RIVER OF STONE

FINDING AN OASIS

By Cassidy Friedman
Times-News writer

"Joy found God out here," his lifelong friend Marcus Jacobsen said proudly, standing knee-deep in the Snake River, 20 feet from a wrecked concrete bridge adorned with a crudely painted swastika and graffiti.

Funny place to find God, this dump.

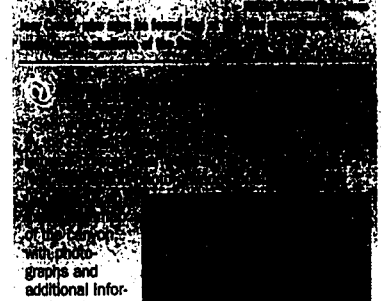

But the dilapidated bridge marks the gateway to the Snake River Canyon's most-coveted stretch — a couple square miles where the canyon widens, basalt cliffs bracketing a playground where hills roll into gulches and the parched landscape gives way to a pond and a creek.

Today, the broad canyon floor is a largely ignored wasteland, scarred by abandoned wastewater teach fields, littered with broken beer bottles and shredded by heavy four-wheeler use.

Though inside Twin Falls city limits, the area is made remote by steep cliffs, fierce waterways and fingers of private property that block public access.

On a knoll overlooking the old bridge and overlooked by the Jerome Country Club we stopped, spent after four days under the relentless summer sun and hard travel on the river of stone.

But the dust-coated femur that dropped among smashed rock over a gravel screen on Jan. 17, 1989, was

The dozers and loaders in the quarry next to the river at Clear Lakes Road came to a standstill that day.

Watts pleads guilty to Miller murder

Times-News

A man charged in last year's killing of 18-year-old Dale Miller pleaded guilty Tuesday to first-degree murder during an unscheduled hearing. Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loeb confirmed Wednesday night.

Cameron Watts was set to stand trial at the end of the month for the slaying of Dale Miller, who was found inside a barrel on Sept. 12, 2007, in an apartment garage at 322 Morningside Drive.

Loeb said that in exchange for the guilty plea, prosecutors will recommend Watts go to prison for 20 years to life, and added that Watts is set to be sentenced in December.

Another man, John McElhinney, is also charged with killing Watts, but has since asked to withdraw his guilty plea.

A hearing regarding McElhinney's plea hasn't been set, Loeb said, but he was appointed a new lawyer.

Loeb said Watts told the court Tuesday that Miller owed money to McElhinney, so they tied up Miller, put him in a car trunk, came back the next day and found him dead.

McElhinney had also told the court recently that Miller died through asphyxiation.

A glimpse at water's future

Summit starts discussion between urban, rural groups

By Kate Poppinga
Times-News writer

In some ways, Wednesday offered a glimpse of a possible future for south-central Idaho.

It's a future officials may be better prepared for than in the Treasure Valley, largely the focus of a summit concerning issues of urban expansion into rural Idaho.

The Idaho Water Users Association arranged the summit after a request by the Pioneer Irrigation District. Organizers said they intended it as a starting point for future discussions and solutions. In his opening remarks Wednesday, IDWUA Executive Director Norm Semanko said he sought only to start the conversation and create new relationships among cities, counties, irrigation districts and others.

"If we have some solutions ... that's great," he said.

Marijuana bust in Blaine Co. nets drugs, cash

The Associated Press

HAILLEY — A marijuana sting in Blaine County netted 32 pounds of drugs, numerous weapons, three suspects and $144,000 in cash in what local law enforcement officials said was one of the region's largest drug busts.

Blaine County Sheriff's Department officers arrested Noe Castillo in 31, and Holly Lyn Koyle, 21, both of Hailley, and Augusto Martinez-Lazo, 37, who lives nearby in the area known as Ohio Gulch.

Martinez-Lazo and Castillo were charged with felony drug trafficking in 5th District Court, while Koyle was charged with aiding and abetting trafficking.

Sheriff Walt Fenning said the arrests and

Ninth-graders learn about nature at Rock Creek

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Ninth-grade students wandered about Rock Creek Park in Twin Falls on Tuesday, gathering soil samples and testing the water that flowed through the area.

For the day, the students had escaped the classroom confines of Vern C. O'Leary Junior High School in Twin Falls for a field trip that provided learning opportunities about science in an outdoor, natural environment. Students went to different stations set up throughout the park with different tasks to complete in a varied approach that included multiple subjects like science, vocabulary and writing.

At one station, for example, students did tests to see how much dissolved oxygen was in the creek water. They put water in vials and added chemicals, also recording the temperature.

"For us in science, we want to examine the health of Rock Creek," said Jo Dadds, a science teacher working with the students.

At another station, teacher Steven Gardner helped students do a test for how much electricity could flow through the water with a probe that took measurements.

Before the work, he asked for help and a couple students trotted off to fetch water from the creek.

teacher, had students test water for nitrates and phosphates.

"This field trip is as hands-on as you can get," she said, adding that the experience helps students see the world outside the classroom. "They realize they are part of this community that is taking care of a creek."

The field trip wasn't limited to science tests, though. Reading teacher Vicki Larsen gave the students a task of decoding scientific words and looking at their prefixes, roots and suffixes. Their assignment for after the field trip: start a science fiction story using the decoded words.

Blaine Campbell, an agriculture science instructor, helps students take soil samples near the creek and further away to show the difference in how soil changes with nearby water.

Marcus Gardoski, 14, pushed a soil probe into the ground to collect a sample. "It's harder than I thought," he said, adding that the soil work was one of his favorite parts of the trip. "It teaches you the interesting things about soil you didn't know."

He said the field trip is a lot different from learning in a classroom.

"In school, you don't really get to come out here and do this kind of stuff," he said. "It teaches you more about the environment."

Michael Amador, 14, said he enjoyed a session that

St. Luke's CEO will retire in 2010

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Ed Dahlberg, president and CEO of St. Luke's Health System, announced Wednesday that he will retire by March 2010.

His retirement will end a tenure that began in 1985 as the CEO of one St. Luke's hospital in Boise. Much has changed since then. Now, he heads St. Luke's Health System, an 800-bed, four-hospital system with branches in Twin Falls, Ketchum, Meridian and Boise.

He said he has enjoyed watching the system grow and expand during his time as the CEO, adding that relationships and partnerships with people throughout the area have made the organization's expansions successful.

"It's been exciting to build many partnerships that have been built regionally," he said.

Dahlberg, 60, will still be on the job until March 2010. During that time, he'll be helping St. Luke's transition to a new leader.

"That's the biggest job I've got left — the transition planning," he said. "I plan to work full-time until that's done."

The planning for finding a new president and CEO has already begun. St. Luke's Health System's Board of Directors has formed a committee to help plan the transition and assist in recruiting Dahlberg's replacement.

The transition committee expects to have a slate of qualified candidates picked by the spring and make a final selection in late 2009 so Dahlberg will have time to help the new CEO settle into the job.

Skip Oppenheimer, chairman of the board of directors, said in a statement that Dahlberg has provided decades of service and stability to the organization.

"While it will be difficult to fill his shoes, Ed has graciously given us a generous timeline to plan this transition, and we have enlisted the help of a broad range of individuals to assist us with the important process of identifying his successor," Oppenheimer said.

The transition to a new leader will include input from St. Luke's various boards of directors, physicians, administrative staff and community representatives who are on the system's advisory committees. St. Luke's also plans to use an executive search firm to

Patrick, Rickards seek District 23 House seat

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

For more local and national election news, go to magicvalley.com and hit the Election 2008 button.

Rep. Jim Patrick, a Twin Falls farmer and single-term Republican legislator, faces Democrat Peter Rickards, a Twin Falls podiatrist best known for his anti-nuclear activism, for the District 23 House seat.

Patrick, elected in 2006, sits on the House banking, agriculture and education committees. During the 2008 session, he sponsored a handful of bills intended to push modernization of agriculture and banking sectors, and successfully pushed a bill to strengthen an employer's ability to enforce non-compete agreements with employees.

"Overall, I ran because I wanted to keep a rural, conservative voice in the Legislature," said Patrick, 63, who is also a founder of Magic Valley Bank.

Rickards, 45, has voiced concern for waste at the Idaho National Laboratory and is staunchly against the proposed nuclear power plant in Elmore County.

— is being resolved.

There are 105 members in the part-time Idaho Legislature, which typically meets from January to March. Legislators are paid a base salary of $16,921 annually, not including per diem for travel. The general election is Nov. 4.

Patrick also said there must be additional sources of revenue for state agencies, including the Idaho State Department of Agriculture, to adequately do their jobs. He said he continues to work on legislation for warehouse inspections and bonding.

Rickards said farmers in rural District 23 — a region of nearly 10,000 square miles consisting of Owyhee County and western Twin Falls County — tell him to continue his anti-nuke activism and many are skeptical of the energy's impact on agriculture.

Rickards, 53, also continues to push for Idaho to legelize industrial hemp. He said it would revitalize the soil, flourish in Idaho's arid environment and help the economy.

To help make up the $240 million shortfall for state roads and bridges, the candidates said they'd support some increases.

Patrick said he expects a placed-in package, and supports raising the fuel tax or fees on registration and rental cars.

"We can do a little bit more, because if we don't we just get worse each year," he said.

Rickards said he supports increasing fees on rental cars; opposes increasing the fuel tax or registration fees; and supports isolating vehicles, such as trucks for agricultural use, for a fee increase.

Rickards wants the state to decrease dependence on private prisons by having prisoners work.

"These are the kinds of things that we could save taxpayers money on," he said. "The bottom line is healthy folks should be generating money."

Patrick said he's not against private prisons, but prefers publicly owned facilities. He said it's important to continue to invest.

Patrick said he could support merit pay for teachers' performance, but that the evaluation process of teachers needs to be changed.

Rickards said he is skeptical of merit-based pay.

"I have yet to see a system that fairly evaluates teachers for their merit," he said.

Rickards said he filed before Patrick announced and had personally nothing against Patrick.

But he noted that Idaho Power Co. has contributed to Patrick's campaign, and the utility has taken owners of alternative energy projects to court — thereby delaying Idaho's ability to acquire new energy sources.

Cassia Co. voters should register by Friday

By Danon Hutzker
Times-News writer

If you plan to vote next month but haven't registered yet, time is running out — sort of.

Cassia County officials are encouraging people to register by Friday at 5 p.m., which, per Idaho order is when the opportunity to file a voter-registration card at the courthouse expires. It allows the county 24 days before an election to print poll books when no one is registering.

However, you can still vote absentee at the election department in the courthouse between 8:30 and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, and you can register an Election Day at your polling location. It may take some extra time this year, though.

"We expect the polls to be very busy," Donna Bush, the county election deputy, said. "If people aren't registered prior to voting, they'll need to allow for more time — we're expecting a high turnout because of the historic nature of this election. It will be historic one way or the other — we've never had a female vice president, and we've never had a black president."

Absentee ballots, polling locations, and additional information can be found at www.idahovotes.gov.

Dual credit course enrollment grows

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Not every student at the College of Southern Idaho attends class on campus.

A growing number of CSI students are taking college courses at their high school. Dual credit courses allow high school students to take college courses — a variety of subjects and have taken credit in place before they even graduate.

Enrollment in dual credit courses through CSI has hit a high this semester. There are 1,579 students enrolled in the courses. Last year, the college had 1,446 dual credit students in its fall semester.

"Over the last two years, we've seen a dramatic increase," said John Miller, the instructional dean overseeing off-campus education.

Besides providing a jumpstart on college, the dual credit courses are also less costly than traditional college courses. A dual credit course costs $65 per credit hour, compared to $95 per credit hour for students taking classes at CSI.

That savings also adds to the popularity of dual credit courses. Miller said, adding that high school students enrolled in the course make up about one-fifth of the college's student body.

Historically, there's been growth during the last few weeks. Miller said, adding there were about 750 dual credit students, a figure that's doubled since then, Miller said.

High school educators agree that interest is high in dual credit courses.

"It's pretty popular," said Dan Rogers, principal of Minico High School in Rupert.

At Minico, some students have taken enough dual credit coursework to graduate with an associate degree before receiving their high school diploma, he said.

At Declo High School, officials added a history course to the lineup of dual credit courses. This year already includes English, algebra and vocational courses. Principal Roland Bott said, adding that at least a third of students are taking the courses.

And students see the potential of dual credit courses for providing a way to get ahead on their college coursework.

Jerome Co. sheriff race heats up

Three current and former law enforcement officers run for top slot

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

The Jerome County undersheriff has an inside view of the office she wants to take over, but her challengers say that's not the winning ticket.

"I've trained for the position of sheriff," Undersheriff Jocelyne Nunnally, 51, an independent, told Jerome County residents Tuesday during a debate.

She has support from retiring Sheriff Jim Weaver, and won't criticize what he's done for three terms.

But her challengers worry.

Retired Idaho State Police Sgt. Doug McFall, 50, and Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office's Jerry Martinez, 55, laid out their plans for change at the debate.

McFall, a Republican, wants to improve the department's feel. "I want to make it a positive work environment," he said.

There needs to be more attention to civil rights for arrestees, Martinez, an independent, said. "You can't apply different standards to different folks ... We do not want to get sued," he said.

The three candidates are vying to manage 33 employees, under a $1.42 million budget, for a salary of $51,044.

Martinez wants to see a war on drugs, graffiti and gangs, through enhanced communication, education and community outreach, he said. "We need to get together ... Let's unite."

McFall, who worked with the ISP for 24 years, said he has good relationships with other police agencies but developed. "We need to exchange information across the river," he said.

Nunnally says she already has a good relationship with other departments, but would be interested in a Magic Valley narcotics task force, which is also supported by the other candidates.

All candidates want to see community watch programs put into place.

"I don't know how we got away from that," Nunnally said.

As for Jerome's overcrowded jail, Nunnally said she wants to wait to see reports from a contractor, but favors Jerome County having its own facility.

McFall on the other hand, says he supports a regional jail concept, "as long as formal studies show it to be cost effective."

election county commissioners will choose how to proceed with the jail problem and he'll support their decision.

Nunnally conceded she would make some changes including: implement a desk sergeant slot, create a media spokesperson and form a citizen advisory committee.

"There's always room for improvement, but I think we're doing a good job," she said.

McFall, a licensed pilot with experience working at other sheriff's offices in Idaho, said deputies would be better trained under his leadership.

Nunnally said training is always an issue and will explore how to get more. "We do the best we can with the resources we have," she said.

Brackett, Chisholm race for Senate seat

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

Republican state Sen. Bert Brackett, a long-time rancher in Owl Creek, faces Democratic challenger Bill Chisholm, a longtime Bullh activist, in the District 23 election Nov. 4.

Brackett — picked in July by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter to succeed the deceased Tom Gannon — was appointed to the House in 2006, elected in 2008 and has sat on the House appropriations, resources and energy committees.

"I realize I can just do more in the Senate," said Brackett, 63. "One senator, (with) fewer members in the body, has potential to be more effective than in the House."

Chisholm, 63, who has run for office in most elections since 1978, emphasizes four issues: energy, education, the economy and environment.

"The issues are exactly the same today as they were in 1978, only they're a little more worrisome," said Chisholm, who described himself as a carpenter, yoga instructor, land manager and energy educator. "Society moves forward on ideas and circumstance and we're always ahead on ideas — and I've always been able to move things a little bit, but the circumstances haven't caught up."

Legislators are paid a base salary of $16,921 annually, not including per diem for travel.

District 23 consists of nearly 10,000 square miles in Owyhee County and western Twin Falls County.

Chisholm — who six years ago carried Twin Falls County against Gannon — said as energy costs rise, funding for education drops. He's asked Idaho Power Co. to apply profits from selling state dividend credits to educating children on energy. But he said Idaho Power's does nothing.

Chisholm

Brackett

WATCH: A video of interviews with the candidates.

Brackett said it will be difficult for the highway districts to receive additional funding, or for local-option taxing authority to expand.

Asked about making up the $240 million backlog in the state's transportation budget, Brackett did not say whether he would support changing registration fees or fuel tax increases. He only conceded they are "where the bulk of the money will come from."

Chisholm proposed greater oversight of weight enforcement of vehicles and possibly increasing registration fees. He is open to looking at raising gas taxes or rental car fees. He's also willing to expand the local-option taxing authority if fair.

Gannon was a moderate Republican who championed early education funding and tighter regulations for day-care.

Chisholm said the state can play a role in early education — but use caution in funding — and the state should hold day-care to higher standards. Brackett, however, is more skeptical of the state involvement, particularly during a tight economy.

Brackett is not opposed to nuclear

"The issues are exactly the same today as they were in 1978, only they're about 10 times worse."

energy, but wants other renewables, too.

Chisholm said he wants renewable energy ahead of nuclear, which he's "basically opposed" but has "not totally closed door" on.

Brackett said they are not opposed to merit pay to improve teacher salaries but that evaluations must be adequate.

Chisholm criticized Brackett's role in the demolition of Fish and Game Magic Valley Region's Supervisor David R. Oakley, who then wrote a letter to the editor in response to a Times-News editorial endorsing the $500 million 185-turbine China Mountain wind farm.

Brackett spoke with Idaho House Assistant Majority Leader Scott Beake, R-Oakley, who then contacted Otter with the concern that Parrish had disrupted the environmental review process.

"This is supposed to be a free society," Chisholm said. "We're supposed to have full, honest and open debate. How can you make decisions when we're intentionally stifling somebody?"

As he did in August, Brackett said the proper decision was made against Parrish, and noted he has stayed quiet because his nephew's property could part of the project.

"Personally," he said, "I was going to and did and have."

Crash near Rupert kills one

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

A crash north of Rupert Monday claimed the life of one man and may result in criminal charges filed against another.

Jesus Valero, 46, was pronounced dead at the scene of a three-vehicle crash that occurred at 1200 N. Meridian on Idaho Highway 24, at 8:24 p.m., according to a Mindoka County Sheriff's report.

Mindoka County Sheriff Chief Deputy Vic Beake said the crash was still under investigation on Wednesday.

Valero was driving a 1994 Dodge pickup eastbound on Highway 24 when his vehicle sideswiped the left side of a farm implement attachment pulled at a 2002 Ford pickup driven by Jose Luis Lopez, 53, of Rupert, the report said.

The farm implement, which was overhanging about five feet into Valero's lane, is used to sort the dirt clods from the field.

After striking the implement, Valero's pickup went off the road and struck a parked 10-wheeler truck in the parking lot of a potato warehouse that belonged to Steven D. Young of Rupert, the report said.

Lopez told officers that he saw Valero's pickup that in the oncoming lane and tried to warn the driver by flashing his headlights, the report said.

The farm implement did have a slow-moving vehicle sign placed on its rear, but there were no lights on the machine and no lights directed at the machine to illuminate it, the report said.

Mindoka County Prosecutors Nicole Gannon said Wednesday that her office is waiting for additional reports to be completed before she will determine what if any criminal charges will be filed in the incident.

EDITORIAL

Sorry, governor; we can't avoid a gas tax hike

The average Idahoan drives about 13,000 miles a year. Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter sees that as a possible solution to fixing the state's beleaguered roads. In a speech in Idaho Falls Monday, the governor suggested the state could raise money by charging motorists for how much they drive. Under Otter's plan, drivers would disclose their vehicle's mileage when they register the rig. Each year, state officials would subtract the current year's mileage from the previous year's mileage and charge the driver accordingly. "I believe in user-based pay," the governor said.

So do we, but wouldn't it make more sense just to raise the gas tax? However distasteful, the gas tax is at least progressive — the bigger and less fuel-efficient the vehicle, the more you pay. But with a mileage tax, you'd pay the same for driving a Dodge Ram 1500 for 13,000 miles as you would a more fuel-efficient Toyota Prius hybrid. That's not equitable.

For starters, the "footprint" — the impact on the roads and the environment — of an Cadillac Escalade or a Ram 1500 is larger than for a Honda Civic or a Prius. Big vehicles simply affect the infrastructure more.

Secondly, larger rigs use more gas — and push fuel prices up for everyone else in the process. Like it or not, the most equitable way to raise more money for highways is some combination of a higher fuel tax and higher registration fees. That combines a use tax with a property tax.

The Idaho Transportation Department says the state is at least $240 million in the bucket on deferred highway repairs. Lawmakers and the governor couldn't agree on any new road money during the last legislative session. Legislators balked at Otter's idea of boosting registration fees to $150 for all vehicles. They are now based on the car's model year, and range from $24 to $48.

But the fuel tax has been 25 cents a gallon since 1996, when a gallon of unleaded regular sold for $1.53.

There's simply no painless way Idaho can raise enough money to repair our highways. But let's at least make it fair. And a mileage tax isn't.

Our view: Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's pay-to-drive tax proposal amounts to a penalty for fuel efficiency and a burden on more economical drivers. What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

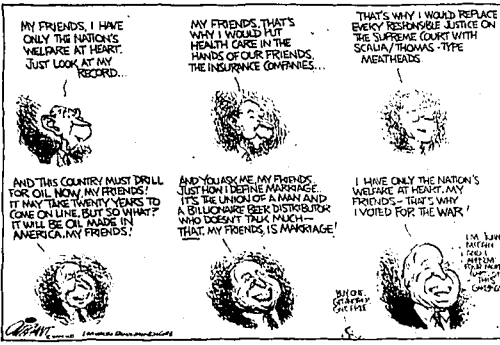

Who is McCain kidding about this health care plan?

Sarah Palin ended her debate performance last Thursday with a slightly garbled quote from Ronald Reagan about how, if we aren't vigilant, we'll end up "telling our children and our children's children" about the days when America was free. It was a revealing choice. You see, when Reagan said this he wasn't warning about Soviet aggression. He was warning against legislation that would guarantee health care for older Americans — the program now known as Medicare. Conservative Republicans still hate Medicare, and would kill it if they could — in fact, they tried to gut it during the Clinton years. But so far they haven't been able to pull that off.

PAUL KRUGMAN

So John McCain wants to destroy the health insurance of non-elderly Americans instead. Most Americans under 65 currently get health insurance through their employers. That's largely because the tax code favors such insurance: Your employer's contribution to insurance premiums isn't considered taxable income, as long as the employer's health plan follows certain rules. This system does a fairly effective job of protecting those it reaches, but it leaves many Americans out in the cold. Workers whose employers don't offer coverage are forced to seek individual health insurance, often in vain. For one thing, insurance companies offering "nonguaranteed" coverage generally refuse to cover anyone with a pre-existing medical condition. And individual insurance is very expensive.

because insurers spend large sums weeding out "high-risk" applicants — that is, anyone who seems likely to actually need the insurance. So what should be done? Barack Obama offers incremental reform: regulation of insurers to prevent discrimination against the less healthy, subsidies to help lower-income families buy insurance, and public insurance plans that compete with the private sector. His plan falls short of universal coverage, but it would sharply reduce the number of uninsured.

McCain, on the other hand, wants to blow up the current system, by eliminating the tax break for employer-provided insurance. And he doesn't offer a workable alternative.

Without the tax break, many employers would drop their current health plans. Several recent nonpartisan studies estimate that under the McCain plan around 20 million Americans currently covered by their employers would lose their health insurance.

As compensation, the McCain plan would give people a tax credit — $2,500 for an individual, $5,000 for a family — that could be used to buy health insurance in the individual market. At the same time, McCain would deregulate insurance, leaving insurance companies free to deny coverage to those with health problems — and his proposal for a "high-risk pool" for hard cases would provide little help. So what would happen? The good news is that more people would buy individual insurance. Indeed, the total number of uninsured Americans might decline marginally under the McCain plan.

But the people gaining insurance would be those who need it least: relatively healthy Americans with high incomes. Why? Because insurance companies want to cover only healthy people, and even among the healthy only those able to pay a lot in addition to their tax credit would be able to afford coverage. Meanwhile, the people losing insurance would be those who need it most: lower-income workers who wouldn't be able to afford individual insurance even with the tax credit, and Americans with health problems whom insurance companies won't cover. The McCain plan would also lead to a huge, expensive increase in bureaucracy: insurers selling individual health plans spend 21 percent of the premiums they receive on administration, largely because they employ so many people to screen applicants. This compares with costs of 12 percent for group plans and just 3 percent for Medicare.

In short, the McCain plan makes no sense at all, unless you have faith that the magic of the marketplace can solve all problems. And McCain does, a much-quoted article published under his name declares that "Opening up the health insurance market to more vigorous nationwide competition, as we have done over the last decade in banking, would provide more choices of innovative products less hindered by the worst excesses of state-based regulation."

I agree: The McCain plan would do for health care what deregulation did for banking. And I'm terrified.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Henderson a blessing to Jerome Public Library

For the past eight years, the Jerome Public Library and the children of Jerome have been blessed with the most awesome children's programs planned and implemented by Linda Henderson. In just the last year, more than 6,000 people have attended these programs. Many children in the community have grown up with "Miss Linda" and Story Hour. Her love of literacy and children is shown in all she does. It is with profound sadness that we now have to say goodbye to Linda. The new library director, Laura Burnett, has chosen to cut nearly all of the children's programs from the library. Linda is now moving on to the Buhl Public Library as its new children's program director where she will continue her work with what she calls "the dignitaries of the community," the children.

Garcia has qualifications to make a good sheriff

I am writing this letter in support for Felix Garcia for Twin Falls County Sheriff. I have known Felix Garcia for several years now. Felix has 16 years of law-enforcement experience and the qualifications to make a good sheriff. He has worked as a jail and field supervisor, detective, SWAT member, sat and worked on budget and goals committees. Felix still has friends and ties with the law enforcement community that fully supports him. He has the leadership and integrity to keep the sheriff's office back on order.

If you know Felix, you know that he is not one to lead from behind a desk but to lead from the front line. Felix is the type of person who works with his people, not just a delegator. You will see Felix out in our community supporting our fellow officers and our community.

Felix knows that it is important to keep a tight budget and avoid spending is not an option. Felix understands the budget is the taxpayers' money and will save our tax dollars by reorganizing the departments to make them more effective and give our community the security of a safe place to live. Vote for Felix Garcia for Twin Falls County Sheriff for our community and a better, safer place to live. RICK FRANTZ, Twin Falls

U.S. Senate candidates spar over national economic crisis

By Todd Dvork
Associated Press writer

LEWISTON — The three top candidates battling for Idaho's open U.S. Senate seat sparred over the nation's ailing economy, unchecked pork barrel spending and the federal deficit during a Wednesday night debate.

For the first time this election season, Republican Jim Risch shared the debate stage with Democrat Larry LaRocco and Independent Rex Rammell.

The candidates were quizzed on global warming, energy issues and homeland security, but more than half of the 60-minute debate focused on the economic troubles facing the nation at home and abroad.

Risch, serving a second term as Idaho's lieutenant governor, and Rammell, a former elk rancher from eastern Idaho, each said they would have voted against the $700 billion bailout passed by Congress last week to rescue the nation's struggling financial markets.

Risch said the legislation lacked taxpayer protections, was short of needed reforms and regulation and was loaded down with extra spending to entice wavering lawmakers.

"Credit needed to be injected into the markets, but this was no way to do it," Risch said during the debate broadcast live to a limited market in north-central Idaho.

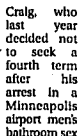

LaRocco, who served two terms in the U.S. House before

LaRocco

Rammell

losing in 1994, said the bill was necessary to rejuvenate the economy. He said the cash infusion would ultimately help small businesses.

"I do think Americans will get their money back," LaRocco said.

The race also includes Libertarian Kent Marmon and an Independent who has changed his name to Pro-Life. Risch, LaRocco and Rammell agreed in principle that social earmarks — the special, home-district spending projects attached by lawmakers to bigger congressional bills — should be curtailed. But they differed on how best to do it. LaRocco touted some projects he delivered to the region and the University of Idaho as a congressman, but he blamed Republicans and President Bush for expanding federal spending and inflating the deficit.

Risch said it's time to give the president the line-item veto and promised to back legislation banning the earmark system.

But Rammell, who characterized himself as the only true conservative in the race, blamed Republicans and accused the GOP of losing sight of its fiscal conservative roots.

"Republicans have been putting earmarks on bills for years," Rammell said. "We know where the Democrats stand. But the Republican party seems to have lost its way."

Throughout the debate, LaRocco and Rammell ganged up on Risch, the front-runner in the polls and campaign cash on hand heading into the last four weeks of the campaign.

LaRocco criticized Risch for not signing on for more than three debates and taking campaign donations from oil companies while making more drilling a key piece of his energy policy.

Risch declined several opportunities to counterpunch, but pointed out that LaRocco's personal investment portfolio includes shares in oil companies.

Yosemite National Park rock slide destroys cabins, injures 3

By Tracie Cone
Associated Press writer

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. — Chunks of granite crashed to the Yosemite Valley floor in a cloud of dust Wednesday, injuring at least three people and destroying several cabins and trees at one of the park's most popular lodging areas, officials said.

The rock slide was the second in two days in the area called Curry Village, a lodging and retail area, defined by dramatic, sheer cliffs.

"We were awakened at 7 to what sounded like thunder and what felt like the Earth crumbling apart," said Deanne Maschmeyer, 41, of Monterey, who was staying in a nearby cabin with her two children. "People were stampeding everywhere and running, running like crazy. I felt like I was running ahead of a tsunami."

The slide destroyed five cabins and partially damaged at least three others, according to a park statement. Three visitors were treated for minor injuries.

The volume of rocks cascading from the granite face was estimated at about 1,800 cubic yards, or about 180 truck loads, said Vickie Mates, a park spokeswoman.

The next day, another rock slide in the same area Tuesday afternoon. No one was injured then.

In 1996, a rock slide in the same area sent as much as 162,000 tons of rock plummeting more than 2,000 feet, killing one visitor and felling 500 trees. A slide in 1999 killed one climber and injured three others while narrowly missing the popular campground.

Damage to a cabin is shown at Curry Village in Yosemite National Park following a rock slide Wednesday. It was the second rock fall in the area in two days.

Tom Trujillo, of New Milford, Conn., who was with a group of amateur photographers, saw Wednesday's rock slide and ran toward it.

"Trees were crushed all over the place," Trujillo said over the sound of a hovering helicopter. "A couple of kids, fifth or sixth-graders, were stumbling out of the area. I tried to pick them up, shaken to get them out as fast as I could."

Trujillo said he helped one boy, who had blood on his forehead and down his back, get out and find his mother.

"It was a really big mess," Trujillo said. "Tents were crushed, trees were knocked down, hiking cabins were moved out of their positions, with boulders blocking their doorway."

Another photographer, Rena McClain, a nurse from Dover, Del., told the Associated Press that she had her back to the granite face when she heard what sounded like a thunderclap. She whipped around and saw a giant cloud of rock and dust coming down.

"People were starting to yell, 'Run, run,' and kids started to scream," McClain said. As the dust settled, shaken teachers and chaperones gathered groups of high school students and tried to get head counts.

"The kids were crying," said McClain. "I tried to comfort them. I'm a nurse; my immediate response was, 'What can I try to do to help?'"

Mates said the rocks fell across an area that used to be traversed by a trail no longer maintained because of heavy rock falls.

Mexican consulate to open in Idaho this year

BOISE (AP) — The Mexican government has appointed diplomat Ricardo Pineda to open a consulate in Boise and serve a growing Hispanic population in Idaho and Montana.

Pineda, former deputy consul general for the Mexican consulate in San Diego, opened a temporary office in Boise last month. The office, which now has five employees, will eventually be staffed with up to 11 workers, he said.

"We have to build everything from scratch," said Pineda, who expects construction of a permanent office here to be completed by December.

"There is a demand and we are trying to respond to that demand," he said.

The U.S. Census Bureau estimated this year that there are 147,426 Hispanics among Idaho's 1.5 million residents.

The U.S. State Department approved construction of a Mexican consulate in Boise earlier this year, despite objections from Rep. Bill Sali, R-Idaho.

Sali asked with Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice to delay approval for the consulate unless there were guarantees that it wouldn't aid illegal immigrants by providing them with consular cards that would make it easier for them to receive government services or open up bank accounts.

Supporters of the new consulate argue it will provide services to thousands of residents who have legal or family ties to Mexico. Previously, people in Idaho or Montana who needed such services had to travel to offices in Salt Lake City or Seattle.

Pineda, a native of Mexico City who has previously worked for the Mexican Embassy in Washington, D.C., said he hopes to use his position in Idaho to further trade and cultural relations.

Mormons organize phone campaign for ballot measure

By Jennifer Dobner
Associated Press writer

SALT LAKE CITY — Mormons in the outside California have been asked to volunteer for a telephone campaign to help pass a ballot initiative on marriage there.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is part of a coalition of conservative groups backing Proposition 8, which would ban gay marriage in California's constitution. The measure will appear on the Nov. 4 ballot.

Church elder L. Whitney Clayton said in a statement that members could be asked to call friends and family at home in California to encourage their support. The campaign would be on an "if-needed" basis and will be tested, but may not be fully implemented.

The organizational effort comes at the request of the Protect Marriage Coalition, Clayton said.

Clayton also says many students from California attending church-owned universities have been asked how they might help and could be enlisted to make calls. The church has branches of its Brigham Young University in Hawaii, Idaho and Utah.

Church officials said no calls have been made so far and the coalition had not yet decided whether to activate the phone network, the statement from Clayton said. It's unclear what would trigger use of the network.

There are about 770,000 church members in California.

A June letter from church President Thomas S. Monson asked California Mormons to give their time and money to pass Proposition 8. The church holds up traditional marriage as a sacred institution ordained by God.

Mormons have been active participants in the campaign both as volunteers and financial contributors, giving an estimated 43 percent — some $8.4 million — to the Proposition 8 campaign, according to the Web site mormonsfort.com. The site is tracking campaign finance reports and trying to identify Mormons making individual contributions of $1,000 or more.

Local bankers tell builders credit is available

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

"The bottom line is that there is money out there and we are still issuing loans."

— Alan Horner, president and CEO of First Federal Bank

Have no fear, say local bankers, credit is still widely available in south-central Idaho.

That was what a panel of bankers and loan officers from the Magic Valley told an audience of about a 100 builders and other business owners at Pandora's restaurant on Wednesday afternoon.

The discussion was hosted by the Magic Valley Builders

Association in order to address concerns from local builders about how the financial crisis is affecting south-central Idaho.

Members of the panel reassured builders that building and home loans are still widely available at local banks, which did not invest in risky loans. Non-conventional loans such as subprime, stated income and interest-only led to the downfall of the nation's largest investment banks, which collapsed under the burden of billions of dollars in toxic assets. "Those banks are not regulated like the rest of us that have auditors checking us for liquidity, capital and even how sensitive we are to interest rate changes," said Alan Horner, president and CEO of First Federal Bank. "The bottom line is that there is money out there and we are still issuing loans."

Jim Kerns, a branch manager with D.L. Evans Bank, said most of the lenders who were involved with unconventional loans are no longer in business. He added that it's "business as usual" for commercial banks in south-central Idaho. "The only thing we are seeing are what seems like daily changes being made by Freddie Mac in how we calculate an interest rate," Kern said. "But even that does not affect more common loans such as FHA loans."

Retailers report weak sales figures for September

By Anne D'Annunzio
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — American consumers went into hiding in September, leaving retailers with dismal sales and an uncertain future well beyond the holiday season as the fall-out from the financial meltdown pushes spending even lower.

As retailers reported their monthly sales figures Wednesday, even discounters weren't immune to shoppers' mounting worries about their financial security.

"Discretionary spending has come to a trickle," said Ken Perkins, president of research company RetailMetrics LLC. "Consumers are the most worried I have seen since at least the 1991 recession. There are so many factors laying on their psyche."

Wal-Mart Stores Inc., the world's largest retailer, said sales of discretionary items were weak as it posted solid results that were nevertheless a bit below expectations. Target Corp. fared far worse, reporting a bigger-than-expected drop and said it expects problems with its credit card business to persist through the rest of the year as customers have trouble making payments.

Luxury stores such as Neiman Marcus Group Inc. and Saks Inc. suffered sharp drops, as well as clothing stores held off on buying $600 silhouettes and other items. Many mall-based apparel stores and department stores including J.C. Penney Co. and American Eagle Outfitters Inc. find themselves mired in a deep sales slump.

With no clear spending recovery in sight, retailers are navigating in the dark about how much to cut their spring orders and store expansions to address the dramatic changes in consumer behavior that are expected to persist at least until next year — if not longer.

"We rarely eat out, and even groceries have become a big-ticket item," said Cincinnati resident Victoria Gray, 41, a single mother of a 15-year-old daughter, who now worries about her job at a bank's merchant service division. "No more payday pizzas now."

Before the financial meltdown began in the middle of last month, customers had already been switching to lower-price brands and stores, cutting back on essentials and making other changes like mending their clothes instead of buying new ones.

"Weakness in consumer spending is a significant drag on overall economic activity," said Scott Hoy, senior director of consumer economics at economy.com, who now predicts declines in consumer spending, adjusted for inflation, through the first quarter of 2009. "We are on track for something longer and deeper than either the 2001 or 2003 recession."

Decision sends Wall Street on roller coaster ride

By Joanne Aversa
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — In a rare coordinated move, the Federal Reserve and other major central banks from around the world slashed interest rates Wednesday to prevent a mushrooming financial crisis from becoming a global economic meltdown.

The decision sent Wall Street on a roller coaster ride. The major indexes moved in and out of positive territory, with the Dow Jones industrials at times falling more than 200 points or rising more than 100.

Overseas markets tumbled on worries that the move wouldn't immediately help ease the pain from the financial crisis.

The Fed reduced its key rate from 2 percent to 1.5 percent. In Europe, which also has been hard hit by the financial crisis, the Bank of England cut its rate by half a point to 4.5 percent and the European Central Bank sliced its rate by half a point to 3.75 percent. The central banks of China, Canada, Sweden, and Switzerland also cut rates. The Bank of Japan said it strongly supported the actions.

"The recent intensification of the global financial crisis has augmented the downside risks to growth," the Fed said in explaining the coordinated action, the latest in a series of bold moves meant to pry open tight lending and revive the global economy. The Dow Jones industrials, already down 875 points this week, rose 85 points in afternoon trading.

Treasury Secretary Henry Paulson said Wednesday that global financial markets remain severely strained, underscoring the need for quick action to implement the government's $700 billion rescue program.

The Fed's action will reduce borrowing costs almost immediately for U.S. bank customers, whose home equity and other floating-rate loans are tied to the prime interest rate. Bank of America, Wells Fargo and other banks cut their prime rate by half a point to 4.5 percent after the Fed announcement.

White House spokesman Tony Fratto welcomed the cooperation among the Fed and other countries' central banks to battle the crisis. "It's important and helpful that central banks are working in a coordinated way to deal with stress in the financial system," Fratto said. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, who was in Denver Wednesday to tour a hospital, also praised the decision. But she said Congress may need to go back into session to pass another economic stimulus package worth about $150 billion.

The first economic plan this year cost $168 billion and sent tax rebate checks to most individuals and couples and awarded tax breaks to businesses.

The House did pass a $61 billion economic aid proposal last month before lawmakers left Capitol Hill ahead of the Nov. 4 election. But a similar plan failed to pass the Senate.

The country's presidential contenders also embraced the action. "This is a global crisis that requires a global solution," said Democrat Barack Obama. Republican rival John McCain hoped it would contain the "financial crisis spreading across the globe."

Some analysts were skeptical that the coordinated rate reductions would do much to turn things around.

"At first blush, while this is a big step, it is unlikely to prove sufficient to stem the rot. Additional rate cuts are likely and further measures to inject liquidity and recapitalize banks are needed," said Marc Chandler, global head of currency strategy at the investment firm Brown Brothers Harriman.

The rate cuts came against a backdrop of increasing anxiety in global financial markets. Investors have

BUSINESS BRIEFS

August borrowing drops at 3.7 percent rate

WASHINGTON — Consumer borrowing fell in August for the first time in more than a decade as households, battered by rising job layoffs and the decaying economy, cut back sharply on their use of credit.

The Federal Reserve said Tuesday that consumer borrowing fell at an annual rate of 3.7 percent in August, before the financial crisis. The Fed said in September, forcing the government to approve a $700 billion rescue of the financial industry.

August's decline in consumer credit marked the first time that total borrowing had fallen since a 4.3 percent rate of decline in January 1998.

AIG's role in market crisis probed

WASHINGTON — Executives at American International Group Inc. hid the full range of its risky financial products from auditors as losses mounted, according to documents released Tuesday by a congressional panel examining the chain of events that forced the government to baul out the conglomerate. The panel sharply criticized AIG's former top executives, who cast blame on each other for the company's collapse. American International Group Inc., crippled by huge losses linked to mortgage defaults, was forced last month to accept an $85 billion government loan that gives the U.S. an 80 percent stake in the company.

German doing well after double arm transplant

By Christof Roehmler, Associated Press writer
MUNICH, Germany — A German farmer who received the world's first complete double arm transplant said Wednesday that incredulity gave way to joy when he woke from surgery to discover he had arms again.

could not believe that the transplant appeared to have been successful.
'It was really overwhelming when I saw that I had arms again,' said the 54-year-old, who wore a sleeveless black shirt showing clearly where his new arms had been grafted.

nearly three months after the 15-hour operation.
Merk is recovering well and can perform simple tasks such as opening doors and turning lights on and off. His ultimate goals are to eat and dress himself — and ride a motorcycle.

anesthesiologists, nurses and other support staff carried out the 15-hour operation on July 25-26 to graft the donor's arms on to the body of Merk, who lost his own just below the shoulder in a combine harvester accident.
Doctors said there were good indications of nerve growth in the arms but it could take up to two years before he regains how to use his hands.

Exploring the SOUTH HILLS

The third and final article in a series on trail exploration as Outdoors editor, photographer mountain bike the hills

Story by ANDREW WEEKS
TIMES-NEWS

I wasn't exactly the ride I was hoping for, but the scenery was great.

Every time my outdoor companion, Times-News photographer Justin Jackson, and I visited the South Hills over the past several weeks to do this series on trail exploration, the forest was a little more blown with fall colors than it was the last time we visited. And each time, as we traveled farther into the hills, the colors seemed to deepen.

This time we viewed the colors — and other sights and sounds — on our mountain bikes.

Well, sort of. Sometimes, because of the hills, we walked beside our bikes instead of peddling them up the steep grades. And because we shared the road with all-terrain vehicles, utility vehicles, off-road motorcycles and, in some instances, cars, we were often left in clouds of dust.

One family rode their ATVs past us at least a half-dozen times, waving or nodding each time they did and making us envious of their motorized machines.

"This is an amazing place to ride, different than anything you'll find in the valley," said Jared Thompson, one of the riders. Thompson, of Burley, was there to spend the weekend with his family. The family of 13, some from Sacramento, Calif., camped at the FS Flats portion of the hills and had brought about eight dirt bikes and ATVs to share amongst themselves.

Marathon tips from an avid runner

This is the season to run your legs off. Each autumn, from St. Paul to Seattle, tens of thousands of runners wrap up a year of training with a 26.2-mile run. I ran my requisite annual marathon this past weekend, pacing at just under eight-minute miles in the Twin Cities Marathon to pull my best personal time to date at 3 hours, 27 minutes.

Here are 10 quick tips — some highly personal, some quite unorthodox — on the gear, running techniques and nutrition I use to make it from the start line through 26.2 miles and to the end.

• Wear big shoes
I wear shoes about one size too large when I run. You can lace them tight

THE GEAR
JUNKIE
Stephen
Regenold

enough to always feel like they fit fine. But the larger size allows your toes ample room to spread out and breathe. Your feet will swell after many miles on the run, so the extra room is needed.

• Lube your feet
If your feet are in pain, you will run slower. You may even quit the race. Over the years, I've suffered through dozens of blisters and black toenails. To combat foot troubles, I now employ a foot lubricant called Hydrolip (available for about $18 a bottle online at www.argear.com). Smear it across your toes and glop it on your heel.

• Pull a sock over it all, your foot feeling gooey inside. This will keep your skin from bunching up and blistering. It works.

• Tape for hot spots
Bring a small amount of duct tape or medical Leukotape along on the marathon. The moment you feel a hot spot developing on your foot, stop and apply the tape as a layer of protection. Put it on tight and smooth so as not to add bulk or cause another spot of friction. This is not a medical treatment.

Flushing out the Hungarian partridge

By Bob Harris
Times-News correspondent

My first exposure to Hungarian partridge happened some 20 years ago while hunting chukar on the Clearwater River breaks in northern Idaho.

My hunting partner's German wirehaired pointer had pinned a covey of what we thought were chukar in an elderberry thicket by a hillside spring-weep, and we moved in for the flush. Instead of the familiar chukar, a covey of slightly smaller, brown and gray chirping birds exploded from the thicket and quickly flew across the small canyon.

"Why didn't you shoot," squawked Larry Barrett, my hunting partner. "What kind of birds were those," I asked a bit sheepishly.

"Those were hun," said Larry.

Growing up in eastern Kansas, hun were only something I read about in outdoor magazines, and although they were found in the Dakotas, northern Iowa and the extreme northeast corner of Nebraska, I had never seen one.

Deer-keds are a lot like ticks, have no impact on meat

Question: "I harvested a deer during the archery season and observed a lot of ticks on the animal. Do these ticks harm the animal or affect the meat?"

Answer: While deer do have ticks, more likely what you observed is deer-keds.

Deer-keds are frequently misidentified as ticks, and while they may superficially look similar there are some notable differences. Keds are usually mobile and are found on the belly of the animal. Ticks on the other hand are attached to skin, do not move around much, and are usually found around the head and neck.

ASK THE OFFICER
Gary Hompland

duced species of biting fly originating in Europe, Siberia and Northern China. The keds occur naturally as a parasite on red deer, roe deer, elk and sika deer in the Old World. In North America they are found on deer, elk, cattle, horses and humans. On humans keds will engorge on blood in 15 to 25 minutes. The bite is barely noticeable and leaves little trace. After a period of a few days the bite site will harden and redden. The itch lasting 14 to 20 days is probably the result of the body's reaction to the fly saliva. Deer-keds are not known to be a vector for other diseases. Deer-keds will not reproduce on any host other than deer and have no known impact on the meat.

Deer-keds have very little impact on the health of deer when occurring at reasonable levels. Some anaemia may be possible in deer containing extremely high numbers of keds over a prolonged period of time.

Deer season opens Friday

Times-News

Hunters, pack your guns. Regular deer season opens Friday in most areas in Idaho. And according to the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, this season's hunters should see more bucks.

"We're anticipating a really good season," said Kelton Hatch, regional conservation educator for the IDFG.

Hunters might notice more yearlings in the southern units, where the fawn survival rate this year was 50 to 60 percent, he said, but most of the mountains should also produce 21/2- to 41/2-year-old bucks.

"It should be a great year for hunting," Hatch said. "We've had some really nice rain storms to knock down the dust and moisten things up. It has cooled off and so deer should be out a little longer in the mornings ... When it's hot out they tend to shade up earlier in the day."

A regular deer tag allows hunters to take either mule deer or white-tailed deer, but there is also a tag that allows hunters to take only white-tailed deer. Some areas offer youth hunt opportunities, but you'll want to check the 2008 big game rules brochure for the areas where youth hunters are open.

A person must have a valid 2008 hunting license and a resident deer tag to hunt deer in Idaho. Hatch said hunters should be on the lookout for poachers and those who commit other wildlife crimes, and be prepared to report them to the authorities.

"Don't approach them yourself, but be a good a witness," Hatch said. "so you can describe the person, their activities and vehicle, including the license plate.

Callers may remain anonymous and are eligible for a cash reward. Hunters with information about a wildlife crime may call the Citizens Against Poaching hotline at 1-800-632-5999, local law enforcement or the nearest Fish and Game office, including the Magic Valley Regional office: 324-4350.

Crappie tips

By Wally Marshall For the Times-News

Fall can be an even better time for crappie than is spring. There are less cold fronts, and winds and temperatures are milder. You'll also have less competition, crappie are active and you get the bonus of beautiful fall colors.

The cooling water puts crappie in a transition phase, so you will find them at different depths.

The top edge of a drop-off in 5- to 10-foot of water is usually best. Jigs, minnow or a combo of them will all work. Try letting a jig bump into cover to really get them excited.

Another way is to cast a float and jig that lets you maintain a precise depth. If you catch crappie at 8 feet the first place you try, adjust the float to 8 feet and every time you cast the bait you will be in the zone.

FISHING REPORT

Magic Valley regional activity has slowed and there's not much to report, according to the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, which receives information from regional Fish and Game fishery managers, local tackle shops and anglers.

Lake Cleveland: No recent fishing reports.

Little Camas Reservoir: Daily bag, possession and size limits have been removed on the reservoir through Nov. 30. Licensed anglers may take the fish by any method except firearms, explosives, chemicals or electric current. After Nov. 30, standard fishing methods, bag limits and possession limits will be reinstated. For more information: 208-324-4359.

State approves fall chinook season

BOISE — The Idaho Fish and Game Department has approved the first fall chinook salmon season in more than 30 years.

Agency officials say a bigger than expected run of fall chinook has cleared the way for anglers. The season, which began Oct. 31, stretches through Oct. 31 on the Snake River between Lewiston and the Hells Canyon Dam.

The limit is one chinook per day. Officials say the intent of the season is to allow stealthed anglers who incidentally hook a chinook to keep it.

Biologists are not expecting the season to draw throngs of anglers like the numbers that turn out for spring and summer salmon season on stretches of the Salmon River.

The agency anticipates that fewer than 1,000 fish will be caught during the season.

Pheasant hunt opens Saturday in N. Idaho

The regular pheasant season opens in northern Idaho on Saturday.

The season opens Oct. 18 in Areas 2 and 3 in southern and eastern Idaho. In northern Idaho, shooting hours are one-half hour before sunrise to one-half hour after sunset. In Areas 2 and 3, shooting starts at noon on opening day.

For the remaining season shooting hours start one-half hour before sunrise and end one-half hour after sunset in all three areas, except on Fort Boise, C.J. Strike, Montour and Payette River wildlife management areas, where shooting starts at 10 a.m.

Daily bag limit is three cocks, and the possession limit is six after the first day, except on wildlife management areas where pheasants are stocked, in which case the daily limit is two cocks and four in possession.

Hunters need a wildlife management area pheasant permit to hunt pheasants on the nine Idaho Fish and Game wildlife management areas where pheasants are released, including the Fort Boise, C.J. Strike, Payette River, Montour, Sterling, Market Lake, Mud Lake, Carter Slough and Nagara Springs wildlife management areas. Permit is $23.75. Hunters must have permission before hunting on private land.

All hunters on wildlife management areas where pheasants are stocked are required to wear hunter orange, and all hunters must have a valid 2008 Idaho hunting license.

Gear Junkie adventure sweepstakes under way

The Gear Junkie LLC, a Minneapolis-based online media company, has launched "The Gear Junkie's Choose-Your-Adventure Sweepstakes."

The sweepstakes is sponsored by Lazyman, a lifestyle apparel company, and REI Adventures — will award a randomly-drawn winner of their choice from one of five professionally designed adventure-travel trips in early 2009. In addition to airfare and the all-expenses paid trip, the winner will be outfitted head-to-toe with essential gear from REI, including backpacks, apparel and hard-goods (depending on the adventure).

The winner and a travel companion will pick between one of five REI Adventures trips: Mount Washington Winter Climb; Sequoia Winter Mountaineering; Clancy Yosemite Snowshoe Trip; Ice Climbing Basics in New Hampshire; White Mountains Hut-to-Hut Snowshoe.

Attending will be The Gear Junkie, Stephen Regenold, a nationally-syndicated newspaper columnist and founder of GearJunkie.com.

A party sponsored by Lazyman will celebrate the weekend's accomplishments with music, food and drinks. Finally, participants will receive additional gear from Adventure Medical Kits, Bear Naked Trail Mix and Wigwag, co-sponsors of the sweepstakes. The sweepstakes, which started Oct. 1, runs through Dec. 17.

Review planned for six rare species in Utah

SALT LAKE CITY — Federal wildlife officials are re-examining the status of six threatened or endangered species in Utah.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service says it is reviewing the species to see whether they need more protection or less.

Included in the review is the lunge sucker, which is known to live only in Utah Lake and its tributaries. About $20 million has been spent trying to save the fish, which is classified as endangered.

The status of several plants in Utah will also be reviewed: the Barneby reed-mustard, Barneby's wild rose, the shrubby reed-mustard, clay reed-mustard and the Maguire primrose.

The Endangered Species Act requires all listed species to be reviewed at least once every five years.

Hunters must file harvest reports

All deer, elk and antelope hunters must complete and submit a report for each tag issued within 10 days of harvest or within 10 days of the close of the season for which their tag was valid.

The easiest way is to submit the harvest report card online at <http://idfg.idaho.gov>, and click on the logo below the photo. Or go to <http://www.idaho-hunt.com> and use your hunting license number and the first four letters of your last name.

Submitting online is the surest way to have hunt information included and the only way to get confirmation that the report was received.

Reports also may be mailed to: Idaho Fish and Game, Hunter Harvest Reports, P.O. Box 70007, Boise, ID 83707-0107 or called in toll-free at 1-877-268-1265 or faxed to 1-775-423-0799.

Five percent of sage grouse habitat protected on U.S. land

By Scott Somner Associated Press writer

RENO, Nev. — A new study by an environmental group that wants the sage grouse listed as a threatened or endangered species shows less than 5 percent of what's left of its dwindling habitat across the West is currently federally protected.

The new assessment found four-fifths of the chicken-sized game birds habitat is adversely affected by either livestock grazing, natural gas and oil development or invasive weeds. "Existing threats to sage grouse and their habitat are enormous," said a copy of the report by WildEarth Guardians obtained by The Associated Press.

"Livestock grazing, natural gas and oil development, agricultural conversion, roads, fences, power lines and pipelines, off-road vehicle use, urban sprawl, mining, unnatural fire and invasive weeds are destroying or degrading much of what remains," the group said in the report being made public on Thursday.

It singled out livestock grazing — permitted on 91 percent of the bird's range — as "the most ubiquitous use of sage grouse habitat on federal public land."

Critics of the report, including the head of the Nevada Department of Wildlife and others who oppose federal listing of the bird, said the study places too much emphasis on grazing and drilling while ignoring other threats to the species such as drought and West Nile virus.

"Some of the things they are saying are true, but it is an anti-grazing bent. The grazing and drilling were implicated than what they are talking about here," NDOW Director Kenneth Mayer said. "West Nile and wildfires are the issue, not livestock grazing in my mind."

The sage grouse is found in 11 Western states on grassy plains and high desert from Colorado to California and north to the Canadian border. Its population has been declining for decades and it now occupies about half of its original year-round habitat. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service estimated in 2005 there were 100,000 to 500,000 sage grouse.

Hubble's future is now

From 1988 through 1994, I was employed at the Space Telescope Science Institute, which operates the Hubble Space Telescope. Ever since, I've kept a close eye on the efforts to keep Hubble's steady stream of discoveries flowing.

Since its launch in 1990, Hubble has been visited four times by the Space Shuttle. On the first servicing mission — In December 1993 — spacewalking astronauts performed "eye surgery" on the orbiting telescope to correct its flawed vision. Subsequent missions have upgraded Hubble's scientific instruments and other hardware.

After the tragic loss of shuttle Columbia, NASA deemed a final visit to Hubble — too far from the International Space Station should a rescue be needed — too risky. New management opted for one last trip to service the aging telescope. It would have launched this week, with a first "rescue shuttle" walking on the launch pad.

Three days ago, Hubble's main ("Side A") data handling circuitry failed, leaving the satellite incapable of beaming data to Earth. The redundant system ("Side B") has never been used in Hubble's 18 years on orbit, so there's no guarantee it will work. Given this turn of events, NASA decided to postpone the final servicing mission until early 2008 to allow new astronauts and engineers to develop a repair strategy for Side A.

Sky calendar through Thursday

Saturn: E, low
One hour after sunset:
Venus: WSW, extremely low
Jupiter: SSW, low

In the next day or two NASA managers will meet to weigh the risk of turning on Side B. If they do, Hubble could resume its science duties before the end of the month, and with any luck will continue working until its successor, the James Webb Space Telescope, launches in 2013.

If you'd like to see Hubble with your own eyes, there are a series of passes coming up during the week Oct. 19-24.

South Hills

"There are a lot of variations of the trails, different difficulty levels. It's a good place to bring the family," Thomas said.

After talking with them at the flats they moved on with their four-wheelers, with our mountain bikes. It was later while we climbed the trail that they passed us several times.

One gentleman and his travel companion stopped his car to talk with us on their way back down the hill. "We're just out seeing the country today," said Daryl Dryden of Jerome. "To get out of Dodge."

"That's why people come to the hills, to get away from the hustle and bustle of daily life but I wondered why anyone would leave a well-trained dog to roam the open wilderness. A blue-tick hound came running down the hill to greet us as we talked with Dryden.

About five more miles up the hill the views open even more and the scenery is spectacular, he said. "Five more miles, huh?" I said, already exhausted and sore — some because of the workout my mountain bike was giving me and sore because a few weeks back on our first expedition I fell and hit my tailbone hard against an uncovered tree root.

Dryden laughed and soon continued on his way down the hill, his breathing relaxed in his car. I was still trying to catch my breath. The dog walked beside us, acting as if she knew us forever, and we began to wonder where her owner was. No one stopped to claim the dog and I decided I wouldn't leave her stranded in the wilderness alone. I'd bring her home with me, put an ad in the paper and hope someone would claim her.

Like the dog, we did not know the trail's name. We only knew it was an extension of Rock Creek Road. There are a number of break-away trails, some leading to camp sites, others to beaver ponds and other backcountry scenery. You'll run into it, this main trail, as you follow Rock Creek Road — past Third Fork and Walstrom's Hollow, past Magic Mountain and Diamondfield Jack Ski Day Area — to where the pavement ends. As blacktop turns to gravel, a sign warns users that they will now be sharing the road with ATVs, motorcycles and other off-road machines.

"This is prime real estate for trail riding," Justin said of the many trails that opened before our view. "A little way farther are the flats, and beyond that the continued rising of the trail as it winds its way up the hills. Deserts landscape, with fear of rattle snakes, soon turns to forest with fear of wildcats, wolves and other wildlife. But the sights, sounds and smells of the forest awaken one's senses.

Justin Jackson/Times-News

We didn't see any wildlife on our trail exploration, except a skunk that Justin saw at our journey's end, but we felt very bit enlivened with the aroma of pine needles between the aspen trees.

Some trail users I've talked with say the South Hills are a great place to ride dirt bikes and ATVs, while others say it's beginner territory and does not offer enough challenge for the experienced rider. But for mountain bike riding, this trail will give anyone — including the experienced — a hard-core workout. And if you love the outdoors, you'll never tire of the scenery, especially the farther back you travel.

Be prepared to do some hiking, though, as this trail is difficult even for the experienced biker to peddle on an incline for long periods, which you'll have to do — in low gear, of course — if you attempt the journey.

It's not for the faint of heart.

I was more faint than Justin. The most fun I had on my bike was riding back down, when I shouted "Kawabunga!" Just make sure you have good breaks, as you won't want to go too fast because of the rocks, chucks and bends.

Perhaps it wasn't the best trail for mountain biking after all.

We made it down the hill much quicker than we made it up, the dog keeping pace beside us. Soon she picked up on a scent and raced ahead of us as we approached a campsite back at the flats. A black lab greeted the dog, then they ran off together to the nearby trailer where children ran out to welcome the returning dog home.

It was evening and we were ready to go home ourselves.

"Thank you so much for finding our dog," said Vicki Drono of Twin Falls. Like the Thompssons, she and her family had planned to stay through the weekend, and their dog Ginger had gotten loose earlier that day. "We had looked for her all morning," she said.

but it will keep the blister from getting worse.

• Advil
This performance-enhancing drug is not outlawed by any board.

Seriously, no drug has been as important for my success in endurance athletics as ibuprofen has. I take two before a race starts and then have a baggie in my shorts pocket with three or four more pills to pop on the run.

• Salt pills
Swallow an electrolyte tablet — sometimes called salt pills — and you're downing the equivalent of a small glass of Gatorade.

It's the simplest way to explain it. But pills like Endurolytes from Hammer Nutrition ($17 for 120 pills at www.hammer-nutrition.com) have been crucial for me on races to stamp feed, pace and run two per hour while running.

• HR monitor
I religiously employ a heart-rate monitor while running to provide an exact, immediate gauge of what my body is doing in comparison to the clock. For my race this year, in which I used the Suunto t6c watch ($399, www.suunto.com), I started at about a 155 beats-per-minute pace and ran that way for more than half the race. It was a pace I could maintain for two hours, and it allowed me to push my body — but not push it so much that I'd be worn down for the finish.

• Eat
Any general marathon advice manual will stress staying hydrated. But consuming calories is almost as important for success. I find that consuming 100 or more calories an hour keeps me energized and fast.

Athletic gels are the preferred food for most endurance athletes. I squeeze one down every half-hour to 45 minutes as I run.

the finish line is in sight. "People are cheering. You have huge relief that the end is near. Every marathon I've done I hit it hard for the last mile. Native to Eurasia and transplanted into the Inter-mountain West, Hungarian or gray partridge are found in several different kinds of habitats in Idaho, from wheat fields to open sagebrush steppe. Most often encountered while hunting other birds, partridges are seldom pursued themselves and are often considered an incidental or bonus bird.

There seems to be two types of huns, according to Randy diel, regional wildlife manager for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game. "There are those who spend their entire lives around agricultural areas and those who live in the non-agricultural lands such as the South Hills or Hell Canyon and are never near a plowed field."

Because they are an adaptable bird, finding huns can be a challenge. diel said, and water requirement low. I had the most luck finding huns adjacent to wheat, barley or bean fields. It seems the birds roost in the sagebrush/rabbitbrush coverages and feed in the harvested fields. That said, they can be encountered anywhere — on steep basalt and cheat grass covered slopes, harvested corn fields and vast

CNP plantings.

A dog will greatly aid your search for huns; the birds will usually hold well for a pointing dog. Early in the season, which began Sept. 20, huns will be in groups of 10 to 20, often feeding on insects up until the first hard frost.

Try to hunt your dog into the wind and approach your dog's point from in front or the side rather than behind, and the birds will usually flush closer. As the season progresses, huns will become much more skittish and will flush wild at the slightest provocation.

Try a tactic used by sharp-tail grouse hunters: When your dog goes on point, circle out in front and walk directly toward your dog; this seems to momentarily confuse the birds, who often flush within shotgun range. Many hunters also use hawk calls to freeze running birds, some even tie dark-colored helium filled balloons to their belts to mimic a hawk's shadow while using the hawk call.

If you hunt by yourself or with another person, leave the orange cap and vest at home. All birds see color well and huns will shy away from bright colors. While wearing a light camouflaged jacket and a drab-colored hat, I've had huns almost land on top of me.

Huns are tough little birds and it takes a high velocity load to consistently bring them down. Most hunters use a high base load with 7½ or 8 shot. It's possible to get away with lighter loads early in the season, but use the heavier load as the season progresses or you're likely to lose birds.

All upland bird numbers fluctuated in response to weather, but huns numbers seem to fluctuate between stable and extreme abundance.

"I thought that if chukar numbers were high in our region, then hun numbers would be also," said Andy Ogden, IDFG's southwest regional habitat biologist, who regularly collects trend counts near some of his canyons for chukar. "I collected wings from our wing barrels and compared the number of young birds for each species, number of hens that produced a brood, biologists can age and sex upland birds by their wings, and tell if female birds produced a brood or not) and hunter bag reports. I found no correlation. I suspect that it's because huns are much more winter-hardy than chukars."

Occasionally, if conditions are right, hun numbers will explode. "If nesting and brood-rearing conditions are just right, chick survival will be excellent and huns will occupy all available habitats and we really don't know what those conditions are," Ogden said.

The periods of hun abundance have been studied by some of Idaho's best biologists, but no striking conclusions have been drawn.

Cade Powell, a biologist with the Wyoming Game and Fish department, participated on a study of non-agricultural area huns.

"There wasn't anything that really stood out about our study as to why these population spikes occurred," he said. "We found nesting usually took place in a shallow depression near some sort of woody cover, but that sagebrush, rabbitbrush or greasewood, and that chicks were very dependent on insects while young... There was no finding as to what the limiting factor or factors for hun populations were."

"Since many of the habitat types we studied in Wyoming are available in Idaho, it's logical to believe that similar findings are happening in Idaho as well."

Chapter 7 & 13
Stop Collections, Foreclosures & Garnishments

QUESTION: I have to file bankruptcy, but need to keep my only car. I owe way more than it's worth. I think I can make the payments.

ANSWER: In a Ch. 7 bankruptcy, your choices are to surrender the car or to keep it and pay. If you keep it, you must agree to reaffirm your debt and continue making the monthly payments, or redeem it by paying what the car is worth instead of what you owe. You ordinarily have to pay in a lump sum. Chances are, if you could afford to redeem, you would not have to file bankruptcy.

In a Ch. 13 bankruptcy, you may be able to keep your car and keep it by paying back only the value of the car, with reduced interest, over the life of your Ch. 13 Plan. This is called a "cram down" because you don't pay the entire loan, only the value of the car. Your payments will probably go down because the loan term can be extended. If you qualify for a "cram down" depends in part on whether the loan was for the purpose of buying the car, or whether the title to the car was taken as collateral for a personal or business loan. If the loan was for the purpose of buying the car, you probably qualify for a "cram down." However, this is a highly technical point in a very complex body of law. As an experienced bankruptcy attorney can identify the best option for you very quickly.

Langdon family to hold sign dedication

The Langdon family will gather at 1 p.m. Oct. 13 at the Broadway Run trailhead on the Blaine County Recreation District Wood River Trail to dedicate the Cold Springs Ranch Interpretive sign to their mother, Marion Orena Smith Langdon. The dedication will be a gathering of family and friends, and all are welcome.

Marion Langdon arrived by train in 1915 in the vicinity of the memorial sign. In 1952, she received the honor of Idaho Mother of the Year, and is a model of faith and courage to a family's cherished legacy that lives today.

The Blaine County Recreation District Wood

River Trail system was built on a corridor of history — from Wood River Valley's mining heritage of the 1880s, to the sheep ranchers who drove their bands through this corridor in the 1930s, to the halcyon years of Union Pacific Railroad's ski trains in the 1950s and '60s, to the mid '70s when the first planning for the rails-to-trails conversion began.

Interpretive signs along the trail keep this history alive. Each sign is located adjacent to the trail and tells a different story from the Wood River Valley's remarkable history.

Visitor bleachers expand Jerome High School football stadium

Times-News

The aluminum cost about $75,000 but the elbow grease was donated.

Jerome High School officials, football supporters and other volunteers gathered Saturday at the school's stadium to erect the visitor-side bleachers that will allow the Tigers to host a Class 4A playoff game this November. The $75,000 structure, paid for through donations and district funding, will seat the 300 visiting fans the Idaho High School Activities Association requires of all state playoff stadiums.

While the 4-1 Tigers' focus is on putting the new bleachers to use come the start of the "Great Eight" playoffs, the extra seating will also come in handy at 7 p.m. Friday. The Tigers host cross-country for "Bain Falls" high in the "Battle of the Bridge," a rivalry that has renewed its luster over the past two seasons.

Last year, first-year Bruins head coach Allyn Reynolds led his team to a 41-24 victory over Jerome. That followed a 35-34 double-overtime Jerome victory in 2006, a game that was one of the most hotly-contested and well-attended Magic Valley gridiron contests in recent memory.

The Tigers can ensure themselves a playoff berth with a win either next Friday at Minto or in their Oct. 24 season finale, hosting Wood River. Jerome has already claimed a 42-7 win over Butley in Great Basin Conference West play.

While the Tigers are already the buzz of the area football scene, they're gaining a small measure of national attention, as senior quarterback Jake Lammers is included on a number of scouting Web sites.

For those who have missed out, a montage of Lammers and Jerome highlights is currently posted on YouTube, at <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=w7jplp108>.

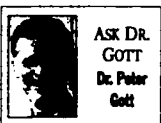

Work continues on the visitor-side bleachers Saturday morning at the Jerome High School football field.

It's important to track down cause of constant fatigue

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am a 77-year-old man who, about four years ago, was diagnosed with hypertension in the 150-72 range. I was placed on HCTZ, and, soon after, my sodium levels were 117. When that occurred, my physician telephoned me to stop the medicine. Since that time, I have been placed on several different drugs. I developed a cough with ACE inhibitors, so they had to be stopped. I'm now on Divalin and Nifedical.

My blood pressure remains under control, but my sodium level remains about 131. While my doctors aren't concerned about this, I have remained unusually tired since the antihypertensives were started. I believe there is a connection. Please advise me what I can do to increase my sodium levels and/or decrease the constant fatigue.

DEAR READER: I believe, your physicians are on the right track with your current medications for blood pressure control. Now let's get on to your main concern. Normal sodium levels are in the 136 to 145 range. Your 117 to 130 sodium levels are not cause for alarm. Having said this, there are several possibilities for why your levels are in a low range.

Imbalances of the thyroid, pituitary or adrenal hormones in the elderly are common and can cause chronic fatigue. Have you been checked by your primary-care physician for imbalances? You indicate you are on a diuretic. While it can help correct your hypertension, at the same time, it can result in the excretion of too much sodium. This results in hyponatremia, a lower-than-normal sodium level and fatigue. If you sweat profusely because of strenuous exercise, you might lose additional sodium.

Have you had your blood pressure checked on a regular basis? It may be that your medication is working too

CSI holds meetings

On 4-year programs
College of Southern Idaho students and prospective students who are interested in new four-year degree options in human services, social work, early child studies, and law enforcement are encouraged to come to one of two informational meetings Wednesday and Thursday at CSI.
Mary Christy, CSI Human Services professor, is organizing a CSI campus visit for representatives from the University of Wisconsin-

Oshkosh. The purpose of the informational meetings is to explain how a new transfer agreement between CSI and UW will benefit students and future students. The agreement will allow students to transfer into online bachelor's degree programs in these majors after they have finished their associate's degrees at CSI.
"We said the UW's programs are designed especially with non-traditional aged students in mind, so she hopes that people who have wondered for some time about pursuing a degree will attend."
The meetings are free and open to the public. The first one is from 4 to 6 p.m. Wednesday in room 1B1 of CSI's Aspen building. The second session will be from 9 a.m. to noon Thursday in room 247 of the Student Union building.
For more information: Mary Christy at 732-6713.

T.F. project honored with national excellence award

Through its service to others, one local volunteer project gained national recognition as an exceptional project connecting youth with adults as part of Join Hands Day 2008.
On May 3, thousands of service projects took place across the country to celebrate Join Hands Day, a national day of service sponsored by Modern Woodmen and America's fraternal benefits societies. In September, the National Fraternal Congress of America recognized the top 10 projects.
A Twin Falls project that purchased, wrapped and delivered more than 500 gifts for a local assisted living facility was recognized. The local group includes more than 150 people representing Modern Woodmen clubs and youth service clubs, the Red Hat Society, Magic Valley Builders Association, the Fun Bunch, OWLS, Buhl Kiwanis Club, Liberty Home-Schoolers, Boy Scouts, Twin Falls Reformed Church, LDS Relief Societies and Potato Growers of America. While delivering the personalized gifts to residents, the group also celebrated with a Christmas party.

The award-winning project received $1,000 and a distinctive glass trophy. The coordinating groups will choose how the funds are used.

Founded in 1883 as a fraternal benefit society, Modern Woodmen of America celebrates 125 years of serving members and their communities. The organization offers financial services and fraternal member benefits to individuals and families throughout the United States.

Gerald W. Pickett

Gerald W. Pickett, 88, of Twin Falls, passed away Tuesday, Oct. 7, 2008, in Twin Falls after a long illness. He was a long-time resident of the Magic Valley.

Gerald was born April 8, 1920, in Midvale, to Winsor A. Pickett and Bona E. Pickett. He attended school in Twin Falls and Filer and participated in FFA. He had a lot of enthusiasm for life and he loved his work, family and church. He was so very proud of his children, their accomplishments, his grandchildren and of their accomplishments.

Gerald was an entrepreneur and loved the rewards and challenges of owning his own business and being his own boss. He was always looking for a way to be more efficient and he took great pride in his work and always wanted to do his very best. He taught his children by example. He and his wife owned and operated a business in Filer for 17 years, a bulk-hauling business, a restaurant in Wendell for nine years and a custom farming business which is still in operation.

He is survived by his sweetheart, Geraldine Kaufman, the love of his life.

They were later sealed in the Idaho Falls Temple. Recently, they celebrated their 60th anniversary. Together they had five children. Gerald was an active member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He served in various church callings, including Young Men's president and member of the bishopric.

Gerald is survived by his wife, Geraldine Pickett; children, Penelope (Leonard) Ward, Billi Jo Pickett, Elizabeth (Noel) Briggs and Robert (Carol) Pickett; daughter-in-law, Peggy Pickett; and sister, Ann Glenn. He is also survived by 15 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his parents, two brothers, one sister, Wallace; and one grandchild.

The funeral will be conducted at 2 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 11, in the Twin Falls LDS 10th Ward Chapel, 229 Park Street, Twin Falls. Officiating will be Bishop Charles Barnes officiating. A visitation will be held one hour prior to the service. Interment will follow in Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls.

Arrangements are under the care of Farnsworth Mortuary of Jerome.

Rose M. Darchuk

BURLEY — Rose M. Darchuk, 86, of Park Rapids, Minn., and formerly of Burley, passed away Wednesday, Oct. 1, 2008, at Diamond Willow Assisted Living in Park Rapids, Minn.

Rose was born May 23, 1922, to Anton and Catherine (Elli) Axman in Aberdeen, S.D. She grew up in Aberdeen and attended St. Mary's Catholic School. On Aug. 22, 1942, she was united in marriage to Edward Darchuk at St. Mary's Catholic Church. Rose and Ed resided in their home after their marriage until their son, George, and daughter, Madeline (Midge), were born. They moved to Minneapolis in the late 1940s and resided there until moving to northern California in 1964. Their son, Charles, arrived while they were living in Menajala, Minn. In 1956, they moved to Oakland, Calif. The family moved once again in 1960 when Ed was offered a job in Burley.

Ed passed away in 1987. Rose resided in Burley for 45 years, then in the fall of 2005, she moved to Park Rapids, Minn., to be closer to family. Rose was a member of Little Flower Catholic Church in Burley. She was a member of the Alter Society, and FVW Post 3043. She enjoyed dancing, especially to country western and polka music, traveling, crocheting, gardening and working in her puzzle book. She loved to visit with friends and family above all her grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Rose was a wonderful cook and hostess. Visitors to her home were always made to feel welcome and never left feeling hungry. Her homemade bread and the many German dishes she learned to cook as a child always left one wanting for more. Rose was a very hard worker, ingrained in her from her "Germans from Russia" heritage, a strength both Rose and Ed passed on to their children. Rose sold Avon cosmetics and was a head cook in the Cassia County School lunch program. In 1964, she went to work at cafeteria lunch cook for J.R. Simplot Co., retiring after 22 years with the company.

Rose is survived by sons, George A. (Joyce) Darchuk Sr. of Park Rapids, Minn., and Charles J. (Bobbie) Darchuk of Merino, Colo.; daughter, Madeline R. (Jack) Ruggles of Manteca, Calif.; 10 grandchildren, Mary (Robert) Roemer, George A. (Tracy) Darchuk Jr., Stephanie (Christopher) Voigt, Jason (Kolly) Owen of Clifton (Heather Hitchcock) Darchuk, Danielle Darchuk, Ernest Janzen, Jennifer (Scott) Freeman and Edward D. (Audrie) Mergel-man; 10 great-grandchildren; one sister, Helen Ross; half-brother, Sebastian J. Axman; and many nieces, nephews, and friends.

Rose was preceded in death by her husband; parents; stepmother, Christine (Klein) Schumacher; five brothers, Mike Axman, Casper Axman, Benedict Axman, Anton Axman and Paul Axman; four sisters, Madeline J. Veroria, Eva Mae Lesch, Mathilde (Thelma) Johnson and Elizabeth (Betty) Floto; a great-granddaughter in infancy, Amber Lee Freeman; and stepbrothers, Phillip Schumacher, Michael Schumacher, Joseph Schumacher, Anton Schumacher, and John Schumacher.

We would like to extend our deepest appreciation to the family and friends that spent many hours caring for Rose during her battle with Alzheimer's disease. Special thanks to the staff of Diamond Willow Assisted Living, the CareAge Home in Park Rapids, Minn., and the Comfort Keepers in Burley for taking such good care of Mom.

A funeral mass will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, Oct. 10, at the Little Flower Catholic Church in Burley, with Father Regional Nuavzer officiating. The casketbearers in Burley will be Edward Dale Darchuk, Jason Darchuk, Ernie Janzen, Scott Freeman, Robert Roemer and Christopher Voigt. Interment will be made in the Gem Memorial Gardens in Burley. In lieu of flowers, a memorial donation can be made in Rose's name to the Alzheimer's Association, 4550 W. 77th St., Suite 200, Minneapolis, MN 55425, or Alzheimer's Aid Society of Northern California, 105 S. Washington, Lodi, CA 95240. Local arrangements are under the direction of Hansen-Payne Mortuary in Burley.

1 Japanese scientist, 2 Americans awarded Nobel chemistry prize

Three U.S.-based scientists won a Nobel Prize on Wednesday for turning a glowing green protein from jellyfish into a revolutionary way to watch the tiniest details of life within cells and living creatures.

Osamu Shimomura, a Japanese citizen who works in the United States, and Americans Martin Chalfie and Roger Tsien shared the chemistry prize for discovering and developing green fluorescent protein, or GFP.

When exposed to ultraviolet light, the protein glows green. It can act as a marker on otherwise invisible proteins within cells to trace them as they go about their business. It can tag individual cells in tissue. And it can show when and where particular genes turn on and off.

Researchers worldwide now use GFP to track development of brain cells, the growth of tumors and the spread of cancer cells. It has let them study nerve cell damage from Alzheimer's disease and see how insulin-producing beta cells arise in the pancreas of a growing embryo, for example. In awarding the prize, the Royal Swedish Academy compared the impact of GFP on science to the invention of the microscope. For the past decade, the academy said, the protein has been "a guiding star" for scientists.

GEORGIA

Russia, Georgia disagree over troop pullback

KARALETI — Russian troops pulled back from their positions outside Georgia's breakaway province of South Ossetia but held their ground in contested areas, setting the stage for more tension between the two countries that waged war in August. Georgian Interior Ministry spokesman Shota Utiashev told The Associated Press the Russian withdrawal was a positive move, but he added that Georgia wouldn't consider it complete until the troops leave the town of Akhalgori, near South Ossetia, and the Kodori Gorge in another Moscow-backed breakaway province, Abkhazia.

"We think that it's a step in the right direction, but it doesn't mean yet that the withdrawal is fulfilled," Utiashev said.

Russia maintains that Akhalgori is part of South Ossetia and considers the Kodori Gorge part of Abkhazia — claims that Georgia rejects.

One dead in shooting at mall; suspect caught

KNOXVILLE — A customer opened fire in a crowded shopping mall Wednesday afternoon, killing a clothing store employee before he was shot and wounded by police officers, authorities said. Witnesses said the gunfire sent people "stamping" for cover.

The employee was shot multiple times around 4:20 p.m. EDT after a confrontation with the customer and died at Knoxville Center Mall, police spokesman Darrell DeBusk said. No other injuries were reported.

Five uniformed Knoxville Police Department officers confronted the suspect and exchanged gunfire with him as he exited Reno Menswear, DeBusk said. The suspect was taken to University of Tennessee Medical Center, where a nursing supervisor said she didn't have a report on his condition. Police didn't release the names of the customer or the suspect.

Student charged in Palin e-mail hacking

A federal grand jury in Tennessee has indicted University of Tennessee student David Kernell, whose apartment was recently raided by the FBI, in connection with the hacking of Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin's private Yahoo e-mail account.

Kernell, an economics major and the son of a Democratic state lawmaker, reportedly turned himself in to the FBI Wednesday morning. He pleaded not guilty and is to be tried in December.

The indictment charges that Kernell figured out how to gain access to Palin's e-mail account, changed the password to "popcorn" and then posted the new password on the Web for others to see. At least one other person successfully used it, the indictment says.

The indictment alleges that Kernell "removed, altered, concealed and covered up" files on his laptop computer after he grew worried about an investigation into the hacking.

If convicted, Kernell faces a maximum of five years in prison, a $250,000 fine and a three-year term of supervised release.

WASHINGTON

Candidates compete for voter trust on economy

WASHINGTON — With the deepening U.S. economic crisis rippling around the globe, Democrat Barack Obama and Republican John McCain seem to agree the question facing anxious voters is: Who do you trust?

"All we heard from Sen. McCain was more of the same Bush economics that led us into this mess," Obama said in Indianapolis the day after their second debate. "He thinks we won't notice" downsides of his health care proposals, but "we're not going to be hoodwinked. We're not going to be bamboozled. We're not going to let him get away with it."

In Bethlehem, Pa., McCain shot back: "I don't need lessons about telling the truth to American people." And, McCain said, if he ever did, he "probably wouldn't seek advice from a Chicago politician." On taxes, health care and subprime mortgages, McCain said Obama "won't tell you" his real record.

Each also rolled out new TV commercials suggesting his rival was not telling the truth, and campaign aides for both launched other character attacks.

COLORADO

Pelosi raises idea of $150 billion stimulus

DENVER — House Speaker Nancy Pelosi said Wednesday a $150 billion economic stimulus plan is needed now because of the faltering economy and she may call the House into session after the election to pass it.

Pelosi told reporters that the stock market meltdown, which has caused an estimated $2 trillion loss from pension funds, was a factor in her recommendation for a second stimulus bill. The first relief plan sent out $600-$1,200 tax rebate checks to most individuals and couples this year.

The House did pass a $61 billion economic aid proposal last month before lawmakers left Capitol Hill ahead of the Nov. 4 election. But a similar plan failed to pass the Senate. President Bush had promised a veto anyway.

If Democratic nominee Barack Obama wins the White House and if Capitol Hill Democrats make gains in the elections as well, it might be easier to pass a stimulus measure.

MISSOURI

State officials suspect fake voter registration

KANSAS CITY — Officials in Missouri, a hard-fought jewel in the presidential race, are sifting through possibly hundreds of questionable or duplicate voter-registration forms submitted by an advocacy group that has been accused of election fraud in other states.

Charlene Davis, co-director of the election board in Jackson County, where Kansas City is, said the fraudulent registration forms came from the Association of Community Organizations for Reform Now, or ACORN. She said they were bogging down work Wednesday, the final day Missourians could register to vote.

"I don't even know the entire scope of it because registrations are coming in so heavy," Davis said. "We have identified about 100 duplicates, and probably 280 addresses that don't exist, people who have driver's license numbers that won't verify or Social Security numbers that won't verify. Some have no address at all."

The nonpartisan group works to recruit low-income voters, who tend to lean Democratic. Polls show Republican presidential candidate John McCain with an edge in bellwether Missouri, but Democrat Barack Obama continues to put up a strong fight.

CSI men's rodeo No. 1 in region, No. 5 nationally

By Diane Philbin
Times-News writer

Starting out the fall rodeo season with a win was big. A second team title in as many weeks was even bigger as the College of Southern Idaho men's team has moved into the top spot in the Rocky Mountain Region and a No. 5 ranking in the national standings.

The CSI cowboys earned their second straight team victory last weekend, taking first at Idaho State University. The women's team took a big step at ISU, improving from seventh at Utah State (Sept. 26-27) to third.

This week, the Golden Eagles hope for a good showing at home with the Rocky Mountain Region Rodeo tonight (7 p.m.) and the CSI Fall Classic at 8 p.m., Friday and Saturday at the Eldon Evans Expo Center.

Steve Birnie begins his second year as CSI's head coach and is well on his way to continuing the school's solid rodeo tradition.

"The longer you do it the better you get," said Birnie.

Under Birnie, this year's rodeo team has grown to 33 members, including 15 local cowboys and cowgirls that competed for area high schools in District V or VI.

"We have a few more local kids by design," said Birnie. "It has given the locals the oppor-

Freshman big part of Broncos success

By Dustin Lapray
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — Late in the second quarter of Boise State's win over Bowling Green on Sept. 13, with the Broncos up 20-0, a true freshman safety took the field against the Falcons.

George Iloka said it was his first significant action of the season, having played during mop-up duty in the Idaho State game. And he knew he had to make something happen.

"I think going into that game, (the BSU coaches) didn't see me playing at all and I didn't have a good week in practice, didn't understand the plays or whatnot. My mindset was that I may be in for one play, maybe in for two plays. I needed to make an impact."

On his first play he broke up a Tyler Sheehan pass, nearly intercepting it on first-and-10. Two plays later, on third-and-4, Iloka again broke up the pass, perfectly timing the delivery and making the hit of the game. He hasn't left the starting rotation since, sharing time with Ieron Johnson.

"They played me the rest of that game, started me at (Louisiana) Tech, so I just need to prove that I can play with these guys and keep playing good," Iloka said. Iloka came to Boise State

BSU on TV

Boise State's game at Southern Miss Saturday (6 p.m. EDT) will be televised by CBS College Sports Network (Channel 152 Dish Network and Ch. 613 DirecTV). Cable One has worked out an arrangement with CBS Sports to air the game live on Ch. 22 for area subscribers.

MEN AT WORK

Burley head coach Eugene Kramer smiles during a recent Bobcat practice. In Kramer's second year, he continues to try and rebuild a Burley program that just got its first Great Basin Conference West victory in three years.

Burley football, much like its stadium, a work in progress

Under the bright new lights of Skaggs Event Center encircled with yellow "Caution" tape, the Burley Bobcat football team played its final home game of 2008 last Friday. The underlying theme: Construction in Progress.

Skaggs is still mired in the final stages of a project nearing $2 million that's still lacking a track, restrooms, concessions, fencing and other details. That's not unlike the Bobcats, who are also hard at work building up a reputable football program.

Burley should hang a sign: "Please excuse our dust." Fans enter Skaggs on unfinished walkways and are greeted by a large pile of dirt and a backhoe. Until two weeks ago, Skaggs didn't have lights.

Until two weeks ago, Burley didn't have a running game, either.

RYAN HOWE

But that started to change when the Bobcat offensive line made room for quarterback A.J. Hunter (20 carries, 165 yards and two touchdowns vs. Wood River) and running backs Jared Byington and Michael Meline (100 yards combined).

"It was a great experience," Byington said of Burley's 20-6 triumph, its first victory of 2008. "It's what we've been working for. That's what we've wanted because we extend our season and can go to the playoffs."

It's a fair achievement for a program that was labeled as a joke until Eugene

Kramer took it over two years ago.

"Things people would say about these kids really hurt me," Kramer said, "and I think that drove me, it drove my coaching staff, and it drove these younger kids to do whatever they could to develop a better program. And I think our program is becoming a more developed program. We have a ways to go. I understand that and the players understand that."

Byington, a senior, has noticed a difference: "The excitement, dedication and attitude of the kids have improved a lot. It used to be no one liked coming to practice and now we enjoy it and enjoy being together having fun and working hard. It's like a family."

The close-knit Bobcats are a reflection of Kramer's enthusiastic and caring personality.

"It's more of a father to us than a coach," said senior Kordell Koepnick. "For

CSI tumbles to No. 6 after SLCC shocker

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

Now the damage can be assessed.

After a shockingly subpar performance in a loss at Salt Lake Community College on Friday and a slightly more inspired victory at Snow College on Saturday, the College of Southern Idaho volleyball team dropped four spots to No. 6 in the latest NJCAA Division I volleyball poll, released Wednesday.

It marks the lowest point at which CSI (24-4) has appeared in the poll all season, and it means that the Golden Eagles have it all to do again if they want to capture one of the top four seeds at the national tournament as those seeds are doled out based on the final poll.

CSI head coach Heidi Cartisser said that the team is still continuing to grow, but lack of execution and a sense of (too much) comfort are still problem spots near the midpoint of the scenic West Athletic Conference season.

"It's not an issue with the effort the girls are putting out. It's a matter of executing things, and keeping that intensity every ball, and every point," said Cartisser. "The girls are comfortable with certain things in the offense, and we're trying to agitate that a little bit so that we can keep growing as a team."

Salt Lake moved one spot ahead of CSI to No. 5, one place up from last week. CSI's drop was the only substantive change in the poll's top 10.

CSI's next opponent, North Idaho College, dropped a place to No. 12. The Golden Eagles and Cardinals will face off in Coeur d'Alene on Saturday.

Jerome girls advance to GBW soccer title game

Times-News

The Jerome girls soccer team advanced to the championship game of the Great Basin Conference West tournament with a 5-2 victory over Minico Wednesday.

The second-seeded Tigers will face the winner of today's match between No. 1 seed Wood River and fourth-seeded Burley.

"They played better, but we still need work for the Saturday game," Jerome coach Carlos Hernandez said of his team. "Whoever we play is going to be hard, but we're looking forward to it."

Aubree Callen led the Tigers with three goals, while Hadley Blagott and Allison Bruckner each chipped in another. For Minico, Chayo Tellez scored a goal, while the second came courtesy of a Jerome own-goal.

The Spartans will play the loser of the Bobcats-Wolverines game at 11 a.m. Saturday in an elimination contest.

Jerome will face today's winner in the 11 a.m. championship game Saturday.

Cutthroats coast past Declo in girls soccer

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

Teagen Palmer scored three goals to lead the Community School to a 4-0 win over Declo in the final regular season game for both teams Wednesday.

"The first half we weren't playing as fast and weren't moving the ball real slow," Palmer said. "The second half we got a lot better and we were moving faster and making good plays. We've been playing really well and getting better as a team every single day."

Cutthroats coach Kelly Feldman said her team lacked intensity on Wednesday, but hopes the girls can regain their flair heading into the High Desert Soccer Conference tournament, which gets under way Saturday as the No. 2-seeded Community School will host No. 7 Gooding.

"It's nice to get the win, but it's disappointing to not necessarily play the way we want," Feldman said. "Districts start on Saturday and that's when it really matters, so hopefully we'll turn it on. The girls have really picked up their play the past few games and I felt we had a real breakthrough in October."

"I feel like we're really peaking at the right time, with the exception of today. If we can maintain how we've been playing, we'll be good," Feldman said her team's "speed of play was dreadfully slow," but the Cutthroats put together some nice combination play.

The Cutthroats set the tone early as Palmer's shot ricocheted off the post and bounced off Declo goalkeeper Abigail Christensen and into the net.

Palmer added her second goal in the 38th minute to give the Community School a 2-0 lead at the break. She completed her hat trick in the 48th minute and Halley Rhelmschild netted a goal in the 77th.

"They're tough," Christensen said of the Community School. "Their kicks are strong and they're talented. It was a good challenge for us because it makes us bring up our level. We did good today. We were a lot more aggressive than we've been usually."

Declo will enter the HDSC tournament as the No. 6 seed and will play at No. 3 Filer on Saturday, at 3 p.m.

College National Finals Rodeo in Jackie Smith, Alex Wright and Zack Elliott.

Smith finished third nationally in breakaway, while Wright was third and Elliott eighth in bull riding.

"This year's freshman class includes two state champions from the Magic Valley area, Cheyanne Robinson and Gionding in breakaway and saddle bronc rider Bailey Tubbs of Filer. Both participated at the 2008 National High School Finals Rodeo along with Jarrett VanBizeen of Filer in tie-down roping and Paige Yore of Twin Falls in goats."

"With college rodeo, you get more coaching and team support wanting to help," said Robinson. "And the competition is better. This weekend, we should get a lot of support from the home crowd."

Yore said her new teammates have become like an extended family.

"At practice, it's like a big family," said Yore. "The college stuff is pretty cool. I'm so glad to be home this weekend instead of on the road. Traveling can be hard on the horses, too."

In a sport that is considered to be the individual in nature, Birnie and assistant coach Brian Tubbs have tried to build a team environment.

"Brian and I preach to the kids to help and coach each other even though when they go out there, they go to beat each other. We have an unusual situation here that is nice to see. We want them to be more of a team so we encourage them to do things together and hang out together."

"We travel as a team, stay in the motel together and even have a curfew," said Birnie. "With two early wins, it's evident this year's men's team is strong."

"It may not be the same person winning every week, but they will push each other," said Birnie. "If one kid rides it becomes contagious and they feed off each other."

Corey Rogers of Rupert attended the Walla Walla Community College last year, finishing fourth in the men's all-around standings after taking second in steer wrestling, third in tie-down roping and eighth in saddle bronc. This year, he's a Golden Eagle.

"I wanted to be closer to home and it saves me money traveling back and forth," said Rogers, currently fourth in steer wrestling and sixth in tie-down in the region. "This is a great program with great coaches, facilities and team."

"The women have had to compete on horses they aren't accustomed to, but Birnie said there are no excuses."

"The women have had to make some mistakes like knocking over a barrel or breaking out early in breakaway," said Birnie. "Horses play a big part in the timed events, but a good hand can usually compete on any-some of us, he's like one of our best friends. He's always there for us. It's nice to have him as a coach. I can tell him anything and he's always right there to listen."

Burley's progress is evident on and off the field. The kids are buying in and, slowly but surely, the results are showing up on game day. In 2007, Kramer's first year, the Bobcats were shut out four times, and lost by an average score of 34.5.

Through six games in 2008, the Bobcats have avoided shutouts and have narrowed the scoring gap to 31-9. Small, yet significant progress.

"We're getting better and we're getting to a point where we're becoming more competitive," Kramer said. "The wins will eventually come."

"But what the scoreboard shows on Friday nights isn't Kramer's top priority. It's not building a football program. He's building young men. The team holds study sessions every Wednesday morning and if kids aren't performing in the class that they are pulled from practice and set up with a tutor. Consequently, Burley's team GPA is over 3.0. The Bobcats also participate in community service such as Relay for Life, serving in soup kitchens and mentoring at local elementary schools.

"Kids are great, but what's going to be the lifelong lesson for these kids? Good citizens and good students are what we want first. And if we do that, the third thing will happen — wins will happen," Kramer said.

Burley's renovation project — the stadium and the football program — will take longer than some would like. Burley will always be compared side-by-side with its Mini-Cassia rival Minico. Bobcat fans should remember, then, that it took Tim Ferrigotti's staff six years before Minico posted a winning record and 10 years before the Spartans won a playoff game.

"The football and the Skaggs Event Center have a lot in common. Though not yet complete, they're finally starting to look good."

The BSU defense isn't exactly a piece of cake to learn, and Iloka admittedly has struggled to learn it all in the last nine months.

"The only problem for me was mainly all the plays," Iloka said. "I showed them I could play in (the Bowling Green game). Now, all I have to do is go out and show them I can also deal with the mental part of the game; that's what when I am supposed to be my assignment and other people's assignment. When I get that better, I think I can be even better."

A member of the Bruin family will be honored at this weekend with the inaugural Gene Federico Memorial Golf Scramble.

The event, held at Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course, has benefited Twin Falls High School athletics for years and is now named for Federico, a long-time Twin Falls booster.

"We're just trying to make it the biggest and best we can for Bruin athletics," said Bruins varsity "off coach" Mike Hamblin, also of the municipality's golf pro. The event is sponsored by Frisco Construction, owned by Gene's son Cory.

Federico, who died in July 2007, lived most of his life in Twin Falls. He graduated from the high school in the late 1950s, joined the Navy and later returned to his home town. He became a booster in the early '80s and attended every event he could, according to son, Mike Federico, who is the Twin Falls High School athletic director.

"It was a Bruin his whole life," Federico said.

His granddaughters, Sara and Allison, are active in Bruins athletics today and play for the varsity golf team, which won the Class 3A team title in 2007 and 2008.

He hasn't caught one yet. He is focused more now on securing his tackling skills.

"I like to be people without using my arms," Iloka said, "I'm usually doing it up."

Iloka admits that he has to improve and his coaches have him going about the shot. You gotta use perfect technique and bring your feet down every time. I'm focusing on that."

It's that attitude in Iloka that is evident in most of these Broncos. It's a longing to be better, but also an honest look at the flaws. Iloka admits that he has to improve and his coaches have him going about the progression logically. This is wrong, let's fix that. That's their attitude. That's how they get better, and it's why they can prepare a true freshman to start in Hattiesburg, Miss.

Big ones in Big 12 and SEC

By Ralph D. Russo
Associated Press writer

Even before the season, Oct. 11 was circled on the calendars of many college football fans. Now that six weeks of football have been played, Saturday's schedule looks even better.

Three games matching six ranked teams, including four of the top five, will surely rock the national championship race, starting in Dallas at the Texas State Fair.

Oklahoma and Texas renew the Red River rivalry, and once again the stakes are enormous. Both Big 12 South rivals are ranked in the top five. The loser not only will have its national title hopes take a hit, but just getting to the conference champion game becomes a tricky task.

But if the Tigers of Oklahoma is 6-3 against Texas and coach Mack Brown, but the Longhorns have won two of the last three.

The game could also produce Heisman Trophy front-runner, Oklahoma quarterback Sam Bradford is second in the nation in passer rating, while Texas quarterback Colt McCoy has completed 79 percent of his throws and leads the team in rushing.

In the Southeastern Conference, the last two national champions meet in Florida's Swamp. The Gators, who won it all in 2006, have already won a home game. That should make for one desperate group awaiting the arrival of defending champion LSU.

The Tigers beat the Gators and Heisman winner Tim Lincecum last season, converting five fourth-down opportunities and rallying to win 28-24.

While it was obvious OU, Texas and LSU-Florida were going to be the big games, Oklahoma State-Missouri is an unlikely headline.

The Cowboys have practically matched the high-scoring Tigers point for point. Oklahoma State is 5-3 in the country in scoring at 52.6 per game. (Clark, Daniel, another Houston center, and Missouri is second at 54.1.)

The picks:

Today
Clemson (plus 2½) at No. 21 Wake Forest
Week 7 is here and the ACC is still impossible to figure out ... CLEMSON 24-21.

Saturday
No. 3 Oklahoma (minus 6½) vs. No. 2 Texas at Dallas
The better team usually wins the Red River rivalry, and that would be ... OKLAHOMA 33-21.

No. 17 Oklahoma State (plus 13½) at No. 3 Missouri
In a matchup of great offenses, the Tigers' home defense ... MISSOURI 55-38.

No. 4 LSU (plus 6) at No. 11 Florida
Tigers' tough D line vs. Gators' shaky D line ... LSU 27-24.

No. 6 Penn State (minus 5) at Wisconsin
Can Badgers get ready for big game after two straight losses? ... PENN STATE 28-20.

Oklahoma quarterback Sam Bradford (14) will lead the No. 1 Sooners against No. 5 Texas on Saturday.

Nebraska (plus 21) at No. 7 Texas Tech
Last time here, Huskers handed worst loss ever, 70-10 ... TEXAS TECH 69-10.

Arizona State (plus 26½) at No. 8 Southern California
Even good Sun Devils' team usually roll over against Trojans ... USC 45-13.

New Mexico (plus 23½) at No. 9 BYU
BYU's Max Hall builds his Heisman resume ... BYU 50-17.

Tennessee (plus 12½) at No. 10 Georgia
Just what Vols didn't need — to face a ticked off bunch of Bulldogs ... GEORGIA 28-14.

Purdue (plus 19) at No. 12 Ohio State
The Betts and Terrell show has rejuvenated Buckeyes ... OHIO STATE 39-13.

No. 13 Vanderbilt (minus 2½) at Mississippi State
Can Commodores avoid let-down? ... VANDERBILT 17-10.

No. 14 Utah (plus 23½) at Wyoming
Cowboys have worst offense in Mountain West ... UTAH 35-10.

No. 15 Boise State (minus 11½) at South Carolina
Broncos pounded Golden Eagles, 38-16, in Boise last season ... SOUTHERN MISS 38-30.

Colorado (plus 14) at No. 16 Kansas
Home team has won eight of 11 in the series ... KANSAS 35-17.

Arkansas (plus 15) at No. 20 Auburn
If Tigers can find some offense this week, it could be long season ... AUBURN 28-14.

Notre Dame (plus 7½) at No. 22 North Carolina
The echoes are stirring ... NOTRE DAME 28-23.

No. 23 Michigan State (plus 2½) at Northwestern
Perfect Wildcats still looking for recognition ... MICHIGAN STATE 21-20.

No. 25 Ball State (minus 16) at Western Kentucky
High scoring Cardinals enjoy first game as ranked team ... BALL STATE 44-24.

LAST WEEK: 144 (straight); 11-7 (vs. points).
SEASON: 90-23 (straight); 51-47 (vs. points).

Patriots and Chargers go at it again

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press writer

A year ago, the San Diego Chargers were 2-3, just as they are now. They went on to the AFC championship game against New England, which just happens to be the team they play Sunday night at home.

"It gives you a confidence that you can do it, but you know that it's obviously different," LaDainian Tomlinson says of the challenges of overcoming a slow start.

"At this time last year it wasn't New England, Buffalo and the Saints on the schedule the next three weeks. It's a different year and for us we've just got to find a way to put it all together."

The Chargers are favored by six points, in large part because the Patriots quarterback is Matt Cassel instead of Tom Brady, who wrecked his knee in the season opener. Cassel is breaking out of coach Bill Belichick's "be careful" box, though, throwing a 66-yard TD pass to Handy Moss in San Francisco last week.

The Patriots are staying in the Bay Area for the week rather than spending nearly 12 hours in the air flying home and back over the weekend. Arizona did the same on the East Coast a couple of weeks ago after losing in Washington, then ended up getting blown out by the Jets in the second game.

Don't expect that in a game that's becoming an annual fixture — its fifth time the Chargers and Patriots have met in the last four seasons. The Patriots have won the last three, including their 21-12 win in Foxborough in last season's title game and 24-21 the year before in San Diego, a playoff game the Chargers gave away.

San Diego is perfectly capable of giving away games; it did so in its first two, against Carolina and at Denver, where referee Ed Hochuli helped a bit. So if it's right with his words of caution.

Especially against the Patriots. CHARGERS 24-21.

San Diego Chargers quarterback Philip Rivers will face the New England Patriots on Sunday.

Carolina (plus 1½) at Tampa Bay
Carolina may be on a par with the three top NFC East teams. PANTHERS, 20-17.

New York Giants (minus 8) at Cleveland (Monday night)
The Browns want "revenge" because New York's starters led 30-3 after 17 minutes of an exhibition game. GIANTS, 30-3.

Jacksonville (plus 3½) at Denver
Everything's breaking right for the Broncos. Not so for the banged up Jaguars. BRONCOS, 24-17.

Baltimore (plus 4½) at Indianapolis
This year's Colts are NOT the Colts of the past five seasons. RAVENS, 17-16.

Dallas (minus 5) at Arizona
If the Cowboys don't get to Womex, this could be an upset ... COWBOYS, 32-31.

Philadelphia (minus 4½) at San Francisco
A must-win for the Eagles? We said that last week and they lost. 49ERS, 20-19.

Chicago (minus 3) at Atlanta
Two teams that shut down Michael Turner, Tampa Bay and Carolina, have each beaten the Falcons 24-9. BEARS, 24-9.

Miami (plus 3) at Houston
The Dolphins have only two turnovers this season. The Texans had three in the final four minutes last week. DOLPHINS, 22-11.

Green Bay (plus 2) at Seattle
At least the Seahawks are back on Pacific time. SEAHAWKS, 27-24.

St. Louis (plus 13½) at Washington
The Rams may play harder for Jim Haslett than for Scott Linehan. Doesn't really matter, does it? REDSKINS, 31-3.

Oakland (plus 7½) at New Orleans
The Raiders seemed to have liked Kiffin, which makes JaMarcus' homecoming a tough debut for Tom Cable. SAINTS, 27-17.

Cincinnati (plus 6) at New York Jets
The last time the Bengals were at the Meadowlands, they took the Giants to OT. BENGALS, 26-23 (OT).

Detroit (plus 13½) at Minnesota
Millen's gone and Marinelli says he won't quit. Figure that the next Lions' coach won't have a last name starting with "M." WIKINGS, 24-6.

LAST WEEK: 94-1 (spread); 8-6 (straight up).
SEASON: 44-29-1 (spread); 47-27 (straight up)

BOSTON — New England Patriots quarterback Tom Brady had surgery on his left knee a month after sustaining an ending injury, according to a published report.

The Boston Globe reported Wednesday that the surgery was performed Monday in Los Angeles. Asked if he had talked to Brady since the surgery, Brady's replacement, Matt Cassel, said Wednesday that he put in a phone call.

"I haven't gotten a return phone call yet," Cassel said. "I'm sure he's just resting."

EX-BRONCO HENRY COULD BE FREE ON BAIL THURSDAY
DENVER — Former Denver Broncos running back Travis Henry could be released from jail Thursday after posting a $400,000 bond on federal drug charges.

Henry and another suspect were arrested Sept. 30 in Denver after federal drug agents said they met to buy cocaine from a man who was cooperating with authorities.

Henry and James Mack both face charges of possession of cocaine with intent to distribute, distribution of cocaine and conspiracy to possess cocaine with intent to distribute.

Henry is expected to be released after a phone line is installed in his house for electronic monitoring, which could be Thursday, Dorschner said.

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Jacksonville Jaguars receiver Matt Jones' cocaine charge will be heard in drug court rather than in the regular criminal system, allowing Jones was to have gone on trial Friday for his July 10 arrest when a Fayetteville police officer saw him inside a car allegedly cutting up cocaine with a credit card.

Prosecutor John Threet said his office reached an agreement with Jones on Tuesday to send the case to drug court. Threet and Jones' attorney, Woody Bassett, said Circuit Judge William Storey approved the transfer Tuesday.

Jones still could be suspended by the NFL under the league's substance-abuse policy. First-time offenders are subject to suspensions ranging from one to four games.

ST. LOUIS — Rams wide receiver Dane Loker will have additional tests designed to rule out an aneurysm after a CAT scan that cleared him from a concussion revealed a brain abnormality.

Team medical personnel believed the abnormality is unrelated to the concussion Loker sustained against the Buffalo Bills on Sept. 28.

"It could be something that concerns me, or it could be nothing as well," Loker said. "We're in limbo right now."

Auburn fires Franklin amid offensive struggles

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Auburn coach Tommy Tuberville fired offensive coordinator Tony Franklin on Wednesday just seven games into his tenure, plugging the plug after the Tigers' rocky start to adapt to his spread offense.

The 20th-ranked Tigers have struggled offensively all season after entering as the favorites to win the Southeastern Conference Western Division. They have dropped Southeastern Conference games to LSU and Vanderbilt after beating Mississippi State by a score of 3-2.

"After evaluating where we are at this point of the season offensively, I felt it was in the best interest of the Auburn football program to make this change," Tuberville said. "I'm not satisfied with where we are and I am personally going to take a larger role with the offense the remainder of the season."

"We are going to work harder than ever to make sure we consistently improve as we move forward."

It was not immediately clear who would call plays Saturday against Arkansas.

Tourette syndrome may be cause of man's nervous habits

DEAR ABBY: I am writing regarding the letter from "Sniffled Out in Indiana" (July 10), who complained about the noises her co-worker made throughout the day. This, her co-worker may suffer from an allergy or chronic post-nasal drip, but it is also possible that he has Tourette syndrome. This is a neurological disorder, the symptoms of which can include excessive throat-clearing, sniffing and other vocalizations, as well as eye-blinking, facial grimacing and shoulder-shrugging (physical tics).

Most people know only the stereotypical Tourette blurt they see presented on TV shows and in the movies of someone shouting, cursing and thrashing about. The average person usually does not realize that most people with TS suffer from mild symptoms that are often misinterpreted as "annoying habits." This lack of understanding and education about Tourette syndrome on the part of the general public is one of the greatest obstacles for people who have this condition. —JILL IN TUSVILLE, N.J.

DEAR JILL: Thank you for educating me—and, by extension, my readers. You and the other individuals who took the time to write have taught me some things I did not know. Among them, that the Tourette Syndrome Association is a reliable resource for learning about this often misunderstood subject. Its Web site is www.tourette-usa.org. Read on:

DEAR ABBY
Jeane Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My son has Tourette. Any uncontrollable, repetitive sound or movement can be a sign of it. If people ask my son why he does what he is doing or have comments about it, he will explain what it is and that he can't control it.

If a person with Tourette is asked about the "stop it" or "stop it" for a while before he or she is concentrating, but once the person's attention is diverted elsewhere—such as by work or TV—it can start again.

I hope "Sniffled Out" will help her co-worker. It's possible he does have Tourette and some medicine, but if it's Tourette, he will need her help. It's difficult to be a part of a group when you know you're

annoying them. —OPEN-MINDED IN LAS VEGAS

DEAR ABBY: The fact that her co-worker could suppress his symptoms for a time could mean the person has a form of Tourette syndrome. Tourette syndrome consists of both vocal and motor tics lasting more than six months.

Treatments are available, including medication and cognitive behavioral therapy (among others) that have been shown to be very helpful for some patients. However, other people's acceptance and understanding is perhaps the most important factor in their improvement. —JOEL B. SUSSMAN, M.D., GOLDMOUNT, S.C.

DEAR ABBY: You and your readers should know that Tourette syndrome is a protected disability under the Americans With Disabilities Act, and requesting that the "stop it" would be discriminatory. Many co-workers may not know about it because he isn't required to disclose his disability to them, nor can his supervisor, if he wishes it to remain confidential. No one should assume that it's a bad habit. In fact, in stating that a Tourette sufferer truly wishes it was, because bad habits can be broken — it cannot. —T.S. MOM IN TEXAS

HOROSCOPE by JERALDINE SAUNDERS

IF OCTOBER 9 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: For about two more weeks you must be exclaiming punctil and precise in order to please the boss or honor your obligations. The good news is that the entire month of November is extra special and if you are looking for a new love interest one might appear. People will look at you through rose-colored glasses and see only your talents, while overlooking your faults. If you hope to interview for a new job, change careers or make a very important lifelong promise, then that is the month for you to make your move.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Networking comes naturally. Forge alliances that will improve your work or enhance your business. Team up with new people for short-term projects and use them as steppingstones to success.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Energetically asserting yourself, you can be above the usual embarrassments and start anew. This could be a good time to restore the trust of a good friend by proving that you have honored confidentiality.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Intrication and dreams may be the signposts to guide you, but may have some wonderful and accurate intuitions. With your natural animal magnetism you are able to charm people into going along with you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): All bubbles eventually burst. You may be much too busy dealing with your own agenda to take advantage of financial opportunities. That is OK because the profits aren't likely to be as high as expected.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Sweep out all the complicated choices. Guilt or worry about a social faux pas or minor mix-up should be banished. Be sincere and charming and a special someone will respond positively to your kindness.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): People could be spellbound by your words. You have a knack for getting to the heart of any matter. It is a great time to avoid stepping on someone's toes and feeling, when divulging powerful insights.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An appreciation of beauty or the arts may catapult you into trying new and untried hobbies or activities. Caution while attempting to attract friends who will help you in times to come or just brighten the day.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The best laid plans of mice and men often go awry. Shrewdly plotting your course so that you end up with all the marbles may be on your mind. Spend quality time in the pursuit of love, not money.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): In an effort to please others, you may put yourself at a disadvantage. Don't let anyone make you feel guilty or have you ever, anything you have promised. The latest technology can be helpful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You could be overly occupied with business or making money when the most valuable opportunities are right in front of you. Make a break from routines and do something initially impulsive.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): It is time to rise and shine. You chafe whenever you feel you are held down in an ignominious position or that you are not being recognized for your wings and fly when opportunities present themselves.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Easy come and easy go. If you hook up with someone new today, the relationship will draw you into the deal, but the company may eventually founder due to lack of concrete things in common.

TODAY IN HISTORY

of the White Sox had thrown the Series in what became known as the "Black Sox" scandal.)

In 1930, Laura Ingalls became the first woman to fly across the United States as she completed a nine-stop journey from Roosevelt Field, N.Y., to Glendale, Calif.

In 1946, the Eugene O'Neill drama "The Iceman Cometh" opened at the Martin Beck Theater in New York.

Five years ago: A suicide car bombing at a Baghdad police station killed eight people: Spanish military attaché Jose Antonio Bernal Gomez was shot to death in Baghdad.

Six years ago: Republican presidential hopeful Mitt Romney and Rudy Giuliani clashed over tax and spending cuts, both claiming greater commitment than the other in a debate in Dearborn, Mich. Two Armenian Christian women were shot to death in Baghdad by security contractors working for Australian-owned Ury Resources Group. France's Albert Fert and German Peter Grünberg won the 2007 Nobel Prize in physics for a discovery that lets computers, iPods and other digital devices store reams of data on ever-shrinking hard disks.
