River of Stone

CALMER WATERS

By Cassidy Friedman
 Times-News writer

At night, the river's still a river. The trees, the canyon walls — everything — looks the same. Only darker. But "you can hear things that aren't really there," said David Floyd, drawing from a cigarette as he cast his line into the river.

Nature gave Cedar Draw, trapped between two canyon walls, bizarre acoustics. Conversations a hundred yards across the Snake River seem like whispers from shadows mere feet away. But those aren't the sounds Floyd hears. The sounds belong to the spirits of dead people, said Debi Floyd, who with her husband camps regularly in this same spot. They come here because David, now middle-aged, has done so since age 11. He has caught 8-foot sturgeon from this bank, just feet from a quiet spot where they pitch their tent. It's a place of good memories, where he and childhood friends played "Dukes of Hazard" with real cars out on the dirt road, trying to force each other into the river. Neither is bothered by the knowledge that this is also the place where many of David's oldest friends and the man's girlfriend each took their own lives, tossing a rope over a willow branch at the campsite. "He had done something really bad," said Richard Kelley, who grows peaches and apples in Cedar Draw. "She was distraught and everything — I figured on drugs. She came down here and hung herself after him."

The Floyds had been camping near the willow for three days when we met them on the evening of our fifth day on the river. Out of work, they had no place else to go. Yet despite their own troubles, they were quick to offer assistance — "take our blankets," they said when we discovered our sleeping bags were again too wet to use. We had faced constant headwinds well into the afternoon. Then, as if a fan had been unplugged, the wind died. We rediscovered our love for the river that evening, as we gently floated west with the current until we reached Cedar Draw. But this was a different river than we had seen. The eastern end of the river of stone is a harsh, dry slash in the desert where soaring cliffs prevent all but the most adventurous from going. Here, the canyon widens and the river becomes a languid blue-green swath in a lush landscape of islands where pelican and heron rose from

Sheriff criticized for campaign ads using on-duty officers, paying them with county funds

By Jared S. Hopkins
 Times-News writer

Twin Falls County Sheriff Wayne Tousley recently filmed campaign commercials using on-duty officers in uniform, a potential violation of a county ethics policy that has drawn fire from his challengers in the Nov. 4 election. According to records obtained by the Times-News under the state public records act, Tousley's campaign on Sept. 26 reimbursed the county for $53,78 — the cost of having two employees participate in taping TV commercials while they were on the county's clock. Lt. Jack Johnson was filmed on the gun range.

Abatement district shares space on T.F. ballot

By Nats Poppino
 Times-News writer

On Nov. 4, Twin Falls County voters will have their chance to weigh in on the county's pest abatement district, a year and a half after county commissioners created an emergency pest abatement district to fight mosquitoes and black flies. Voters will decide whether to create a full-fledged abatement district, with the resources to wage war on those bugs and others. And county officials say the measure is one worth supporting.

"It's important for both public health and the economy of the county," Commissioner Terry Kramer said Thursday. Kramer, who pushed for the original emergency district, is one of several who say the traps and larvicides of the abatement district helped keep down cases of West Nile virus this year and last. The district also helped ward off cases of vesicular stomatitis, a virus that can be deadly in cattle and result in a quarantine preventing animal movement in and out of the county, said Kati Van Leeuwen, county parks director.

Tousley

Criminal Records Supervisor Stephanie Lass was filmed in her office at the County Courthouse.

On Thursday, Tousley said he also reimbursed the county $72.73 for another commercial that included a county vehicle and features his secretary, Joanne Hom, and Deputy Jay Wiggin.

Tousley defended the activities, saying the commercials promote the success of the sheriff's office as a whole — not just his re-election — and that he didn't pressure anyone to participate.

"The public has a right to know what we're doing and what we've done," said Tousley, now seeking his fifth term in office. "It's perfectly appropriate, and there was a minimal intrusion to the office and I don't think it violates the policy."

But reimbursing the county from campaign funds proves the commercials, which are scheduled to air next week, are purely for political purposes, said Tom Carter, his Republican challenger.

"(Tousley) using officers on duty for political purposes — that shouldn't surprise anyone," he said. "I believe it's an absolute abuse of power and I believe anybody with half a brain will believe it's an abuse of power."

Tousley, who runs as an independent, said he took the precaution of reimbursing the county after reading the "Idaho Ethics in Government Manual," a roughly 40-page publication by the Office of the Attorney General.

Tousley said he had used county employees in campaign ads and reimbursed the county before.

He likened the use of the officers in the commercial to a private filmmaker using county vehicles or his office recording a public service

"I don't understand selective enforcement of county policy. If you have a policy, you enforce it or you change the policy."

— Tom Mikeseil, Twin Falls County Commission chairman

announcement. "There's nothing illegal about it, nothing against policy," he said. "When I am selling myself, I am also selling the sheriff's office."

But the county ethics policy, adopted in 2004, doesn't allow county employees to "actively engage in election practices" while on duty or "during the normal county workday which disrupts other employees, or while in uniform. They also can't ask to help on campaigns for elected officials."

Twin Falls County Commissioner Tom Mikeseil said the sheriff clearly violated the ethics policy.

"I don't understand selective enforcement of county policy," Mikeseil said. "If you enforce it or you change the policy."

Felix Garcia, another independent candidate, said Tousley operates under a double standard when it comes to electioneering. "If you work for his re-election, but anyone who runs against the incumbent sheriff is subject to suspension without pay or firing."

"He's saying, 'if you campaign with $42,000 but if you work for his re-election, either quit or you get fired,' Garcia said.

Marty Jacobs, the third independent in the race, said "he (Tousley) did step over the line."

But Tousley said officers filmed the commercials during normal work schedules simply because it was the best time. He decided it wasn't necessary for them to clock out, particularly on county property.

"It was just a choice that I made that they stay on the clock and I'd reimburse the county," Tousley said. "There's no harm done either way. I know they are supporting me, but I asked them if they'd like to do a commercial for me."

It's unclear if any state law was violated. Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loeb's declined comment, citing unfamiliarity with the situation and the absence of any complaint filed with his office.

The Idaho Secretary of State's office, which oversees election law, deferred comment to the Attorney General's office.

In 1997, Deputy Attorney General Bill von Tegen issued a non-binding legal opinion that concluded "Public funds should not be expended to support or oppose candidates or election issues ..."

Dan Chadwick, executive director for the Idaho Association of Counties, said using ununiformed law officers for political purposes is not prohibited by state law, but that "the rule is generally going to be that you can't do anything to embarrass the agency you work for."

Mikeseil said Tousley's actions were inappropriate, even if legal.

"Using public funds in your re-election, if it's not your the law, it's certainly perceived against the law or perceived to be bad policy," Mikeseil said.

Micron cuts could shrink Idaho unemployment trust

By John Miller Associated Press writer

BOISE — Even before semiconductor maker Micron Technology Inc. said Thursday it would cut another 1,500 workers in Idaho, the state projected its unemployment insurance trust fund will be drained by half — to $120 million — by March 2010 as the economy slows.

The fund pays benefits to those who lose their jobs. State officials, who maintain Idaho's trust fund is healthier than those in many other states, couldn't immediately gauge the impact of Micron's most recent round of layoffs. Still, adding to the ranks of the jobless will increase payoffs. "There's a lot of things that depends on — how many people file for unemployment, what severance Micron provides, how fast workers find new jobs and whether they leave Idaho to take jobs outside the state," said Bob Fick, an Idaho Department of Labor spokesman.

Just a year ago, reserves in Idaho's unemployment insurance trust fund hit $317 million, bolstered by a robust economy and a jobless rate that fell as low as a record 2.7 percent in 2007, according to federal statistics. The state also receives for the fund and kept benefit payments in check. Since then, however, the reserve has slipped to less than $240 million after September as the unemployment rate has risen more than 2 percent since last January, to 5 percent.

In September, the state fund paid out $12.9 million in benefits, up from $6.3 million in September 2007 and just $4 million in the same period in 2006.

"We're paying out a million a week more than we were last year," Fick said. Still, Idaho's unemployment insurance trust fund is significantly more robust than states such as California and Michigan.

Abatement

The abatement district would separate separately from the county, with its own employees and equipment. State code calls for a five-member board appointed by the commissioners, with the members serving staggered four-year terms. Board members would not be paid.

It would have the leeway to address even more pests. Van Leeuwen said. And it would create the framework for the county to fund future disease. If not approved, the county will not have an abatement program next year.

"With the way travel is in the world today, who knows what's next down the pipe?" he asked.

Voter approval of a district would allow the county program to grow from its current "shoestring" budget to a full program, Kramer said. About $280,000 was freed up for use during the two years of the abatement district, and the county spent about $170,000 on pest abatement since its creation in May 2006, County Clerk Kristina Glascock said. All of the money came from reserves, she said, and doesn't account for county personnel and equipment costs.

The question on the Nov. 4 ballot will read: "SHALL Twin Falls County transition the interim abatement district into a formally defined abatement district for the purpose of providing timely response to elevated or anticipated pest populations that may constitute a risk to the public health and welfare for an amount not greater than one tenth percent (1%) of the market value for assessment purposes on all taxable property in Twin Falls County?" Visit <http://www.twinfallscounty.org> for more information on pests and the emergency abatement district.

"It just makes everyone's ability to serve the public easier."
— South Central Public Health District Director Rene LeBlanc

The question on the ballot caps the district's funding at one-tenth of 1 percent of assessed, taxable property values in the county, Glascock said. But that amount, she said, is far greater than what would actually be taxed, and represents the maximum allowed by state code.

The district would initially be funded with $442,000, or about $105.2 per $100,000 of taxable property value. It would also be limited to the same 3 percent yearly budget increases as other government entities, she said.

Dan LaBelle with the South Central Public Health District also credit the abatement district with helping to keep down cases of West Nile, Director Rene LeBlanc said.

Not one county mosquito trap tested positive for West Nile this year, though two residents tested positive for the disease, according to data from the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. West Nile infected 39 state residents in 2006, and three people caught it in 2007.

"It just makes everyone's ability to serve the public easier," LeBlanc said of funding the district.

Idaho Power customers learn about proposed rate hike

By Nate Poppo
Times-News writer

Ask Idaho Power Co. officials, and they'll probably tell you it's not the easiest time to talk for more money.

The current economic climate was clearly among the issues on the minds of a few south-central Idaho citizens Thursday evening as staff from the Idaho Public Utilities Commission explained a rate request from the electric utility.

The utility is asking for an average increase of 9.88 percent, though that amount varies among residential users, irrigators and other customer classes. The request was prompted by recent investments in new substations, distribution lines and transmission lines, as well as out-of-state energy purchases.

The request includes $89 million more in revenue, as well as adding about $180 million more in generation, transmission and other improvements to the "rate base," said Joe Leckie, a PUC staff auditor. Not all of the totals are addressed in the company's Idaho request — only about 93 percent of its proposed $799 million total revenue is from Idaho customers.

Close to this rate case is a request to include some of the cost of borrowing funds related to relicensing Idaho Power's Hells Canyon Dam complex, Leckie said. Though that process will not be finished for some time, the utility is seeking $7.6 million to start paying interest on the money. Customers will have to pay for the project sooner or later, Leckie said.

Learn more
Idaho Power customers can read all the documents filed in the case thus far by going to www.puc.idaho.gov. Click on the electric icon, then on "Open Electric Cases," and scroll down to Case No. IPO-E-08-10.

"There are good arguments that can be made in both directions," he said. Addressing what he said is the most common question the PUC hears from the public, staff engineer Keith Hensing said the commission can't just deny the rate increase because it is made through a legal process. Idaho Power presents evidence to back up its request, he said.

"Unless people refute that evidence on the record ... basically the commissioners have no choice," he said. That doesn't mean, he said, that the rate increase is a given at this point. State Rep. Bert Stevenson, R-Rupert, asked whether the utility's predicted growth is still the same given the current situation, and whether the rate increase would charge for more new construction than is actually needed. Though the PUC is still studying the request, Hensing said, it doesn't seem that is the case so far.

"I don't think Idaho Power is proposing to overbuild," he said.

Other questions addressed included power meters the utility plans to install over the next few years, and why irrigators face a larger percentage increase than residential users if residential users make up more of the customer base. Hensing said the increase might cover maintenance and infrastructure costs as well as new growth.

Dan Olmstead, a regional spokesman for Idaho Power, sat in the audience but did not address questions.

Hensing encouraged questions on all topics, acknowledging the complexity of rate case reviews. Public hearings on the matter will be held at a later time, he said.

"There's a lot to learn, and a lot to know, and a lot that I'm sure I don't know," Hensing said.

Two T.F. residents arrested for trafficking marijuana

Police find 43 plants growing in garden

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

Two Twin Falls residents arraigned Thursday on charges of trafficking marijuana are connected to the largest pot seizure of the year by city police, authorities said.

An Idaho Power employee tipped police off to pot allegedly growing in the backyard of 458 Wakefield St. Police said they found 43 plants in the garden, another four plants growing in the basement of the home, and 2.5 pounds of marijuana in bags and jars in a bedroom. They arrested Echo M. Sill, 28, and Shelton Amos, 28 on the trafficking charges. Both are lodged in the Twin Falls County Jail on $7,500 bond and couldn't be reached Thursday for comment. Three children were taken from the home, which police said was rented. They were put in state custody for being in "imminent danger," according to a police report.

Police found liquid fertilizer in a tub in the basement that was being automatically pumped to plants growing inside. "I recognized that this grow was a large commercial operation by the equipment used, the level of sophistication, the timing of the grow lights, and the automatic fertilizer system," an officer wrote in a report.

Before Wednesday's arrests, city police had seized 800 grams of marijuana for the year, said Twin Falls Police Capt. Matt Hicks. The weight of the plants is still being determined, Hicks said.

"For us, that's a very big seizure," he said. "It's not clear how many people, if any, they were supplying." The felony marijuana trafficking charges stem from the number of plants that police allegedly found.

Like many Magic Valley communities, Filer may soon see its water and sewer utility rates increase.

Filer City Council members discussed the possibility of raising the current $40-monthly sewer rate an additional $7.50 and increasing water from $25 to $27.50 per month.

"I think people in Filer knew this was coming and that it's necessary," Mayor Bob Templeman said. "I don't like this anymore than anyone else but eventually, over the next few years, we may have to raise rates up to about $60 per month."

Part of a change in sewer rates will help create a fund buffer for the city to manage maintenance and operation costs for a new membrane bioreactor wastewater treatment facility scheduled for completion in late 2010 or early 2011.

The water rate hike is part of a plan to prepare for Department of Environmental Quality mandates requiring cities to construct water treatment facilities that meet acceptable arsenic levels of 10 parts per billion.

"We have until 2011 before DEQ starts pressuring us," City Maintenance Director Bob Compher said. "We can take the money from water from our wells until we get two hits (tests of 12 or 13 ppb or higher) in a row."

Special public hearings to discuss the proposed increases are in the planning stage.

In other news, council members will review vendor bids for construction of the $7.9 million membrane bioreactor sewer treatment facility on Thursday at 2 p.m. in the city office.

Rob Hegstrom, with J-U-B Engineers in Twin Falls, cautioned that concerns that the wording of the bid document could limit vendor bids. One concern is standard "time is of the essence" clause requiring the bid winner to make sure construction materials are available on-site when needed. Hegstrom said that potential bidders, fearing the contract could be pulled if delivery is even one day late, have asked for removal of the clause.

"While this could actually happen, we've been working with the companies for months over technical and legal issues to assure them it wouldn't come to that," Hegstrom said. "But we simply can't change something like this and still protect the city's best interest."

J-U-B has also dealt with vendors who suggested money-saving measures through adjustments to the bid document's project specifications.

"We do have provisions allowing the company who gets the bid to make material substitutions that are equal or better than the original bid," Hegstrom said. "But Idaho code does not allow exceptions during the bid process and we want a clean, apples to apples bid."

Twin Falls Police: baby death not criminal

Child's father arrested on warrants

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

The father of a baby who unexpectedly died earlier this month has been jailed on outstanding warrants, but police said the child's death would not end in criminal charges.

A 6-month-old baby was pronounced dead at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center on Oct. 1, after his parents brought him to the hospital in cardiopulmonary arrest. They abruptly left, then went back to the hospital about an hour later, Twin Falls police said.

Police interviewed the parents and got a search warrant to go through their home at 738 Maurice St.

A small amount of suspected marijuana was found, but no one has been charged for that, said Police Capt. Matt Hicks.

Prosecutors may decide to file charges but the death investigation took priority, Hicks said.

As it stands now, police have closed their baby death investigation. "At this point, there is no indication either parent was involved in the death of the child," said Hicks.

Results of the baby's autopsy and toxicology screen didn't point to a crime, he said.

As police investigated the baby's death they found outstanding warrants for his dad, Kenneth Maxwell, 26. Maxwell was arrested on five outstanding warrants issued this year involving probation and driving violations, Hicks said.

He's lodged in Twin Falls County Jail on more than $27,000 bond, and couldn't be reached Thursday for comment.

It was the third child death investigation by Twin Falls police involving someone younger than 2 since 2007. Only one of those three cases was deemed criminal.

Gooding examines hazardous building, annexation

By Mary Hanson
Times-News correspondent

A building previously cited as hazardous was reported to no longer be a fire hazard at Monday's Gooding City Council Meeting. Fire Chief Pat Hiltson said that work performed on the property on the north end of Idaho Street had improved the property's status.

Property owners were present as the council declared the property acceptable under city code, pending the clean-up of torn-down lumber and sawdust.

The council also heard a public reading concerning the annexation of 27,981 into the city. A map of the tract is available at City Hall. Part of the property to be annexed lies near Gooding Elementary School, and includes both residential and commercial-zoned property.

"Looking at a map of Gooding, you can see the area being annexed helps complete a logical line of city limits partially along the Wood River," said Mayor Duke Morton.

There are objections to the proposed annexation, which will go through the process of two more public readings before completion.

Gooding City of Police Jeff Perry reported to the council that the city is experiencing burglaries and vehicle thefts, and expressed his wish to inform citizens to lock their homes and cars.

"There have been no break-ins so far but people are taking advantage of the fact that owners are leaving homes and cars unlocked," Perry said.

Pacific Ethanol looking to modify air quality permit

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

Pacific Ethanol has submitted a request to the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality to modify its air quality permit for emissions at its Burley plant.

The plant, located on the southwest edge of Burley, opened in May and has been the recent source of citizens' complaints about odors emanating from the plant. PEQ Air Quality Division spokesman Dan Pitman said the plant wants to burn vented gases that currently go through a scrubber before being released into the atmosphere, as well as install a load-out flare to control emissions from trucks and rail operations rather than route them through a catalytic oxidizer.

"When they go through a flare they burn at a higher temperature than the oxidizer," Pitman said.

Pitman said he had just begun to review the application and could not comment on whether or not the changes would increase emissions. Pitman said his job at the DEQ is to review the submitted application and determine if the proposed changes will still meet guidelines.

The application includes a summary of net emission changes due to the proposed modifications. There will be a rise in particulate matter and nitrogen oxide, while volatile organic compounds and sulfur dioxide emissions will remain the same. There will also be a net decrease in hazardous air pollutants, according to the summary.

Pacific Ethanol Plant Manager Ken Wilson did not return Thursday phone calls from the Times-News.

A public comment period on the modified permit will be granted if a written request is submitted to the DEQ by 5 p.m. Oct. 23.

N. Idaho conductor sues railroad company

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — The conductor of a train that killed a north Idaho man last year is suing several parties, including the Union Pacific Railroad and Idaho Transportation Department, alleging negligence.

Gabriel Giraud filed the lawsuit Tuesday in 1st District Court in Kootenai County and contends the railroad crossing where 61-year-old Gary Gibson was struck and killed by a train did not meet industry or government safety standards.

Giraud also is suing the Post Falls Highway District and DeAtolla Construction, the company Gibson was working for at the time of his death in September 2007.

Boise attorney James Piotrowski is representing Giraud and says the 24-year-old was training to be a conductor at the time of the accident and was operating the train under the supervision of an engineer.

Piotrowski said Giraud has not returned to work since the accident and suffers from post-traumatic stress disorder.

Castleford arsenic treatment almost ready to go online

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

Castleford is poised to become the first Magic Valley community to treat its water for arsenic.

During Wednesday's City Council meeting Mayor Rita Ruffing reported that the newly constructed arsenic treatment facility has been completed and will likely be connected to the city's water system next week. The nearly $2 million project also included a new water tank for the city and several water lines through town.

Ruffing said that water samples taken after going through treatment indicated the process to remove arsenic was working. The water contained 13 parts per billion to 21 ppb prior to treatment and less than 5 ppb after treatment.

"The level of arsenic was non-detectable," she said. "Once the treatment facility and new water tank are completely connected to the rest of the city's water system, the city will be in compliance with the Environmental Protection Agency mandate stating water systems must have arsenic levels of no more than 10 ppb.

In order to keep operation costs as low as possible the city is contracting with Buhl to share the services of a certified water operator, which is also needed under the federal mandate.

Buhl is wrapping up installation of moving forward with its $8 million arsenic treatment facility to be built next year.

Jeff Huntington, the water operator for both cities, was present at the council meeting and said so far he's impressed with Castleford's treatment facility.

"It's a pretty simple system and seems to run pretty good," Huntington said. Castleford's contractual cost for Huntington's service is about $20,500 a year.

"Being able to share that expense is a big benefit to the city," Ruffing said. "The cost would have been at least double if we would have had to hire our own operator."

At this time, it remains unknown what the costs for operating and maintaining the arsenic treatment

"It's a pretty simple system and seems to run pretty good."

— Jeff Huntington, the water operator for Castleford and Buhl facility will be.

"We were guaranteed that the chemicals, et cetera, will be no more 22 cents per 1,000 gallons but that doesn't include the costs for the operator, repairs or anything like that," Ruffing said.

Some issues with flooding within the city's irrigation system due to a back-flush process within the system will need to be addressed.

Resident Cheryl Sample addressed the council about "her yard falling victim to some of the system's kinks."

"I'm tired of being flooded," Sample said.

Sample suggested a few changes that could be made to the city's irrigation ditch system that could help with water overflow.

Other issues the city must address include the need for a better computer system. The coming in slightly under budget and grant funding obtained by the city may cover the costs of purchasing a new computer.

Even with a few last-minute issues to address, Ruffing said she is relieved with the city's progress.

"I feel really good, glad to get this point," Ruffing told the Times-News. "Hopefully, everything will move along now."

Once the treatment facility and new tank are connected to the city's system its old water tank will be torn down and removed.

Burned! Washington state woman shot by stove

SEKIU, Wash. (AP) — A woman in Washington state says her cast-iron stove shot her in the leg.

Cory Davis tells the Peninsula Daily News that she had just stoked the heating stove in her home Sunday when she heard a loud bang and was struck in her left calf.

She says she initially thought "that was one fast hot coal flying at me."

In fact, she was hit by part of a 22-gauge shotgun shell that she had accidentally put into the stove, with newspapers she used to light it. A box of shells had spilled nearby a few weeks before.

Davis says she removed the metal fragment herself Sunday and sought treatment for the shallow wound the next day.

Micron sneezes and Idaho catches cold

If anyone doubted that Idaho is no longer a haven for big, stable corporations, Micron Technology changed that Thursday. The high-tech giant, Idaho's biggest taxpayer and largest private employer, announced it will cut about 15 percent of its workforce as it restructures computer memory chip operations.

The bulk of the job losses will be in Boise, where the semiconductor company is headquartered.

The cuts result from declining customer demand and product oversupply, which has driven the selling price for NAND flash memory below manufacturing costs. Micron will shut down the Boise NAND plant it operates in a joint venture with Intel Corp.

The job losses will take place over two years, starting with a voluntary program to include severance and outplacement services.

The company employs about 19,000 people worldwide. A reduction of 15 percent would mean 2,850 fewer employees, and company spokesman Dan Francisco said roughly 1,500 of the cuts would be in the Boise area.

That's bad news for all Idahoans.

For more than a decade, Micron has been the biggest engine of growth in state tax revenue. Whether the ax falls on all those Boise workers next year or in 2010, state government will have much less to work with.

Bad news, considering that Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter just announced a 1 percent hold-back in spending with another 5 percent in the offing.

Idaho has set aside a lot of money for a rainy day — $118 million for schools, $41 million in a budget stabilization and $67 million in an "economic recovery reserve fund." But combined with a bad national economy, the departure of all those high-paying Micron jobs will stress the state budget.

So what now?

The state will have to rethink everything from Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna's merit pay plan for teachers to its prospects of repairing Idaho's battered roads. There will be no medical school built anytime soon, and all of those proposals to ease the pressure on Idaho's crowded prisons are looking dubious.

It was good run of corporate-fueled prosperity for Idaho, but Albertsons is gone and Hewlett-Packard is a shadow of its former presence in Boise.

Growth in tax revenue will have to come from smaller businesses, agriculture and food processing, and entrepreneurs.

"This highlights the importance of state government doing all we can to diversify and expand our economic base — being frugal and acting prudently while preparing the infrastructure and our work force for job growth and new opportunities," Gov. Otter said Thursday.

That's no small challenge.

The Federal Reserve just got a lot more powerful

Last week, we wrestled with whether to bail out the banks. This week, we are the bank. On Tuesday, the Federal Reserve tapped powers unused since the Great Depression to make short-term loans directly to companies that couldn't access capital through the private credit markets.

We are left to wonder what's next. Perhaps a drive-through window aside the Fed's palatial Washington headquarters? Maybe a Fed-issued credit card emblazoned with Ben Bernanke's bearded visage? Sure, it all sounds ridiculous, but no more ridiculous than the idea of the Fed as a commercial lender would have sounded a week ago.

Monday's market decline, in which the Dow Jones industrial average fell below 10,000 for the first time in four years, drove home the point that the promise of last week's $700 billion bailout wasn't enough.

It will take several weeks for that money to reach the market, and in the meantime, the banking system continues to deteriorate. In Europe, banks have been falling like apples in a blighted orchard. European central bankers did little to address the problem during the weekend, and the global markets needed.

The Fed's newest program comes with yet another acronym — CPFF for Commercial Paper Funding Facility.

Commercial paper is the term for notes corporations sell for short-term cash. The notes have maturities of anywhere from one to 270 days. The Fed is creating and funding an SPV — a special purpose vehicle.

The SPV will then buy commercial paper from U.S. businesses — including U.S. subsidiaries of foreign companies — that have investment grade credit ratings. In other words, the plan is supposed to work as a lubricant to loosen the seized credit markets. The Fed becomes a backstop for the global credit markets, the world's lender of last resort.

Typically, a last-resort lender is a little like the Godfather. It will lend you money, but you won't like the terms. You only go there when you're desperate.

Borrowers are certainly desperate these days, but unlike the Godfather, the Fed is basically opening its doors to all who are creditworthy, bypassing the role of the conventional banks.

What does this mean for us taxpayers, already on the hook for the $700 billion bailout approved last week, the $200 billion bailout of Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac and the $85 billion bailout of AIG?

The good news is that commercial paper has a low default rate, so the Fed isn't taking on a lot of risk and may actually make some money of the fees and interest.

At the same time, it's taking on a lot more power. The Fed essentially will decide which businesses can get credit, and potentially which businesses will survive or fail.

The government will now have a highly visible hand in the functioning of the market.

The Fed announced the plan before the market opened, then Bernanke gave a speech in which he offered an economic outlook that was about as uplifting as listening to Pink Floyd on a dark rainy night. The market promptly resumed its plunge, with the Dow falling more than 500 points.

No one knows whether anything tried in the past couple of weeks will actually work. The Fed rules no longer seem to apply.

Even if it's the right thing to do, we're blurring longstanding lines between the government and free markets.

In our desperation, it is as if we're forsaking capitalism in hopes of saving it.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Beware of the rodents destroying the economy

My friend was building a house in the country, his dream house. He put in a septic system using infiltration (underground domes) according to code nine months before he actually moved in. He had noticed voles and gophers playing in the newly softened dirt but ignored them. He was too busy building to be bothered.

By and by he moved in. He was thankful for running water instead of a canteen and a flush toilet instead of an outhouse. Two weeks later, he had a problem. His toilets were backing up. He couldn't figure it out. After some digging, he uncorked his septic tank lid and raw sewage spewed out.

He called his builder who was equally dumbfounded. He brought a backhoe and began digging out from the tank toward the infiltrators.

That's when they discovered the real problem: They were packed solid with dirt.

The voles and gophers had discovered a "cheap and easy" way to build tunnels. Instead of painstakingly pushing the dirt up hill and out, they found they could easily roll it down hill and into clean and empty caverns below and out of sight.

At no small cost, my friend was forced to pull the domes, clean them out and put them back. Lash I heard, he'd procured a bushel of cats and his system was working as intended.

Greedy bankers. Realtors and buyers of houses cooperatively found ways to move the money downhill, leaving big fat ice on the surface. Regulators were too busy to notice small holes everywhere. Meanwhile, the rest of us ignored the holes, too. Our stacks were compounding and jobs were flush.

Now the stench of gurgling sewage is palpable. The government has hired a backhoe at no small cost and doubtless will discover the whole system is clogged.

Let's make sure we hire plenty of cats (or watchdogs) or the rodents will find other ways of clogging the system.

Many issues make this election most important

This is the most important election of our lifetimes. We must elect the candidate most likely to rebuild the American economy. The policies of the last eight years have hurt our economy. When President Bush took office on Jan. 20, 2001, the national debt was $5.7 trillion. In two years, it surpassed $10 trillion. President Bush dramatically increased spending overseas, decreased investment in America and cut revenue to the United States by cutting taxes for the wealthy. The "trickle-down" economy model has been an absolute disaster. We must rebuild America by investing in America.

If you are angry that our government just agreed to spend $700 billion to save the American economy, how mad are you that we have spent $700 billion to rebuild Iraq infrastructure that we foolishly destroyed? We currently squander $12 billion per month in Iraq. Barack Obama promises to stop the insanity and pull out of Iraq. John McCain promises to stay.

We must immediately pursue a policy of energy independence for survival. According to the Pickens Plan, we will spend $700 billion this year buying foreign oil. That money, our money, is clearly used to finance Arab terrorists. The sooner we invest in American energy technology to break our dependence on foreign oil, the sooner we rebuild our economy and cut off funding to the terrorists.

Barack Obama is committed to alternative energy. John McCain's slogan is "drill baby drill." McCain ignores the fact only 3 percent of world oil reserves are in the United States. Therefore, oil is our problem, not our solution.

Big banks, bureaucrats destroying United States

One more time the people of Buhl have spoken and been ignored. I don't know the exact percentage of people in Buhl who are forced to exist on a fixed income, but it is a large share of the population. It seems that we are at the mercy of all the bureaucrats who have the power to reach out and take more and more whenever they feel the urge.

Everybody knows that public services take money to operate, but after we have paid our taxes, utilities and mortgage or rent payments, we should be allowed enough to live comfortably on what we have left. But not! Then we are expected to bail out the thieves on Wall Street and fund a big bunch of wasteful projects in places we have never heard of and for things that really don't matter. In the meantime, the projects that may be necessary to sustain life are let go until they are beyond fixing, then the bureaucrats come along and demand that we spend money we don't have in amounts most of us can't even talk about. If we don't pony up what we don't have, then we will be fined. I think it is about time that the people stand up and be counted and tell the government "no." That would include federal, state, county and city.

I am 75 years old and have been taught all my life that "we the people" is supposed to mean something. This country should not be destroyed by some of the corrupt big banks or politicians who don't care about the people who elected them to their lofty position. Instead of the big Wall Street bailouts and the earmarks in Congress for stupid projects, let them bail out small-town America and tell the greedy and corrupt to go out and earn their way for a change. If any readers agree with this, let's get together and flood our state and federal officials with mail.

Micron Technology cuts global work force by 15 percent

Boise prepares for as many as 1,500 cuts

U.S. government may take part ownership in banks

By Martin Crabbinger and Jonathan Rivera
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — News that the Bush administration is considering taking part ownership in a number of U.S. banks helped restore a relative calm over global financial markets Thursday.

The aim of such a move would be to thaw the lending freeze that threatens to push the world's economy into recession. It comes after rampant fear about the global economy sent investors scurrying on Tuesday for safety in U.S. government securities despite an orchestrated round of rate cuts by the world's central banks.

Investors also were hoping that selling, which gave the Dow its sixth straight day of losses, was overdone. Wall Street began the day higher, but then slid after declines in some blue chip names like General Motors Corp. weighed on the markets.

In an effort to show that governments around the world were focusing intently on ways to resolve the crisis, the administration announced that President Bush would meet with finance officials from the Group of Seven major industrial countries at the White House on Saturday.

"The president will have the opportunity to hear directly from the finance ministers about how the financial crisis is affecting their respective economies and the steps they are taking to deal with these challenges both individually and collectively," presidential press secretary Dana Perino told reporters.

Perino said Bush would stress "the importance of nations working in a coordinated way to address the crisis while respecting the different conditions in each economy."

An administration official, who spoke late Tuesday on condition of anonymity because no decision has been made, said the $700 billion rescue package passed by Congress last week allows the Treasury Department to inject fresh capital into financial institutions and get ownership shares in return.

BOISE — Attorney General Lawrence Wasden is negotiating with Countrywide Financial Corporation to participate in an $8.4 billion agreement to provide relief to borrowers with various subprime mortgages.

"Hopefully, we will be able to join this settlement and it will assist Idahoans who, in difficult economic times, face possible foreclosure" or who already have suffered a foreclosure on their homes," Attorney General Wasden said. If reached, the settlement will have little impact on south-central Idaho where few homeowners bought into subprime loans.

However, local banks did participate in packaging some subprime loans that were then sold to mortgage companies.

Recently acquired by Bank of America Corporation, Countrywide will identify borrowers who hold subprime or high-risk

Business owners should check finances

The difficult economic times we're in have small business owners scouring their companies' books looking for ways to improve cash flow and preserve their profits. They should also be taking that kind of care with their personal finances.

For some company owners, personal finances, espe-

"A small business owner's personal finances and business finances are often intimately related. We want to review them both," said Bob Doyle, president of Doyle Wealth Management Inc. in St. Petersburg, Fla.

Meltdown 101: Investors get back to shorting

By Joe Bel Bruno
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Will stocks benefit now that the government is letting investors bet on financial stocks going down?

It's a strategy known on Wall Street as short selling. And, for three weeks, the government banned the practice to protect financial companies whose shares had come under siege.

Short sellers were blamed for the massive declines in companies like Lehman Brothers and Bear Stearns that were already crippled by the credit crunch. Still, debate continues if the ban did more harm than good.

With the ban having expired Wednesday night, here are some questions and answers about short selling's return to Wall Street.

Q: How does short selling work? How can you put money on a stock going down?

A: In short selling, investors borrow shares and sell them with the hope they'll go down in value, so they can pay for the shares later at a lower price and turn a profit.

Q: Why was the practice temporarily banned for financial stocks?

A: Securities and Exchange Commission Chairman Christopher Cox hoped the ban would stop unlawful manipulation of stock prices. The concern was that short sellers deliberately targeted financial companies, pushing their share prices down and leading to their collapse.

Q: Did the ban help stabilize these companies?

A: Not really. Even without short sales, shares of Lehman Brothers — a 150-year-old investment bank — were crippled and the company was forced into bankruptcy. And financial stocks plunged 23 percent while the ban was in effect.

Q: More broadly speaking, how did the ban affect the stock market?

A: The jury is still out about what difference the ban made on trading, with many experts saying that the measures might have increased volatility in financial markets

Micron

"I believe we're still the largest private employer in the state, and while this isn't good news for us or our employees or anyone in the community, we're doing what we have to do to remain competitive and protect the employees that are still here," said Mark Durcan, Micron's president and chief operating officer.

The company has posted nearly $2 billion in losses since 2007, and more than 1,000 people have already been laid off from Micron jobs in the last few years.

The cuts announced Thursday contrast to Durcan's statements in March, when he said Boise would be the best place for Micron to build a plant capable of producing the next generation of memory chips. At the time, Durcan said Boise was the front runner because of the existing Micron research and development offices here and because of a series of tax incentives passed by the Legislature three years ago.

A new fabrication plant in Boise is only "aspirational" and won't likely happen any time soon, Durcan acknowledged in a phone interview Thursday with The Associated Press.

"Given what's going on in the world market and the economic map, the world just doesn't need any extra memory supply right now," Durcan said. "We still would like to hope at some time in the future we would be able to make that happen in Boise."

Employees who volunteer for the job cuts will be given six weeks of pay, along with the severance package that will be offered to all the employees who are cut.

Despite the poor earnings and job reductions, Durcan maintained Micron was still strong when compared to other companies in the industry.

"Our competitive position relative to others in the industry is thankfully very strong, but the memory market is a disaster world wide," Durcan said.

The restructuring is expected to cost about $60 million, Micron stock closed at $3.07 per share Thursday, up a penny.

Micron announced a net loss of $344 million, or 45 cents per share, during the three months that ended Aug. 28. At the time, the memory chip maker said it was implementing a 20 percent salary cut for senior executives to help cut costs.

In a prepared statement, Idaho Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter said state agencies will assist the workers who are losing jobs. Area job Service offices will increase staffing to operate on extended weekday hours and on Saturdays, and the Department of Commerce is working to identify businesses with the potential to pick up some of Micron's former workers, he said.

"This highlights the importance of state government doing all we can to diversify and expand our economic base — being frugal and acting prudently while preparing the infrastructure and our work force for job growth and new opportunities," Otter said.

Instead of stabilizing them. Between the ban's introduction on Sept. 19 and Wednesday, Wall Street had its worst six-day run since Black Monday in 1987. The Dow Jones industrial average sank nearly 13 percent, suffering two days when the blue chip index at times fell nearly 600 points.

The ban "did more to destroy investor confidence than anything," said William Ackman, who runs hedge fund Pershing Square Capital Management.

Q: Why might the absence of short sellers be bad for the stock market?

A: Some people on Wall Street believe that short selling was wrongly blamed for problems in the financial sector, and that removing them eliminated an entire class of investors.

The problem is that short sellers act as a cushion during declining markets, snapping up falling shares to cover their positions. In other words, when they complete a short sale by buying a stock that's fallen, they're often buying shares that other investors don't want — and that helps push prices upward.

Dow plunges more than 678 to fall below 9,000

By Tim Parada
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Stocks plunged in the final minutes of trading Thursday, sending the Dow Jones industrial average down more than 675 points, or more than 7 percent, to their lowest level in five years after a major credit ratings agency said it was considering cutting its rating on General Motors Corp. The Standard & Poor's 500 index also fell more than 7 percent.

The sell-off came as Standard & Poor's Ratings Services put GM and its finance affiliate GMAC LLC under review to see if its rating should be cut. GM has been struggling with weak car sales in North America.

The action means there is a 50 percent chance that S&P will lower GM's and GMAC's ratings in the next three months.

S&P also put Ford Motor Co. on credit watch negative. The ratings agency said that GM and Ford had adequate liquidity now, but that could change in 2009.

GM led the Dow lower, falling 31 percent, while Ford fell 58 cents, or 22 percent, to $2.08.

"The story is getting to be like that movie Groundhog Day," said Arthur Hogan, chief market analyst at Jefferies & Co. He pointed to the still-frozen credit markets, and Libor, the bank-to-bank lending rate that remains stubbornly high despite the Fed's recent rate cut.

"Until that starts coming down, you'll be hard-pressed to find anyone getting excited about stocks," Hogan said. "Everything we're seeing is historic. The problem is historic, the solutions are historic, and unfortunately, the sell-off is historic. It's not the kind of history you want to be making."

According to preliminary calculations, the Dow fell 678.91, or 7.3 percent, to 8,579.19. The blue chips had fallen below the 9,000 level since Aug. 6, 2003.

Broad-based stock indicators also tumbled. Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 75.02, or 7.6 percent, to 909.92, while the Nasdaq composite index fell 95.21, or 5.47 percent, to 1,645.12.

Quilting for a cause

Quilting event at M.V. Mall to benefit area charities

By Erica Littlefield
Times-News correspondent

Center court at the Magic Valley Mall will look a little different next week, and it's all for a good cause.

Instead of chairs and benches, it will be filled with sewing machines, thread and colorful fabrics as the Desert Sage Quilters of Magic Valley present their annual Tie Quilts at the Mall event. The group will be working at the mall from Monday to Saturday, and they expect to tie and finish more than 150 quilts to donate to local charities, such as Valley House and the College of Southern Idaho Refugee Center.

Susan Stallings, a member of the quilt group and the coordinator for the event, said quilts can be a comforting touch of home in a very trying situation.

"These are going to kids who don't have very much," Stallings said. "We're trying to provide something that's cozy and warm and loving, and it's really a comfort to them."

The event will also be held in conjunction with Pennies by the Inch, part of a regional fundraising campaign for Primary

Jones said they raised almost $2,000 at the mall last year, and said she has seen everyone from young children to teenagers to senior citizens dig into their pockets or piggy banks to donate money.

"When some of the rest of us can bring some hope and peace to them, it makes it so much better," Jones said. "They not only have a sick child, but they have no way to pay their bill."

Aspiring writer Kruse cruises the lower Salmon River

Amethyst Kruse, 16-year-old daughter of Lark and Charles Kruse of Buhl, was chosen as one of 14 students from Idaho to attend a week-long trip on the lower Salmon River in August.

Kruse entered a writing contest sponsored by The Cabin: Wilderness Writing Expedition of Boise. Her entry requirement was to write a two-page story on an assigned topic. Her story was entitled "Haunted Redemption" and is an old western about a cowboy struggling with his inner demons.

During the float trip, Kruse participated in writing workshops taught by instructors from The Cabin. She has participated in the Log Cabin Summer Writing Workshops at the College of Southern Idaho for four summers. In August, she attended two sessions with the late Bill Studebaker.

develops in the cells that produce melanin, which is responsible for skin color.

oration. It most often affects the skin but can also occur in the eyes, or rarely, internal organs.

Melanomas usually occur on areas that are repeatedly exposed to sunlight, such as on the face, arms, legs or back. Less commonly, they can form on the palms of the hands, soles of the feet or even fingernail beds.

The most common early sign of melanoma development is a change in an existing mole or the appearance of a new, unusual-looking growth. Normal moles are generally uniformly colored (tan or brown), irregular in shape (an oval or circle), have a distinct border between it and the skin, and can be up to a quarter inch in diameter (rarely larger). Moles that may indicate melanoma often have one or more of the following: irregular shape, change in color or texture, increase in size, are itchy, scaly, bleed or ooze, and the pigment may spread beyond the border of the mole.

The cause of melanoma is unknown, but ultraviolet light from the sun and tanning beds and lamps greatly increase the risk of developing this form of cancer. It is important to keep an eye on all existing moles and watch for new ones. Most moles develop by age 20, but, on occasion, new, harmless ones may appear. People with a family or personal history of abnormal skin lesions or skin cancer should be screened annually by a dermatologist.

First Halloween for exchange student

Exchange student P-Mal Priyoyapathankun, 17, of Bangkok Thailand, delighted in selecting her very first jack-o'-lantern during a recent visit to Piler's IRG Produce Corn Maze and Pumpkin Patch.

During an old-fashioned hayride through the pumpkin field, host parents Chris and Janet Surret of Castleford, with sons Cody and Cody, explained the same traditions of "Halloween" in Idaho style to the teen. The group negotiated the turns and twists of the corn maze, then enjoyed shooting tennis balls at glowing monster targets. "It was fun,"

Priyoyapathankun said of the corn maze adventure, "I liked it, and I didn't get lost." Priyoyapathankun is currently a senior at Castleford High School. She arrived in her host family's home in Castleford on Aug. 10 and will return to Bangkok in June. Bangkok is a city of approximately 5,700,523. Castleford has less than 500 residents.

"I wanted to experience different cultures, that is why I came here," Priyoyapathankun explained. Along with visiting the corn maze and jack-o'-lantern patch, other first experiences for the teen have included a rodeo, county fair, horseback ride, and picking potatoes.

Both Priyoyapathankun and her host family are affiliated with the Aspect Program.

All the quilts are donated to local agencies and charities such as Safe House, Valley House, East End Providers, the CSI Refugee Center, St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center, and various nursing homes in the area.

"It's satisfying to see the quilt go to areas that truly need it," Stallings said.

Stallings said the guild's 95 members all take turns working at the mall event. Churches and other groups often volunteer their time as well, and there are usually two to three dozen people working at a time. Stallings said anyone is welcome to help work on the quilts, and members of the guild will be on hand to teach people how to tie.

"It's a wonderful atmosphere for people to come and visit," Stallings said.

Sherry Jeff, president of Desert Sage Quilters, said many mall shoppers stop at center cuts to lend a hand, or just to chat and reminisce.

"Quilting brings back memories of a family time where grandmas and aunts got together to make a quilt for a special occasion," Jeff said. "It's a warm memory."

Tax experts look at ways to close $300-billion gap

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Getting people to pay the taxes they owe could be one significant way of coping with dizzying increases in the federal deficit and the potential $700 billion price tag for the just-announced financial rescue plan, tax experts said Thursday.

In 2001, the last year the Internal Revenue Service estimated the tax gap — the difference between what taxpayers owe and what they actually pay — the figure stood at $345 billion, or $290 billion after subtracting enforcement efforts and late payments. The overall compliance rate for paying taxes was about 86 percent.

The tax exports, at a forum headed by Sen. Tom Carper, D-Ill., said that in spite of some IRS successes in improving tax compliance, the gap may have grown since 2001.

"We believe $345 billion is a low-ball estimate," said J. Russell George, Treasury Inspector General for Tax Administration. "We believe it is much greater than that."

By comparison, the federal deficit for the just-ended budget year was a record $138 billion.

Carper said he had told Democratic presidential nominee Sen. Barack Obama, D-Ill., that reducing the tax gap was "a good place to go" when considering how to pay for the financial rescue package. "There's some low-hanging fruit here," said Carper, who chairs the Senate subcommittee on federal financial management.

The IRS, in a 2006 study on the gap, concluded that $197 billion came from underreporting on individual income tax returns while $88 billion was from underreporting by corporations and the self-employed. The remainder came from those not filing.

George said more third-party reporting would boost revenues coming into the IRS. He said people subject to withholding from their employers report 99 percent of their income, while the self-employed report only about 68 percent of income. That figure drops to 19 percent for those self-employed paid on a cash basis.

Small businesses should be encouraged to participate in an electronic federal tax payment system which allows for scheduled, automatic payments, National Taxpayer Advocate Nina Olson said. The IRS has to make the program more user-friendly, she said. "We have to make it easier for taxpayers to pay their government."

By Jean Ortiz
Associated Press writer

OMAHA, Neb. — An Iowa teenager who was abandoned at an Omaha hospital under Nebraska's safe-haven law is back home after her grandparents dropped her off to teach her a lesson but soon changed their minds, officials said Thursday.

The 14-year-old girl from across the Missouri River in Council Bluffs, Iowa, was left at Creighton University Medical Center on Tuesday. She was the 17th child left under a state law that took effect in July but was the first from out of state.

Her abandonment set off concerns that Nebraska's broadly written law could make the state a dumping ground for unwanted children. The law allows anyone of abandonment charges for leaving a child of any age in a state hospital. It doesn't, however, overlook other possible charges, including if a child had been neglected or abused.

The guardian in this case under the law to "teach the girl a lesson," said Todd Laundry, who heads Nebraska's Division of Children and Family Services.

"That's not an appropriate use of the law, no matter where they're from," he said. There was no evidence of abuse, neglect or immediate danger, he said.

Brenda Beadle, a chief deputy in the Douglas County attorney's office in Nebraska, said a child protection case would not be filed in the 14-year-old's abandonment because it didn't seem appropriate.

Beadle said she believed the girl was adopted by her grandparents. She declined to discuss the circumstances in which the girl was left at the hospital, saying only that it stemmed from a "supervision issue."

The prosecutor's decision was made in part because the grandparents wanted the girl back, Beadle said. But factoring in were assurances that the grandparents had helped the child to safely welcome the girl back.

"Given that family lives in Iowa and had resources in place, it seemed like the appropriate thing to do," Beadle said.

Carol began life in Albuquerque, N.M., on Nov. 24, 1957. She moved to Shoshone in 1971, where she met the love of her life, Lyman D. Jones. Together, they raised six children and had 13 grandchildren.

Carol's time was devoted to her family and friends. Her capacity for love was extended to everyone who came in contact with her. Carol loved traveling, her beloved dogs, cooking, reading, fishing, spending time with her grandchildren and holidays surrounded by family and friends.

Carol met a peaceful end Monday, Sept. 29, 2008.

The void without Carol can never be measured, but the memories will remain and be cherished.

A memorial service will be held at a later date.

Police: Suspect in Tennessee mall shooting was upset over purchase

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The fatal shooting of a store employee and gun battle with police in a Knoxville shopping mall began as a complainant over a clothing purchase, authorities said Thursday.

William Johnson — who faces charges of murder, aggravated kidnapping and attempted murder in the Wednesday shootings — acted alone and targeted the store, police spokesman Darrell DeBusk said.

"This shooting did not occur just because the store was at the mall," he said. "It occurred because the suspect was upset over a previous clothing purchase."

Johnson, 42, came to the shopping center around 4:20 p.m. Wednesday determined to get satisfaction from Reno Mens Wear for clothing he had bought there. Neighboring merchants said the store had a no-return policy and Johnson's complaint was about a suit, but DeBusk wouldn't discuss those details.

Minutes after Johnson entered the store, 29-year-old employee Ahmed Nahl was dead and Johnson was being taken to a hospital for wounds in the leg and arm after a shootout with two police officers.

The investigation was continuing Thursday and Johnson, hospitalized with non-life-threatening injuries, said yet to be interviewed.

Johnson — described by neighbor Johnnie Brown as "built like a football player," unemployed and on disability because of a kidney condition — entered the clothing store looking for service. He carried a 9 mm handgun without a permit.

Nahl, a native of Egypt who came to this country on a tourist visa, followed Johnson into the store, where he'd worked for less than a year, witnesses said. He'd been playing with his infant daughter out in the mall, talking with other shoppers about plans for the baby's first birthday in two weeks.

There was a "confrontation" between the suspect and Nahl inside the store, DeBusk said. The customer pulled out the handgun and shot Nahl, then ordered another customer to the ground. A few moments later, the suspect shot the victim a few more times," DeBusk said.

AROUND THE NATION

NEW YORK
Elections officials deny illegally purging voters

NEW YORK — A newspaper report that thousands of eligible voters had been removed from rolls or blocked from registering in at least six swing states. Election officials lined up to defend their registration procedures and they had done nothing wrong.

The New York Times based its findings on reviews of state records and Social Security data, and said it had identified apparent problems in Colorado, Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Nevada and North Carolina.

The Times said voters appear to have been purged by mistake and not because of any national violations by election officials or coordinated efforts by any party. It said that some states are improperly using Social Security data to verify new voters' registration applications, and that others might have broken rules on government removing voters from the rolls within 90 days of a federal election.

Election officials in several states disputed that any voters were illegally removed from rolls.

Michigan elections director Chris Thomas said, for example, that the state removed only people who have died, notified authorities of a move or who were declared unfit to vote, which is well within the parameters of the law. Thomas said only 11,000 voters were removed from Michigan rolls in August — not 33,000, the figure cited in the report.

There is no illegal purging going on, Thomas told The Associated Press on Thursday.

The Times stood by its story. Spokeswoman Catherine Mathis said the newspaper's reporting was based on voter registration data provided by the states themselves, and in Michigan's case compared an Aug. 5

McCain continues to hammer Obama on link to ex-radical

WAUKESHA — Republican presidential candidate John McCain said Thursday that questions about Democratic rival Barack Obama's association with a former war protester linked to Vietnam-era bombings are part of a broader issue of honesty.

In his strongest personal criticism since his falling campaign began earlier, McCain said Obama is an unacceptable candidate. McCain told supporters that Obama had been truthful in describing his relationship with former radical William Ayers. The Arizona senator also said Obama himself has a "clear radical, far-left pro-abortion record."

McCain and the Republican National Committee also launched new Web and TV ads about Obama and Ayers. Loud cheers from 4,000 people gathered at a sports complex near Milwaukee greeted McCain's attacks over Ayers, who helped found the Weather Underground, a Vietnam protest group that bombed government buildings 40 years ago. Obama has noted that he was a child at the time and first met Ayers and his wife, ex-radical Bernadine Dohrn, a quarter-century later.

"Look, we don't care about an old, washed-up terrorist and his wife," McCain said. "That's not the point here."

"It's a terrorist" a man in the audience screamed without making clear to whom he was referring.

"We need to know the full extent of the relationship," McCain replied. Later, McCain told ABC News: "It's a factor about Sen. Obama's candor and truthfulness with the American people."

ALASKA
Court refuses to shut down Palin ethics probe

ANCHORAGE — Alaska's Supreme Court has refused to shut down an ethics investigation into Gov. Sarah Palin, the Republican vice presidential nominee.

The decision Thursday sets the stage for state lawmakers to release a report on their investigation today. The report could prove to be an embarrassment for Palin and a distraction for John McCain's presidential campaign in the final weeks of the race.

Lawmakers are investigating whether Palin abused her power to settle a family dispute. Her former public safety commissioner says he was dismissed after, resisting pressure to fire a state trooper who had gone through nasty divorce from Palin's sister.

Republican lawmakers are said to block the report, saying it had become politicized.

GEORGIA
One in 4 U.S. teen girls got cervical cancer shot

ATLANTA — One in four teen girls have rolled up their sleeves for the relatively new vaccine against cervical cancer, federal health officials said Thursday.

The figures represent the government's first substantial study of vaccination rates for the Gardasil vaccine — Merck & Co.'s heavily advertised, three-shot series that targets the sexually transmitted human papillomavirus, or HPV.

The vaccine protects against strains of the virus that cause about 70 percent of cervical cancers.

Health officials recommend that girls get the shots when they are 11 or 12, if possible, before they become sexually active. Also, age 11 is when kids are generally due for another round of vaccinations.

The survey only covered children in the 13-17 age range.

Vaccine proponents had been hoping for much higher vaccination rates, saying the shots could dramatically reduce the nearly 4,000 cervical cancer deaths that occur each year in the United States.

But many families are cautious about the safety of new vaccines, said Patti Gravitt, a Johns Hopkins University associate professor of epidemiology.

Other things about the vaccine may give some families pause. It is expensive, retailing for about $375, although many health insurers now cover it.

OHIO
Rap fan sentenced to large fine or Beethoven

URBANA — A defendant had a hard time facing the music.

Andrew Vactor was facing a $150 fine for playing rap music too loudly on his car stereo in July. But a judge offered to reduce that to $45 if Vactor spent 20 hours listening to classical music by the likes of Bach, Beethoven and Chopin.

Vactor, 24, lasted only about 15 minutes, a probation officer said. It wasn't the music, Vactor said, he just needed to be at practice with the rest of the Urbana University basketball team.

"I didn't have the time to deal with that," he said. "I just decided to pay the fine."

Champaign County Municipal Court Judge Susan Formo-Lippencott says the idea was to force Vactor to listen to something he might not prefer, just as other people had no choice but to listen to his loud rap music.

"I think a lot of people don't like to be forced to listen to music," she said.

She also taped TV shows for defendants in other cases to watch on topics such as financial responsibility. As she sees it, they get the "chance to have their fine reduced" and at the same time broaden their horizons.

WASHINGTON
Tropics may face threat from global warming

WASHINGTON — If you can't stand global warming, get out of the tropics. While the most significant harm from climate change so far has been in the polar regions, tropical plants and animals may face an even greater threat, say scientists who studied conditions in Costa Rica.

"Many lowland tropical species could be in trouble," the team of researchers, led by Robert K. Colwell of the University of Connecticut, warns in today's edition of the journal Science.

"The tropics, in the popular view, are already hot, so how could global warming harm tropical species? We hope to put this concern on the conservation agenda," Colwell said.

That's because some tropical species, insects are an example, are living near their maximum temperatures, already and warmer conditions could cause them to decline, Colwell explained.

S. Idaho couple found dead in home

FOR A LITTLE (AD) — An elderly man appears to have been shot by his 75-year-old wife before turning the handgun on himself, Bannock County Coroner Kim Quick says.

"I believe he loved his wife very much. This was a mercy killing." — Bannock County Coroner Kim Quick, on the deaths of Robert and Tessa Butler

Quick said Butler and his wife suffered from physical ailments that played a role in their deaths. "I believe he loved his wife very much," Quick told the Idaho State Journal. "This was a mercy killing."

Quick said Butler and his wife suffered from physical ailments that played a role in their deaths. Butler was a longtime friend of the couple, Postville resident Presilla Heast, said Butler suffered from bone loss and could barely walk.

Butler had been diagnosed with rheumatoid arthritis and spinal meningitis, Heast said. "It was about their quality of life," said Heast, 82. "I tell you the truth, I look at them as heroes."

Along with teaching, Butler worked as a curator at the Idaho Museum of Natural History before he retired in the 1960s. Tessa Butler grew up in Idaho during World War II and later immigrated to the United States, where she was an activist and community volunteer.

Heast said her husband was dean of the Idaho State University College of Liberal Arts during the 1960s when he hired Butler to develop the anthropology program.

Chuck Trust, former president of the Burnt Anthracite Society in southeastern Idaho, said Tessa Butler was a longtime member of the organization, which promotes the conservation of natural resources in southeastern Idaho.

CARVING OUT HIS PEACE

Mike Wamego made his first flute when he was 5 years old.

At his great-grandfather's and grandfather's knees, he learned how to use a sharpened piece of metal pipe to carve out the wood for the bore, and how to use body measurements — the width of three fingers, or the distance from the shoulder to the palm — to make a perfectly sized American Indian flute.

And then he went to high school and college and joined the U.S. Navy, and forgot all about flute making. "I didn't make another flute until 2000," said the grizzled-looking 56-year-old in his tiny Twin Falls wood shop.

Except he didn't forget.

His shop, which can't be more than 8 feet by 10 feet and has a ceiling papered with FedEx boxes, is crammed with pieces of wood and tools both modern and traditional, all coated with a thick layer of sawdust.

He spends what amounts to a full-time work week here, surrounded by flutes in every stage of construction.

Wamego first tried making the flutes according to specifications from books, but they just didn't come out sounding like he remembered — until he found a set of specs online.

"I could remember. I could still feel what the sound of that flute felt like in my heart," he said. "It's the exact same sound my grandfather's flute had. It was like going home, stepping back 50 years in time."

ERIC MATHESON/For the Times-News
Mike Wamego shows the inside of a flute during production. The slow air chamber and bore of this flute are hollowed out, and the hole for the cutting edge is visible in the slow air chamber of the right-hand piece.

Now Wamego makes about 100 flutes a year — "I just finished No. 88 today," he said on Sept. 19 — in all the keys of the pentatonic scale.

They're tuned by computer to the exact frequencies that are supposed to correspond to chakras (six bodily energy centers described in ancient Hindu and Buddhist teachings). Wamego believes the flutes have an effect on the human body unlike any other instrument.

"Native American flutes are a beautiful sounding instrument, but they're also a healing instrument. They use them in healing ceremonies because the sound, it's not just the distinction of the sound, it touches the soul of the person," he said. "It's better than Prozac."

Gathering to play

On Saturday, at the monthly gathering of the flute group Wamego started, Twin Diamond Native American Flute Circle, players talked about this feeling.

"I believe the sound connects to something primal," said Paula Dodd of Twin Falls. "It goes to that primitive, cellular spot."

Marsha Sanders, who lives with Wamego, deniers about her playing skills but enjoys the sound she hears when she's behind the mouthpiece. "It's like you hear, feel it at the same time," she said. She believes anyone would feel connected to the instrument if they played it. "It does help if you've played any kind of wind instrument, but playing that first note, the resonance of the wood with your breath, it's magical."

September's group huddled beneath a shelter at Rock Creek Park, some wrapped with blankets against the season's early chill. Rain poured down, cracking off the roof as the flutes sounded, reminding the players of an ambient noise CD.

They welcome anyone to their circle, to listen or to play in any wooden-flute style. And if you come to listen, expect to be encouraged to try playing.

"With the flute, you don't have to read music or know anything about music," Dodd said. "Basically, if you have opposable thumbs and are breathing, you can play."

The group, which varies from three to 30 players, Wamego said, is appreciative of experience but encouraging beginners. "There's no one in this world who would say anything if you didn't get the notes right," said Ralph Montes of Shoshone, who likes what he has learned from other players. "I play mostly by myself. The more people I play with, my style gets different. Now I see how that's done."

Back in the shop

To make his flutes, Wamego starts with wood, anything from a $3 board from the home improvement store to expensive pieces he keeps wrapped in cardboard and weighed in prevent warping. Cutting those into two long, equal pieces (they'll be glued back together later in the process), he marks with pencil the places to cut and shape. Most often he uses a table, but sometimes he goes back to the old finger-width method his grandfather taught.

"These are the most critical part of any of the layout," Wamego said. "Everything on this can vary depending on what key of flute you want to make."

Using modern tools — or that old piece of sharpened pipe — he hollows out the slow air chamber and the bore. The American Indian flute is unique because the player blows into the body of the flute; through the air chamber, over the cutting edge, and back through the bore. In other styles of flute, air is blown across an opening, not through it.

Wamego drills the cutting edge, sands the interior, then glues the two pieces together with Titebond III, which dries to be water resistant — an important quality with a wooden instrument that will encounter a lot of moisture from condensation and saliva.

With sandpaper on a dowel, he sands the inside again to get rid of any glue residue. Next is the step that really makes it look like a flute: the rounding of the exterior. Wamego has electric tools to do this, but he prefers an old spokeshave, a sort of rounded plane. He props the flute in a bench he built for that purpose, then draws the spokeshave toward himself as bits of wood curl off.

"I'd do a lot of this right here because it's quicker for me," he said.

On each flute he burns a number, which helps him track his productivity as well as how the wood weathers. If a flute ever breaks, he can go back to his records, find all its measurements and specifications and fix or replace it. He also burns a maker's mark, a twin diamond: It's his initials, a W topped by an M.

All that's left is the finishing. Some flutes get a natural stain, but all get coats of shellac to bring out the wood's beauty.

Then he takes the flutes to shows and to playing circles, and he waits. "Every flute I make is designed for someone," he said. "It's just that person finding that flute."

Speed dating coming to T.F.

Times-News

The College of Southern Idaho's Community Education Center has organized a speed dating event for 7-9 p.m. Oct. 18 at Pandora's, 516 Hansen St. in Twin Falls.

Organizers say speed dating originated with a Los Angeles rabbi who wanted to help Jewish singles meet and marry.

The basic concept of speed dating is musical chairs with chemistry. Participants will be divided into age groups (21-29, 30-49, 50-69 and 70-plus) and will have five to seven minutes lasting seven minutes.

Age categories aren't set in stone, organizers say, and will be adjusted depending on who shows up at the event.

After each date, each participant will mark a box as to whether they would like to see that person again and if they both say yes, they will be provided with each other's personal information.

Jill Skeem, winner of CSI's Comedy Face-Off, will host the event.

The fee is $35 and includes a coupon for either a non-alcoholic or alcoholic beverage. Participants must be 21 or older, and single or divorced to participate.

To register: CSI Community Education Center at 732-9442 or Csl.edu/community. Information: Cindy Lee Simeon, CSI community education course developer, at 732-6441.

Buhl gets its first Octoberfest event this weekend

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — What do beer and brats, big rig trucks, classic cars, jewelry and art have in common? You can enjoy them all and more in Buhl on Saturday.

Not only is the day Super Saturday, a monthly event highlighting Buhl merchants, but Mimi's Flowers, Wine and Gifts is hosting what owner Mimi Ford hopes to be the valley's premier Octoberfest.

"Why drive to Twin Falls to celebrate Octoberfest? I've always thought Buhl should have and could have its own," Ford said. "The day is also the grand opening of my new store and The Saddle Horn Event Center."

The free event gives attendees a chance to try Octoberfest-inspired beer, sold by the glass, and traditional grub — bratwurst, sold by Buhl's Moose Lodge.

After getting your fill, take in the glorious harvest air with a horse-drawn buggy ride (by donation) or browse the vendors' booths — including Buhl's Valley View Lavender Farm, Holesinsky Certified Organic Vineyard and Winery and Tubac, Ariz., artist Cynthia Warden.

There will be live music throughout the day and into the night, including special guest Jimmy Hivens of Boise. "It is going to be an exciting day in Buhl," said Buhl Chamber of Commerce executive director Christine Garrison.

'Raven Warrior,' by Tubac, Ariz., artist Cynthia Warden, one of the featured artists at Saturday's Octoberfest event in Buhl.

At the Valley Country Store parking lot will be the First Annual Semi-Truck Show and Arctic Circle is holding a show and shine car show.

"This is the first time for a show like this in southern Idaho highlighting semi trucks (without trailers). So far we have about 15 trucks signed up," said Dennis Barnes, co-chairman for the big rig show. Barnes said a nonprofit organization (not yet named) has been formed and will donate proceeds from the show, after costs, to the Buhl Boys and Girls Club.

Cost to enter a truck is $20, but attending the show is free.

Several food vendors and music will make the open-air show a family destination, Barnes said.

"This will give people a chance to learn about the trucks that bring groceries, fuel and other freight into the area. Some of the drivers call their trucks home and it's their job and business," Barnes said.

If semi trucks aren't your thing, then attend the show and shine car show sponsored by the Arctic Circle and The Avid Sportsman. It is the second car show put on by the businesses, and everyone is welcome to enter their vehicles for free, said owner David McCain.

"Anybody and everyone can enter whatever automobile they want. We had 34 cars enter last year and hope to have more this year," he said. "This is just a fun way for peo-

Sun Valley Center for the Arts presents 'African American Lives' documentary

Times-News

The Sun Valley Center for the Arts will show the "African American Lives" documentary series (episodes 3 and 4) at 6 p.m. Tuesday at the center.

Through a combination of genealogical detective work and DNA analysis, "African American Lives" reveals the surprising ancestry of several prominent African Americans, including Tina Turner, Jackie Joyner-Kersey, Don Cheadle, Maya Angelou, Morgan Freeman and Chris Rock.

Groundbreaking television when it first aired on PBS in 2006, the "African American Lives" series was created and hosted by Harvard professor Henry Louis Gates Jr. He is the Alphonse Fletcher University professor at Harvard University and director of the W.E.B. Du Bois Institute for African and African American Research. Gates will give a public lecture at 7 p.m. Thursday at the Church of the Big Wood in Ketchum, as part of the Sun Valley Center's ongoing "Does DNA Define You?" multidisciplinary project.

Admission is free for the film. Episodes 1 and 2 of the series were shown Oct. 7. Tickets for the lecture, $15 for Sun Valley Center members and $20 for nonmembers, are available at Sunvalleycenter.org, 726-9491, ext. 10 or at the center, 191 Fifth St. E. in Ketchum.

of comedy thrown in as well. It takes place at a reunion of Slightly Left of Central High School, class of 1995. Barbara "Habs" Gleeson, the peppy class president and organizer of the reunion, is doing her best to make sure things run smoothly, but things go awry. Two of the reunion's attendees are wounded in the parking lot, and when shots ring out and Egbert (the janitor) disappears, every classmate is a suspect.

After getting up close and personal with the actors as they mingle before the show, the audience can ask them questions to help figure out who the murderer might be. "Right from the beginning, they're part of the show," Dodson said. "It's different than watching a typical show in an auditorium."

challenge for the cast because they test the actors' improvisation skills. Stacie

Jensen, who plays Babs, said the majority of the show is scripted. However, when it comes to actors' contact with the audience, they have to think on their feet. Jensen said she and the rest of the cast have done exercises and worked with Dodson to brush up on their ad-libbing skills.

"I'm pretty much ready for anything," Jensen said. "It's never the same twice. It's always different, and it keeps you on your toes."

Dodson believes audiences will enjoy the play's zany characters and trying to find out whodunit. But she also has a caveat: Things might not be what they seem, and the culprit might not be who you think.

"It surprised me the first time I read it," Dodson said.

'Owyhee Canyonlands' offers spectacular view

Walk into any good bookstore across the country (Powell's in Portland, Ore., The Fattened Cover in Denver, Elliot Bay Book Co. in Seattle), and you will undoubtedly find regional books to be one of the largest categories. History buffs, armchair travelers, hikers, foodies, tourists, gift-seekers — all can find the perfect volume in this section.

There are dozens of titles featuring Idaho and the Intermountain West available at our local stores, and a good number of them are published by Caxton Press, a family-owned business established in Caldwell before the turn of the last century.

It is worth noting that two of Caxton's earliest authors are familiar names in the larger literary world: Vardis Fisher, whose classic "Mountain Man" was the inspiration for the Robert Redford film "Jeremiah Johnson"; and Andy Rand, author of the acclaimed "Anthem," which Caxton has published for the past 50 years.

Which brings us to Caxton's recently released title, "Owyhee Canyonlands," from outdoor landscape photographer Mark Lisk.

There are coffee table books and then there are Lisk's. Describing his photography as "spectacular" still seems a bit of an understatement. And while this is not the first book Lisk has done on Idaho, it is, because of the subject area, the most amazing I can hear people now as they peruse the book's 100-plus photographs: "I had no idea."

The Owyhee Canyonlands, encompassing more than 4 million square acres where Oregon, Nevada and Idaho converge, is one of the largest roadless areas in the lower 48 states. Pristine geological formations, petroglyphs, meandering streams, bighorn sheep, mahogany groves, cowboys, ranchers, long-abandoned dwellings, American Indians dressed in full regalia — all are stunningly captured by Lisk's experienced eye and so adeptly reproduced by Caxton that one can almost feel the brisk mountain air and smell the rain-soaked sagebrush.

Boise-based Lisk, who hunted chukars in the Canyonlands as a boy, told the Idaho Press-Tribune earlier this summer: "With all the changes, people moving into the valley, you can see the farm and ranch life disappear, and I wanted to document it ... It's hard to get to a lot of places, and we put a lot of effort into [showing all aspects of that country]. There are a lot of places that not a lot of people have seen."

But now, thanks to Lisk, this microcosm of environment and historical treasures can be shared. What a beautiful gift.

Judi Baxter has been known to recommend titles to perfect strangers while browsing the books at Costco Wholesale. She owned and operated Judi's bookstore in downtown Twin Falls from 1978 to 1992, which Baxter describes as "very much a part of the community and a true gathering place." From 2000 to 2004 she wrote a twice-weekly column for Publisher's Weekly's online edition called "Reviews in the News."

Editor's Take

Act it out, Magic Valley

It's fall — and the thermostat I cranked up for the first time this season says it is — it must be time for theater.

Dinner theater, like Magic Valley Little Theater's twisty-turny production of "Stay as Dead as You Are" at the Turf Club in Twin Falls; or Mystique Theater's "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" in Pocatello (available with or without the meal).

Perhaps Pulitzer Prize-winning theater like College of Southern Idaho Theater Department's "Crimes of the Heart." Or maybe a little children's theater, like Company of Fools' "Jack and the Beanstalk" in Hiley. Organizers say it's as much fun for adults as the kiddies.

If you're already planning for November, catch Oakley Valley Arts Council's "Plaid Tidings," the holiday version of "Forever Plaid," a musical comedy later made into a movie.

But what if, after attending one of these productions, you decide you want to be up on that stage, or behind those scenes making the magic happen? It's easy to get involved.

Auditions are coming up for CSI's "A Christmas Carol," as well as OVAC's "Oliver," and five bucks says that if you went up to a director after a production and expressed interest, you'd get a call pretty quick.

Theater is a great place to meet your neighbors, find new friends and try something new — you might even find you have a knack for playing Southern belles or painting sets.

Sheep Festival features folklorist, parade, dog trials

Times-News

Every year the Trailing of the Sheep Festival celebrates a century-and-a-half tradition of moving sheep from mountain summer pastures south through the Wood River Valley to traditional winter desert areas. This annual migration is not a reenactment. It is living history and a week-long festival that highlights the people, cultures and traditions of sheep ranching in Idaho and the West.

This year the family-friendly event focuses on "The Songs and Stories of Shepherding," featuring Idaho's own Grammy award-winning folklorist Rosalie Sorrels and popular Utah recording artist Brenn Hill, joined by other storytellers of the West.

There will be the colorful swirling skirts of the Olankari Basque Dancers, the Boise Highlanders, the Andean Peruvian musicians and dancers, Polish Highlanders along with fluffy Polish Tatra dogs, the Boise Irish Dancers, and Navajo master dyers, spinners and weavers. Attendees may enjoy traditional Basque lamb dinners and a weekend of stories and history of the sheep ranching families, traditions and cultures.

The festivities begin today with an afternoon cooking workshop on the secrets of preparing delectable lamb dishes. The workshop will be led by gourmet chef Chris Kastner of CK's Real Foods restaurant. There is a small fee; registration is available through College of Southern Idaho at 788-2038.

The Sheep Tales: "Remembering When ..." will feature folklorist Sorrels, joined by Hal Cannon of Western Folklife Center of Elko, Nev., and western storytellers, at 7 p.m. today at nextStage Theatre.

The Trailing of the Sheep's "Meet the Artist" event will be 9-10 a.m. Saturday at the Sweetwater Grange, off of Idaho Highway 75 and Countryside Boulevard. Visit with more than 22 professional artists displaying works reflecting sheep, sheep ranching, cultures linked with sheep ranching and the Western landscape. The show continues through Oct. 20.

Dog trials run from 7 a.m. until dark both Saturday and Sunday. With more than 50 dog handlers from around the Northwest, the events will be held off of Idaho Highway 75 and Fox Acres Road in Halley (behind Wood River High School).

On Saturday, the Sheep Folklife Fair will begin at 10 a.m. at the Halley Community Campus, 1050 Fox Acres Road, and run until 4 p.m. The fair will honor the work of the sheep ranching and traditions of the Basque, Peruvian, Irish and Scots peoples who figure prominently in this history. The fair will be filled with music, dance, food and demonstrations of sheep shearing, herding sheep and sheep camp life. There are crafts for children, as well as spinning and weaving demonstrations and workshops. A traditional Basque lamb dinner will be served from 1:30 a.m. until the fair's closing.

Saturday night, the Sheep Tales gathering "Our Story Continues..." will be at 7 p.m. at the nextStage Theatre, 120 S. Main in Ketchum. The evening offers a contemporary view of sheep ranching in the west featuring Hill along with other storytellers.

On Sunday morning, local historian Ivan Swanner will talk about the history of the Wood River Valley and the Lane Mercantile at the site that is now Ketchum's Starbucks.

The highway is given over to woolly buggers during the Trailing of the Sheep parade, which will be held at noon on Sunday.

beginning at 10 a.m.

The main event, the sheep parade, will begin at noon Sunday on Main Street in Ketchum, when close to 1,000 sheep from the Salmon Falls Sheep Ranch will move through town passing restaurants, boutique shops, coffeehouses and hotels. Traffic will be stopped on city streets to allow the sheep to complete their annual trek. The animals this year belong to Mike and Mark Henstee and will be led through town by family and friends.

The Sheep Shuttle will leave from the Forest Service Park in Ketchum for Neal Canyon north of Ketchum, where John Heavey and Ivan Swanner will lead a guided tour of sheep-herder carvings on aspen trees and discuss the significance of such records left by men who walked the area caring for their animals.

Cowboy sings of Idaho and the range during Sheep Festival

By Karen Bossick
Wood River Journal

KETCHUM — Brenn Hill has lived in Utah all his 32 years. But the cowboy singer-songwriter thinks of Idaho when he pens many of his songs.

He penned "Meet Me In McCall" in tribute to the place he bagged a bear. He sang "Bout the White Clouds in Miss Idaho." And when it came time to write an outlaw tune, he wrote not about Billy the Kid but, rather, "The Ballad of Pogue and Elms" — two Idaho Department of Fish and Game wardens who were shot to death by poacher Claude Dallas.

"The greatest thing about living in Utah is that I'm only an hour away from Idaho and an hour away from Wyoming. Those are the two places I love the most — the two places that mean the most to me — they're the heart of the Rocky Mountain West, the best preserved, the places you can go and get a long way from anybody, anything," he says.

"There's not a part of Idaho I don't love. It has sagebrush, aspen, flat farmland — it's God's country."

Hill cut his teeth singing in little towns like Minidoka, Rupert and Twin Falls. He's recorded in Bellevue at Bruce Tinner studio.

"And he'll get another chance to visit Idaho this weekend when he performs at 7 p.m. Saturday evening at the nextStage Theatre as part of the 12th Annual Trailing of the Sheep Festival. Tickets, $20, are available at D.L. Evans Bank in Halley, Ketchum/Sun Valley Heritage and Ski Museum, and iconoclast Books in Ketchum.

Hill will perform a solo acoustic program featuring material from six albums, including his 2007 album, "What A Man's Got to Do," "Deeper Than Mud," "Trail Through Yesterday" and "Call You Cowboy."

And he'll even sing a few sheep songs.

"There might have been a time a cowboy might have been too proud to sing about sheep. But I'm not that way. I'm a realist and I think we have to embrace and honor all kinds of agriculture," says Hill, who's been called "the new voice of the West."

He has been awarded the Academy of Western Artists Album of the Year and the Male Vocalist of the Year.

"I think of myself a poet first — I've written volumes and volumes of poetry. But I figure songs are the best way to share that poetry," says Hill, who even writes verse on the ski lift at Park City.

"I really try to influence people's way of thinking about the way they see the West, in particular the values of the cowboy and those people whose lives are still connected to the land and livestock. Land stewardship is one of our most treasured American values."

Bruins, Tigers square off tonight in Jerome

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

The Jerome Tigers and Twin Falls Bruins will renew their annual football rivalry tonight, the final time before the dynamic changes with next year's introduction of Canyon Ridge High School and the new Great Basin Conference.

Recently, the series has gone back and forth as the winner of this game overcame a multiple-game losing streak. In 2006, Jerome defeated Twin Falls 35-34 in double overtime to end a 10-game losing skid. In 2007, the Bruins broke an 18-game losing streak with their 41-24 victory. Neither team is in such a position this season, though the Bruins are struggling with a 1-4 (1-1 Region Four-Five-Six) start this season. Jerome is 4-1 (1-0 Great Basin Conference West) and coming off a bye week.

"I hate to bring the 'Battle of the Bridge' or whatever you guys call it into play, but for years and years and years Twin Falls played Jerome, and for years and years and years Twin Falls for the most part has taken care of Jerome," Tigers coach Gary Krumm said. "Hopefully, mentally our kids can overcome the thinking. We think we have a pretty good product, but we've got to prove it on Friday night." Senior wide receiver Zach Ingraham agreed with his coach.

"We need to focus, be mentally prepared for the game and do what we've been doing all year long," he said. "No mistakes, and everything will just come out on top when that buzzer hits zero at the end of the game."

The Bruins have put the previous five weeks behind them and are looking forward to a second victory, but the offense must find a way to produce points early in the game. A Twin Falls box score has not featured more than seven points during the first half with the exception of the road win at Madison. Quarterback Kyleon Myers was sidelined for the season after a concussion in the Highland game two weeks ago, leaving the offense to sophomore T.J. Ellis and Myers' younger brother Tyler.

"We're going to see if maybe we can work a little two-quarterback system," Twin Falls coach Allyn Reynolds said.

The Bruins offense will need to sustain long drives to counter Jerome's quick-strike passing game, led by senior quarterback Jake Lammers, who has 15 touchdown passes and nearly 1,200 yards of offense through five games.

"That's kind of our game plan going into it: keep everything in front and not get beat by the big play," Reynolds said.

Key players on both sides are still injured. Bruins Casey Faught (RB/LB) and Cannon Clark (TE/DL) are still out, but Twin Falls regained running back and linebacker D.J. Gilbert last week and could play him more tonight as well as Brad Jaisch at offensive tackle.

"They've been talking some smack, saying they're going to beat us, so it's pumped us up more to go play. We're all excited," said Gilbert.

For Jerome, linebacker Wade Bennett will return, though Kris Cook and Jordan Roberts are also still out. Sophomore Milton Hernandez is just one of a handful of underclassmen that has stepped up in recent weeks to fill those voids.

Idaho's Komar looks to get back on track

By Josh Wright
Times-News correspondent

MOSCOW — Before this fall, Max Komar could always see a natural progression in his football career. As a small but gritty freshman at Idaho, he found a place in Dennis Erickson's rotation and corralled 17 passes.

A year later, he bloomed into the Vandals' leading receiver.

"So I was kind of expecting big things out of myself this year," said Komar, a 5-foot-10 redshirt junior. "Coming into this year, I wanted to become that go-to guy that we're looking for."

"I wouldn't say I took a backseat, but I'm not really getting the chances I thought I'd be getting."

Perhaps the chief reason Komar's playing time has waned is due to the emergence of true freshman Preston Davis. Alongside Maurice Shaw, who's sidelined with a high ankle sprain, the ultra-athletic Davis has provided speed on the outside for the 1-5 Vandals. But improved depth isn't the only explanation why Komar has he is on pace for just over half the 30 he had in 2007. "I need to see more consistency from him," coach Robb Akey said. "He's a Wash., native admits his focus hasn't been as sharp as it should be. After growing accustomed to more playing time, Komar said he's labored to get in a groove mentally once he reaches the field. Last week, for example, he

Weather trumps Magic Valley Speedway events

By Linda Brittan
Times-News correspondent

Another weekend forecast of cold, wet weather has prompted Magic Valley Speedway promoter Eddy McKean to cancel the Second Annual Falls Classic.

"We have had good weather... up until these past few weekends," McKean said in a statement released this week. "I have been trying to get the Fall Classic event in for two weekends now. This weekend's forecast is to bring snow to the valley floor and it is with torn emotions, promoter versus race car driver, that I am forced to close the 2008 season at the Magic Valley Speedway."

Originally scheduled for Oct. 4-5, events that were postponed until this week ended included the championship showdown for the MV Pipe Thunder Stocks, Quale's Electronics Hornets and the Jokers.

The most closely contested race in the 2008 championship bid at MVS involved Magic Valley Pipe Thunder Stocks drivers Steve Edens and Spencer Meyer. A mere five points separated the pair with just one last shot at the title scheduled for Sunday.

"I was looking forward to battling it out with Spencer (Meyer)," Edens said. "I had the car as fast as I have had it all year and I think it would have been a good race."

GREAT BASIN WEST SOCCER TOURNAMENT

Jerome strolls into finals with win over Wood River

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

The Jerome Tigers took stock in their brief boys soccer state tournament appearance last year, noting the level at which Bonneville and Moscow played. They've waded through 16 games this season, without a loss, to put themselves in a position to get a shot at proving they have attained that level.

Now they're just one game away from getting that chance. Fermin Martinez scored four times, upping his season total to 25, and Gabriel Pulido added two more as the Tigers breezed past Wood River 7-0 in Jerome on Thursday, advancing to the Great Basin Conference West championship game.

Jerome (15-0-1) got up early and kept its foot on the Wolverines' throats, scoring three times in the first 20 minutes of the game to the delight of a significantly larger than normal crowd that included the regular fans, the Jerome girls soccer team and the Tiger football team, which took a break from its preparation for today's big game with Twin Falls to take in the first 20 minutes.

"I motivated us a lot, and we wanted to score more goals and win a lot more for them," Martinez said of the other teams showing up for added support.

The first of Jerome's seven goals came just three minutes into the game, and from one of the team's least likely sources.

Defender Jovany Ortiz found himself in the Wood River penalty area with just one man to beat. Ortiz used a basketball post-up move to shed the defender toward his right, then swiveled to his left and smashed the ball into the net.

Martinez followed with two of his four goals in the next 17 minutes, and Pulido struck in first-half stoppage

Emergency keeper helps Bobcats advance

By Ryan How
Times-News writer

Burley junior goalkeeper Brent Lee admitted that he was afraid.

Lee made his second-ever appearance in goal for his team's first-round Great Basin Conference West tournament game against rival Minico on Thursday. The Spartans bombarded him with shots from all angles, providing the chance to either hold under pressure or be the hero.

Luckily for No. 3-seeded Burley, Lee chose the latter, giving the Bobcats a dramatic 1-0 win over the No. 2-seeded Spartans in Rupert. "It was kind of scary," Lee said. "Before the game I was really nervous and it seemed like as we got further into the game I got a little more confident. I just try not to think about it too much and just do it."

Lee, who usually plays fullback, was moved to goalkeeper after starter Taylor Whitehead broke his wrist in practice last week. It's a position Lee's never played before.

"I made some really critical saves for them," Minico coach Armando Tapia said. Burley scored in the 12th minute when Luis Miramontes delivered a corner kick that Pablo Marin headed toward the far post. Jorge Rios was there to finish with a header into the net.

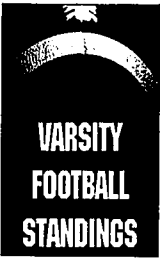

"We got our morale back up and we came into this game with our heads high," said Rios. "That's how you have to come into every game."

Minico's Jorge Carrillo almost had the equalizer in the 27th minute, but couldn't finish from point-blank range. The Spartans poured on the pressure in the second half, including three shots in the 66th minute that could have just as easily

Dietrich's Stoddard settles in to new spot

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Calling Jeram Stoddard a four-year starter is accurate. On the other hand, labeling him a first-year starter is correct as well.

After spending three seasons as a speedy receiver in Dietrich's offense, the 6-2, 190-pound senior moved to running back this fall. The change hasn't been without difficulties. "It's been a little different for me to handle, learning the offense from the backfield and learning totally different blocking schemes," said Stoddard.

Coming off a 2007 trip to the Class 1A Division II semifinals, the Blue Devils struggled to a 0-3 start this season.

In those losses, Stoddard scored six touchdowns. But the last of those

MAGIC VALLEY PREP ATHLETE OF THE WEEK

defenses. But the last of those touchdowns, a 56-32 setback against Richfield Sept. 12, saw Stoddard settle into his new spot, scoring three rushing touchdowns.

Since then, Stoddard has scored 14 touchdowns and ripped off some major rushing yards as Dietrich has evened his record to 3-3.

"I'm 10 times more comfortable now than the beginning of season," said Stoddard. He's more confident in his new spot as well.

All that showed in last week's 66-20 win over Camas County as Stoddard rushed for scores of 17, 53, 55, 64 and 35 yards, while also catching a 45-yard touchdown pass.

"It was pretty exciting," said Stoddard, who also scored five times in a rout of Rockland Sept. 19.

"Jaren has performed well all year," said Dietrich coach Ed Simons Jr., "but he's really picking it up lately."

Today, Stoddard and his teammates face their biggest regular-season challenge: the season's hosting No. 2-ranked Carey. Stoddard says he and his teammates need to stay pumped up and focused throughout the contest and "play every play like it's the last."

With three straight wins, the approach appears to be working, especially for the elusive Stoddard, who says his strengths are his speed and quickness of the ball. "I try not to dance, but go straight through the hole and accelerate," he said.

And when he does? "You just kiss him goodbye," said Camas County coach Randy Jewett.

Newly balanced Declo offense running smooth

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

Declo head coach Kelly Kidd enjoys throwing the football as much as he likes rock canals.

His motto: "Three things can happen when you throw the football, and two of them are bad."

But opposing defenses are catching on to the Hornets' base Wing-T offense. They needed more variety to keep foes honest.

Plus, Kidd has found a talented quarterback in Jeremy Jenkins, who can burn defenses with his arm.

"I don't have a problem throwing the ball," Lewis said. "But if we have to rely on passing all the time, it's not going to work. The better we run, the better our passing will be."

ning game early to throw it," Kidd said. "So consequently we probably weren't as good as we could have been running early (in the season)."

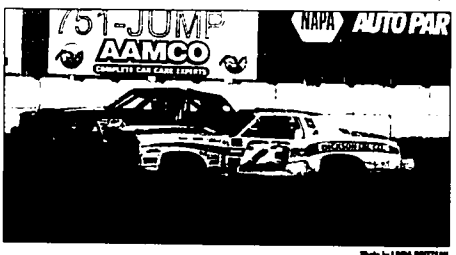

With its passing game developed, last week Declo ensured its rushing attack was equally dangerous by racking up 392 yards on the ground in a 47-3 blowout of previously unbeaten Wendell of Class 3A.

"(Wendell) has beaten everybody in our conference, so we wanted to set a tone for everybody going to play in the next couple weeks," said running back Tyler Briggs.

Tonight at 7 p.m., Declo (3-2) opens its Canyon Conference schedule hosting Valley (1-4). Next week Declo travels to Glenns Ferry. The Hornets are poised to run the table in the three-team conference, which would give them a favorable seed and allow them to host in the Class 2A state playoffs.

Lewis credits Declo's newfound rushing attack to an emphasis on conditioning and blocking up front. Driving a blocking sled every day works wonders for linemen.

"I always said in a few weeks we're going to be a really good football team. Kid said, 'we were' where we thought we should have been a couple weeks ago."

Steve Edens (23) and Spencer Meyer have kept things close in the Thrasher Stacks division as the season wound down at Magic Valley Speedway.

Electronics Hornets championship. His closest competitor, Daniel Shirley, had the next best shot at the title but had to overcome a 30-point deficit in order to pass Gilligan in the final standings.

"I really wanted to win this thing. I'm trying to catch up with my daughter," said Gilligan, referencing Renee Lopez's 2006 Queen Bee championship.

Steven Edens, Jr. and Anthony Meyer were ranked one-two heading into the final scheduled Jr. Singers events. However, Edens possessed a virtually unbreakable 82-point advantage over Meyer.

Skinner leads No. 21 Wake past Clemson

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Riley Skinner threw a 7-yard touchdown pass to D.J. Boldin with 5:28 left to help No. 21 Wake Forest beat Clemson 12-7 on Thursday night.

Skinner was 22-of-34 for 186 yards and led the decisive 15-play, 78-yard drive in the fourth quarter for the Demon Deacons (4-1, 2-0 Atlantic Coast Conference), Wake Forest outgained Clemson 342-198 to snap a two-game losing streak in the series and remain the only Atlantic Division team with a perfect conference record.

Shane Poplansky — starting in place of injured kicker Sam Swank — had field goals of 22 and 32 yards for Wake Forest, and a dominant defense held Clemson to 21 yards rushing on 23 carries.

Cullen Harper was 15-of-35 for 177 yards with an interception for Clemson (3-3, 1-2) in the Tigers' second straight loss. His 10-yard touchdown pass to Jacob Ford with 7 seconds left in the third quarter put Clemson up 7-3.

Alphonso Smith's school-record-tying 17th career interception gave Wake Forest the ball in the Clemson 20 and set up Poplansky's second field goal, which pulled Wake Forest to 7-6 with just under 13 minutes to play.

Then, after forcing a punt, it was Skinner's turn to rally the Demon Deacons.

Taking over with about 10½ minutes left, he systematically marched Wake Forest downfield by completing seven of nine passes for 68 yards and converting three third downs — including a 28-yard pass to Boldin on third-and-24.

Boldin found Boldin in the right flat and the receiver cut back through two defenders and into the end zone for his first career touchdown. Skinner's 2-point conversion pass for Ben Wooster was batted away.

Clemson got no further than its own 39 on its last possession, with Inabekker Stanley Armer breaking up Harper's fourth-and-20 pass with about 3½ minutes left to seal coach Jim Groves' third win over the Tigers in eight tries.

Bruin boys, girls at crossroads ahead of region tournament

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

They may be headed in different directions, but the Twin Falls boys and girls soccer teams find themselves at a similar juncture.

Both have failed to win a single Region Four-Five-Six game this season, but open up tournament play with a winnable match at Highland on Friday. The teams and regular season, but Twin Falls is hoping for more good fortune than it got in the pair of draws.

"Both times we should have won (against Highland), so I think we're gonna give it all completely and hope we win," said Twin Falls coach Jose Morales.

A win could be just the tonic for a team that has been the tournament could take one of the two available state tournament berths.

"We've definitely narrowed it down, competitive wise. I think Idaho Falls is a great team, probably the team to beat. But everyone we've played is a great team and we're getting better," Morales said. "I think it's open for anybody from what I've seen this year. Of course, you can look at a team and pick out what flaws they have and what they're successful at. But I think it's open to anybody."

While the Twin Falls boys are still in search of their first win, the girls are just trying to hang on to a lead.

Blowing the lead in both games against Madison resulted in the Bruins losing four points they could have had had-to-head against the Bobcats, securing draws both times instead of wins. Just holding one of the two leads would have given Twin Falls some-field edge against Madison in the region tournament opener on Friday.

Instead, the Bruins will head to Rexburg with a trip to the conference championship game on the line. But they aren't dwelling on the past.

"We probably should have won both games. We've gotten ahead in both games and haven't been able to hold onto the lead but that's something we really need to get figured out," said Twin Falls head coach Katie Kauffman. "But we're in the conference tournament now, what happened in the regular season doesn't matter anymore."

If the Bruins can get past Madison, they would at worst guarantee home field for the second-place game. That could prove vital in a tournament that — with Idaho Falls and Skyline lagging well behind the rest of the league — is essentially a competition between three teams to two berths to state.

"That's the way I see it, it could be any of the three teams," said Kauffman. "It just depends on who shows up and who wants it more. I know our team really wants it and I think we're going to show that when it comes down to it."

Parity reigns in HDSC

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

What a difference a year makes.

Over the past few seasons it's been Bliss and the Community School dominating the boys' soccer landscape in the Class 3A High Desert Soccer Conference. Not so this time around.

In 2008, as many as five of the league's seven teams can be considered contenders required to make it to the state tournament, but only two will be able to go. One of those five won't even be around after this weekend, as the opening round is single-elimination.

Wendell picked up the first-round bye and home-field advantage by virtue of claiming 29 points in the conference's regular-season schedule. Bliss finished second with 25 and Buhl had 23.

"This season has been real competitive. All the teams are real close. A goal here, a goal there and things could have gone differently and we're just going to win any way," said Wendell coach Jim Gons. "I think the conference is just getting stronger and stronger. I think the level of soccer in this conference has really improved and that makes it better for everyone."

The Trojans get the winner of a first-round matchup that is both mouth-watering and a bit unfortunate.

The Community School and Gooding, two of the top three teams last season, will play each other in Gooding on Saturday for the right to simply stay alive in the tournament. It's an unfortunate reality given the league's unexpected parity this season, but that's the eyes of many coaches it's actually a good thing.

"This is the first time we're not hosting (a first-round game). It's new territory for us ... it's just the way it is, and that happens. You have to play someone good sometime," said Community School coach Richard Whitlaw. "We just tell the seniors it could be last game, so make it something you could remember. It could be the end of the road."

Said Bliss head coach Daniel Krapp: "It's great for the league to have this parity. I think one of the problems this league has had at the state level was that they'd dominate in this league and not really play anyone tough. Then when they faced the McCall Donnellys and teams like that they'd be intimidated. The teams that get to state this year won't be that way when they get there because of how tough our league has been."

Throw in the fact that Declo held the Community School and Buhl to draws this season and Filer shocked Bliss, and it truly is anyone's guess as to which two teams will emerge from a tightly-contested conference. Learn a trip to state the hard way.

HDSC girls

The girls' side of the HDSC appears far more straightforward. Two teams will go directly to state, while the third-place team will play the runner up from District VI for another berth at state.

Buhl and the Community School have been the class of the league all season long, but Filer also hung around and gave the top two some good games. It's a far cry from the days of old where the Catamounts just ran roughshod over the league.

With Autumn Yurbe and Mercedes Pearson, the Indians have a fearsome partnership up front, and that duo is augmented by the most nimble, well-organized class of 14 regular-season games. Buhl conceded just 11 goals and had nine shutouts.

Just like the boys playoff, the tournament is single-elimination for the first day. They'll play to avoid the class of the elimination bracket. However, with the extra half-second on offer for the girls, the two semifinal winners will automatically clinch a berth to state and the semifinal losers will have to enter into the play-in game.

The Wildcats may have to pull an upset in order to make it two state trips in as many tries since the program began, but whichever team ends up being the play-in game should have a shot at getting there just the same.

"I think we have a great chance of sending three teams to state. I looked at District VI and while whoever comes out will be tough, they're kind of all over the map." Filer coach Shane Hild said. "Of course, you never want to leave it to a trip to Pocatello to earn your way to state."

Wood River routs Burley to reach GBW title game

Devan Anton, Delaney Fox, Ashley Hesteness, Sam Johnson, Megan Morrell and Alise Sweek each scored one goal for Wood River.

JEROME DOMINATES HOME TRI-MEET

Mackenzie Chojanaky is simply better than the competition. Significantly better. Chojanaky turned in a time of 19 minutes, 59.9 seconds at the Jerome Cross Country Tri-meet on Thursday, bettering the pack by more than 2 minutes.

Meanwhile, Jerome's boys swept the second through fifth events to help the Tigers sweep the team titles in the three-squad affair.

Jerry Tolman led Jerome, finishing third in 18:05.7. Eddie Escobedo was second, Logan Parker fourth and Eric Tolman fifth.

Jerome's Mikevell Clegg was second on the girls side in 22:11.

time to make it 4-0 at the break.

"I tell the kids to always be looking to score, no matter where you're starting out (in the lineup)," said Jerome head coach Robert Garcia. "We wanted them to get out to a fast start, and not give (Wood River) any hopes."

Wood Falls never really threatened to score from the run of play, but the Wolverines did create a few chances for set pieces that were troublesome for the Jerome defense. But the rearguard and goalkeeper Roman Vasquez did the job and kept the clean sheet.

With the loss, the Wolverines drop into an elimination game at Minico, set for Saturday at 11 a.m. But all eyes will almost certainly be on the action in Jerome, where a rematch of last year's championship game will take place at the same time.

Yep, it's Jerome-Burley. And the Tigers were stoked to hear the news shortly after their win.

"I wanted Burley," Puidio said.

Last year, the Tigers stole the GBW title from Burley on the Bobcats' home field. Jerome heads into Saturday's tilt confident there won't be a turnabout this time around.

"They were champions (going into the title game) last year and we took it away from them, and this time we're defending and they want to take it away. But it's not going to happen to us."

Puidio said. "We want to show everyone that we aren't just some team that came out of nowhere (last season), and we're going to prove it."

been goals. Lee came up with big saves to preserve the lead.

It was the third game between the rivals this season to end in a 0-0 score, as the schools split their regular season matches.

"Sometimes it just happens where you can't find the net. Sometimes when you need goals the most is when it's the hardest to get them," said Tapia. "Burley played good. They scored that goal and they defended very well."

It was a cold, blustery day that inhibited either team from establishing much momentum.

"With weather like this, one goal was going to do it, said Burley coach Wes Nyblade.

Burley moves on to play at No. 1 seed Jerome Saturday at 11 a.m. The undefeated Tigers swept the Bobcats in the regular season by scores of 3-1 and 4-0.

Minico hosts No. 4 seed Wood River Saturday at 11 a.m. The Spartans and Wolverines split their regular season matches. Minico won 3-1 in Rupert and Wood River won 2-1 in Hailey.

"This is just a little bump," Tapia said. "We're still in a solid race, not going to give up that easy. We're confident that we still have more soccer to go."

Rays ready for ALCS ... and rivalry with Red Sox

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Winning creates a rivalry, the Boston Red Sox and Tampa Bay Rays claim, rather than years of testy relations between the teams.

"That was the message coming out of the AL championship series Thursday, with both sides trying to play down a history of brawling that's adding spice to the buildup."

ALCS Game 1 Red Sox at Rays 6:30 p.m., TBS

"Had blood?" smiling Boston slugger David Ortiz said. "There's no bad blood. This is not the WWE. It's a baseball game, bro."

"I mean, come on. I walk out there and they're hugging me, and I hug them back. It's a game. Sometimes you have things happening. It stays on the field. I'm not like you're going to walk to the parking lot and wait for somebody to be so nice to you."

The wait for the start of the ALCS is almost over. Game 1 in the best-of-seven series is Friday night.

"I know a lot is being made of past pugilistic events. But that has nothing to do with today. Nothing," Rays manager Joe Maddon said.

"Those were when the Devil Rays were really struggling, and the games had an entirely different tone to them. We're a different team. We're a different organization now."

They're AL East champions, to be more precise. And, looking to end what could be Boston's quest for a third World Series title in five years.

Now, that's something that can turn Rays-Red Sox into a genuine rivalry, Maddon said.

"We've had one incident this year. That to me also is ancient history," Maddon said, referring to a bench-clearing brawl June 5 at Fenway Park that led to eight suspensions.

"The rivalry is being built because we're good. That's why. We're in the same division. We're doing good. ... It has to begin somewhere. It's got to be this genesis where everything begins. That's what's happening right now. This year truly is building into a legitimate rivalry, whereas in the past I think it was more fabricated."

The tension between the teams lingers in 2008. Boston's Matt Damon and Tampa Bay's Gerald Williams in the first inning of a game in which the only hit the Boston ace yielded was a ninth-inning single to John Halaby.

Williams rushed the mound and was ejected. And, there's been trouble ever since.

Tampa Bay's Carl Crawford was one of the players suspended in June when Boston's Coco Crisp charged the mound after being hit with a pitch by James Shields.

Crawford likened the most recent scrap to a younger brother finally deciding to stand up to an older brother who's always pushing him around.

Crawford noted it was not so long ago that the Red Sox were a similar position with the New York Yankees.

"We're a lot alike," Crawford said. "And some of the things we've been going through together are going after the same thing, they don't get along. ... It's not personal, though, between the players. It's what happens in baseball."

Boston manager Jerry Francona agreed that with what's at stake in the ALCS, past skirmishes are the furthest thing from the minds of the players.

Shields will start Game 1 for Tampa Bay, facing 10-game winner Daisuke Matsuzaka.

"You want to sink around for the whole series," said Tampa Bay's Johnny Gomes, who like Shields, was suspended for his role in the June fight. "No one is going to act out. This isn't the time or the place."

The Rays won the season series 10-8, including eight of nine games at Tropicana Field. The Red Sox were 7-2 at Fenway Park, where the series shifts after Red Sox ace Josh Beckett faces Scott Kazmir in Game 2 on Friday. "I think it's a young team to believe they won't only could compete in the division, but win the pennant."

"There were people writing them off in May. They kept plugging away and winning games and ended up winning the American League East," Pedraza said.

"I've proved everybody wrong. They know they belong here and they're one of the best teams in baseball. If we want to advance to the World Series, we're going to have to play better than them."

Eight months ago in spring training — during which the Rays' roster scrapped to get a starting lineup for the summer. If we want something, we definitely have to take it," Maddon said.

"That's how you have to approach it. You're taking all the time in the most possible selfish way possible."

Phillies beat Dodgers 3-2 in NLCS opener

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pat Burrell, Chase Utley and the Philadelphia Phillies had more than enough power to offset Manny Ramirez in the NL championship series opener.

Utley and Burrell homered off tiring Derek Lowe in the sixth inning to back a strong performance by Cole Hamels, and the Phillies were a winner in their return to the NLCS, beating the Los Angeles Dodgers 3-2 Thursday night.

"It feels great, but you can't get too caught up in this," Burrell said. "We've got a lot of work to do."

Ramirez put the Dodgers ahead with a long RBI double in the first, just missing a two-run homer. But the Phillies' big bats answered in the sixth, when Burrell hit a go-ahead solo homer after Utley's two-run shot tied it.

Game 2 is Friday in Philadelphia, with Phillies right-hander Brett Myers facing Dodgers righty Chad Billingsley.

A lower back injury nearly sidelined Burrell in the first round against Milwaukee, and he almost got benched after going 0-for-8 in the first three games. But manager Charlie Manuel kept Burrell in the lineup, and Burrell responded with two homers and four RBIs in the clinching win over the Brewers.

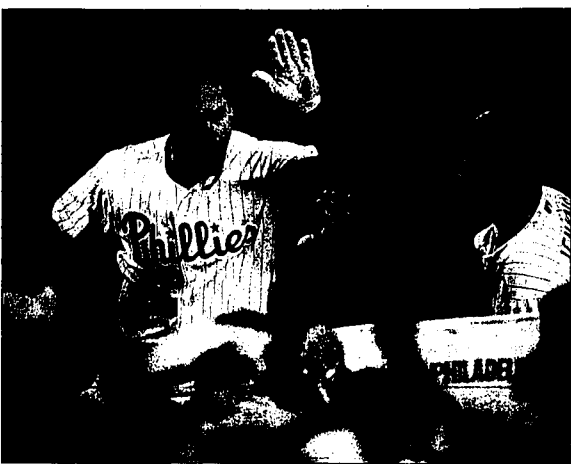

Hamels settled down after the first and wound up allowing two runs and six hits, striking out eight.

"I think the guy just geared it up a notch," Burrell said.

Ryan Madson pitched a scoreless eighth, and Brad Lidge finished with a perfect ninth for his third save of the postseason. Lidge is 44-for-44 in save chances this year.

Lowe cruised through the first five innings, allowing just four singles. But the right-hander with the hard slider couldn't make it out of the sixth.

The speedy Shane Victorino reached second base leading off on shortstop Rafael Furcal's throwing error. Utley ripped the net pitch into the seats in right-center for his first postseason homer in 29 at-bats, tying it at 2.

One out later, Burrell lined a 3-1 pitch into the left-field stands for a 3-2 lead, sending the sellout crowd into frenzy. While Burrell circled the bases, Lowe looked up at the fireworks going off beyond the swinging replica Liberty Bell that hangs beyond the outfield stands and waited for manager Joe Torre to walk to the mound.

Burrell high-fived teammates and got a curtain call from long-suffering fans, who waited 15 years to see the Phillies return to the NLCS.

"Dodgers is a pretty good hitter," Dodgers manager Joe Torre said. "I don't think the error had anything to do with what happened after that."

Los Angeles took a 1-0 lead in the first off Hamels, who tossed eight shutout innings against Milwaukee in Game 1 of the division series.

Andre Ethier hit a one-out double. With first base open, manager Charlie Manuel chose to let Hamels pitch to Ramirez. The slugger made them pay, hitting an RBI double high off the 19-foot wall just left of straightaway center.

Blake DeWitt's sacrifice fly in the fourth made it 2-0. Matt Kemp led off the inning with a looping ground-rule double down the right-field line. Kemp advanced to third on Casey Blake's grounder to shortstop and scored on DeWitt's fly to center.

Lowe's sinker was so sharp early on that he even got Jayson Werth to ground into his third double-play in 706 plate appearances since joining the Phillies last year. Lowe was 6-1 with a 1.27 ERA in his last 10 regular-season starts, including an 0.59 ERA in September. He beat Chicago in the opener of the division series as the Dodgers swept the heavily favored Cubs to reach the NLCS for the first time since winning the World Series in 1988.

Right from the start, fans waved their white-and-red "Fightin' Phils" towels and screamed "Beat LA," a chant first made popular by Boston fans as the Philadelphia 76ers were finishing off the Celtics to advance to the 1983 NBA Finals against the Los Angeles Lakers. The 76ers went on to beat the Lakers. It's the last championship this title-starved city has celebrated.

Aussie Green has early lead at Texas Open

SAN ANTONIO — Australia's Nathan Green shot an 8-under 62 on Thursday to take a two-stroke lead over Olin Browne and Paul Casey in the Texas Open.

Green, winless in three seasons on the PGA Tour, birdied nine of the first 16 holes before dropping a stroke on the par-3 17th and closing with a par.

Claxton and Browne, a three-time tour winner, had bogey-free 64s in sunny and warm conditions on La Cantera Golf Club's Resort Course.

Tim Herron, Greg Kraft, Patrick Sheehan, Jason Gore, Nick O'Hern and Chad Collins opened with 65s, and Paul Casey and Bob Towey topped a group at 66.

Defending champion Justin Leonard, the former University of Texas star seeking a record fourth victory in the event, shot a 70.

TWO SHARE LEAD AT LPGIA'S LONGS DRUGS CHALLENGE

DANVILLE, Calif. — Michele Redman and Sweden's Maria Hjorth shot 6-under 66s to share the first-round lead in the LPGIA Tour's Longs Drugs Challenge.

Redman and Hjorth both had seven birdies and a bogey on a sunny day at Blackhawk Country Club. In-Kyung Kim and Mikaela Pernell were tied for second at 67.

Norway's Suzann Pettersen, a playoff winner over top-ranked Lorena Ochoa, took a play at Blackhawk, with two strokes back at 68 along with LPGIA Championship winner Yani Tseng, Sarah Lee, Sarah Kemp, Meaghan Francella, Reilly Rankin and Wendy Ward.

Ochoa, a seven-time winner this year, opened with a 70. Santa Cruz resident Juli Inkster, the Hall of Famer who won in 1999 and 2000 at Twelve Bridges, also had a 70.

Bay Area star Paula Creamer, the Samsung World Championship winner last week at Half Moon Bay, had two double bogeys and an eagle in a 74. Ai Miyazaki, coming off a victory Sunday in the Japan Women's Open, shot a 72.

TWO TIED AT SENIOR PLAYERS CHAMPIONSHIP

TIMONIUM, Md. — Phil Blackmar, Bruce Fleisher and Des Smyth shot 5-under 65s to share the first-round lead in the Senior Players Championship, the fifth and final Champions Tour major of the year.

Blackmar holed out from the fairway for eagle to help offset four bogeys. Fleisher made four straight birdies early in his round, and Smyth had a bogey-free day to top the leaderboard. All three are winless this year.

Fred Funk, Scott Hoch, Bernhard Langer and Eduardo Romero opened with 66s and 19 players were within three strokes of the lead after an ideal day for scoring at the East Course at Baltimore Country Club.

Blackmar provided the highlight of the day with his approach shot on the 389-yard, par-4 10th hole. Blackmar's shot with a pitching wedge from 106 yards landed about 10 feet short of the cup and skipped in for an eagle.

Jay Haas, the tour's leading money winner, was at 4 under after six holes, but settled for a 67. Defending champion Loren Isomerts shot 68.

Komar isn't the only Vandal to be hindered by inconsistency.

The offense as a whole has often looked like it's on the verge of breaking out one moment, only to get mired in a prolonged run.

"We'll be on a roll, like kind of unstoppable," Davis said. "And then just something bad happens and it gets shut down. It gets a little frustrating. It gets to that point where you're almost starting to expect three-and-outs. That's not good."

"...When that happens, everybody's morale goes down."

It won't be any easier Saturday for Idaho to find a rhythm. The long-struggling club will travel to Fresno State (3-2, 0-1) for an 8 Injury update: While the Vandals' injury list isn't mushrooming from week to week, a few health concerns won't seem to go away. Shaw and defensive captain Shiloh Keo (shoulder) are expected to miss their third straight week of action.

Rain gives Jimmie Johnson pole at Charlotte

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Jimmie Johnson could only look at his car Thursday, spending most of the afternoon eating junk food in his team's hauler and watching it rain.

Before nightfall, the Sprint Cup points leader had been awarded more treats — the pole, the first pit stall, and likely five points for leading the first lap — for the Bank of America 500 on Saturday night.

Johnson hopes the gift will help him regain his dominance at Lowe's Motor Speedway. The steady drizzle that first canceled the afternoon practice session didn't subside, and NASCAR called off qualifying 90 minutes before it was scheduled to begin.

The field was set based on owner points. Johnson and Carl Edwards, 72 points behind the leader, will start on the front row Saturday night in the midpoint race in the Chase for the championship.

After winning five of six points races at the track from 2003-05, Johnson hasn't won since, coinciding with the track's resurfacing. He finished 39th in May's Coca-Cola 600 after blowing an engine.

"The advantage we had years back has kind of gone away," Johnson said. "Kasey Kahne has more momentum here than just about anyone so far over the last two or three years. We've been right there. We've been a good top five car, but I hope we can get that magic back and find it here."

Greg Bille, 77 points behind Johnson, will start third, followed by Jeff Burton, Clint Bowyer and Kevin Harvick.

Smith still smarting over Talladega

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — When Regan Smith passed Tony Stewart on the last lap at Talladega Superspeedway, he was certain he'd just earned his first Sprint Cup Series victory.

When NASCAR ruled the pass illegal, Smith figured he was for sure a career-best second. Still unhappy with his runner-up finish, he went to argue his case in the NASCAR office following Sunday's finish.

So imagine his surprise, while waiting for top NASCAR officials, Smith saw himself dropped to an 11th-place finish.

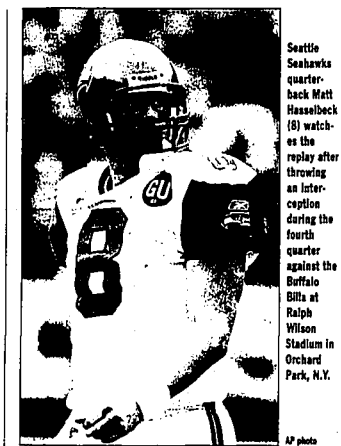

"I thought I was going to plead my case about if I was first or second," Smith said Thursday at Lowe's Motor Speedway. "I was sitting in the (NASCAR) hauler, literally sitting there, and it flashed up on the screen and it went from second down to 11th."

"And I said 'Whoa, whoa, whoa, what just happened here?' I was like 'Man, that's even worse yet.'"

And so went the saga of the rookie who appeared to use a gutsy move to beat a two-time series champion in a thrilling Talladega finish. Instead, Smith's pass of Stewart under the yellow out-of-bounds line at the bottom of the track was disqualified and his penalty was being dropped to the tail end of the lead lap.

He was adamant that he believed the rule was "something goes" on the last lap of a restrictor-plate race, and passing below the line was allowed so long as the driver could see the flagstand. Several other drivers, including two-time champion Jimmie Johnson, said they also interpreted the rule that way.

Hasselbeck out again, but not for Sunday's game

RENTON, Wash. — Status quo for Seahawks quarterback Matt Hasselbeck. Still no practice. Still on for Sunday's game against Green Bay.

The only thing that changed for three-time Pro Bowl passer on Thursday from Wednesday was the color of the team cap he was wearing — conspicuous, neon green instead of blue.

He again stood and watched practice with a black wrap over his bruised right knee.

(One day after coach Mike Holmgren said Hasselbeck "has to play" for the Seahawks' 0-3 against the Packers (2-3), third-string quarterback Charlie Frye again ran the offense. No. 2 quarterback Seneca Wallace is out indefinitely with a calf injury.)

Offensive coordinator Gil Hennessey reiterated Hasselbeck will play even if he doesn't practice Friday, but Hasselbeck would prefer Hasselbeck get one day of work in this week with a jumbled receiving corps.

Hasselbeck was asked if Seattle's starter since 2002, who set most of the team's passing records for a season in 2007 but is the NFL's lowest-rated passer this season, is one guy who doesn't need to practice to play.

"No, you're never there as a quarterback, because it's the rhythm," Hasselbeck said. "Especially now, with the new receivers."

Seattle had six wide receivers hurt through last month.

And there was precedence. Dale Earnhardt Jr. won at Talladega in 2003 by passing Matt Kenseth below the yellow line, and Johnny Benson earned second-place in a Truck Series race at Daytona last year by passing below the line.

A day after the finish, NASCAR clarified that passing under the line would never be tolerated on any lap.

Smith said if knew Sunday that the pass was prohibited, he would have stayed in line — a tactic he's certain would have caused a huge accident.

"If we were to go back two weeks from now, same situation, same circumstances at the end of the race, knowing what I know now, there would have been a big crash at the end of the race because I wouldn't have budged," Smith said. "I would have stuck my nose there and left it there."

Smith was behind Stewart on the final lap, with Stewart blocking every one of Smith's moves. As Stewart moved high one time, Smith pulled around side him and Stewart quickly came back down to prevent the pass. To avoid the two cars running into each other, Smith said he ducked below the line and completed the pass. He was already in the process of making.

He returned to the racing surface in the lead and beat Stewart to the finish line, his crew exploding in celebration on pit road. A stunned Stewart waited for the call, which finally ordered him to Victory Lane for his first win at the Alabama track and first win of the season.

"I feel bad for him because it was the race of his life. I sympathize from his standpoint, and it's frustrating when you know that at the very least you should have finished second," Stewart said. "But to get the one-lap penalty like that and be at the tail end of the lead lap, it's hard to swallow when you leave."

Stewart was the first driver ever penalized for driving below the yellow line, which he did late in the first race — Daytona in 2001 — that the rule was in effect.

A victory could have done wonders for both Smith and Dale Earnhardt Inc., his slumping race team. Although Smith leads the rookie of the year standings, his car has lacked a full-time sponsor all season and DEI is looking for funding for three of its four cars next year.

He returned to a sympathetic garage area Thursday and received many condolences and a general feeling that he'd been robbed.

"If I had a dollar for every one of them, we wouldn't have to get a sponsor for this race car for next year," Smith joked.

"My Web site crashed three times because so many fans got on there. That's been the cool part of this. I got a lot of support."

Smith and Stewart talked at a Wednesday night charity event where Smith donated $1,000 to keep Stewart in "jail" during the event.

"It was fun to have Regan there," Stewart said. "I told him I know it's not going to be any consolation, but I said I know exactly what you were going through when you went into the trailer to talk about it because I was the first one to go in and have that conversation. It made him feel a little bit better about that I at least understood."

Dallas police were called to an upscale downtown hotel because of the disturbance late Tuesday night. No charges were filed.

While not planning any discipline for Adam Jones, Jerry Jones acknowledged that he was "very disappointed" in that we're having to deal with this."

It remained unclear if the NFL planned any discipline.

Adam Jones was fully reinstated by commissioner Roger Goodell just before the season opener after being suspended for 17 months and missing the entire 2007 season because of numerous off-field problems. He has started all five games with the Cowboys.

Witnesses say Edwards, Harvick fight in garage

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Greg Bille isn't angry with teammate Carl Edwards for starting a 12-car crash at Talladega Superspeedway.

Neither is Matt Kenseth.

Kevin Harvick? Not quite over it.

Witnesses say Edwards and Harvick scuffled Thursday in the Nationwide Series race at Lowe's Motor Speedway after Edwards walked into Harvick's garage stall and the two engaged in a heated argument.

Harvick appeared to try to walk away but, witnesses said, Edwards reached for his shoulder to turn him back around. Harvick then shoved Edwards, who stumbled onto the hood of Harvick's car, and the two had to be separated.

Witnesses claimed a member of Harvick's crew had Edwards in a headlock as numerous people tried to separate the two.

Harvick was unavailable for comment.

Edwards didn't deny the two argued, but wouldn't discuss the incident.

"The deal with me and Harvick is between me and him and there's nothing else to talk about," he said. "I'm not talking about that. That's just what it is. We know where each other stand and that's it."

Although one photographer from CIA Stock Photography caught the moment, he refused to show the photos to The Associated Press.

North Korea preparing to restart atomic facility

VIENNA — North Korea moved closer Thursday to restarting its nuclear arms program, announcing that it wants to reactivate the facility that produced its atomic bomb and banning U.N. inspectors from the site.

The U.S. said the moves did not mean the death of international efforts to persuade the North to recommit to an agreement that offers it diplomatic and economic concessions in exchange for nuclear disarmament.

Despite the gloomy implications of North Korea's moves, they could be a negotiating ploy: The year needed to start its reprocessing plant could be used to meet more concessions from the regime's interlocutors.

John Bolton, who has served as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations and U.S. undersecretary of state in charge of the North Korean nuclear dossier, suggested the North's tactics were working.

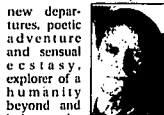

Bolton, a critic of what he considers U.S. leniency with North Korea, who remains well-connected with senior Bush administration officials, told The Associated Press that Washington was planning to meet the communist country's key demand "within a week" by removing it from a state department list of nations that sponsor terrorism.

France's Le Clezio wins Nobel literature prize

For those Americans — and there may not be many — seeking great foreign authors who have yet to be discovered in English, the Nobel Prize judges present a fresh candidate: Jean-Marie Gustave Le Clezio, this year's winner of the literature prize.

Le Clezio, 68, was cited by the Swedish academy Thursday as an "author of new departures, poetic adventure and sensual ecstasy, explorer of a humanity beyond and below the reigning civilization." His works include "Terra Amata," "The Book of Flights" and "Desert," a 1980 novel the academy said "contains magnificent images of a lost culture in the North African desert contrasted with a depiction of Europe seen through the eyes of unwanted immigrants."

Speaking to reporters in Paris, Le Clezio said he was very honored and the news left him feeling "some kind of incredulity, and then some kind of awe, and then some kind of joy and mirth."

Asked if he deserved the prize, he replied, "Why not?" Le Clezio had been considered a strong contender and Thursday's announcement continued a decade-long trend of European and European-oriented authors receiving the Nobel, with recent winners including Britain's Doris Lessing and Harold Pinter, Austria's Elfriede Jelinek and Inre Kertész of Hungary.

No American has won since Toni Morrison in 1993 and no American was expected to win — Le Clezio did put in a plug Thursday for Philip Roth.

Suspected U.S. missile strike reported in Pakistan

DERA ISMAIL KHAN — A suspected U.S. missile strike targeted two areas in a Pakistani tribal region near the Afghanistan border on Thursday, killing at least nine people, Pakistani intelligence officials said.

Also Thursday, bombings targeting police killed 10 people and wounded 14 in Pakistan's volatile northwest and the capital "reminders of the challenge facing the country as its lawmakers pursue a national anti-terror consensus."

The alleged missile strikes appeared to be part of a surge in U.S. cross border assaults from Afghanistan on alleged militant targets in Pakistan, which have strained ties between the two anti-terror allies.

One missile strike occurred at a house in Tappi village in North Waziristan tribal region. Some of those killed were believed to be foreigners, said two local Pakistani intelligence officials, citing reports from informants and agents.

A local tribesman, Shoalb Dawar, said Taliban militants surrounded the house. He said drones were heard in the area before the strike.

A second alleged strike was reported at a house in the village of Dande Darpa Khel. The site was near a seminary of veteran Taliban commander Jalaluddin Haqqani, considered an archenemy of the U.S. No casualties were immediately reported.

Dalai Lama hospitalized following checkup

NEW DELHI — The Dalai Lama was hospitalized in New Delhi, his spokesman said early today, just days after a medical checkup cleared the Tibetan spiritual leader to resume foreign travel.

Tenzin Taklha told The Associated Press that the Dalai Lama was admitted to a New Delhi hospital for "further consultations with doctors."

Taklha declined to say when he was hospitalized or provide any details on his condition. He said he expected more information to be released later in the day.

The Press Trust of India news agency reported that the spiritual leader was admitted to the Sir Ganga Ram Hospital in the Indian capital. The hospital's duty officer Dr. Priyank Tyagi would not comment on the report.

In August, the 73-year-old Dalai Lama was admitted to a Mumbai hospital and underwent tests for abdominal discomfort. Doctors advised him to cancel a planned trip to Europe and rest, saying he was suffering from exhaustion.

The Dalai Lama arrived in the Indian capital Monday from Dharmasala, a north Indian hill town where he set up his headquarters after fleeing Tibet in 1959 following a failed uprising against Chinese rule. He underwent the medical check on Tuesday and was scheduled to be back in Dharmasala on Thursday, according to information provided earlier by Chhime R. Chhoekyapa, another spokesman.

At the time, Chhoekyapa declined to say why the Dalai Lama needed another checkup less than six weeks after he was admitted to a Mumbai hospital and underwent tests for abdominal discomfort. He spent four days in Mumbai's Lilavati Hospital.

SYRIA

Syria frees two detained U.S. journalists

DAMASCUS — Two American journalists whose disappearance prompted a U.S. Embassy alert and a wide search turned up in Syrian custody Thursday after being detained while trying to sneak into the country with smugglers, Syrian officials said.

Holi Chmela, 27, and Taylor Luck, 23, were released later in the day in good condition, said the U.S. State Department.

"They are at our embassy in Damascus, they are in good shape and they are getting in touch with their families," said deputy State Department spokesman Robert Wood.

The U.S. Embassy in Beirut launched a search Wednesday with Lebanese authorities after the two failed to return to Amman, Jordan, last weekend from a vacation in Lebanon. They work for an English-language newspaper, the Jordan Times.

The two had last been heard from on Oct. 1, when they checked out of a Beirut hotel, reportedly headed to the northern port city of Tripoli, site of sectarian clashes and attacks by Islamic militants in recent months.

It was not known why they tried to sneak across the border into Syria. They were on vacation, but may have sought to report on the widespread smuggling between Lebanon and Syria, particularly through back roads in remote parts of the north.

They appeared to have walked into a Syrian troop buildup deployed on the border to crack down on smuggling and Islamic militants that Damascus says infiltrate Syria from the area.

2009 JEEP WRANGLER SUV BRAND ICON

RoadWorthy!
By Ken Chester, Jr.
Motor News Media Corporation

Billed as the most capable off-road vehicle in the world, Jeep introduced for the 2007 model year. Equipped with an all-new frame, exterior and interior design, the Wrangler builds on the successful original Jeep formula which keeps this SUV one of the purest of the breed. The Wrangler is not afraid to "bring it" when it comes to more power, refinement, capability, interior space and comfort.

Available in X, Sahara and Rubicon models, external styling cues sport a more precise appearance with clean, crisp lines and improved fit and finish. Jeep purists will still find the classic round headlamps, signature seven-slot grille, wide wheel flares, washable interior, solid axles, removable doors, exposed hinges and a fold-down windshield recognized as Wrangler trademarks. Innovative features like removable and convertible tops add to the Jeep experience.

For 2009, the original extreme fun and freedom machine adds a drop-in bin to the full center console, storage nets to the lower center stack and side of the center console and hill start assist is now standard equipment. Additionally, Trailer Sway Control (TSC) is a newly available option. TSC monitors vehicle movement relative to the intended path and activates the electronic stability control if the trailer begins to sway outside of set parameters. Power for the Wrangler SUV is generated by a strong 3.6L V6 engine, with torque transferred to the ground through the standard NSG-370 six-speed manual gearbox. A 42BLE four-speed automatic with overdrive is an available option. All Wrangler SUVs feature one of two part-time four-wheel drive systems: NV241 Command-Trac or the heavy-duty NV243R Rock Trac.

On the road, the Wrangler is strong, smooth and responsive. Off road, the Jeep SUV is stable, controlled and reassuring. The Jeep Wrangler rides on a ladder frame that is 100 percent more rigid in bending stiffness over the previous model. The robust frame features larger dimensions that include a two-inch longer wheelbase, 5.5-inch longer overall length, 5-inch longer width and a 3.5-inch wider track.

The control hardware for both axles consists of a live axle, leading/trailing arms, track bar, coil springs, stabilizer bar, low-pressure gas-charged shock absorbers (16-inch wheel), in-tube high-pressure gas-charged shock absorbers (17-and 18-inch wheel packages). An Electronic Sway Bar Disconnect System is an available option.

Inside the cabin, larger overall dimensions translate into a more accommodating space for driver and passengers. Displays, controls and switchgear are up close and easy to use. AWD engagement is mechanical -- built proof for when the going gets really tough. Although the standard top is a soft fabric top, the Wrangler comes with two full-frame metal doors with roll-up windows. There is a metal and plastic frame that works to deliver a snug, water and wind-free seal.

Fold-and-tumble rear seats can be stored for additional storage capacity. Power options for the Wrangler include power windows, power door locks, full-screen navigation system, 300-watt Alpine stereo system with MP3 capability and SIRIUS satellite radio. Upmarket models feature YES Essentials stain resistant, odor resistant, anti-static seat fabric.

DEAR ABBY: I have been a poll worker for years. I would appreciate it if you would print this important advice to voters:

Before Election Day, voters should check the sample ballot they receive in the mail for their precinct number and the location of their polling place. Polling places can change for a variety of reasons. Often several voting precincts are housed in one location. If a person goes to the wrong location — perhaps because they have voted there before — it can take considerable time and effort to direct the person correctly. Nearly all these problems would be avoided if people read the information on the sample ballot and brought it with them on Election Day.

Also, the voting booth is not the place to review and make decisions about the candidates and issues. This should be done in advance (another reason for the sample ballot). The booth is for one purpose: to mark your ballot. It is inconsiderate to occupy the space for an extended period of time, especially near voting time.

Poll workers have an extremely long day, arriving an hour before polls open, and often working for hours more after the polls close. A prepared voter makes a great contribution to the process.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

tribution to making the election process a positive one for all concerned. — CALIFORNIA POLL WORKER

DEAR POLL WORKER: Thank you for writing. Because the turnout for this year's national election is sure to be one for the record books, your message is a timely one.

Now, allow me to share one of my own: There is usually a shortage of people willing to volunteer as poll workers. For those interested in serving, your county registrar of voters, local election board or its equivalent is the place to sign up. The number is listed in the "Government" section of your local phone book. I was a poll worker years ago, and found the experience was both interesting and fun — and also a great way to meet practically every other single person in the precinct.

DEAR ABBY: My husband, "Nick," and I have been married five years. Two years ago, his 10-year-old son molested my 7-year-old daughter. It tore our family apart and we are going through a divorce.

Nick is an alcoholic and an enabler. He paid all his son's bills and even sent him money when he was in jail. My problem is, I still love my husband. However, I know that under the circumstances we would always have problems.

How can I make Nick understand that the drinking and taking care of his son after what he did is what really tore us apart? And how do I move forward? — TRYING TO MOVE FORWARD

DEAR TRYING: If you haven't been able to make your husband understand what ended the marriage by now, you may never be able to. Until he dries out, nothing will sink in because he won't be able to retain the information. You must move forward one step at a time with the full understanding that you are doing so in order to protect your little girl from her predatory former stepbrother. No one said it would be easy, but your child is depending on you. Her welfare must come first.

Believe me, I sympathize with you. But you are doing the right thing.

HOROSCOPE BY JERALDINE SAUNDERS

IF OCTOBER 10 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Once things take a turn for the better they move by leaps and bounds. Your birthday seems to be the turning point when you can begin seeing improvements in your life and making headway with nagging problems. Until mid-November, however, you shouldn't make major changes, as your judgment is based on hopes rather than facts. The good news is that the stars are on your side from mid-November through mid-December if you wish to make a career change — such as a move, a new job, or asking for a commitment from a special someone.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): All the relevant facts may be obscured. Put off starting anything important, especially if it concerns love, pay/desk or savings, as you may be tempted to compete under unfair circumstances.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The odds are always in favor of the house, so keep your money safely in your pocket. Someone may attempt to convince you to lean up, but the game may be rigged and the odds aren't in your favor.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): It isn't wise to take offhand remarks too seriously. People may express high confidence in your abilities today in the hopes you can be flattered into doing more than your fair share of the work.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Invest not, want not. Don't waste your time sniffing out the best real estate deals or sales pyramid today. You know what you are good at and should not allow yourself to be enticed into something new.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Guessing games grate on your nerves. Someone thinks you are wonderful, but might not be brave enough to tell you. Since you don't have a crystal ball, you might end up involved in a misunderstanding.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Money is like water. If there is even the tiniest hole, it will leak away without your knowledge. Treat loved ones with kid gloves and kindness to avoid hidden misunderstandings and disagreements.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): "All's fair in love and war" means someone might not play by the rules. Your attention could be diverted by social and financial needs that are frustrated by vague and mysterious circumstances.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A temporary fog is rolling in and obscuring certain facts. Postpone important decisions or significant purchases until this atmosphere has shifted. Avoid giving anyone the wrong impression.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You don't need to rub two sticks together when a lighter is in your pocket. Don't pursue anything that takes enormous effort. Speak of what you think might be a potential romance could fizzle out.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): "Bubble, bubble, toil and trouble." There is a cauldron of activity brewing where your finances are concerned, but the results won't necessarily be palatable. Strict clear of investments or major purchases.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Remain bright-eyed and bushy-tailed. You may experience a distinct lack of patience toward whining or self-pity put into play. Discussion will dissipate if you remain positive and optimistic.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You could be in the mood to pursue friendships rather than love. Commitment isn't in today's vocabulary, so it is a good idea to roll with the punches and let everyone come and go as they please.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"Pull well they laughed with counterfitted glee At all his jokes, for many a joke had he."

—Oliver Goldsmith

Today's deal came up in the round-robin match between USA-1 and Norway. It demonstrates that when Zia Mahmood is at the table, no one can ever predict what will happen.

In the room where USA sat North-South, that pair managed to find a way to put on the brakes in three diamonds. When West led a trump, declarer won in hand and advanced the heart queen. When this was covered, declarer quickly claimed 11 tricks, plus 150. Game locks to be quite playable here, and a swing was guaranteed one way or the other when the Norwegian duly bid up to three no-trump.

The Vugraph commentators had noticed that declarer would have nine top tricks on a spade lead. By contrast, a low club lead would force declarer to rely on the heart finesse, but there was no doubt that declarer would take it since there were no practical alternatives to that play and bring home his game.

However, they had reckoned without Zia's ability to conjure IMPs out of thin air. Zia did indeed lead a club — but he selected the king!

Do you blame declarer for assuming that West had started life with the king and queen of clubs? He won in hand and took six rounds of diamonds (West pitching three spades and finally the club 10). When South played a club, East could take three tricks in that suit and shift to a spade. The defenders had the rest.

ANSWER: It feels right to go back to two spades, not so much because you expect spades to play better than clubs, but because it might be sensible to keep the auction open. If partner wants to make a try for game next, you will be happy to accept.
