2010," Wheatley said, "though we think the majority."

While El Paso Corp. is headquartered in Houston, its western region operations are based in Colorado Springs, Colo. The company does business in three countries and has pipelines and hubs spread throughout the lower 48.

Gredvig, principal negotiator involving the company's right-of-way applications, said environmental concerns have been met proactively and 90 percent of affected landowners "willingly gave us survey rights," adding this does not mean the landowner is committed to the project.

Compressor stations will be located along the route, including one in Elko County on Mountain City Highway, which will be maintained. The pipeline will be as environmentally sound as possible, and the company hopes to reach "carbon neutral" production values, Gredvig said. To achieve the goal, Wheatley said El Paso Corp.

would utilize methods ranging from the latest emission reduction technology to purchasing carbon offsets.

"We see this as a bridge between oil and renewable energy," said Wheatley, adding skilled and unskilled workers in Elko would be hired once the project, which will be constructed in six or seven stages, reaches the area.

Ag issues central in Ihler, Hartgen House race

Contest for District 23 race covers west T.F. County

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

Magicvalley.com.

Watch video interviews and view questionnaires filled out by the candidates.

Agriculture has emerged as a top issue in the House race between GOP state Rep. Steve Hartgen, a Twin Falls business consultant, and Democrat Mike Ihler, a Twin Falls farmer, in heavily rural District 23.

Hartgen — who was chosen by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter in August to fill a vacancy — has said he is running to preserve the conservative values of District 23, a nearly 10,000 square-mile region that consists of Owyhee County and western Twin Falls County. Hartgen has served on a handful of statewide boards, and remains a member of the Capitol Commission.

"At this stage in my life it's just another extension of the kind of public service I've been doing," he said.

Ihler, who has twice sought to be county commissioner, said he's been politically active since 1999 when a hog farm near his property broke its promises. He said he has nothing against Hartgen, but is concerned over how agribusiness operations affect small farms. He said lawmakers don't fully address environmental and agriculture issues.

"I'm running because I feel the people need a choice, and just from watching the Legislature in the past going behind closed doors and making decisions by the Republican Party alone and not having an open session," he said. "I want to keep Idaho like Idaho and not destroy it so there's a place for my grandkids and everybody else's grandkids and kids."

There are 105 members in the part-time Idaho Legislature that typically meets from January to March. Legislators are paid a base salary of $16,821 annually, not including per diem for travel. The general election is Nov. 4. Ihler said the Legislature has tried to put rules in place for state agencies but hasn't provided the ability for them to be enforced. He said conditioned-animal feeding operations in Twin Falls County aren't as problematic as other regions, but the industry needs more scrutiny. "I'm a farmer so I know how things worked before the big CAFO comes in and we didn't have the problems," he said. "They come in with this 'best-management process' idea, and some of those haven't worked."

Hartgen, however, disagreed and said the state's done a good job regulating and improved rules to the point that CAFOs are now toward the outer edges of counties.

"I think the issue is sort of behind us," he said. "On transportation, both said they'd support some type of fee increases."

Hartgen said he expects changes to licensing, fuel tax rental cars or truck trailers, noting that he recently registered his boat trailer for $10.

"Strikes me as probably low," he said.

Ihler said raising registration fees would be a better alternative to increasing the fuel tax. And he said a new bridge over the Snake River could be a toll-bridge — like the Perrine Bridge was years ago.

Both said they support merit pay for performance for teachers, and noted that education should be preserved from possible budget cuts.

Otherwise, both said, it's too early to predict how lawmakers should adjust the state budget in the tight economy.

On energy, Hartgen has said he supports alternative energies and that southern Idaho is ripe for such projects. He's currently a consultant to the 185-turbine $500 million China Mountain wind project.

Ihler said he is skeptical of nuclear energy, but that there should be tax credits for people to put solar panels on their homes or build wind turbines.

"If we would put incentives in there and everyone started owning solar panels on their house we'd see an influx dealing with the solar panel industry and the windmill industry," he said. "It should be geared toward the little guy being able to help himself."

Idaho can't afford not to build a medical school

Your recent editorial expressed the opinion that Idaho could not afford a medical school at this time. I do not believe that Idaho can afford not to build a medical school now. Idaho ranks 49th or 50th in the number of physicians per population. Idaho only has half of the physicians that the government recommends. This limits access to medical care for many people and shows that the WWAMI program is not working at bringing physicians to our state. I was grateful to be a WWAMI student years ago, but this program is just not bringing enough physicians to the state. I do not believe that giving a subsidy or a tax break will bring enough physicians to this state to make a difference. Most physicians like to practice near where they were trained in their residency programs. I understand that there are no medical school seats available in the WWAMI medical schools other than the 26 that Idaho already has because those states need those seats for their own students. A medical school here in Idaho would provide 50 to 70 seats every year. This physician shortage problem will only grow worse with time as Idaho continues to grow.

READER COMMENT

Idaho is the largest state without a medical school. Many medical schools have been formed for smaller populations than ours. The proposed medical school is not the Idaho State University Medical School; it would be the Idaho Medical School. This means that Boise State and the University of Idaho would also be major participants in the medical school. This is the model that most recent medical schools that have been formed follow.

The idea of a medical school is certainly popular amongst physicians. In fact, this is the top priority of the Idaho Medical Association. The vote by physicians at the last convention in favor of building a medical school in Idaho was unanimous. Start-up cost for a new medical school would be supposedly $15 million. This would be possible because the present college buildings, faculty and hospitals around the state could be used for the medical school. What most people do not understand is what we lose by not having a medical school. Federal government research grants and grants to the medical school would total more than $200 million a year. Idaho also loses many millions of dollars in health care spent at out-of-state university hospitals because Idaho does not have a medical school.

Most good residency programs are associated with a medical school. There is no residency program in my field (obstetrics/gynecology) and other specialties at the present time in Idaho. Unless we form a medical school, we will never have the residency programs in Idaho we would like to have. It would be very unwise for Idaho not to build a medical school soon.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Vote for third-party presidential candidates

The $700 billion bailout of the banks is not a stimulus without derivatives, not subprime mortgages. Using complicated new debt instruments, illegal until banking deregulation under Clinton and Bush, the once vast wealth of Wall Street has been extracted and moved out of the United States. Wall Street is a false-front Hollywood set. Lehman Brothers had $70 of debt for every dollar in assets.

Worse, the bailout creates a corporatist, fascist structure through which the Federal Reserve (a private banking entity) can extract the balance of America's wealth. By making all Americans liable for the bankers' gambling debts, it creates a pipeline from Wall Street to Main Street. It gives the Fed dictatorial economic powers and specifies its decisions "may not be reviewed by any court of law or any administrative agency." That $700 billion is just the opening volley.

Either we stand on principles and refuse to sign over our country to thieves wearing Armani or generations will curse us as fools and wreakings. Instead of capitulating, we must demand a criminal investigation, the abolishment of the Fed and adopt sound currency.

Worldwide, business is a credit junkie. Time for rehab. Main Street has been working under a huge handicap, competition with globalist financiers. Soon you will see capital flows nearly vanish, then gradually reopen with modest local sources. That's if Congress rebuffs the bankers. Otherwise, you'll see the dollar die (think Weinart, Republic and tax benefits, regulations and confiscations that completely strangle commerce. Think USSR 1980, now 90 percent of the food supply came from Russian bank yards).

The Democrat/Republican dichotomy is false. McCain and "Obomber" are both wholly-owned subsidiaries of the globalist bankers. Both will bring rationing, World War III and socialism. Vote third party: either Chuck Baldwin (Constitution Party) or Ralph Nader (Independent). Both agree to core liberty principles. (CAUPAinforLiberty.org)

Writer favors beheading over massive bailout

This current economic crisis is simply and completely attributable to governmental officials' (read that Barney Franks and his ilk) malfeasance. They forced banks to make irrational lending policies and used Freddie Mac and Fannie Mae as their own little piggy bank. Now this same bunch wants to replace capitalism with socialism. Heads ought to roll instead of this massive bailout!

A vote for Carter is a vote for common sense

I am supporting Tom Carter for the Twin Falls County sheriff. The citizens need to remember that a year ago, the incumbent, Wayne Tousey, publicly supported the ridiculous decision by one of his sergeants, who issued a citation for the minor violation of failure to have life-vests in possession to some good Samaritans who were in the process of voluntarily helping out the sheriff's office by recovering a body of a person who had jumped off the bridge. Now is the time to cast votes for a reasonable sheriff. This type of poor decision-making could be expected from an inexperienced recruit. Our current sheriff promoted an individual of that caliber to sergeant.

The pay and benefits are enough in our county that we don't have to settle for sheriffs or deputies that are unable to exercise good judgment and common sense or to stand up for what is right like our prosecutor did when he dismissed that ticket.

Quick and mindless decisions like that one will cause the good decent citizens to avoid helping all police officers. Without citizen involvement and support, the jobs of all our dedicated law enforcement officers become extremely hard and almost impossible to do successfully. We need to take a hard look at the people we elect to the important job of sheriff. He should be acting on our behalf. It is his job to ensure that his employees use good common sense and are reasonable.

Mr. Tousey is responsible for his department and his employees. What I perceive as his mismanagement has, in all likelihood, caused our decent, intelligent and professional deputy sheriffs, ridicule and embarrassment. If he or his employees use bad judgment, huge lawsuits can arise that we have to pay to defend and/or settle.

Market plunges 500 points despite Fed announcement

Federal Reserve to buy massive amounts of short-term debt

By Jeannine Arava
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve moved swiftly to break through a credit clog that is impeding the economy, saying Tuesday it would buy massive amounts of short-term debt and hinting that it may cut interest rates.

Wall Street — the main target of attention — was unimpressed, falling deeper into depression despite the news. The Dow Jones industrials shed more than 500 points.

Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke warned that the financial crisis has not only darkened the country's current economic performance but also could prolong the pain.

"The outlook for economic growth has worsened," Bernanke said in a speech at the annual meeting here of the National Association for Business Economics.

His more gloomy assessment appeared to open the door wider to an interest rate cut on or before Oct. 28-29, the central banks next meeting, to brace the wobbly economy. The Fed's key interest rate now stands at 2 percent.

Stocks slumped as investors focused on Bernanke's warnings and worries about the weakness of financial companies. Bank of America Corp. reported its third-quarter profits fell 68 percent. The three major U.S. stock indexes all fell more than 5 percent a day after a huge selloff Monday put the Dow below 10,000 for the first time in four years.

The statements came against a backdrop of increasing concern that a global recession is rapidly developing. There is growing pressure for the U.S. government to do more beyond the $700 billion financial bailout package President Bush signed into law Friday.

To that end, the Fed invoked Depression-era emergency powers to begin buying commercial paper — short-term funding that many companies rely on to pay their workers and buy supplies.

The government's bailout package is aimed at thawing lending by buying rotten mortgages and other bad debts from banks and other financial institutions. By getting these bad debts off bank's balance sheets, they might be in a better position to raise capital and more willing to lend to each other and to customers.

Tight credit has made it increasingly difficult and expensive for companies to raise money to fund their operations.

Payson Reese, manager of the new 2nd Time Around at The Whistle Stop in Shoshone, completes some paperwork while working in the original 2nd Time Around store in Twin Falls. Reese, of Ruhl, splits his time working at both locations.

2nd Time Around opens antique store in Shoshone

By Hank Koch
Times-News correspondent

Retail sales may be a bit slow but the time was right for Claudia Reese to take the plunge and open another 2nd Time Around antique store.

Reese, of Ruhl, has operated the Twin Falls location of 2nd Time Around for 11 years and three months ago opened the doors to a Shoshone location.

"Shoshone is a great place to stop. It has a rich history and I want to be involved in bringing the town back to life while embracing its past," Reese said. The store, located at 102 S. Rail St. E., is an antique itself and is included on the National Historic Register.

The north side sister store is managed by Reese's 27-year-old son Payson Reese.

"Payson has been involved in the Twin Falls store since it was opened 11 years ago. Before that, when the antique store was run out of our home he was always helping me out...it's just in his blood," she said.

While he is excited to be adding economic vitality to Shoshone, there are plenty of challenges ahead.

"Oh the economy, it's a concern," he said. "Some days are really slow but we are selling stuff. Business has been pretty good."

Susie Petersen, manager of the neighboring business Ace Hardware, at 106 South Rail Street, said she's seen a few more customers who visit the antique store before entering her hardware store.

"I think it's been both ways...customers stopping here first and then going next door or vice versa," Petersen said.

She's worked at the hardware store for 16 years and said the last year has been the slowest for business and isn't sure if the new store will help draw other businesses to Shoshone.

"I don't expect it to get better, not with the economy and market the way it is," Petersen said.

The Reeses are optimistic and say Shoshone has a lot of potential. To entice customers to let go of their hard-earned dollars the store utilizes special discounts and lay-a-way for high-end goods.

"We've been able to add different dealers and have a lot of different items," he said. "There are some pretty interesting things. I've been around antiques my whole life and some of the antiques being brought in blow my shoes off."

Keeping with the history of Shoshone, one of the oldest cities in the Magic Valley, the store has many antiques reminiscent of its past.

The Reeses would like to build up an inventory of Shoshone specific memorabilia and they are excited to partner with the Lincoln County Chamber of Commerce in becoming its first Visitors Center.

The store's hours are 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

The pumpkin diaries

A humble food raised to culinary heights

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

BUIH. — Little Hannah Young couldn't contain her excitement about her experience in the pumpkin patch.

"We got baby ones!" the 3-year-old exclaimed. Her cousin, April Nipper, 2, mimicked her excitedly.

"We're gonna eat them!" Young continued. "I eat pumpkin pie!"

The girls chattered about their treasures as they helped their grandmother, Terry Nipper of Buhl, load their haul from Crismon Pumpkin Patch into the car.

Like many Idaho families, the Nippers chose to get their pumpkins straight from the patch, enriching the fall traditions of pumpkin dishes and jack-o'-lanterns with the experience of wandering through the field in the crisp autumn air, searching for a good gourd.

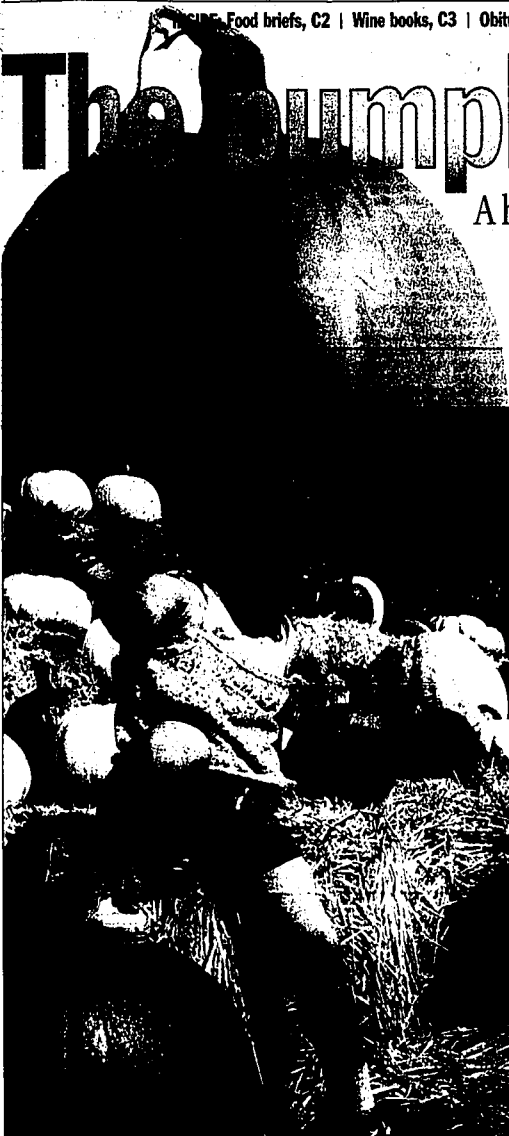

"I thought it would be nice to do it a little more local," Terry Nipper said.

Though many pumpkins sold this time of year are for decoration, many culinary delights hide in the fleshy orange squash. Imagine how much more proud you'll be of your pumpkin pie if you make it from scratch and punnel the pulp yourself.

To expand your pumpkin palate, we provided three of our favorite pumpkin recipes for you to try. So take advantage of the pre-picked pumpkins that many patches offer, or go adventuring in field for the perfect specimen.

Melissa Davlin may be reached at 208-735-3234 or melissa.davlin@lee.net.

April Nipper, 2, decodes straw bales after picking out pumpkins Sept. 29 at Crismon Pumpkin Patch in Buhl.

Pumpkin facts

- The largest pumpkin on record was grown last year in Rhode Island and weighed in at 1,689 pounds. A pumpkin in Sharon, Mass., is giving it a run for its money this year, though. The last unofficial weigh-in put it at more than 1,800 pounds. And it's not done yet. The giant gourd is growing at a rate of 11 pounds per day and will be officially weighed on Saturday.

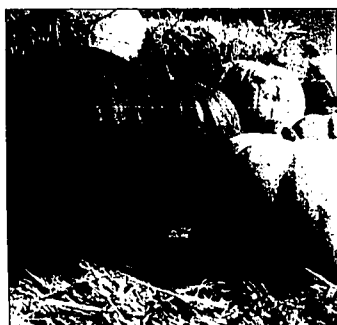

- Jack-o'-lanterns originated in Ireland, where children placed candles in hollowed-out turnips to ward off evil spirits on Halloween.

- Pumpkin flowers are edible and are popular in Mexican cuisine.

- Don't throw away your pumpkin seeds! For a fun, heat-free snack, rinse off the pulp and dry overnight. Preheat the oven to 250 degrees. Toss seeds lightly with olive oil or butter and your choice of seasonings — try garlic powder, cayenne, cinnamon, seasoned salt or curry spice. Spread evenly on a foil-lined baking sheet and bake for one hour, tossing every 15 minutes.

- Pumpkins are loaded with nutrients, including beta carotene and vitamin A.

- Because a pumpkin has seeds on the inside, it's considered a fruit, not a vegetable. Other commonly misclassified fruits include cucumbers, zucchini and peppers.

PUMPKIN FOR BREAKFAST

By Virginia Hutchins
Times-News writer

For those just a little weary of pumpkin pie, this smoothie is an excellent way to taste the season's favorite vegetable — and to bring it to the breakfast table.

This recipe, from "Cooking Healthy Across America," is a snap if you use the canned pumpkin it calls for. (Be sure to buy a can of pure pumpkin, not pie filling.) But the smoothie can be raised to blissful heights by fresh pumpkin, cooked and frozen in one-cup portions.

Just cut a washed pumpkin in half and scoop out the seeds. Cut each half into wedges an inch or two thick. Peel each wedge and cut it into chunks. Place the chunks in a large pot of water on the stovetop and bring to a boil; reduce heat to a simmer, cover and cook until the pumpkin is soft.

Drain the chunks and puree them, then freeze individual portions.

A large pumpkin's worth of puree will easily pay back that investment of time.

Move a one-cup container from the freezer to the refrigerator before bed, and it'll be ready for your smoothie blender in the morning. Delightful.

PUMPKIN CHEESECAKE SMOOTHIE

- 1 cup canned pumpkin (or home-cooked puree)
- 1 cup low-fat vanilla yogurt
- 1 cup fat-free milk
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1/4 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 2 teaspoons sugar
- Sprinkle of nutmeg

Combine all the ingredients except the nutmeg in a blender or a food processor. Blend until smooth. Pour into a glass and garnish with a sprinkle of nutmeg. Serves two.

TEMPTING TEMPURA

MELISSA DAVLIN/Times-News

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

I first tried this dish while studying abroad in Nagasaki, Japan. Kabocha, or Japanese green pumpkin, is a traditional ingredient in tempura, which is served as an appetizer, side dish and on noodles or rice. Our familiar orange pumpkins are a nice substitute — to-me, they taste exactly the same.

Wrestling with a fresh pumpkin for bite-size pieces can be frustrating, but the result is well worth it. Cut thicker pieces for a more pronounced pumpkin taste. And no, it doesn't need to be pre-cooked.

It's important that the water for the tempura batter is ice-cold; that helps the batter stay crispy after it's fried. Also, don't combine batter ingredients until the oil is fully heated. The batter should be slightly runny.

Panko breadcrumbs are available at Swensen's Markets and Asian Food Market in Twin Falls, and the dipping sauce is sold at Asian Food Market. If you can't make it there, use soy sauce or sweet and sour.

Get creative and substitute other vegetables for the pumpkin. My favorites are sweet potato, green bean and asparagus.

PUMPKIN TEMPURA

- 1 small pumpkin
- 1 1/2 cups ice-cold water
- 2 cups all-purpose flour or tempura mix
- 1 egg
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 3 cups panko Japanese breadcrumbs
- Oil for frying
- Tempura dipping sauce

Heat oil in wok on medium high. Cut the pumpkin into bite-size chunks, discarding the innards and the skin. When oil is hot, mix together flour, salt, water and egg. Don't overmix; the batter should be runny.

Dip pumpkin pieces in tempura batter, then dredge in panko breadcrumbs. Submerge in oil and fry until light golden brown, about 2 minutes.

Serve immediately with tempura dipping sauce on side. Serves 4.

Can your canning compete?

Sun Valley Center for the Arts in Ketchum is honoring local cooks and local foods by offering a canning competition for anyone wishing to showcase their garden's best produce.

Categories are canned fruits; canned vegetables; relishes and miscellaneous; herbal vinegars and vinaigrette; and soft spreads such as jelly, jam preserves, marmalades and butters. Entries will be judged on flavor, texture and overall presentation.

Entries are being accepted now through March 6. Submissions will be included in a gallery exhibition March 27 through May 23. First, second and third prizes in each of the categories will be awarded at a tasting party at the exhibition closing.

PUMPKIN SEEDS GIVE EXTRA CRUNCH TO GRANOLA

By Virginia Hutchins
Times-News writer

The smell of warm, nuttoid granola emerging from the oven on a Sunday afternoon always brings my husband to the kitchen.

I know how he feels. Mom's granola was a staple — and a joy — of my childhood, and I took her recipe with me in a little handwritten notebook she assembled.

My frugal mother uses just a cup of nuts — generally sunflower seeds — but I kept edging that up and now regard two cups of nuts as a minimum. The result is a hearty breakfast that sticks with me much longer than commercial cereals.

For years I relied on the predictable pairing of walnuts and almonds, eventually throwing in a few pecans and pumpkin seeds I had on hand.

The pecans add luxury; the pumpkin seeds — which puff slightly as the granola bakes — provide pop and surprise. Both became regular players in the two-cup total.

Shelled pumpkin seeds are available in most grocery stores, sometimes labeled pepinus. Just be sure you're buying plain, raw seeds for this recipe, not roasted and salted. They're an excellent and easy way to sample the benefits of October's favorite food.

SORT-OF-MOM'S GRANOLA

- 5 cups old-fashioned rolled oats, uncooked
- 1 cup coconut
- 1/2 cup chopped walnuts
- 1/2 cup chopped pecans
- 1/2 cup slivered almonds
- 1/2 cup raw pumpkin seeds
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 1/2 teaspoons cinnamon
- 1/3 cup safflower oil
- 1/2 to 2/3 cup honey
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. In a large bowl, mix oats, coconut, nuts, seeds, salt and cinnamon.

Pour 1/3 cup safflower oil into a glass measuring cup, then add honey until the level of the oil reaches somewhere between 5/6 cup and 1 cup, depending on taste. There is no need to mix the oil and honey. Add vanilla to the oil-honey combination and pour it all into the oats mixture. Thanks to the oil, the honey should slide out of your measuring cup with ease.

Stir well, and spread the mixture evenly in a shallow baking pan, approximately 10 by 14 inches.

Bake for about 12 minutes, or until the top just begins to brown. Remove from the oven, stir and spread evenly again. Bake for about 7 minutes; the oats and nuts on top this time should be browned more than the first time. Remove from the oven again, stir and spread. Bake for about another 7 minutes. If you prefer chewier granola, stop there; if you prefer crunchier granola, stir and bake for 3 minutes.

Transfer granola immediately to a large bowl to cool, and stir it occasionally while cooling to prevent sticking. (Hint: The sooner you wash your baking pan, the easier it will be.)

Serve granola warm or cooled, with yogurt and fresh fruit. Strawberries and blueberries pair particularly well with this granola, but bananas stays at room temperature for at least a week.

Food book roundup: Pairing food and wine

By Jill Rosen
The Baltimore Sun

"Williams-Sonoma Wine & Food: A New Look at Flavor" by Joshua Wesson (Free Press, 2008, $29.95).

Matching food with wine can be a baffling, if not intimidating, experience. Just as toothpaste residue will sour the morning orange juice, the wrong wine can undermine an otherwise great entree.

Wesson, who founded a chain of wine stores organized by style, organizes his book the same way — to the benefit of anyone looking to demystify wine pairing.

He explains not only why chardonnay is a rich white, but why it works alongside a fresh corn soup with shiitake mushrooms.

To complement his Nicoise Salad With Seared

Tuna, with its fresh and salty elements, he smartly recommends pouring a French rose with herbal aromas and fruit flavors.

Though the book includes only 50 recipes, it's worth the money for a chart at the beginning that can guide someone cooking say, shrimp, through possible wine matches and then, depending on the recipe, to a bottle that's a near-sure thing.

"Wine Country Cooking," by Joanne Weir (Ten Speed Press, 2008, $22.50).

If Wesson's book tilts more toward wine tutorial, Weir's has the foodie's interests at heart.

She leaps into more than 200 pages of recipes, dishes inspired by California's lush wine country.

Though Weir thoughtfully recommends drinking a chablis with her lemon-and-shrimp risotto, or a Cotes du Rhone with the veal chops, the plate itself is clearly what thrills her.

She's interested in seasonal cooking and incorporating into recipes the tomatoes, lemons, nuts and herbs thriving near vineyards.

Her Fan-and-Olive Crostini lent an earthy, fresh start to a light, summer dinner. She suggests sipping a prosecco alongside, a refreshing choice.

"Wine Bar Food: Mediterranean Flavors to Cerveza With Wines to Match," by Cathy and Tony Mantuano (Clarkson Potter, 2008, $27.50).

The Mantuanos want to take readers on a tipsy bar hop through Europe, stopping for snacks in Milan, Italy; Barcelona, Spain; Athens, Greece; and Lisbon, Portugal.

The concept of pairing is an afterthought here. The authors just want readers to taste wine-bar menus from city to city.

With this book, readers could arrange an Italian, Spanish or Greek cocktail party, but they probably would walk away unsure if they should serve Rioja with the Mantuanos' Catalan Pizza.

That said, I successfully rolled the dice and drank prosecco with Whipped Feta and Roasted Red-Pepper Spread.

NICOISE SALAD WITH SEARED TUNA

This recipe is from "Williams-Sonoma Wine & Food."

1/2 cup plus 1 teaspoon extra-virgin olive oil, plus more if needed (divided use)

1 1/4 cup red-wine vinegar

1 tablespoon Dijon mustard

1 tablespoon chopped shallot

1 tablespoon fresh tarragon leaves

Kosher salt

Freshly ground black pepper

1/2 pound small red or white boiling potatoes

1/2 pound haricots verts or other small green beans, trimmed

8 to 12 olive-oil-packed anchovy fillets, optional

1/4 cup milk, optional

1 piece sashimi-grade tuna fillet, about 3/4 pound and 1-inch thick

6 to 8 cups turn romaine or butter lettuce leaves

4 small tomatoes, chopped

2 hard-boiled eggs, peeled and sliced

1/2 cup kalamata olives

In a food processor, combine 1/2 cup olive oil, vinegar, mustard, shallot, tarragon, 1/2 teaspoon kosher salt and a few grinds of pepper and process until almost smooth. Taste and adjust the seasonings. Set the dressing aside.

In a saucepan, combine the potatoes with salted water to cover, bring to a boil and cook until tender, about 20 minutes. About 7 minutes before the potatoes are done, add the haricots verts or other beans.

When the potatoes and beans are tender, drain them and immerse in a bowl of cold water to halt the cooking. Drain and then peel the potatoes and cut them into slices 1/4-inch thick.

While the vegetables are cooking, in a small bowl combine the anchovies, if using, and milk and let stand for 10 to 15 minutes. Drain, discarding the milk. Pat the anchovies dry with paper towels and chop coarsely.

Preheat a cast-iron or other heavy frying pan over high heat until very hot. Add the remaining 1/2 teaspoon oil and swirl to coat the pan.

Add the tuna and cook until seared on the first side, about 2 minutes. Turn the tuna over and sear on the second side, 1 to 2 minutes. Transfer the tuna to a cutting board and cut across the grain into slices 1/4-inch thick.

In a bowl, add the lettuce and about 2 tablespoons dressing. Toss well and divide among chilled plates. Add the potato slices and beans to the bowl, drizzle with more dressing and season to taste with salt and pepper. Toss and divide among the plates.

Arrange the anchovies, tomatoes, egg slices and olives on top of the salad, dividing evenly. Top each serving with 1/4 of the tuna, and drizzle evenly with the remaining dressing.

Makes 4 servings.

Aromatic cake that's satisfying yet light

Los Angeles Times

This recipe is adapted from "Cardamom and Lime: Recipes From the Arabian Gulf," by Sarah al-Hamad.

"This is the Arabian version of sponge cake, perfumed with the evocative scents of the East and traditionally accompanied by a cup of sweet black tea," she writes. "It is the perfect cake: satisfying yet light, aromatic but subtle, unfolding a variety of seductive ingredients like sweet dates and sesame seeds, saffron and cardamom, and walnuts."

Cardamom is assertive, so decrease the amount for a lighter taste.

'IGAILI (CARDAMOM-SAFFRON SPONGE CAKE)

- Pinch of saffron threads
- 6 soft-packed dates, pitted
- 5 eggs
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 1 heaping teaspoon ground cardamom
- Pinch of turmeric
- 1 cup flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder

- 1 tablespoon vegetable oil
- 1 tablespoon sesame seeds, divided
- 1/4 cup chopped walnuts, or other nuts of your choice

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Soak saffron in 2 tablespoons of very warm water for 20 minutes, then set aside.

Wash dates with a fork, then roll the small mashed pieces into small pea-sized balls (about 2 dozen) and set aside.

In the bowl of a stand mixer, or in a large bowl with a hand mixer, whisk together the eggs and sugar until light, fluffy and almost meringue-like in texture, 7 to

Sweet dates, walnuts and sesame seeds add to the aroma of 'igaili, or cardamom-saffron sponge cake.

STEVEN OSMAN/Los Angeles Times

10 minutes. Gently whisk in the cardamom and turmeric.

In a small bowl, sift together flour and baking powder, then slowly add them to the egg mixture while whisking. Continue whisking and add the saffron-infused water and oil just until combined.

Grease a round 9-inch springform or regular cake pan with butter and line with parchment paper. Butter the top of the parchment paper. Dust the bottom and sides with 2 teaspoons of sesame seeds.

Pour 1/2 of the cake mixture into the pan, scatter with the tiny date balls, then cover with the remaining mixture and a last sprinkling of sesame seeds. Top with chopped walnuts.

Bake for 35 minutes, or until the cake is golden brown on top (a toothpick inserted in the middle should come out clean).

Cool the cake, then release the spring and turn upside down onto a plate. Invert again and serve with a spoonful of creme fraiche or a scoop of vanilla ice cream.

Total time: 1 hour, 10 minutes. Servings: 12.

It's tomato time

Easy oven-fresh gourmet

By Stephanie Witt Sedgwick
Special to
The Washington Post

Bakery departments of gourmet and regular grocery stores carry focaccia breads, but focaccia is at its best right out of the oven. Thanks to the increasing availability of ready-to-bake pizza dough, this bread is quick and easy to prepare.

The recipe uses fresh pizza dough that is available at specialty stores and many supermarkets; homemade or defrosted frozen dough may be substituted. The topping possibilities are limited only by what you have on hand.

PARMESAN-CRUSTED TOMATO FOCACCIA

Makes 2 focaccias (8 hors d'oeuvres servings)

2 tablespoons olive oil
2 medium cloves garlic, minced (about 1 tablespoon)
1 round pizza dough, at room temperature

1 to 2 (about 6 ounces total) tomatoes, tops and bottoms trimmed, tomatoes cut horizontally into 1/4-

inch-thick slices
Kosher or sea salt
2 tablespoons freshly grated Parmesan cheese

Preheat the oven to 425 degrees. Line a baking sheet with parchment paper.

Heat the oil in a small skillet over medium-low heat. Add the garlic; adjust the heat as needed so the garlic does not scorch. Cook for 6 to 8 minutes, until the garlic has softened but has not begun to brown.

Divide the pizza dough in half and place it on a lightly floured work surface. Use your fingers to gently manipulate half of the dough into a 7- to 8-inch round that is slightly more than 1/4-inch thick. Transfer to the lined baking sheet, then repeat with the remaining dough.

Brush the rounds of dough with the oil-garlic mixture, making sure to coat the surfaces completely. Lay the tomato slices on the margin dough, leaving a slight gap (1/2 inch or so) between the slices and the edge of the dough. Sprinkle the salt over the tomato slices, then top with the Parmesan cheese, scattering it evenly.

Bake for 15 to 20 minutes,

Recipe finder: Tomato treat

By Julie Rothman
Special to The Baltimore Sun

Catherine Wanniski of Boothwyn, Pa., was looking for a recipe for making Tomato Jelly. She remembers her grandmother making it but she does not have her recipe. Kathy DeWald of Orwigsburg, Pa., sent in a recipe she had in her collection.

While canning may be a little time-consuming, it is not very difficult. Fall is the ideal season to give it a try. Homemade preserves can make wonderful and economical gifts.

TOMATO JELLY

2 heaping tablespoons pickling spice
5 to 6 whole cloves
1 cinnamon stick
9 cups (18 to 22) peeled tomatoes (both ripe and partly green), crushed
6 cups sugar
1 lemon, sliced paper-thin
One 1.75-ounce cube Sure-Jell fruit pectin

Use a piece of cheesecloth or gauze to make a spice bag with the pickling spice, cloves and cinnamon stick.

Bring tomatoes, sugar and lemon to a boil. Put spice bag into boiling mixture for 30 minutes, then remove. Stir frequently and skim off foam. Lower heat after about 45 minutes. Continue to cook, stirring occasionally, for 1 1/2 hours. Add pectin and boil for another 5 minutes.

Fill 8 half-pint sterilized canning jars with cooked mixture. Process in a water-bath canner with water covering tops of jars. Boil for 30 minutes.

Avoid the paraffin sealing method. Refrigerate any unprocessed jam.

Baking with nuts

The Washington Post

Toasting and roasting bring out more flavor in nuts. In fact, doing so before the nuts are stored prolongs their shelf life (preferably a shelf in the freezer).

One-upmanship comes into play with the drizzle of a little clarified butter onto the nuts while they are still warm from the oven. Let them cool, then add buttered nuts to a cookie dough, quick bread or cake batter.

The technique can improve the taste of even the most decadent treat.

Tips are from chef Susan Catalano in a recipe at the Study Grove campus of the University of Maryland Eastern Shore.

BREAST CANCER AWARENESS

Breast Self-Awareness

Except for skin cancers, breast cancer is the most common cancer in women, but it can be successfully treated. Screening tests can find cancer early, when it's most treatable.

Susan G. Komen for the Cure® recommends that you:

1. Know your risk: Talk to your family to learn about your family health history. Talk to your provider about your personal risk of breast cancer.
2. Get screened: Ask your doctor which screening tests are right for you if you are at a higher risk. Have a mammogram every year starting at age 40 if you are at average risk. Have a clinical breast exam at least every 3 years starting at 20, and every year starting at 40.
3. Know what is normal for you: See your health care provider right away if you notice any of these breast changes: Lump, hard knot or thickening. Swelling, warmth, redness or darkening. Change in the size or shape of the breast. Dimpling or puckering of the skin. Itchy, scaly sores or rash on the nipple. Pulling in of your nipple or other parts of the breast. Nipple discharge that starts suddenly. New pain in one spot that doesn't go away.
4. Make healthy lifestyle choices. Maintain a healthy weight. Add exercise into your routine. Limit alcohol intake.

Breast Self-Exam (BSE) Instructional Tool.
Breast self-exam (BSE) is a tool that may help you learn what is normal for you. BSE involves looking at and feeling your breasts. Women who practice BSE should also be sure to get mammograms and clinical breast exams at the appropriate age. BSE should not be substituted for these screening tests. For more information on BSE and other screening methods, visit Susan G. Komen for the Cure: Early Detection & Screening <http://cms.komen.org/komen/AboutBreastCancer/EarlyDetectionScreening/index.htm>.

Sali rebuked by Idaho rival for skipping hearings

BOISE (AP) — U.S. Rep. Bill Sali's absence at House hearings this week where lawmakers grilled financial industry executives about the causes of America's financial crisis drew criticism Tuesday from his Democratic challenger Walt Minnick.

Sali, R-Idaho and a House Oversight Committee member, countered that the hearings, an American International Group, Inc., and bankrupt investment bank Lehman Brothers were politically motivated "sideshows" that didn't merit attendance.

The committee Tuesday rebuked AIG's former top executives for risky financial transactions that forced the insurer to take an $85 billion government loan that gives the U.S. an 80 percent stake. A day earlier, lawmakers verbally flogged Richard S. Feld Jr., the Lehman chief executive who was paid $350 million between 2000 and 2007. Sali was among more than a dozen lawmakers from both parties who didn't attend the hearings.

Edith Maxey

JEROME — Edith May Young Maxey passed peacefully into the loving arms of our Lord and savior on Friday, Oct. 3, 2008, due to a heart attack at her home south of Jerome. She was 79.

Edith was born Nov. 17, 1928, in Ely, Nev., during a period when her father was employed as a mining engineer. She was an active member of the Jerome Chapter E of the PEO and served as a member of the Jerome area horse organizations.

Edith May grew up when Jerome was still new. She was a member of the first generation of children raised in the Jerome area following the opening of the North Side to irrigation and settlement. She was the eldest daughter of pioneer Jerome area residents Lewis Russell Young, a mining/construction engineer and World War I Navy veteran, and Shirley Ashbrook Gorman, a University of Colorado/California educated mathematician teacher in career Jerome School District for decades. Edith grew up with horses when rattlesnakes were still common in the haystacks and fields recently cleared of sagebrush on her parents' farm north of Jerome. She spent a lot of time with her uncles, who operated Gorman Brothers, a mercantile on Main Street in Jerome.

Activity and a thirst for education characterized Edith's life. She graduated from Stephens College in Columbia, Mo. Stephens was at that time a two-year private women's college. She obtained her degree from Stephens in 1948 and completed her studies in Jerome School District. She earned a degree in education at Michigan State University in East Lansing, Mich., in 1951. Her teaching career spanned more than 35 years. She began, following her mother, at the First Presbyterian Church in Michigan State, by teaching government at Green River High School in Green River, Wyo., and followed her mother's footsteps by becoming a teacher for the Jerome School District. Edith may taught physical education and government classes at Jerome High School until a break for the birth of her children and resumed her education career as the district's elementary librarian, responsible for libraries in all elementary schools, until her retirement in 1993.

Edith May met her husband, John S. Maxey, a rancher/farmer and accountant, who was both members of a square dance club in the mid-1950s. John was a World War II Army Air Corps combat veteran of the 5th Air Force in the South Pacific. They were married on June 20, 1954, at the First Presbyterian Church in Jerome.

Edith and John shared a common love of horses in general. But the Arabian horses, their pedigrees and bloodlines, the horse shows and the Idaho mountains were something they thoroughly enjoyed. They dedicated themselves to their breeding program and the continuity of the Crabbett/CMK and Polish bloodlines. Both were active members and officers of the International Arabian Arabian Horse Association and later the Magic Valley Arabian Arabian Horse Association. Edith assisted MVAHA following her retirement from teaching with the Diamond Field Jack endurance horse ride held in the South Hills. They both enjoyed western history novels featuring horses.

Any activity that combined horses, horse shows and/or a trip to the mountains was a favorite activity for Edith. This led to many family trips to the Sawtooth Mountains or western Wyoming, horse shows or a camping trip to horseback. One of the funniest events during these trips occurred when the family's wet Labrador retriever decided to become a foot warmer in Edith's sleeping bag in order to avoid a thunderstorm during a mountain camping trip.

Edith was a wonderful grandmother and must be given great credit for assisting in the raising of her grandson, Aaron Maxey. She made a special effort to attend the high school graduation for her granddaughter, Alisha N. Maxey, at Rock Springs, Wyo., in June 2007.

Edith was the victim of a stroke in order to avoid a thunderstorm during a mountain camping trip. Edith was a wonderful grandmother and must be given great credit for assisting in the raising of her grandson, Aaron Maxey. She made a special effort to attend the high school graduation for her granddaughter, Alisha N. Maxey, at Rock Springs, Wyo., in June 2007.

Edith was preceded in death by her father, Leonard R. Young, who died in 1958; her mother, Shirley A. Young in 1990; and her husband, John S. Maxey in 1989. Edith is survived by her sister, Shirley (Lee) Straley (film of Hammitt and Pinedale, Wyo.; and her sons, Shaun Maxey of Rathdrum, Kent Maxey of Jerome and Collin Maxey of Rock Springs, Wyo. Her granddaughter, Alisha N. Maxey of Dewey, Colo., and her grandson, Aaron J.C. Maxey of Jerome, also survive Edith.

A memorial service will be conducted at 10 a.m. Friday, Oct. 10, at the First Presbyterian Church, 262 E. Ave. A in Jerome, with the Rev. Ronald Matheny officiating. Burial will follow at the Jerome Cemetery. Arrangements are under the care of Farnsworth Mortuary, 1345 S. Lincoln, Jerome, ID 83338.

Harvey Ethan 'Bo' Hartley

BOISE — Idaho native, Harvey Hartley, passed away at Life Care Center of Boise on Thursday, Oct. 2, 2008.

Harvey was born Jan. 13, 1915, at Lava Hot Springs, to Richard Hartley and Edith Hilgley. He spent most of his youth working for ranchers. He entered the Civilian Conservation Corps in 1933 and worked as a foreman progressing to construction, where he learned to be an excellent powder man. During this time, he purchased his first car, a 1928 Model A sedan for $129, making payments of $15 per month. Harvey married Marianne Hanson on Sept. 1, 1935 in Glens Ferry.

Harvey liked to be the first to have something new. He purchased the first snowmobile in Lewiston, a Little Red Arctic Car. He was one of the first to have a new Ford tractor in Gooding County. When the new concept of fifth-wheel travel trailers showed up, the first snowmobile was given them a go. He was often there when the new model cars hit the dealer's show, more often than not, he came home driving a new car.

Harvey lived, farmed and maintained a dairy herd in Wendell and was active in Farm Bureau and Grange. In 1956, he bought Dunroamin Dairy in Clarkston, Wash. When the high water navigation came to Lewiston, Harvey and Marianne were forced to sell and relocate. Rooster's Landing diners now view boats in the marina and on the river where the dairy had been. In 1970, Harvey and Marianne bought, developed and managed property near Waha Lake. They built and operated the Craig Mountain store, a hangout for tired and hungry snowmobilers, tourists and fishermen. Harvey drove school buses for several years, bringing the children from Waha area to Tammany and Lewiston schools.

Harvey and Marianne spent leisure time at their cabin near Elk City. He retired in 1975 when he and Marianne traveled in their fifth-wheel RV before becoming "snowbirds" in Apache Junction, Ariz. Harvey spent many years caring for Marianne after she had a stroke in 1992. They moved to Boise to be closer to his seven brothers and sisters. After he had a stroke and other medical problems, he lived his last years in Life Care Center of Boise. Marianne died in June of 2005.

Harvey is survived by a son, Merrill Hartley of Kamiah; and a daughter, Lois Vawter of Lewiston. Also surviving are his sister, Brenna Hennis; and four brothers, Thadde, Keith, Leonard and Kenneth, all of the Boise-Nampa area. He was preceded in death by sisters, Gwendolyn Jackson and Dorothy Thompson of Middleton. Harvey has numerous grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren. His first grandson, Shaun was the first to tag him with the nickname "Bo."

From then to now, Harvey has been known by family and friends as "Bo." His youngest great-grandson, Bo Allan Vawter, presently carries the name into the future. Harvey and Marianne enjoyed watching travel shows about Idaho, Arizona and other places. Their travels often took them to see areas they had seen on public television. When it was time for Lawrence Welk, everything else stopped and Marianne was in charge of the television remote control.

Memorials can be sent to Idaho Public Television, P.O. Box 4, Boise, ID 83707-0004, or a charity of your choice. At Bo's request, there will be no service. Arrangements are under the direction of Cloverdale Funeral Home in Boise. The family can be contacted through Lois Vawter at 208-816-2548; 3428 15th St., No. 14, Lewiston, ID 83501; email lvandall@aol.com or Merrill Hartley at 208-935-2571 or 208-413-1879.

Condolences to the family may be submitted online at www.cloverdalefuneralhome.com.

Ted J. Peterson

JEROME — Ted J. Peterson, 74, of Jerome, died from a massive heart attack and complications from acute leukemia at St. Luke's Hospital in Boise on Saturday morning, Oct. 4, 2008, surrounded by family members.

Ted was born Dec. 7, 1933, in Wendell, to Fred and Blossom Peterson. He graduated from Jerome High School in 1952 and attended Idaho State University in Pocatello until he got homestead (the exact number of days he survived college life is subject to dispute) and came back to Jerome to farm for the next 40 years. He married Lois Clear on Feb. 5, 1955, and he and Lois farmed most of Jerome with their five children for many years. In 1993, they sold the farm and built a log family home and log motel cabins in Bellevue. They operated their log cabin motel business for seven years, but then sold it so that they could return to Jerome to be closer to family. Ted is survived by his wife, Lois, and their five children, Brenda J. Peterson of Portland, Ore., Brett T. Peterson of Bellevue, Kristi (Bart) Peterson of Jerome, Heidi C. Peterson of Montrose, Colo., and Joel W. Peterson of Boise; seven grandchildren, Kayla (Jo's daughter), San Jose, Calif., and Jacob Theodore Peterson of Moscow (Brett's children), Tanner, Trevor "Ted Jr." and Tate Peterson (Bart and Kristi's children), and Leo and Hanz Peterson (Joel's children); two horses; and four cats. He also is survived by his three brothers, Fred (Oralee) Peterson, Ed (Sharon) Peterson and Wally (Gail) Peterson and his sister, Merrion (Kathy) Peterson. He was preceded in death by his mother and father; and two sisters, Ja Behrens and Doris Barnes.

Ted was a proud member of the Jerome Democratic Party (even in the days when there were only six Democrats in southern Idaho) and an active member of the Jerome Presbyterian Church. He was a former member of the Lambeth Club, the Jerome Sheriff's Posse, the Jerome Fair Board and the Jerome Booster Club. He loved horses, sports, hunting, fishing and spending time with his family and friends.

The funeral will be conducted at 10 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 11, 2008, at the First Presbyterian Church, 262 E. Ave. A in Jerome, with the Rev. Ronald Matheny officiating. Burial will follow at the Lambeth Club. A visitation will be held Friday, Oct. 10, at Farnsworth Mortuary, 1345 S. Lincoln in Jerome, where family and friends may call between 4 and 8 p.m.

The family suggests that memorials be directed to the Jerome County Historical Society, Idaho Farm and Ranch Museum, P.O. Box 50, Jerome, ID 83338.

Feds: 300 suspected
illegals held in raid

GREENVILLE — Federal agents detained more than 300 suspected illegal immigrants Tuesday in a raid at a chicken processing plant that has been under investigation for months.

The raid took place during a shift change. Immigration officials kept the workers inside the House of Raeford's Columbia Farms plant and spent most of the morning trying to interview them and figure out exactly how many are in the U.S. illegally, Assistant U.S. Attorney Kevin McDonald said.

The number could be large. A recent review found that immigration paperwork for more than 775 of 825 workers contained false information, McDonald said.

Immigration agents scoured the plant for paperwork and other information for the investigation.

Energy Dept. warns
of higher heating costs

WASHINGTON — Although global oil prices have plummeted, the cost of heating your home this winter will be a lot more expensive, especially for households that depend on fuel oil, the Energy Department predicted Tuesday.

Households that use fuel oil can expect to spend an average of $2,388 — or $449 more than last year — for the October-April heating season. Users of natural gas will pay less than half that, $1,010 on average, still $155 more than last year.

The department's Energy Information Administration emphasized that the cost figures should be viewed as "a broad guide" comparing this year's expected heating costs to last winter and said actual expenses can vary depending on region, local weather and the energy efficiency of ind-vidual homes.

But across the board, whether one uses heating oil, natural gas, propane or electricity, costs will be higher, said the agency.

Users of electricity to heat homes will see the smallest increase, about 10 percent on average, followed by propane, 11 percent; natural gas, which is used in more than half of the nation's homes, 18 percent; and heating oil, used widely in the Northeast, 23 percent.

Judge orders release of Chinese Muslims to U.S.

WASHINGTON — A federal judge ordered the Bush administration Tuesday to immediately free 17 Chinese Muslims from Guantanamo Bay into the United States, a dramatic ruling that could set the course for releasing dozens of other prisoners at the naval facility in Cuba.

The Bush administration announced plans to ask an appeals court to block the order, calling it a threat to national security and contrary to federal laws.

"Today's ruling presents serious national security and separation of powers concerns and raises unprecedented legal issues," Justice Department spokesman Brian Rooker said.

In a stern rebuke of the government, U.S. District Judge Ricardo M. Urbina said it would be wrong to continue holding the detainees since they are no longer considered enemy combatants. Known as Uighurs, the men have been in custody for nearly seven years.

Over the objections of government lawyers, Urbina ordered their release in Washington D.C. by Friday.

Documents say
detainee near insanity

WASHINGTON — A U.S. military officer warned Pentagon officials that an American detainee was being driven nearly insane by months of punishing isolation and sensory deprivation in a U.S. military brig, according to documents obtained by The Associated Press.

While the treatment of prisoners at detention facilities at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and in Afghanistan and Iraq have long been the subject of human rights complaints and court scrutiny, the documents shed new light on how two American citizens and a legal U.S. resident were treated in military jails inside the United States.

The Bush administration ordered the men to be held in military jails as "enemy combatants" for years of interrogations without criminal charges, which would not have been allowed in civilian jails.

The men were interrogated by the CIA and Defense Intelligence Agency, repeatedly denied access to attorneys and mail from home and contact with anyone other than guards and their interrogators. They were deprived of natural light for months and for years were forbidden even minor distractions such as a soccer ball or a dictionary.

Insurance giant AIG's
role in crisis probed

WASHINGTON — Less than a week after the federal government had to bail out American International Group Inc., the company sent executives on a $440,000 retreat to a posh California resort, lawmakers investigating the company's meltdown said Tuesday.

The tab included $23,390 worth of spa treatments for AIG employees at the coastal St. Regis resort south of Los Angeles even as the company tapped into an $85 billion loan from the government it needed to stave off bankruptcy.

The retreat didn't include anyone from the financial products division that nearly drove AIG under, but lawmakers were still enraged over thousands of dollars spent on catered banquets, golf outings and visits to the resort's spa and salon for executives of AIG's main U.S. life insurance subsidiary.

The hearing also revealed that AIG executives hid the full range of its risky financial products from auditors as losses mounted, according to documents released Tuesday by a congressional panel examining the chain of events that forced the government to bail out the conglomerate.

McCain linked to group
in Iran-Contra affair

WASHINGTON — Barack Obama has his William Ayers connection. Now John McCain may have an Iran-Contra connection. In the 1980s, McCain served on the advisory board to the U.S. chapter of an international group linked to ultra-right-wing death squads in Central America.

The U.S. Council for World

Freedom aided rebels trying to overthrow the leftist government of Nicaragua. That landed the group in the middle of the Iran-Contra affair and in legal trouble with the Internal Revenue Service, which revoked the charitable organization's tax exemption.

The council created by retired Army Maj. Gen. John Singlaub was the U.S. chapter of the World Anti-Communist League, an international organization linked to former Nazi collaborators and ultra-right-wing death squads in Central America. After setting up the U.S. council, Singlaub served as the international league's chairman.

Police fire tear gas at protesters, scores hurt

BANGKOK — Riot police using tear gas clashed Tuesday with several thousand protesters who barricaded Parliament while trying to block the new prime minister from delivering his first policy speech to lawmakers. Scores of protesters were injured.

Prime Minister Somchai Wongsawat opened the parliamentary session after a 90-minute delay despite a boycott by the opposition Democrat Party, which said it objected to the government's use of force in clearing protesters outside the building.

Somchai made no immediate comment about the chaos as he stood before lawmakers reading from a prepared policy text, covering issues from the global financial crisis to global warming and health care.

As he spoke, anti-government protesters regrouped outside Parliament in an effort to surround the building and police briefly fired more tear gas canisters to disperse a group of demonstrators armed with wooden batons and slingshots.

BoSox-Rays renew rivalry; Manny in middle of NLCS

By Ben Walker
Associated Press writer

Exactly why the Boston Red Sox and Tampa Bay Rays tangled so much is hard to tell. Blame it on a high-and-tight pitch here, a hard slide there. Whatever, this much is true: The teams playing in the AL championship series sure get into a lot of scraps.

"There's no hatred," injured Red Sox pitcher Curt Schilling insisted Tuesday in an e-mail to The Associated Press.

"It's more a combination of talent/personalities and place than anything, I think. For years Tampa Bay was looked down on and the Sox were one of the powerhouse teams. The start to respectability is as much an attitude as it is talent and a few years ago the Rays, I think, got tired of being pushed around," he wrote.

"That's kind of how Sarah Palin sees it, too."

"I know that earlier some of the experts this year were kind of tough on the Rays. I've been there," the Republican vice presidential candidate said Tuesday during a speech in Clearwater, Fla. "But what a difference a season can make, and now the Rays, in the playoffs for the first time ever."

Even before their rise to prominence, the Rays were plenty feisty. They've scuffled with the Red Sox at least a half-dozen times this decade, punctuated by a wild brawl at Fenway Park in June that

Coming Thursday
Capsules previews of NLCS and ALCS
In Thursday's Times-News

resulted in eight players getting suspended.

"You know, we've had some good battles with them all year," Boston pitcher Jon Lester said.

Other matchups in the majors get more attention, be it Yankees-Red Sox or Cubs-Cardinals or Dodgers-Giants. But there is no baseball rivalry that's more spirited than Tampa Bay-Boston. Funny, know who was often in the middle — somehow — of those slugfests?

Manny Ramirez. Yep, the same slugger who's now the main man in the NL championship series between the Los Angeles Dodgers and Philadelphia Phillies.

Ramirez, manager Joe Torre and the Dodgers open the best-of-seven set Thursday night at Citizens Bank Park. Traded from Boston to Los Angeles on July 31, Ramirez reprised his role as a one-man October wrecking crew in the first-round sweep of the Chicago Cubs. The 2001 World Series MVP went 5-for-10 with two home runs and four walks. "He could fight a bear with a stick and win," praised Phillies broadcaster Gary Matthews, MVP of the 1983 NLCS when Philadelphia beat the Dodgers.

Coming off-their victory over wild-card Milwaukee in the opening round, the Phillies are aiming for their first championship since 1980. Torre, no stranger to the postseason, is hoping to lead Los Angeles to its first title since 1988.

The defending champion Red Sox and the Rays begin Friday night at Tropicana Field. James Shields is likely to start Game 1 for Tampa Bay — he hit Coco Crisp with a pitch on June 5, triggering the bench-clearing fracas in Boston. Shields and four other Rays were suspended, while Lester and two other Red Sox players were penalized. A day after the fight, Tampa Bay manager Joe Maddon hardly backed down.

"I want to be very clear: I defend everything our guys did," he said then. "I feel actually proud of the way we handled the situation that was presented."

Before the season began, Maddon's team showed it would not be intimidated. Twice it got into scraps with the Yankees in spring training — back when they were 200-1 underdogs to win the World Series.

Trojans keep Lions at bay in five-game win

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

The Raft River volleyball team had to quell a rally by Lighthouse. Christian Tuesday to claim a Class 1A Division 1 nonconference match at Robert Stuart Junior High School in Twin Falls.

Raft River won the first two games 25-17, 25-11 then dropped the next two 26-24, 27-25. The Trojans won the final game 15-7.

Neither team could take much of a lead during the middle games, but the Lions found a way to win each time to keep hope alive.

"We wanted to leave it all on the court," Lions player Joseva van Vliet said. "We played our best and dug everything up."

The Trojans went up 11-4 during the final game as Meg Wickel killed three times and assisted Whitney Holtman on a block. Holtman also killed a ball and served an ace during that run.

"We didn't communicate," Wickel said of the third and fourth games. "All around, we played well, but we sometimes have those hiccups."

Wickel finished with 15 kills and four blocks. Holtman killed 20 balls, blocked three and dug up 27 on defense. Chelzee Nye paced Raft River with 17 kills, and Marissa Greenwood dug up 14 balls. Setter Marli Manning assisted 50 times.

'Given a chance'

Sometimes you have to take a chance to get a chance. That was true for Twin Falls resident Jonathan Gomez.

Twin Falls' one-third mile track to try something new this summer. Turned out to be a good decision.

Gomez took ninth place in a N A S C A R C a m p i n g World Series race in Roseburg, Ore., on July 11. He followed that up by taking eighth at Evergreen Speedway in Monroe, Wash., two weeks later. He did it all while driving a vehicle he'd never handled before. That earned him some notice.

This Saturday, Gomez will fly to South Boston, Va., to take part in NASCAR's Drive For Diversity Testing and Evaluation Combine. The combine runs Sunday through Tuesday, and Gomez is one of 26 drivers nationwide to receive an invite.

"NASCAR noticed," Gomez said of his efforts in Oregon and Washington. At South Boston Speedway, Gomez will undergo evaluation on and off the track. He'll drive Camping World Series cars provided by the Richard Petty Driving Experience, receive media training and be evaluated in media and sponsorship relations activities.

"I've been given a chance to go as far as my ability will let me go," said Gomez.

The Drive For Diversity combine is only for those ages 17-25. At 25, Gomez just slipped into the qualifying window. While he admits he got into racing "a little late for most people," what he's done on the track is nothing short of impressive.

After racing Motocross for a number of years, Gomez found he no longer had the time to train and ride every day. "I've been given a chance to go as far as my ability will let me go," said Gomez.

Wood River too much for Minico

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

Wood River kept its Great Basin Conference West record unblemished with a four-game victory over Minico Tuesday in Rupert.

Hanna Gustafson, Kaylee Baker and Ellen Johnson led the way in kills at the Wolverines won 25-18, 20-25, 25-17, 25-23.

Wood River (16-9 overall, 5-0 GBW) earned the right to host the district tournament, which gets under way Oct. 20.

"Every time we go into the hoodie we always talk about holding district at our place," said senior Halleigh Hall. "We wanted to have districts at home so that we have our fans."

Jerome boys try to stay on top

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

Jerome's loss to eventual state champion Bonneville in last season's Class 4A state boys soccer tournament turned out to be a blessing in disguise. The Tigers saw the level they wanted to reach, the level they needed to attain in order to play like a champion.

At 14-0-1 on the season, Jerome may get the chance to prove it has reached that level. Before they can, however, the Tigers will have to negotiate the treacherous waters of the Great Basin Conference West tournament, which begins Thursday when they host Wood River and Malco welcomes Burley to town.

Jerome managed to stay above the fray by running the table in the conference regular season, but the other three teams all split with each other head-to-head. But that doesn't mean the Tigers are resting on their laurels.

"We're just going at (Wood River) as another game, and another opponent, and making sure that we're hopefully not making any mistakes," said Jerome coach Robert Garcia. "In our conference it's really tough. You can't really tell who's going to be the strong team because all the teams are really close. It's a really tough conference right now."

After shocking Burley last season to win the GBW title,

Jerome finds itself comfortable in the role of favorite. The other teams are all chasing Jerome, according to Burley head coach Wes Nyblade.

"It's a situation that means, in reality, that at least two and possibly three teams — if the second-place team in this tournament loses the state play-in game — will miss out on the state tournament."

"It's pretty much anybody's game (between Burley, Minico and Wood River). I think Jerome has to be favored to win the thing because they handled every other pretty well in the regular season," Nyblade said. "(But) the quality of our league has improved drastically. For a number of years it was basically us and

Holt Arena wants another $1

Times-News

Falls will have to shell out a little more money this year when they visit Holt Arena. The Idaho High School Activities Association board of directors approved last week a $1 increase for ticket prices to state playoff games and tournaments held at Idaho State University's domed facility in Pocatello. The increase only affects individual passes.

In other business, the board approved the admission of Canyon Ridge High School and recognized it and Twin Falls High as Class 4A schools beginning in the 2009-10 academic year. The Class 1A Division II state volleyball and basketball brackets were changed to take into account the combined District V-VI tournament.

Membership criteria for out-of-state schools desiring to join the IHSAA was also reviewed and changes, possibly opening the door for Jackpot, Nev., to gain admission for 2009-10.

ROCKLAND 2, OAKLEY 0

Rockland pummeled Oakley 25-6, 25-15 in Rockland. "We did not play so hot tonight," said Oakley coach Summer Robinson. Kori Byblon led Oakley with three kills, followed by Sabrina Wybaenga and Kyalynn Setoki with two kills each.

Oakley (3-15, 2-3) will host Sho-Ban on Tuesday.

CAMAS COUNTY 3, COMMUNITY SCHOOL 0

Camas County made quick work of host Community School, earning a 25-3, 25-9, 25-15 sweep Tuesday in Ketchum.

The loss kept the Cartwrights (0-11, 0-10 Sawtooth Conference) winless on the season. Community School coach Jeffrey Goodwin had nothing praise for the Mushers.

The Community School travels to Dietrich on Thursday.

DECLO 3, GLENS FERRY 0

The Declo Hornets picked up a win on senior night, sweeping Glens Ferry 25-11, 25-14, 25-6.

Christina Christiansen had five aces and six kills for Declo, while Alli Webb had eight kills. Catherine Blakeslee added two aces, six kills and a block. Britni Duncan chipped in four kills.

"They played amazing and I was proud of them," said Declo coach Krissy Darrington, who lauded her teams improved passing. The 6-10 Hornets travel to Shoshone today.

RICHFIELD 3, DIETRICH 0

Richfield beat Dietrich 25-22, 25-21, 30-28 on the road. Jesse Dill had 10 kills in a losing effort for the Blue Devils (8-4, 7-2 Sawtooth Conference).

Richfield isn't a bad team, but we didn't play well at all," said Dietrich coach Traci Perron. "We self-destructed, and we played like freshmen and sophomores. Good freshmen and sophomores, but when things get tight in the games, experience is handy in that situation. But we'll live and learn and see them again at districts."

Perron said that Nakkia Norman had one of her best games of the season with six kills. Dietrich hosts the Community School on Thursday.

DEVILS SWEEPS JEROME

BURLEY SWEEPS JEROME. PRESTON IN HOME TRI-MATCH. Burley had what head coach Tiffany Green called "a phenomenal night," beating Preston and Jerome at home on Tuesday.

MADISON 2, TWIN FALLS 0

Madison scored twice on three shots to win at Twin Falls 2-0 on Tuesday. The Bruins had 16 shots in the game, but were unable to find the back of the net despite the shot disparity. Madison was held without a shot on goal in the tri-match.

Although his team came up short, Twin Falls coach Jose Morales said he was pleased with the improvement from an earlier 5-1 loss at Madison. Twin Falls, fifth seed in the district tournament, opens Region Four-Five-Six action at region No. 4 seed Highland on Friday.

FILER 3, TWIN FALLS CHRISTIAN ACADEMY 0

The Filer Wildcats defeated the Twin Falls Christian Warriors 3-0 Tuesday. Filer's goals were scored by Zack Clark (2) and Justin Rast. The Wildcats will host Gooding today in their last regular-season game.

TWIN FALLS 2, MADISON 2

Madi Worst scored twice for Twin Falls, but Madison quickly equalized each time to take a 2-2 draw at home and earn the No. 2 seed in next week's Region Four-Five-Six tournament. The Bruins needed a win to take the No. 2 spot for themselves, but will settle for No. 3.

"We just couldn't seem to hold on to the lead," said Twin Falls coach Katie Kaufman. "The girls played good, aggressive soccer and had a lot of opportunities, we just couldn't capitalize." Twin Falls returns to Madison on Friday to open the conference tournament.

"Our goal was to win the conference and go undefeated, so we're reaching some of the goals we wanted to take care of," said Wood River coach Kris Christensen. Wood River jumped ahead early in Game 1, but Minico rebounded to take a 13-12 lead on a block by Breonna Phillips. The Wolverines "pulled away with two big runs with Heidi and Angela Colman at the service line.

Minico (3-7 overall, 1-5 GBW) led all of Game 2 — except when Wood River tied it at 16-16 and evened the count heading into Game 3.

"We did a lot of good things, we just had some mental errors," said Minico's Phillips. "We weren't as intense in the third game. We lost our fire a little bit." Wood River opened a 5-0 lead to start Game 3 and led 9-1 before Minico showed a pulse. The Spartans got back to within two, 17-15, but Wood River ran off eight of the next 10 points.

Wood River took its first lead in Game 4, 14-13, after a pair of Minico hitting errors, and the Wolverines controlled the rest of the match despite a few minor struggles.

Mickelson intrigued by Europe tour improvements

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press writer

The European tour announced an ambitious schedule this week that stretches across more than five dozen countries on five continents, has more tournaments than there are weeks in the year, and culminates with a $20 million destination in Dubai.

Phil Mickelson is among those who might take up membership.

Vijay Singh already has said he wants to rake in the cash at Dubai, just as he did this year at East Lake, and it would not be surprising if he saw familiar faces such as Camilo Villegas and Anthony

Kim trying to stop him.

One of the most plausible reasons: O'Grady assembled his players at La Costa two years ago in what might have been the most important meeting during his four-year tenure as chief executive of the European tour.

The tour wasn't in turmoil, but it was losing relevance.

The World Golf Championships were about to embark on a six-year plan to be played only in the United States, which already was home to three of the four majors.

The Players Championship was a year away from moving to May, forcing some Europeans to choose between the richest purse in golf or key tournaments on their home continent.

If that wasn't enough, PGA Tour officials were polishing off plans for the FedEx Cup, which offered $35 million in bonus money and was sure to entice more Europeans to play more in America and stay there during playoff events in August and September.

Two dozen European tour members met with O'Grady on the eve of the 2006 Accenture Match Play Championship, a session in which players shared ideas instead of complaints.

Asked for a central theme to the meeting, O'Grady replied that the European tour is worth fighting for.

"Everybody can do a whiff more," he said that day. "I got ideas from them, instead of them returning me. I won't stand here and say it's all my. We do have challenges. But they are challenges that can be met."

The fight produced Europe's strongest schedule ever.

The most compelling component is remaining the Order of Merit to "The Race to Dubai," which has a similar concept to the FedEx Cup without having to calculate points or calling it something that it's not — playoffs.

The top 60 on the money list qualify for the season-long "Dubai" World Championship, which offers a $10 million purse for the tournament, along with a $10 million bonus for the top 15 on the money list.

To protect the rank-and-file, but still make European tour membership appealing to American-based players, tour officials will have a minimum requirement from 11 to 12 tournaments, with two of those events on European soil. For top players who are eligible for the four majors and three WGCs, that means they will have to play only four European tour events before the Dubai World Championship.

"The tour has clearly moved up a gear in its ability to attract the world's best players," said Sergio Garcia, who flew to Turnberry on Monday to be present for the launch of the new season. "It will certainly help focus the interest of the players, and I for one will be seeking to get to Dubai and make a great first to the season."

Mickelson and Singh, others who are contemplating European tour membership include former U.S. Open champion Geoff Ogilvy, Robert Alenby and Adam Scott. Kim and Villegas are sure to be tempted.

Does the PGA Tour suffer? Not necessarily.

Tiger Woods does not plan to join. What the last four months have shown is that if Woods doesn't play, does anyone care?

Elgin Baylor out as Los Angeles Clippers general manager

LOS ANGELES — Elgin Baylor is out as vice president of basketball operations with the Los Angeles Clippers, and coach Mike Dunleavy will assume his responsibilities as general manager.

Dunleavy said Baylor had decided to resign after responding 22 years as an executive with the team.

"We greatly appreciate Elgin's efforts during his time with the Clippers, and we wish him the very best," Clippers owner and chairman of the board Donald T. Sterling said in a statement issued Tuesday.

The 74-year-old Baylor became vice president of basketball operations with the Clippers in 1986 after an outstanding 14-year playing career with the Lakers and a brief stint as coach of the New Orleans Jazz.

Magic pick up option on Redick

ORLANDO, Fla. — The Orlando Magic picked up their $2.8 million option on former Duke star J.J. Redick for next season.

Redick was struck with his way into the backcourt rotation and last season asked for a trade. He was the first guard off the bench in the Magic's loss to Atlanta in the preseason opener Monday, scoring 12 points, and drew praise from coach Stan Van Gundy for his play in practices.

Goodyear thinks softer tires the answer at Indy

By Michael Marot
Associated Press writer

INDIANAPOLIS — Goodyear may have an answer for one of Indianapolis Motor Speedway's toughest challenges: softer tires. As drivers took a break during Tuesday's latest testing session at the speedway, NASCAR and Goodyear officials explained they had seen dramatic improvement in the wear, prompting optimism they could avoid a repeat of the Allstate 400 debacle in July.

"We're not all the way there, but we're pretty close to it," said Robin Pemberton, NASCAR vice president of competition. "We were in about an eight- or nine-lap window before (during testing), and that got up to 10, and now we're in the mid-20 range. So it's improved 300 percent already. We walked the track last night, and the track was taking on rubber, so that's a good sign."

Things got even better after Pemberton's midday news conference.

Speedway officials said one driver made a 33-lap run on the tires and another put in a full fuel run, generally 35 to 40 laps on Indy's 2.5-mile oval, before it started raining Tuesday afternoon.

It was the second testing session at Indy since NASCAR officials were forced in July to turn one of the series' signature races into a series of 10- to 12-lap sprints because of tire wear. NASCAR officials even apologized to fans for the fiasco.

Kyle Petty was the only driver on the track two weeks ago.

The latest testing session comes in the midst of more tire questions for Goodyear.

Sunday's race at Talladega was marred by four tire failures and a fifth occurred during practice. One of the failures sent Denny Hamlin, who drives for Joe Gibbs Racing, hard into the wall. He was hospitalized overnight before being released Monday. Hamlin is one of 12 drivers in the Chase for the Cup.

Su Grant, general manager of worldwide racing for Goodyear, said early assessments indicated all of the tires at Talladega were punctured, though they are still undergoing analysis.

"Everybody believes the problem had to more do with debris than tires."

"At Talladega, we went clean, then we had a few tires that lost air for a while and then we were clean again," he said. "So my guess is there may have been debris on the track and it wasn't all cleared off. But that's just speculation."

The problems at Talladega caused yet another image problem for Goodyear, the sole supplier of tires for NASCAR's three series, after the disastrous race in July when NASCAR officials continually called competition cautions.

The longest stretch of green-flag racing lasted just 13 laps, and points leader Jimmie Johnson won the race in a seven-lap sprint to the finish. It was the second-slowest race in NASCAR's 15-year history at Indy.

Drivers were disgusted with the tire problems as dust particles constantly flew around the track surface and into the stands. Some complained afterward that Goodyear needed to look seriously at improving the tires because they had been having trouble with them for several years at the speedway.

Grant seemed to acknowledge as much Tuesday when he said testing in 2005 and 2006 also showed tires were wearing out after about 10 laps.

Elam's successor making a name for himself in Denver

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — Matt Prater is starting to make a name for himself. What the Denver Broncos' new kicker would really like is to put his name in the record book.

After kicking a 55-yard field goal that would have been good from 70 yards Sunday, Prater said he wants the chance to beat the NFL record of 63 yards held by Tom Dempsey and the man he replaced in Denver, Jason Elam.

"I'd love to get the opportunity, especially here in Denver," Prater said. "It would be awesome to get the opportunity to do it, and hopefully I can keep it straight."

Hardly anybody knew about Prater when the season started.

Now, even Buccaneers coach Jon Gruden is gushing about him.

Prater was the difference in Denver's 16-13 win over Tampa Bay, producing touchbacks on four of his five kickoffs — the other was returned only to the 19 — and booming field goals of 55, 40 and 31 yards.

"I have never seen a kicker kick a 55-yard field goal and make it by 25 yards," mused Gruden. "I'm honest to God, why work on your kickoff return when you come here? That guy was unbelievable."

The Broncos signed the 24-year-old kicker last December after Todd Saterthorn wore out his welcome in Denver and they needed somebody to handle kickoffs for their last two games.

Coach Mike Shanahan saw enough of Prater's powerful right leg that he allowed Elam, the franchise's leader in points and games, to bolt for Atlanta in free agency.

Denver Broncos kicker Matt Prater, front, and holder Brett Kern follow the flight of Prater's kick for an extra point against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers in the fourth quarter of the Broncos' 16-13 win in Denver on Sunday.

played in all five games, including one start, and has four tackles. The fourth-year veteran said in a statement that one of his nutritional supplements contained an ingredient banned by the league.

"I've apologized to my coaches and teammates for an unfortunate mistake," Blackstock said. "I did not intentionally violate the policy, but I know it's my responsibility to use only approved nutritional supplements, and I didn't realize I was taking an over-the-counter product that included a banned substance."

STEELERS KICKER REE'D'S GROIN INJURY NOT SERIOUS

PITTSBURGH — Steelers kicker Jeff Reed probably won't miss any games because of a groin injury he sustained in a win over Jacksonville on Sunday night.

Pittsburgh (4-1) is off this week, and Reed said Tuesday he should be back for the Oct. 19 game at Cincinnati.

Reed could have attempted a field goal during the Steelers' final possession if necessary, coach Mike Tomlin said.

Hawkins, Colorado agree to contract extension

BOULDER, Colo. — Colorado coach Dan Hawkins and the university agreed to a contract extension that could keep him with the Buffaloes through 2012.

Hawkins is 11-19 in his third year at Colorado after spending five seasons as head coach at Boise State, and the Buffaloes are 3-2 this season.

The new contract was announced Tuesday and takes effect July 1.

"Everybody else seems to worry about that more than I do," Hawkins said of his new deal. "The way I was raised, you've got to show up, put your boots on and go to work every day."

Hawkins originally signed a five-year $4.25 million contract, not including incentives, that was to run through Dec. 31, 2010. He's scheduled to earn $951,720 this season prior to incentives.

HARBAUGH REPRIMANDING FOR CRITICIZING OFFICIALS

STANFORD, Calif. — Stanford coach Jim Harbaugh was reprimanded by the Pac-10 for criticizing the conference's officials following last weekend's loss at Notre Dame.

"Pac-10 rules prohibit comments by a coach about officiating other than to the conference office," commissioner Tom Hansen said in a statement. "Coach Harbaugh violated that rule by publicly criticizing the officials."

Harbaugh was angry about a fair-charge interference call against the Cardinal's Nate Wilcox-Fogel in the second quarter of a 20-21 loss to the Irish.

JOEPA SAYS HE'LL DECIDE ON SIDELINE LATER IN WEEK

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — One of the most closely watched injuries in college football belongs to an 81-year-old man who hasn't played a snap in six decades.

Of course, when that man is Penn State coach Joe

Paterno, every step is watched, every word scrutinized.

The Hall of Famer said Tuesday his sore right leg still hurts enough that he won't decide until week's end on whether he'll coach on undefeated Penn State (6-0, 2-0 Big Ten) from the sideline or the pressbox for Saturday night's contest at Wisconsin.

Coaching from the sideline remains a week-to-week proposition. He relegated himself to the box for the No. 6 Nittany Lions' win last week over Purdue, after spending the entire victory the previous week over Illinois on the field.

2 VOLTS LINEUP SUSPENDED FOR 2 GAMES

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Tennessee offensive linemen Ramone Johnson and Darius Myers have been suspended for the Volunteers' upcoming games against Georgia and Mississippi State.

Tennessee coach Phillip Fulmer announced the suspensions Tuesday. He says the two are being punished for lack of academic effort and violation of team rules.

Johnson is a sophomore left tackle from Chicago who has played in every game this season as a backup to starter Chris Scott.

Myers, a sophomore guard from Cordova, hasn't played this season.

The Vols (2-3, 0-2 Southeastern Conference) traveled to No. 10 Georgia (4-1, 1-1) on Saturday before hosting Mississippi State next week.

INJURED STATE WLB LOW IMPROVING

MIAMI — Ball State receiver Dante Love, recovering from a career-ending spinal injury, might be released from a rehabilitation center this week.

Love took a head-on hit during the Cardinals' 43-20 win over Indiana on Sept. 20 and underwent surgery a day after the game.

"I want everyone to know that Dante is improving daily," coach Brady Hoke said Monday. "He is really making great strides. ... He is doing a great job with his recovery. He is positive and upbeat."

Consecutive wins for Dolphins eases sting of 2007

DAVE, Fla. (AP) — Miami Dolphins defensive end Ronnie Holliday was chatting with his teenage stepbrother at a recent family gathering when the subject turned to last football season.

"It's a long time about his season, and he's like, 'We're 0-3 right now, but you guys were 1-15,'" Holliday says with a laugh. "That's what it has come to — even your family and friends joking about it. It's serious to me. He didn't know he hurt my feelings, but he did."

"That's the way it has been around here. We're trying to change that."

For last year's Dolphins, the past two games have been the best possible pain reliever. With upset wins over January's AFC finalists, New England and San Diego, Miami has back-to-back victories for the first time in nearly two years.

A 3-2 record rarely felt so good. It means regardless of what happens in the next three months, including Sunday's game at Houston, the Dolphins are better than a year ago.

"We're not going to be 1-15," Holliday says.

He's one of 26 players missing from the 2007 humiliation. For them, the turnaround the past three weeks is especially sweet.

"It's only two wins," linebacker Matt Roth says. "But coming from last year, it seems like we're on top of the world."

Once a playoff perennial, the Dolphins have had little success to savor in recent years. Not one player remains from Miami's 2001 team, the most recent to make the postseason. In the first two games this year made it 20 defeats in the past 21 games.

Then came the abrupt turnaround. According to the Elias Sports Bureau, the Dolphins became the first team since the 2004 Pittsburgh Steelers to beat conference finalists from the Miami Dolphins linebacker Joey Porter (55) celebrates during the final seconds of a 17-10 win against the San Diego Chargers Oct. 5 in Miami. For the players who entered last year's 1-15 calamity of a season with the Miami Dolphins, a modest 2-2 record is plenty sweet.

preceding year in consecutive games.

Those Steelers went on to the playoffs.

"The Dolphins are here," receiver Greg Camarillo says. "We have arrived. Other teams would doubt us before. Now they have to prepare to play a great team. We're ready to play anybody."

Last year everybody wanted to play the Dolphins, who flirted with becoming the first

NFL team to go 0-16 until Camarillo caught a touchdown pass in overtime in the 14th game.

More than half the roster has since turned over under a new regime led by Bill Parcells. The steadily shrinking injuries in college football belongs to an 81-year-old man who hasn't played a snap in six decades.

Hard-working freshman is adrift in a sea of partyers.

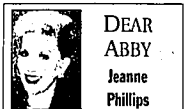

DEAR ABBY: My daughter, "Christie," just started her freshman year in college. She's a little overwhelmed and trying to adjust. She is smart, forced and mature. Christie's biggest problem is it seems that all the other students in her dorm want to do party. They have alcohol with fake IDs and sneak in it.

Christie has told the others that she's not a partyer, and has been focusing on her work while her roommate and sometimes drink and dance classes. This makes my daughter not only unhappy, but also isolated. I talk to her every day to reassure her that she will find her "group of friends. Is there anything else I could advise? — CHRISTIE'S MOM

DEAR MOM: Christie's problem with "eventually" finding herself because students who spend their time drinking, partying and cutting class often find themselves kicked out of school. But I'd rather see her do something to help her in the near term.

When I talk with the resident assistant in her dorm about finding other, more serious students with whom she can room, she should also ask her professors if they know of any study groups she can join.

It sounds to me like a real winner. She should not feel like an oddball for wanting to make the most of her college education.

DEAR ABBY: I was a lonely widow for many years until I met "Gail." We married two years ago, but separately raised two boys.

Afterward, my daughter, "Gail," and her husband, "Don," and their two kids lived with me for 18 months. I was the only one working. Gail helped a little around the house, but Don wouldn't even mow the grass.

During that time I had two heart attacks and an angioplasty. Two weeks before my first heart attack, Gail and I had a terrible fight, and the police were called.

When Carl heard about the heart attack, he sent me a copy of the bill, he called to check on me. Don told him it was "nothing." He said I made it all up, and it was "Time." My doctor said if I hadn't come in during the second heart attack and had the angioplasty, I would not have survived.

A month after the angioplasty,

Gail, Don and I had another terrible fight. Gail punched me seven times, and I hit her back at least twice. The police made them move out that same night. I don't regret them leaving. They acted like my house belonged to them and I was their slave. I do miss my grandchildren, though.

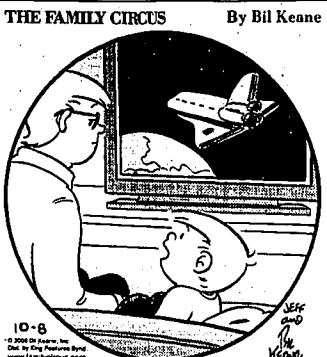

Carl and I have reconciled, and now we realize that Don went out of his way to create problems between us. I have not spoken to him or my daughter since. My sons, my friends and my neighbors have told me they are relieved the two of them are gone.

What is your opinion of a 25-year-old daughter who would hit her mother because her mother wanted her own life?

RELIEVED IN KANSAS

DEAR ABBY: Several things occur to me. What you have described is blatant elder abuse. But I wonder where your daughter learned that violence was acceptable behavior. Frankly, I am concerned for her children's safety.

DEAR ABBY: I guess you do not allow yourself to be lured into Gail's proximity, because she has already shown she will damage you physically, emotionally and financially. Because you can't fix what's wrong with your daughter, it's important to keep your distance.

HOROSCOPE BY JERALDINE SAUNDERS

IF OCTOBER IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Waste not, want not. For the next six weeks you may feel that you can kick back and smell the roses, or trust luck to carry you through — but in reality there is something pressing that you need to pay attention to in the back months of this year. Some responsibilities or make any major changes between now and the end of the year. The best time to make crucial changes such as moving to a new home, launching a new business, going to changing jobs, is the first two weeks of March. That is when you could meet someone of importance to your life.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Shifts in ongoing situations require an adaptable attitude. Be prepared to accept a change that may have you taking responsibility for things that you should not procreate any alterations on your own.

TAUROS (April 20-May 20): The lighting is bad. All your flaws and blemishes might seem magnified if you appear in public places. To show to the others in the best advantage, stay home or at your desk and take a rain check.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Little verbal misunderstandings could be a concern. The day holds the potential for harmony if you use to give in to impulsive thoughts or actions. This isn't the best time to attempt to mend fences.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It isn't necessary to act like your best friend. You might want to be firm like you are struggling to swim against the current or could briefly have a hard time keeping your head above water today.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): When someone is concerned, it may pay to consider your mistakes. Adopt a cautious attitude if you are presented with any alternatives to present plans. This isn't the time to make major expenditures.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your judgment is on the wrong side of the scale. You might want to appropriate prejudices just so you will be liked. Try to be as politically correct as possible to avoid misunderstandings.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It seems

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Organize your time, your desk or your priorities to make things run more smoothly. This isn't a good day to make ground-breaking decisions, but it is a good time to stay on top of obligations.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You are being given a heads up. You might be laboring under the impression that a nice apology can set things straight. You can't cut any corners or take people for granted today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Lure the pay. Pay those nagging bills, but keep continuing in month after month on schedule. If anyone gives you a warning, be thankful. Don't take a chance by not following through to correct an error.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Accept the fact that a reputation is built on never giving without merit. If you exceeded the speed limit or break the rules you won't get off with just a warning. You can't charm your way out of a jam.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Playing social games is simply not your cup of tea. You are really in a bind. You don't want to do it, but you are in someone's voice or bad language. Avoid confrontations and remain tactful.
