Enjoying the challenge of CHESS

Yosna Estrada reacts to losing a piece during a game of chess Friday afternoon in her third grade class at Jefferson Elementary School in Jerome.

Third graders Yosna Estrada and Esmeralda Meadoza get some pointers from their teacher, Tracy Newton, as they play chess Friday afternoon at Jefferson Elementary School in Jerome. The school is one of several in Idaho to implement a new program called First Move, which teachers hope will help children glean analytical and mathematics skills from the game of chess.

School program helps students learn analytical, math skills

Third-grader Taylor Johnston peered intently at a chess board Friday during a game with classmate Alexis Partida at Jefferson Elementary School in Jerome.

"Got you," the 8-year-old Johnston said, taking one of Partida's pawns with his rook.

Nine-year-old Partida reacted quickly.

"Got you back," he said, eliminating Johnston's rook with his own.

The students are part of First Move, a new program at the school that teaches chess to elementary students. Educators and chess advocates say the game teaches skills that extend beyond the corners of a chess board.

For Idaho schools, First Move is a project the State Department of Education funded last year as a pilot program in 100 classrooms. This year, the agency funded 100 more classrooms, a two-year investment of $120,000.

Besides Jerome School District, the program is also in schools at Twin Falls School District, Blaine County School District and Murtaugh School District.

The money covers the cost of game sets and curriculum materials that come from America's Foundation for Chess, a Kirkland, Wash.-based organization that is encouraging schools across the nation to teach chess to youngsters.

The foundation began First Move in 2000, and the program is now taught to about 47,000 students in 27 states, including Nevada, Montana, Oregon and Washington.

"It engages kids in a natural way," said Wendi Fischer, vice president of the foundation. "They're having fun

Freddie Mac paid $2 million to consulting firm to kill mortgage regulatory bill

By Pete Yost
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Freddie Mac secretly paid a Republican consulting firm $2 million to kill legislation that would have regulated and trimmed the mortgage finance giant and its sister company, Fannie Mae, three years before the government took control to prevent their collapse.

In the cross hairs of the campaign carried out by DCI of Washington were Republican senators and a regulatory overhaul bill sponsored by Sen. Chuck Hagel, R-Neb. DCI's chief executive is Doug Goodwin, whom John McCain's campaign later hired to manage the GOP convention in September.

Conservation, dispatch measures join races in Blaine County ballots

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Come Nov. 4, Blaine County voters will get to decide whether it's worth increasing their property taxes for two very different ballot measures.

Proposition 1 — the Land, Water and Wildlife Levy — would raise $1.7 million for the county to purchase land, conservation easements and other property to set aside for preservation. Proposition 2 — the Dispatch Center Override — would provide a permanent $835,000 a year for the county's consolidated dispatch center.

would cost the average homeowner an extra $50 a year for only two years according to the text on the November ballot. The dispatch center would cost a permanent $6.21 each year per $100,000 in property value.

Medical consumers trading off health as cost of care skyrockets

By Col Conolly

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — To monitor the multiple sclerosis attacking Ann Pietrangolo's central nervous system, her doctor recommends an annual MRI. Last year, the 49-year-old Winchester, Va. woman had to make a $3,000 co-payment to get the imaging done.

This year, she's skipping the test. Even with insurance, it's more than her budget can tolerate, especially with the roller coaster on Wall Street devouring her retirement savings.

"I'm doing everything I can to avoid going to the doctor," she said.

From Park Avenue dental offices to free clinics, the global economic crunch is forcing a growing number of Americans to scale back on medical care. Consumers are attempting their own form of triage, pushing off seemingly less-urgent services in the hope that their financial health will improve. But the danger, say physicians, is that the short-term savings may translate into more severe long-term health implications.

At the extreme are cases such as the Texas woman who went to the hospital complaining of back pain. Physician Doug Curran immediately spotted cancer on the X-ray.

"She'd had a lump in her breast for a while, but things were tight and she said she couldn't get it looked at," he recalled. "We're going to see more of that."

Nationwide, the number of consumers who went without a prescription, tapped into retirement savings to pay for health care or skipped a doctor visit for themselves or a child rose between 2007 and 2008, according to a survey released this summer by the Rockefeller Foundation and Time magazine. One-quarter of the 2,000 respondents, for example, said they had decided not to see a doctor because of cost in 2008, up from 18 percent the year before. Ten percent said they did not take a child to the doctor for the same reason.

"When the economy is in the situation we have today, people make tough choices," said Kansas Insurance Commissioner Sandy Praeger, who is head of the National Association of Insurance Commissioners. "Things are just not going to get done."

As Ashton soda fountain closes, T.E. business mulls its future

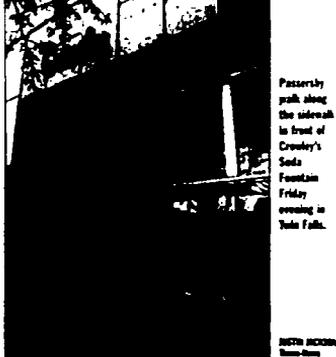

The Associated Press

ASHTON — A 70-year run of serving milk shakes on Main Street is about to end for a soda fountain in eastern Idaho that is an emblem of another era.

City Drug in Ashton is scheduled to close late next month.

The pharmacy portion of the business is moving to the Ashton clinic. The soda fountain will close Nov. 28 if no one buys it and keeps it going.

"We've had people in here crying because the soda fountain's going," co-owner Suzanne Comstock told the Past Register. "But the fact that it's not profitable means they go somewhere else to buy their stuff."

She said the business, which she and her husband bought in 1997, can't complete with large corporations that can offer items at cheaper prices.

"You can't turn a river; you can't turn a river," she said.

groups — including the Idaho Conservation League, Blaine County Citizens for Smart Growth and the Nature Conservancy — the conservation levy would help preserve a fast-growing area of the state, said Trish Klahr, chairwoman of Blaine County Citizens for Water and Wildlife, the group campaigning for the measure.
She compared it to a Boise levy passed in 2001 that raised $10 million for preserving the Boise Foothills. The Blaine County money would be targeted largely at the Big and Little Wood River valleys.

"It was a successful, citizen-driven effort," Klahr said. "Raising property taxes may not be the most popular idea right now, given the economy. But Klahr said she still has faith Prop 1 will pass because people want to invest locally.

"It's a little investment right now to protect us into the future," she said, noting that the levy ends in two years. The dispatch center split from the sheriff's office in 2007, and a county auditor group recommended changing its funding on the annual number of service calls made from each city. According to data provided by the city of Hailey, that arrangement would have cost the city $296,000 in 2006, roughly 15 percent of the taxes collected.

City officials brought a number of alternate solutions to the county, one of which became Prop 2, said City Administrator Heather Dawson. If passed, Hailey residents would only have to pay close to $105,000, and more of the burden would be shouldered by Ketchum, Sun Valley and county residents outside the county.

It's the only "permanent and reliable" solution, she said, one that won't require payments to be recalculated every year. And it doesn't raise questions of double taxation, she said.

Unsurprisingly, Ketchum and Sun Valley officials oppose the measure. Hailey and other cities in the south end of the county, on the other hand, if they're being asked to subsidize their northern peers, Dawson said.

Prop 1: Land, Water, and Wildlife Levy

"Shall the Board of County Commissioners be authorized to Implement a two-year property tax levy to protect lands and water quality in the Big Wood and Little Wood River valleys, protect wildlife habitat throughout the county, and protect working farms and ranches in the county, and that raises $1.7 million dollars a year, costing the average homeowner about $50 dollars per year, with the guidance from a citizen advisory board and subject to a yearly independent audit?"

Prop 2: Dispatch Center Override

"Shall the Blaine County Board of County Commissioners be authorized to annually increase Blaine County property taxes permanently in the amount of $835,000 to fund the operations of a consolidated 911 dispatch communications center to be managed by the Blaine County Board of County Commissioners? If authorized, the adjustment in the Blaine County budget will increase a property owner's tax approximately $6.71 per $100,000 in property value per year."

Hailey officials are also concerned that their proposed ballot language was changed by the county. The change — adding the word "annually" — may confuse some voters and was the biggest question city residents had during a town hall meeting Wednesday evening, Dawson said.

Though Hailey Mayor Rick Davis accused the county of intentionally changing the wording to confuse voters, County Administrator Mike McNeese told the Times-News on Saturday that officials inserted the word because they wanted to make sure voters knew the dispatch funding was not temporary, like the conservation levy. County Administrator Heather Dawson. If passed, Hailey residents would only have to pay close to $105,000, and more of the burden would be shouldered by Ketchum, Sun Valley and county residents outside the county.

Ketchum, and a large number of other residents and organizations. Hailey's city Web site lists letters of support from former mayors Susan McBraynt and Keith Roark — the latter is also the state Democratic chairman.

The two candidates for the county's District 1 commissioner seem, however, either oppose or decline to take sides on the measures.

Schoen, the incumbent, said he's remaining neutral on both issues, particularly since Prop 2 pits different localities in the county against each other. He said he did see some possible benefits from the conservation levy, including that the money could be used for a county program that buys development rights from rural farmers to help preserve it without removing farms.

His challenger, Dale Ewersen, said he opposes the dispatch funding because he feels it was rushed to the ballot and he's not comfortable with "where it may lead." And he's against the conservation levy because the groups backing it should have tried raising private money first.

"It's not right," he said, especially in an area as wealthy as the Wood River Valley. "If they work their magic, they could get those donations."

learning, which is a positive in itself, and it teaches them strategic thinking and analytical thinking.
Developed that, students develop skills in areas like math and history while learning to how to capture their opponent's king.
For example, the movement of the pieces and the strategies of the board itself show students the rules of geometry, Fischer said.
The game based on relationships in the Middle Ages teaches students about the different classes of that era, such as the peasants who served royalty as pawns in battle.

That lesson was taught to students in Jerome shortly before the students began playing Friday. Tracy Newton, their teacher, amazed the students on what group the game's bishops represent: royalty, the church or peasants.
"I find that kids really do like the challenge of a chess game because the outcome is anybody's guess," Newton said, adding that the game has educational benefits for students. "They have to predict and problem-solve."

At Jefferson Elementary School, second and third grade students have a chess lesson once a week. For some students, it's the highlight of their week.

"The most fun part is you get to capture the pieces and then there's the king and queen," said 8-year-old Samantha Lewis, adding it's similar to other classes. "When you just sit in a class, it's kind of boring."
The students haven't learned all their chess moves yet, but Partida already knows the goal of the game when playing with Johnston.

"I can't let you catch my king," he said.

and were being trying to do that for the last 11 years," Cronley said.
Said the soda fountain varied longer than might have been expected. A former employee tracks the street level cost of business four or five days.

Laura Lewis — the leasing owner and operator of Cronley's Soda Fountain and General Store in Twin Falls — understands Cronley's decision. The Main Avenue mainstay originally opened in 1946 and used to include a pharmacy.
Lewis said Saturday she found about Day Drug closing, and that she hopes Cronley's won't be the next to go.

Full is always a slow time of year for her business, Lewis said. Combine that with the current poor economy and the troubles of marketing Twin Falls' downtown area, and Cronley's is just hanging in there, she said.

"I get the same customers all the time," she said.

"Not that those customers aren't loyal." Suzanne Hulmer of Eagle, said she and her family always stop in when they visit relatives every couple of months. She wants her kids, she said, to experience "that kind of old-school feel."

Tom Ashley, president of the Ashton Chamber of Commerce and owner of Dave's Hubby Market, said the area economy — near Reburg in Laramie, Idaho — once it has its legs, but now relies on tourists, especially visitors headed to nearby Yellowstone National Park.

"If Yellowstone Park weren't there, we wouldn't make it," he said.
Mayor Tecky Stronks said higher gas prices could be helping local businesses as residents opt to shop in Ashton rather than drive to Reburg or Idaho Falls.

He said his business, Stronks and Sons Do It Best Home Center, has been doing well recently.
"With the gas the way it is, I've noticed more people shopping closer to home," he said.

steady — often double digit — increases in drug spending, the research company IMS Health this summer recorded the first actual decline and a survey by the Center for Studying Health System Change found that nearly 20 percent of Americans report having difficulty paying medical bills.
Layoffs, shrinking bank accounts, rising medical prices and widespread anxiety that the economy is likely to worsen are prompting people to split pills, forgo screening tests such as colonoscopies, delay elective surgery and turn to home remedies as cheaper alternatives. Hospitals report that unpaid debt is on the rise, pharmacists see a spike in cheaper generics, and doctors are seeing fewer patients for low-cost care in chemo.

For Sandra Harrington, a waitress from Ozon Hill, Md., the trade-off comes in treatment for an infected eye. Her doctor prescribed administering steroid drops twice a day. But as her doctor has shrunk, she has decided that applying the $100 medication once a day is all she can afford.

"It's a vicious cycle," she said, explaining that because it is too painful for her eye to be exposed to direct sunlight, she works only night shifts. "People cut me back. Then people like me suffer."

In the past month, traffic on the 5-year-old office site has increased 14 percent. The site, which allows customers to pose a health question and "ask" for $9 and $30 for a doctor's or a nurse's response, had nearly 400,000 page views in 30 days, said chief executive and founder Andy Kartzig. In a mailing email, inquiries led to 100,000 high blood pressure, diabetes and heart pain jumped 33 percent.

At the Arlington (Va.) Free

Clinic, the surge in people seeking care has been overwhelming. Executive Director Nancy Sanger-Pallesen. Last week, the clinic provided free preventive screenings to 19 new patients, but it turned away 27 others, she said.

Even though users are high-earners, many are not comfortable with "just this summer," she said. "Unfortunately, we can't take them all in."

Even free care may not be a good deal for people with limited means. For some, the price of treatment is prohibitive. Others fear discovering an illness they do not have the money to treat.
Many are forced to juggle competing medical needs. Harrington must balance her bills with the care of her 14-year-old son who has a heart condition. She pays co-payments of $50 per drug per month. There are no generic alternatives.

Idaho faces bumpy roads during uneasy economy

BOISE (AP) — Idaho won't be able to improve its economy if it can't improve its roads.

But the same state officials say improving the state's roads won't be easy at a time when the national economy is faltering.

"You need to get the economy going and you need to get the roads going and you need to get the economy going," House Majority Leader Mike Moyle, R-Star, told the Idaho Statesman. Transportation Department officials have said the state faces an annual $240 million backlog in road maintenance funding.

Discussions on how to tackle the shortfall have focused on either increasing registration fees or raising Idaho's gas tax, which has been 25 cents per gallon since 1996.

During the last legislative session, state lawmakers balked at Orter's proposal to increase registration fees to $150 for all vehicles. They are currently based on the car's model year and range from $24 to $48.

The other side of the equation is how much it might cost the state not to maintain and improve the state's highway infrastructure.

"You cannot have trucks idling in traffic, stuck in congestion, and expect to lure businesses here," said Orter's spokesman, Jon Hanlan. Luring businesses is part of Orter's Project 60, which is a plan to grow the state's gross domestic product from $51.5 billion to $60 billion. Hanlan said focusing on jobs and infrastructure "will help position us to ensure that these economic problems we are seeing around the state will be minimal, and we will be one of the first states to come out of what appears to be a downturn on the national economy." Getting money to improve the state's roads by increasing the state's vehicle registration fee or increasing taxes on gas would need to get support from lawmakers around the state, which could be difficult if voters voice opposition. An indication of how willing Idaho residents are to pay for road improvements will come in the Nov. 4 election. That's when Ada County voters in southwest Idaho will decide whether to have their vehicle annual registration fee of $20 doubled to pay for road improvements in the county.

"Our first priority is the economy for the state of Idaho," said Senate Transportation Committee Chairman John McGee, R-Caldwell. "But there is no doubt that Idaho cannot grow its economy and recover if it doesn't have an efficient transportation system."

Jury foreman for Duncan trial still haunted

BOISE (AP) — The foreman of the jury that sentenced convicted child killer Joseph Duncan to death in August says he's become more suspicious of strangers and more protective of his children.

Chris Robbins said he also watches out for strange cars on his cut-to-sale checks the sex offender registry regularly after a trial that included a video Duncan made of him molesting and torturing a young boy.

"It still makes me sick thinking about it," Robbins, 29, told the Spokesman-Review. "That was the worst thing I've ever seen in my whole life, the worst thing. Your heart just goes out for that little boy."

Duncan was sentenced in federal court to death for the 2005 kidnapping, sexual abuse and murder of 9-year-old Dylan Greene.

The case began in 2005, when the bodies of 13-year-old Slade Greene, his mother, Brenda Greene, and her fiancé, Mark McKenzie, were discovered in a Coeur d'Alene home. The two youngest children in the home — then 4-year-old Shasta Greene and her 9-year-old brother, Dylan Greene — were missing.

Duncan, a convicted pedophile originally from Jackson, Mich., had slain the family as he could kidnap the two children. He took them to

"It still makes me sick thinking about it. That was the worst thing I've ever seen in my whole life, the worst thing. Your heart just goes out for that little boy."

— Chris Robbins, jury foreman in Joseph Duncan's trial, on watching a video Duncan made of himself molesting and torturing Dylan Greene a remote Montana campsite where he tortured and abused them for weeks, videotaping some of the abuse. He took Dylan Greene to the campsite, and a few days later took Shasta back to Coeur d'Alene. The girl was rescued after a waitress recognized her while the two were at a local restaurant and called police.

Duncan was convicted in state court of the murders at the Coeur d'Alene house, but the federal court handled the charges related to the kidnapping, abuse and Dylan's murder.

During the federal trial, jurors watched a video made by Duncan of him molesting and torturing Dylan. The case was so graphic that jurors often offered counseling afterward.

Robbins, a father and health care worker, was not allowed to talk about what he saw in court each day and said he spent "a lot of sleepless nights in house."

At times in court, he said,

But he said that couldn't compare to the video he saw in court.

"It's a whole different kettle of tea when you see a 90-year-old die on the table because they had a massive heart attack, and you see a little boy die because of somebody's, you know, negligence."

He said the picture that emerged of Dylan during the trial was one that touched him. "He looked like an amazing kid that was going to bring something positive into this world, and you just knew it," he said. "For him not to be here and somebody that brought so much shame into this world, and so much negative, still to be around — it makes me sick."

He said the trial made him realize how vulnerable children are, and that he's set up code words with his children and says "someone can't pick them up and murder — and as a friend."

"You need to not just worry about your own, but worry about everyone else's too," he said. "They can't take care of themselves."

Robbins said he has "no regrets" about the unanimous verdict reached by the jury in just three hours.

"I hope that our decision stands and I hope that his time on death row is limited," he said.

COB-run Senate on July 28, 2003. All GOP members of the committee supported it; all Democrats opposed it.

In the midst of DCI's year-long effort, Hagel and 25 other Republican senators pleaded unsuccessfully with Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist, R-Tenn., to allow a vote.

"If effective regulatory reform legislation is not enacted this year, American taxpayers will continue to be exposed to the enormous risk that Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac pose to the housing market, the overall financial system and the economy as a whole," the senators wrote in a letter that proved prescient.

Unknown to the senators, DCI was undermining support for the bill in a campaign targeting 17 Republican senators in 13 states, according to documents obtained by The Associated Press. The states targeted were changed over time, but always stayed on the Republican side.

In the end, there was not enough Republican support for Hagel's bill to warrant bringing it up for a vote because Democrats also opposed it and the votes of some would be needed for passage. The measure died at the end of the 109th Congress.

McCaIn, R-Ariz., was not a target of the DCI campaign. He signed Hagel's letter and his co-sponsors later signed on as three-weekers of the bill.

By the time McCaIn did so, however, DCI's effort had gone on for nine months and was on its way toward killing the bill.

In recent days, McCaIn has said Freddie Mac and Fannie Mae were "one of the real catalysts, really the match that lit this fire of the global credit crisis." McCaIn has accused Democratic presidential candidate Barack Obama of taking advice from former executives of Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, and failing to see that the companies were heading for a meltdown.

McCaIn's campaign manager, Rick Davis, or his lobbying firm has taken more than $2 million from Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac dating to 2006.

Obama has received $120,349 in political donations from employees of Freddie Mac and Fannie Mae, McCaIn said.

The Republican senators targeted by DCI began hearing from prominent constituents and financial contributors, all urging the defeat of Hagel's bill because it might harm the housing boom. The effort generated newspaper ads and radio and TV appearances by participants who spoke out against the measure.

Inside Freddie Mac headquarters in 2005, the few dozen people who knew what DCI was doing referred to the initiative as "the stealth lobbying campaign," according to three people familiar with the drive.

They spoke only on condition of anonymity, saying they saw a ghost, and all of a sudden the facial expressions were gone, and I feel that justice was served. He looked like a dead man to me after we laid that down."

As a health care worker, he said he sometimes sees people die on the operating table.

the Center for Responsive Politics, a non-partisan group that tracks money in politics.

On Friday night, Mike Buttry, chief of staff, Mike Buttry, said Hagel's legislation "was the last best chance to bring greater oversight and tighter regulation to Freddie and Fannie, and they used every means they could to defeat Sen. Hagel's legislation every step of the way."

It is outrageous that a congressionally chartered government-sponsored enterprise would lobby against a member of Congress's bill that would strengthen the regulation and oversight of that institution," Buttry said in a statement. "America has paid an extremely high price for the reckless, and possibly criminal, actions of the leadership at Freddie and Fannie."

Nine of the 17 targeted Republican senators did not sign Hagel's letter: Sens. Mitch McConnell of Kentucky, Christopher "Kit" Bond and Jim Talent of Missouri, Conrad Burns of Montana, Mike DeWine of Ohio, Lamar Alexander of Tennessee, Olympia Snowe of Maine, Lincoln Chafee of Rhode Island and George Allen of Virginia. Aside from the nine, 20 other Republican senators did not sign Hagel's letter.

McConnell's office said members of leadership do not sign letters to the leader. McConnell was majority whip at the time.

Wood River team to beat in GBW tourney

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

Wood River ran the table in the Great Basin Conference West regular season, but heading into the district tournament, the title and automatic state playoff berth is still very much up for grabs. Top-seeded Wood River (6-0 GBW) will host the double-elimination tournament, which gets underway at 5 p.m. today. The Wolverines will open with No. 4-seed Minico (1-5 GBW). Wood River is on the top, but we are a tight, competitive conference," said Minico coach Kris Christensen. "I can see anybody taking the title. It comes down to who comes to play that night. It's not going to matter where we are in the seeding of the tournament."

Romo-less Cowboys lose badly to Rams

By R.B. Fallstrom
Associated Press writer

ST. LOUIS — Even on the road, the chorus of "Romo, Romo!" from Dallas Cowboys fans was easily audible at the start of the second half.

Tony Romo told the coaching staff after pregame warmups he wasn't up to playing with a broken right pinkie. He was in uniform, giving fans false hope, but they were stuck with Brad Johnson.

The 40-year-old backup quarterback couldn't keep up with a suddenly potent, opportunistic St. Louis Rams offense, throwing three interceptions. Steven Jackson ran for 160 yards on 25 carries with three touchdowns and the Rams (2-4) looked like contenders instead of sad sacks for the second straight game under new coach Jim Hanleitt in a surprisingly easy 34-14 victory on Sunday. "It was a tough day for all of us," Johnson said. "We had miscues across the board."

Owner Jerry Jones admitted after the game that he thought the Cowboys had erred to beat the Rams despite Romo's injury and the suspension of cornerback Adam "Pacman" Jones. Adding to the woes, Jones said after the game that safety Roy Williams would miss the rest of the season after breaking his right forearm for the second time.

"I just was thinking a little lighter than I should have about this ballgame," Jones said. "I'm not speaking for this team, but I was."

The Rams won 19-17 at Washington last week in their first game since replacing Scott Linehan, ending a run of 17 losses in 20 games and four blowout losses to

Johnson continues his Martinsville domination

By Hank Kerr Jr.

MARTINSVILLE, Va. — Jimmie Johnson is on a roll again, and whether he's willing to admit it or not, while everyone else in NASCAR is chasing him, he's chasing history. Johnson led 339 laps Sunday as he and his Hendrick Motorsports teammates again dominated at Martinsville Speedway, and the two-time defending Sprint Cup champion padded his lead in his bid for a record-tying third championship in a row with four races remaining.

Johnson's victory at Martinsville, from 1976-78, has won three straight championships in stock car racing's premier series, and Johnson is looking more and more as if he'll be the second. "I'm going to have to answer those questions one of these days, aren't I?" Johnson said of the ones about Yarborough and taking a position beside him in history. Johnson's sixth victory of the year extended his points lead from 69 to 149, and while his closest challengers vowed that the Chase race isn't over, the pundits keep coming, too.

"There's a lot of great teams that were huge in the sport," Dale Earnhardt Jr. said, lumping Johnson and crew chief Chad Knaus in with his father and Richard Petty, both seven-time champions, and Hall of Famers David Pearson, Yarborough and Junior Johnson.

Rays beat Sox in Game 7, advance to World Series

By Fred Goodall
Associated Press writer

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Down to their last chance, the Tampa Bay Rays left no doubt they were World Series-worthy, after all.

The young Rays completed a stunning run to their first pennant, holding off the defending champion Boston Red Sox 3-1 Sunday night behind Matt Garza's masterful pitching in Game 7 of the AL championship series. The Rays nearly let it slip away when they blew a seven-run lead late in Game 5 and lost meekly Saturday night. But when rookie David Price struck out J.D. Drew with the bases loaded to end the eighth inning, Tampa Bay showed it had plenty of resolve, too.

"It's unbelievable," center fielder H.J. Upton said. "We battled a lot of adversity this year. We stuck together as a team."

Baseball's doormat since starting play in 1998, the Rays were a 200-1 shot to win the World Series before the season started. Now, they'll host the Philadelphia Phillies in Game 1 Wednesday night.

Garza beat Boston twice in a week and was picked as the MVP.

Texas on top in first BCS standings

By Ralph D. Russo
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — The grid is set for the race to the BCS national championship game.

Texas holds the pole position and Alabama is second. Penn State joins the Longhorns and Crimson Tide in the front row, but the Nittany Lions already might have too much ground to gain.

The Longhorns were way ahead of the field when the season's first Bowl Championship Series standings were released Sunday — as expected. Texas appears to be in position to play for the national title on Jan. 8 in Miami if it can stay unbeaten. The top two teams in the final BCS standings play for the championship.

Texas is an overwhelming No. 1 in the USA Today coaches' poll and the Harris Poll, and rated first in each of the six computer rankings, giving the Longhorns a BCS grade of .998 out of 1.000.

Alabama is second across the board, behind Texas in the polls and the computers. The Crimson Tide has a BCS average of .949, which bodes well for Alabama. The Tide will be tough to catch from behind if it can stay unbeaten.

That's bad news for third-place Penn State. With an .867 average, the unbeaten Nittany Lions will have to keep winning and hope Texas or Alabama slips. In fact, fourth-place Oklahoma (.832) might be able to catch Penn State, even if coach Joe Paterno's team wins out.

Southern California (.775) is fifth, Oklahoma State (.771) sixth and Georgia (.720) seventh. Texas Tech (.713) and Ohio State (.703) round out the top 10.

Texas, coming off a 56-31 victory against Missouri, plays Oklahoma State and Texas Tech the next two weeks, Kansas down the road. A Big 12 championship game if it can get there. Against that schedule, even a loss would not eliminate the Longhorns from championship contention.

"I'm really proud of how they handled any distractions the No. 1 ranking and all of the added attention could have presented last week," Texas coach Mack Brown said Sunday. "But, we have a long way to go and a lot of room to improve."

"Watching film today on Oklahoma State will get your mind off of the ratings in a hurry and definitely will grab our player's attention as we start to prepare for another great challenge in Big 12 play."

Similarly, the strength of the Southeastern Conference should benefit

Alabama — as long as the Tide can survive. It was struggle for Alabama on Saturday, as the Tide held on for a 24-20 victory against Mississippi.

Penn State plays Ohio State in Columbus on Saturday in a game that could decide the Big Ten. But after that none of the Nittany Lions' remaining opponents are ranked.

As for the potential BCS busters, unbeaten Utah (.634) from the Mountain West Conference is 11th and unbeaten Boise State (.587) from the Western Athletic Conference is 12th. Either would need to finish in the top 12 to earn an automatic BCS bid, but only one team from the five leagues (MW, WAC, Conference USA, Sun Belt and MAC) without automatic qualification can get in. So Utah and Boise State have to keep an eye on each other, too.

Tumesa goes wire-to-wire for first tour title

LAS VEGAS — Marc Tumesa completed a wire-to-wire victory for his first PGA Tour title, closing with a 4-under 68 on Sunday to hold off Matt Kuchar by a stroke in the Justin Timberlake Shriners Hospitals for Children Open.

Marc Tumesa poses with caddy's brother (right), and Johnson Van Doren after winning the Justin Timberlake Shriners Hospitals for Children Open golf tournament at TPC Summerlin in Las Vegas on Sunday. Tumesa won the tournament with a 27-under-par 153.

The eighth rookie to win on the PGA Tour this season, Tumesa opened with rounds of 62, 64 and 69 at TPC Summerlin en route to a 24-under 263 total. He earned $738,000.

Tumesa birdied Nos. 9, 11, 12 and 14 to reach 25 under on the mostly sunny, breezy day. The 30-year-old former North Carolina State star also birdied the par-3 17th, but dropped a stroke on the par-4 18th.

Langer finished with a 64. Former UNLV star Chad Campbell shot a 67 to tie for third at 22 under with John Mallinger (68) and Michael Allen (70).

LANIER CLINGS ADMINIST' SMALL BUSINESS CLASSIC

THE WOODLANDS, Texas — Bernhard Langer overcame a "senior moment" to win his second straight Administrat' Small Business Classic title, shooting a 3-under 69 for a two-stroke victory over Lonnie Nielsen.

Langer took a one-stroke penalty on No. 3, when he absent-mindedly picked up his ball after his tee shot missed the green on the par-3 hole. After a week of rain before the tournament, players were allowed to lift, clean and place their golf balls during the first two rounds. With drier conditions Sunday, players were no longer allowed to use preferred lies through the green. Nielsen finished with a 71.

Rays

said. "Usually it's Game 7 of the World Series but I'll take Game 7 of the ALCS."

Willie Aybar homered and Evan Longoria and Rocco Baldelli also drove in runs to support Garza. Acquired in an offseason trade with Minnesota, Garza limited the Red Sox to Dustin Pedroia's first-inning home run.

Four more wins and manager Joe Maddon's bunch will become the first team to go from worst in the majors to World Series champion in just one season.

The Red Sox were hoping to win their third crown in five years.

"We didn't get as far as we wanted," Boston manager Terry Francona said. "We came out to win and go to the World Series and we didn't accomplish that."

Longoria's fourth-inning double off Jon Lester tied it at 1-1. Baldelli's RBI single put the Rays ahead in the fifth after Aybar doubled and Douglas Mays Jr. reached on an infield single. Garza took the mound for the biggest game of his life with something, perhaps cotton balls, stuffed in his ears to help drown out the noise at sold-out Tropicana Field.

ground ball for an error, leading off a tense eighth.

Boston went on to load the bases when Kevin Youkilis drew a two-out walk, Price, the No. 1 pick in the 2007 draft, became the fifth Tampa Bay pitcher to pitch the inning — quite a spot for someone who started the year in Class A.

Drew, who capped the Rays' 5 rally with a ninth-inning single, struck out with a check-swing on a 97 mph fastball to end the threat. Price worked around a leadoff walk in the ninth and when pinch-hitter Ted Lowrie grounded out, the celebration began.

"I wanted the ball," Price said. "I think everybody down there in the 'pen wanted the ball tonight."

The Rays dropped the "Devil" from their name before the season and came out with a new identity: Gone were the laughable losers who finished last in the AL East in nine of their first 10 seasons, the snowbird specialists whose quirky Tropicana Field made itself at home in an opponent's ballpark. And the Red Sox whenever the Boston Sox visited.

After splitting the first two games of the series at home, though, it was Tampa Bay that made itself at home in an opponent's ballpark. With the Rays sending shot after shot sailing over the Green Monster. In all, the Rays outscored the Red Sox 29-13 in the three games at Fenway Park, hitting 10 home runs.

But the young Rays' postseason inexperience showed in Game 5, when a primarily reliable bullpen blew a 7-0 lead over the last three innings, allowing Boston to save its season with an 8-7 victory.

The Red Sox were the eighth team to rally from a 3-1 deficit to force Game 7 of an LCS, and they were the only club to do it more than once. The Red Sox also batted back in 1966, 2004 and 2007, and went on to win the World Series the last two times.

With the traps costing nearly 5,800 seats in the upper deck removed for the second straight night, more than 40,000 fans packed the domed stadium for a rematch of the starting pitchers from last year's last three innings, allowing Boston to save its season with an 8-7 victory.

Many fans wore Red Sox gear and were even more noticeable when they stood and cheered as Pedroia carried the bases after lining a pitch into the left-field stands. But there would be little for the Boston faithful to cheer the rest of the night. No team has repeated as World Series champion since the New York Yankees won three straight from 1996-2000. That mark is safe for another year.

With McFall, there'll be some changes made

Rarely is a decision so clear-cut as one facing Jerome County voters on Election Day.

If they like the way the Jerome County Sheriff's Office has operated for the past 12 years, their candidate is Under Sheriff Jocelyn Nunnally, running as an independent.

If they want change, their man is retired Idaho State Police Sgt. Doug McFall, a Republican.

McFall, 50, is the best choice over Nunnally, 51, and independent Jerry Martinez, 55.

Weaver, a veteran of the Los Angeles Police Department, swept then-Sheriff George Silver out in 1996, pledging aggressive, hard-nosed law enforcement. He delivered, but not without problems, including three separate attorney general's investigations, a serious rift with the Jerome Police Department, and a 2001 drug raid in Eden that left three people — including two deputies — dead.

Nunnally, like Weaver a LAPD alum, was the sheriff's loyal colleague all the way. "The way I look at it, it's business as usual," Nunnally said in March when Weaver announced he was retiring. "Basically nothing is going to change, except for if we can better an area, then we will. And we'll just handle that as it occurs."

But things must change at the sheriff's office, and McFall can do it.

Some past Jerome County deputies have been a serious embarrassment. Hiring and supervision must improve.

McFall vows to replace a reputation for favoritism with an ethic that puts the community first. Deputies, he says, should be promoted on merit, not loyalty to the sheriff.

And, McFall says, more cooperation is needed among the Jerome County Sheriff's Office and the Jerome Police Department, the Twin Falls Police Department and the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office — agencies that sometimes work at cross purposes.

McFall is correct that Jerome County partnering with Gooding, Lincoln and Camas counties for a regional jail makes more sense than building its own lockup.

Sheriffs are powerful in Idaho, and the effectiveness of their departments often hinges on the boss' personality. There's every indication from McFall's background — military policeman, Idaho Falls city cop, Bonneville County deputy and 24 years in the ISP — that he has the temperament, management experience and principles to make the Jerome County Sheriff's Office more professional than it is today.

Nunnally, as he demonstrated in the 2001 Eden drug raid, is a courageous and dedicated officer. But this agency needs different direction.

Carter is fair and decent

I am pleased to endorse Tom Carter for sheriff. He will bring new ideas to a stale department. We need someone who will be loyal to all deputies, not just a select few. He is a fair and decent man. With his many years of law enforcement, he will be a breath of fresh air for this county.

Please vote for Tom Carter for sheriff!

The coming liberal majority on Capitol Hill

WASHINGTON — The "New Deal coalition" that dominated American politics from Franklin Roosevelt's election in 1932 until Ronald Reagan's win in 1980 was the high-point of Democratic rule. Roosevelt governed with large Democratic majorities in Congress: John F. Kennedy, Lyndon Johnson, and Jimmy Carter also worked with Congresses heavily weighted to the Democratic side.

PETER CANELLOS

But the New Deal coalition wasn't purely liberal. Southern Democrats provided the decisive margins in the House and the Senate, and most were unabashed conservatives. In fact, only during the height of the Depression and the tiny window between 1964 and 1966 were Democratic majorities large enough for liberalism to reign unopposed.

Now, with just three weeks until the 2008 election, Democrats are beginning to see the outlines of a majority more potent than those of the New Deal era, because it wouldn't require the support of Southern conservatives. They're Republicans now, and the Democrats running for their seats are more liberal.

The notion of 2008 as a Democratic watershed hasn't seeped into the electoral discourse much, largely because the presidential race remains fluid despite the Democrat Barack Obama seizing the electoral momentum during the economic crisis. The campaign proceeds in an atmosphere of close combat, with the underlying assumption that whichever party wins the White House will have to court the support of the other to get anything done.

Republican John McCain praisers the hammering-out of the financial bailout as a model of bipartisanship. Joe Biden vows to "reach across the aisle."

"I think it's fair to say I have almost as many friends on the Republican side of the aisle as I do on the Democratic side of the aisle," Biden boasted in the vice-presidential debate. Biden surely knows that a lot can change in three weeks of campaigning, especially with turbulence in the economy and wars overseas. But he and fellow Democrats can already see the outlines of a majority so large that there'd be little need to reach across the aisle for anything.

The Obama-Biden ticket holds the lead in most national polls. The House, which requires only a simple majority to shape its agenda, shifted to Democratic control in 2006. Many Republican incumbents despaired over losing their power and retired, making it harder for the GOP to mount a serious challenge this time around. Therefore, a Republican comeback in the House is unlikely. That leaves the Senate. It, too, has a small Democratic majority, just 51 of 100 seats. But unlike the House, the Senate requires a supermajority — of 60 out of 100 votes — to suspend debate; without 60 votes of its own, a party must "reach across the aisle" to get anything done.

Democrats have a serious shot at reaching 60 seats. Most of the seats up for reelection this year happen to be held by Republicans, and in three states — Virginia, Colorado, and New Mexico — the Republican incumbent is retiring and a Democrat is leading in the polls. Only Colorado, where Democratic Rep. Mark Udall has a modest lead over former GOP Rep. Bob Schaffer, remains competitive. But Schaffer has an uphill climb: There are Democratic winds blowing through Colorado, where the party's convention in Denver energized its supporters.

In addition, the Democrats have targeted four GOP senators in states that have been leaning Democratic: Maine, New Hampshire, Oregon, and Minnesota. Of the four, only Maine's Susan Collins seems likely to be reelected; a two-term moderate who was never close to President Bush, Collins maintains a strong lead in polls. But New Hampshire's John Sununu and Oregon's Gordon Smith are trailing, and Minnesota's Norm Coleman is neck-and-neck with his Democratic challenger, former comedian Al Franken.

But even if Democrats won three of the four, they'd still need three more pickups for the magic total of 60, meaning some Republican incumbents who were assumed to be safe would have to falter. And so far, they have.

Alaska's Republican warhorse Ted Stevens is on trial on corruption charges. North Carolina's Elizabeth Dole is struggling against a strong challenge by Democratic State Sen. Kay Hagan. And Sen. Roger Wicker of Mississippi, who was appointed to fill the term of retired Trent Lott, is facing an unexpectedly tough race against former Democratic governor Ronnie Musgrove.

In Mississippi and North Carolina, Obama's candidacy could draw unprecedented numbers of black voters, sweeping Hagan and Musgrove into office as well. In their first debate, McCain chided Obama for having a liberal record, saying "It's hard to reach across the aisle from that far to the left."

Obama didn't respond. In his first debate, he might not have to reach so far after all.

Government should regulate banks

Greed and hate have always been a part of the human condition. If this were not true, why are the stories of Cain and Abel and Jacob and Esau such prominent stories in the Bible. It is the duty of government to enforce reasonable and responsible regulations so that both are held in check.

In the early '80s, my brother-in-law Jack Kullers, was president of the First National Bank of Denham, Ill. He was beyond furious when the savings and loans were allowed to make loans without the government regulations banks were operating under at that time. Instead of making the savings and loans abide by the rules the banks had, the government in its wisdom, deregulated the banks. Now Jack's bank is dead, having failed in 1987 at the age of 59.

I contacted all of my congressmen and said they should forget politics and do what would be best for our country. I also insisted they made sure none of the money got into the hands of the greedy chief executive officers and the favored few (Oh, Simpson replied with a detailed outline of what was done and assured me none of this money would go to the CEOs or bank presidents.

Personally, I think these greedy souls who could lay off 2,000 workers while they ran off with billions should not be put in prison. Make the punishment fit the crime. Starting with the 1,000 men, if all those guilty would have to give back all they stole and had to start over with nothing but a modest house and car, then they and their wives and generations to come would find out what it was like to have two little. If all of them gave back to the companies and/or government all they had, the banks could use that money to ease the credit crunch. Then we citizens would not be doing out $50,000 to keep them in power every year either. Good idea, don't you think?

Hartgen for state representative

I encourage you to vote for Steve Hartgen to be your state representative for District 23B. His record of community involvement for over 20 years is truly impressive. Mr. Hartgen's understanding of both the district's economic challenges and potentials is documented by his accomplishments.

As former editor of the Times-News he added the Magic Valley AG Weekly to the paper, providing key, up-to-date information to the local ag industry. As a private citizen he recognized the importance of the diversification of Magic Valley's economy, and played a key role in the formation of the Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization and Business Plus. These two groups have been instrumental in attracting new businesses to our community.

This is a man who can lead, communicate and represent the Magic Valley in an outstanding manner.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Vote for Garcia

This letter is in support of candidate Felix Garcia for sheriff of Twin Falls County. I have known Mr. Garcia for over 20 years and have found him to be dedicated to his law enforcement career. He not only has law enforcement experience but served as a Marine in the U.S. military. His law enforcement career included, but is not limited to, working in the jail, working as a supervisor, patrol work, task force duties and he was a detective. Mr. Garcia knows that a good sheriff must work in the field with his men, as well as perform administrative duties in order to make the department run efficiently, and make himself available to the public as they are the people who elected him. I will be voting for Felix Garcia for sheriff on November 4 and I hope you will do the same.

Democrats responsible for voter fraud

After listening to the testimony of so many ACOIN workers and how many of them have registered so many illegal voters, even those that said they had voted before (even though they are here illegal).

I cannot see for the life of me how our government can allow any of those people on our voter rolls unless they want this election bought and paid for by the Democratic Party. If we get Obama for a president, this country will most certainly deserve every terrible, horrible social program we get. Maybe that will stop everyone from wanting to come to America. No one will want to work hard and save because the government will take it all. I only hope they will pay me back for all the health insurance I had to the health insurance I have because I was never without health insurance, even when I had our children. But we always had to do without a lot to pay for it. Just like now we have to come up with $600 a month to pay for Medicare. It's not cheap, believe me. I guess the Democrats believe the only way they can win is by getting illegal votes, so sign them up and win. So glad our life in America will be over before all this comes down on our heads!

McFall best candidate for Jerome sheriff

We are writing in support of Doug McFall for Jerome County sheriff. My wife and I have farmed in the Eden area our entire lives until our retirement. We have seven many sheffs come and go over the years. This election year we feel Doug McFall will bring professionalism to Jerome County and its residents. With his past experiences and training that Doug has had with the Idaho State Police, this is just what Jerome County needs. In conversations with Doug, we found Doug to be a very caring and compassionate person wanting to work hard for the citizens of Jerome County with all of the issues facing our community today. This is why we are voting for Doug McFall. We encourage the residents of Jerome County to vote for McFall for Jerome County sheriff.

Democrats responsible for financial crisis

It is not just the economy that has been destroyed, their dreams shattered by the Fannie Mae/Freddie Mac financial scandal, will still cast their vote for the man and party responsible for all their pain.

That same party that has gloated that they have solved our problem (the one that they let happen) while they were at it they added another $150 billion of pork for us to swallow.

The same party that just three years ago Congressman Barney Frank (D) said Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac were sold as a rock, while he and Dodd were thanking money from Fannie and Freddie.

Obama took over $200.00 from F&E only Hillary took more. These desperate people were more interested in filling their pockets and paid no attention to all the warnings about the loaning scandal at F&E.

The same party that supports ACORN, a group of thugs that are responsible for massive voter fraud all over the country. ACORN is an arm of the Democratic Party; they only register Democrats and are funded by the taxpayers. Obama has been a long-time supporter of these felons and has taken over $1 million from them.

The same party that supports a Marxist and the same party that is pushing this great country towards socialism. If scary people, their motto is "Punish the successful." Does the name President Hugo Chavez ring a bell?

And where has the slimy media been? Once again in the tank for the Democrats.

A vote for the Chicago lightweight is a vote to destroy this country.

Obama wrong man for the job

OK, all you Kool-Aid drinkers who are jumping out of your skin because you are so enthusiastic about our new Messiah coming to save us from all this evil: Be careful what you wish for, you just might get it.

Taxes up (except for the 40 percent who pay zero taxes), government up, economy in the toilet. As we speak, the dubious senator is measuring the drapes. He will probably win. Maybe Sara will take off her gloves. It is her job.

John McCain is not my first choice either; however, Barack Obama's history is out there. I won't put it here or put up any of the Web sites that spells it out as you just don't care.

We've all heard how Barack "supports" the Second Amendment. His history proves he really wants to abrogate gun rights and replace it with Roe v. Wade.

I hope I don't have to ask for this to be reprinted years from now (Oct. 16, 2008), because I am who says, "Told you so!"

Risch is a good family man

I'm writing to support Jim Risch as the next U.S. senator for Idaho because he is a man of character and integrity that believes that family comes first.

Jim Risch has been married to his wife, Wicki, for 40 years. When he travels, you hardly ever see him without his wife by his side. In today's time to see a couple with such a strong partnership — they are real role models for Idaho and the nation.

Because of their strong commitment, they were selected as Idaho's Healthy Marriage Ambassadors to promote healthy marriages and strong families in Idaho.

For this and many others reasons, I will be voting for Jim Risch on Nov. 4 and I would encourage you to do the same.

Garcia misrepresented by sheriff's office

In regards to Douglas Hughes' letter to the editor, I am appalled at the staff of the sheriff's office unprofessionalism during this election for Twin Falls County sheriff. They keep going on and on about how Felix Garcia was fired from the Twin Falls Police Department and decertified from POST. What they don't tell you is the truth.

Fact: he was not fired; he resigned in 1999 from the Twin Falls police. They also don't want to tell you it was three years later after he had left Twin Falls police and was working for another agency that POST decided to decertify him. Why don't they mention that, and why did it take POST three years later in 2002? Doesn't POST have a statute of limitations to go after someone's certification?

Fact: I know this because Felix Garcia is my father. He has always told me that law enforcement deals in facts, not fiction, rumors or lies. Is this how they close their cases at the sheriff's office.

based on fiction, rumors and lies and not facts? I also want to say what kind of stranglehold does the sheriff have on his staff; can't they make their own decisions or are they just pawns? As to Douglas Hughes, Jack Johnson, Dave Bissell and the other staff members, didn't you talk to my father at the Twin Falls County Fair, voicing your concerns about what changes needed to be made at the sheriff's office? What, or should I say who, changed your minds?

According to my father he considered these individuals as his friends and co-workers. I guess people will say and do whatever it takes when they think their job is at stake. On Nov. 4, vote for fact not fiction, rumors and lies. Vote Felix Garcia for Twin Falls County sheriff.

Obama supports voter fraud

To all who have had their fill of "being taken advantage of" or "left at the mercy of" our brilliant government "pull-out" these past couple weeks: Are we ready to sit back and let the "good old boys" take care of another decision for us?

We each have one vote; let's keep it that way. The voter fraud is a wildfire that is sweeping through much of our country. True democratic voting will not be valid in November unless this is stopped immediately.

The play to seek out people who will register and possibly vote multiple times (Freddy Johnson openly admitted registering 73 times) has run rampant in many states. This has been the sole work of ACOIN, an organization sponsored and financially supported by Obama.

This matter should be of top priority. We can't let this be done in a slipshod way. Our way of life can change dramatically if Obama is elected. Let's at least make the election an honest one.

Colin Powell endorses Barack Obama for president

By Stephen Oshanescher Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Colin Powell, a Republican and retired general who was President Bush's first secretary of state, broke with the party Sunday and endorsed Democrat Barack Obama for president, calling him a "transformational figure" while criticizing the tone of John McCain's campaign.

The former Joint Chiefs of Staff chairman said either senator is qualified to be commander in chief. But after studying both, he concluded that Obama is better suited than McCain, the standard-bearer of Powell's own party, to handle the nation's economic problems and help improve its world standing.

"It isn't easy for me to disapprove Sen. McCain in the way that I have this morning, and I rate that," Powell said on NBC's "Meet the Press" where he announced the endorsement and delivered a serious blow to the aspirations of his longtime friend, Arizona Sen. McCain.

"But, Powell added, "I think we need a transformational figure. I think we need a president who is a generational change and that's why I'm supporting Barack Obama, despite my lack of respect or admiration for Sen. John McCain."

The endorsement by Powell amounted to a stunning rejection of McCain, a 26-year veteran of Congress and a former Vietnam pilot, who has campaigned as the experienced, tested candidate who knows how to keep the country safe.

Powell's endorsement has been much anticipated because of his impressive foreign policy credentials, a subject on which Obama, a first-term senator from Illinois, is weak. Powell is a Republican centrist popular among moderate voters. At the same time, Powell is a black man and Obama would be the nation's first black president — a goal Powell considered pursuing for himself in 1996, before deciding not to run. Powell said he was cognizant of the racial aspect of his endorsement, but said that was not the dominant factor in his decision.

Powell expressed disappointment in the negative tone of McCain's campaign, his choice of Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin as a running mate and their decision to focus in the closing weeks of the contest on Obama's ties to 1960s-era radical William Ayers, saying "It goes too far."

A co-founder of the Weather Underground, which claimed responsibility for nonfatal bombings in the United States during the Vietnam War-era, Ayers is now a college professor who lives in Obama's Chicago neighborhood. He and Obama also served together on civic boards in Chicago. "This Bill Ayers situation that's been going on for weeks became something of a central point of the campaign," Powell said. "But Mr. McCain says that he's a washed-out terrorist. Well, then, why do we keep talking about him?"

Powell said McCain's choice of Palin raised questions about judgment. "She's a very distinguished woman, and she's to be admired. But at the same time, now that we have had a chance to watch her for some seven weeks, I don't believe she's ready to be president of the United States, which is the job of the vice president," he said. "And so that raised some question in my mind as to the judgment that Sen. McCain makes."

Powell seemed dismissive of McCain's endorsement, saying he had support from four other former secretaries of state, all veterans of Republican administrations: Henry Kissinger, James A. Baker III, Lawrence Eagleburger and Alexander Haig.

"Well, I've always admired and respected Gen. Powell. We're longtime friends. This doesn't come as a surprise," McCain said on "Fox News Sunday."

Asked whether the endorsement would undercut his campaign's assertion that Obama is not ready to lead, McCain said, "Well, again, we have a very, we have a respectful disagreement and I think the American people will pay close attention to our message for the future and keeping America secure."

Powell also said he was troubled that some Republicans — he excluded McCain — continue to say or allow others to say that Obama is a Muslim, when he is a Christian. Such rhetoric is polarizing, he said.

"He's always been a Christian. But the really right answer is, what if he is? Is there something wrong with being a Muslim in this country? The answer's no, that's not American," Powell said. "Is there something wrong with some 7-year-old Muslim-American kid believing that he or she could be president?"

Obama called Powell to thank him for the endorsement. Obama spokesman Robert Gibbs said,

Trial of Fort Dix plot suspects to get under way

By Geoff Hahnel Associated Press writer

CAMDEN, N.J. — A jury will hear opening arguments Monday in the trial of five men accused of plotting to kill soldiers on Fort Dix, a case the government has presented as one of the most frightening examples of homegrown terrorism since the Sept. 11 attacks.

The five defendants — all foreign-born Muslim men in their 20s — have spent much of their lives in the southern New Jersey suburbs of Philadelphia — were arrested in May 2007 and accused of plotting to attack soldiers. The Army base primarily trains reservists for duty in Iraq and Afghanistan.

No attack was carried out and aid lawyers for the men say there was no plot.

The men face charges of attempted murder, conspiracy and weapons offenses and could be sentenced to life in prison if convicted on all counts.

Government prosecutors also expected to portray the men as hateful to America and sympathetic to terrorists. Defense lawyers had been trying to get evidence that the men had anti-Semitic views barred from trial. They also tried to prevent government prosecutors from showing videos that the men allegedly watched that depicted scenes of Americans being beheaded in Iraq.

In a ruling last week, U.S. District Judge Robert Kugler said prosecutors could present that evidence. But he said the videos must be stopped before any actual beheadings are shown.

Michael Shewver, Spedar Tatar and brothers Britan, Elvir and Stain Duka were arrested on May 7, 2007. Authorities said they had prepared for an attack by loading out military buses, buying weapons and training in paintball games and a shooting range, but the case is complicated because no attack was carried out. Prosecutors are trying to prove not only that they arrested the right men, but also that the suspects were planning a crime.

Defense lawyers are likely to argue that while their clients may have spoken ill of America and even rooted for terrorists, that does not mean they intended to kill soldiers. They will also question the character, motives and role of two paid government informants who made hundreds of hours of secret recordings that form the bulk of the evidence in the trial.

Lawyers for the suspects have suggested that if there was a plot, informants provided their clients into it.

Terrorism law experts across the country will pay attention to the case, which they see as an example of a pre-emptive prosecution of the sort that has become more common since federal law enforcement refocused on terrorism after 9/11.

With 80 booths, health fair returns to Magic Valley

By Melissa Davis
Times-News writer

Devote your Friday morning to your health and stop by the third annual Magic Valley Health Fair, at Magic Valley Mall.

The health fair, sponsored by the Times-News, is a one-stop shop for south-central Idaho health information.

Other sponsors include College of Southern Idaho Office on Aging, St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center, Gooding County Memorial Hospital and St. Benedict's Family Medical Center. A battery of tests will be available for free or reduced prices, including body fat percentage tests, blood pressure tests, carotid artery screenings and diabetes tests. Low-cost flu and pneumonia shots will be available.

Rebecca Southwick, a Times-News sales representative and one of the event coordinators, said organizers expect 1,500 to 2,000 people to attend. More than 80 booths will be positioned throughout the mall.

"We are taking over," Southwick said.

"You can also learn about changes in your community. Gooding County Memorial will have a display promoting North Canyon Medical Center, the new hospital expected to open in early 2010," said Shellee Amundson, spokeswoman for the hospital.

The Gooding hospital will also provide a podiatrist, Amundson said. Free foot tests can show potential health problems — even if you don't have pain in your feet.

"Sometimes if you have things like low back pain, hip pain or knee pain, it could actually be an imbalance with your feet," Amundson said. Decreased sensation in the feet can point to diabetes, too.

Another plus of the fair: free skin cancer screenings. According to the National Cancer Institute, skin cancer is the most common type of cancer in the U.S., with more than 1 million cases of non-melanoma skin cancer diagnosed every year. The key? Early prevention. Both basal cell and squamous cell carcinomas have a 95 percent cure rate when detected and treated early, according to the American Cancer Society.

So take some time from your busy routine and drop by the health fair. At very least, you could learn something new. At most, it could save your life.

Flu-fighting efforts focus on immunizing children

By Shari Ross
Los Angeles Times

The upcoming flu season could be the start of some-thing big.

Not "big" as in the severity of flu. By all accounts, this year's influenza vaccine should be more successful than last year's only partly effective one. And it's too early to tell whether the flu this season will be especially widespread.

We mean "big" in terms of a grand, new experiment in the nation's approach to preventing flu outbreaks — a push to vaccinate children, who not only are hospitalized at high rates because of the flu but also appear to be efficient disease carriers as well.

Over the past decade, public health officials have been expanding the recommendations on which age groups of children should get the flu shot. This year marks the first time that flu vaccination is recommended for everyone age 18 and younger, with the exception of infants 6 months old and younger.

Dr. Samuel R. Gross, a pediatrician in Highland, Calif., helped coordinate a complicated flu-immunization program for children in San Bernardino County.

The main question is: Will parents go for it?

Although most adults have been included in flu vaccine recommendations for years — and still are — the emphasis on stopping the spread of flu has shifted from reducing deaths in the elderly to stop-

Crunching the facts about fab abs

By Jennifer Shah
Los Angeles Times

Six-pack abs — everyone wants them. But only some know the best ways to get them. Contrary to popular belief, it's not just about staying loyal to the standard crunches. The secret to the six-pack is more complex and incorporates a healthful diet to reduce fat, cardio to get lean and let those abs show, and functional exercises that consistently engage the core muscles, which also involve the back.

Those tny abdominal muscle groups include the rectus abdominus (the ones along the front that comprise the six-pack); the internal and external obliques that flank the rectus abdominus and help the trunk rotate; and the deep muscle layer called the transversus abdominus that lends stability to the pelvis.

Three personal trainers offer their core ab thoughts.

 Jon Baragilla, national director of personal training development for Body Total Fitness.

The truth about abs is that you have a layer of fat between the skin and the muscle, and it doesn't matter how many crunches you do. If you don't cut down that layer of fat, you'll never see your abs. You have to do exercises that are high in calorie expenditures — compound joint movements like squats, lunges, lower body exercises that recruit a lot of muscle fibers because they're incorporating more than one muscle group. The overall result is that you burn more calories.

There's no such thing as spot reduction. You're not going to lose fat in your midsection if all you're doing is crunches. Crunches burn very few calories compared with other things you can do.

People who aren't overweight but still have that layer of fat can bump up the intensity of their workouts. A lot of people like to shy away from resistance training and focus on cardio, but resistance training increases lean muscle mass, and you burn more calories to maintain that lean muscle mass, so your body's daily

Doctored gasoline gives theft victim measure of satisfaction

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: A few weeks ago, I returned home after mowing the lawn at my mother's place and parked my truck behind my house. I left the lawnmower and a 5-gallon can of gas in the bed of my truck and went into the house for a drink of water. When I returned, the gas can was missing.

I thought another can, filled with gas and added 2 pounds of sugar. Again, I parked my truck in the same spot with the gas can visible. An hour later, it too had disappeared. A short while later, I noticed a neighbor's son and his friends pushing his car up the street. They said they had "engine problems." My wife thinks what I did was wrong, but I should offer to pay for his dad's engine repairs. What do you think?

—A GALLENO
IN "ILLUSIONS"

DEAR "A-GALLENO": I disagree with your wife. What if the boys had another kind of engine problem and this was just a coincidence? I'm sure whenever stolen your gas got an expensive lesson. Let's hope it also saved them from a life of crime.

DEAR ABBY: Please help with a question about Halloween trick-or-treating etiquette. What do you do when the parents of the children you are trick-or-treating even offer you their own candy collection bag? This happened to me several times last year.

Some of the adults said they were collecting for a child who wasn't there or for infants and toddlers in strollers. Others didn't even offer a reusable, even after I asked them when their "costume" was supposed to be. Thanks for your input, Abby.

—KATHLEEN B. SPRINGFIELD, MASS.

DEAR KATHLEEN: While Halloween is supposed to be a holiday for children, many teens and adults enjoy the idea of free candy and trick-or-treating, too. In years past my doorknob has been ringed by revelers who looked so I was tempted to offer them a martini.

As I see it, you have two choices: Buy enough candy to go around, or turn off all the lights and hide. In my experience, it's better to do the former.

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating a man with post-traumatic stress disorder. He takes anti-depressants and sleeping meds, and has for many years. Because he fought on the front lines in Vietnam, he deals with nightmares related to PTSD.

He loves me and wants to marry me, but I worry because his first three marriages didn't work. I care about this man, but I'm a little scared of the future and how his PTSD will affect us. What should I do?

—LOVES MYVET

DEAR LOVES: I assume that because your boyfriend is on anti-depressants and sleeping medication, he is also under a doctor's care. Has he also received psychiatric treatment for his PTSD?

While this question may seem obvious, I'm sad to say that some soldiers from as far back as WWII "slipped through the cracks" and suffered their entire lives with night terrors and difficulty forming close relationships because they never received the treatment they needed. If your boyfriend hasn't received professional help, insist that he get it — because unless he does, your life will be filled with nightmare No. 1.

IF OCTOBER 20 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You may have your sights set firmly on the future between now and mid-January, but it is quite easy to become enthused about something that will prove pointless, don't accept or give crucial promises, since it is easy to overestimate your abilities. By the middle of January your business sense becomes honed to a fine edge and you will be extremely sharp where career or money-making projects are concerned. You can make certain dreams come true in March because you possess the desire and the energy to make them a reality.

AHES (March 21-April 19): A study house can only be built on a solid foundation. Weigh all options carefully before reaching a decision on that new project. Take your time and don't start anything before you are properly prepared.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Avoid getting signals crossed. You may find yourself the recipient of conflicting information. Take into consideration the sources and do a bit of investigation before drawing any conclusions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A great presentation means nothing if nobody is listening. There may be too much going on for anyone to adequately grasp the message you are trying to get across. It may be better to wait until tomorrow.

HOROSCOPE

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Even the best hitters in baseball can be off their game once in awhile. You may encounter problems with judgment issues. It may be better to hold off on key decisions until you are back to your old self.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can't have your cake and eat it, too. Find a balance. You may feel the need to take charge of all matters and do everything yourself. Let others do their jobs even if you feel you can do them better.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stick with what you know. You will be better served by staying with known routines; don't test new waters. Avoid experimentation, making important decisions or entering into new contracts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It's always darkest before the dawn. Your workload may seem impossible to fulfill, but if your resilient you will succeed and feel all the better for it. Do not shy away from business responsibilities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Don't bite off more than you can chew. Take charge and delegate lesser tasks to colleagues and coworkers to achieve goals without taking on everything yourself. Don't quibble over minor details.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Times are changing. Stop being a rebel without a cause and go with the flow. You'll find yourself achieving things with ease, as it is much easier to swim with the current than against it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Weigh all details of a situation carefully. Do not put all your trust in something fleeting, or ignore something that is of genuine importance. Do not depend on others to do as you expect them to.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Positive energy surrounds you. Companions may be weary of the daily grind, but you can motivate others by setting a good example. Show them the way, but don't make their responsibilities yours.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Now is not the time to get too busy as has much chance of losing a winning Postup new projects or commitments. Stick with what you know and simply meet your current responsibilities.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"Much learning does not teach understanding." — Heraclitus

When Terence Reese was sent "Bridge in 10 Easy Lessons" for review, his comment was, "The author should hasten to take them." Alan Truscott's "Bridge in 3 Weeks" (Master Point Press) is not in that class. Alan was the New York Times bridge columnist for more than 40 years. There are 21 lessons, and at their conclusion a diligent student will be armed with sufficient knowledge to begin playing.

When West leads the heart jack against four spades, Truscott suggests that you play your losers, leaving trumps until last. One loser in hearts, one in diamonds, and hopefully none in clubs. There will always be one trump loser, so every effort should be made not to lose two.

First put up dummy's heart queen (you never know) and take East's king with your ace. It's time to test trumps. It cannot gain to lead the queen. Because you are missing the 10 and nine, you must lose a trick even if the king is outside. So play the spade ace, then lead low toward your hand. The queen holds, but West shows down. Return to dummy via the diamond king (not the club king) and lead another spade.

East can win his king and cash a heart, but must exit with a diamond now. Once trumps have been drawn, which defender is likely to have club length? Surely West, who has short spades, so play the ace and queen of clubs. Now you can finesse against West's jack and are home free.

ANSWER: Almost as many slams are let through by leading an ace as are beaten by cashing one. Here, with diamonds apparently not breaking for declarer, there is no reason to get active. I would guess to lead a club, but a trump is a reasonable second choice.

A MONTHLY NEWSLETTER FOR THE BUSINESS COMMUNITY

We're All in This Together

A recent panel discussion hosted by the Magic Valley Builders Association included local banking representatives who commented on the current economic woes facing our country. There is good news locally. Local bankers say credit is still widely available in south-central Idaho, they continue to make good loans to good customers, and it's mostly business as usual for our local economy. Granted, our local economy has cooled. But the Twin Falls area continues to be a bright spot economically in Idaho and in the country. Traditional, fiscally-prudent values continue to dominate the lending practices of local bankers and the borrowing practices of Southern Idahoans. Panelists agreed that much of the 'caution' being exhibited in the economy is driven more by perception than by reality. The federal 'rescue package,' Wall Street activity, and the global 'credit crisis' dominate the news and give us all reason to pause when it comes to financial decisions. The Twin Falls Chamber is an advocate for local business and for our community. We encourage individuals and business owners to get the true facts from trusted sources when making decisions that have an impact on our local economy. Talk to your personal banker and financial advisors (check out Chamber-member businesses who provide these services in the online Chamber Directory at www.twinfallschamber.com). Research financing options that can help your business. Be active with local businesses to support them. Turn off the national news and take the family out for dinner instead. Catch a movie. Go bowling. Get a jump start on your Christmas shopping. Live your life! We're all in this together. And the Chamber is here as a resource for our members to help in any way we can to continue to enhance our region's economic vitality and quality of life.

Secure, Strong, Member Owned
Still lending responsibly to meet our members' needs

At Pioneer, we realize that this can be a time of concern when it comes to you and your money's future. We have been in business to serve our members for over 50 years and in that time we have created a much higher than average profitability and have over $21 million in reserves. We are a member owned financial institution that is 29,000-strong.

PFCU did not engage in the subprime mortgage borrowing trend, nor did we heavily weight our loan portfolio with mortgage loans. We have always and will continue to lend responsibly.

Many troubled institutions have become extremely conservative in the point it can be very difficult to obtain a home loan, a 2nd mortgage, or even an auto loan. Pioneer Federal is still eager to fulfill your lending needs, we analyze each loan request case by case in the same manner that we always have.

The forum is held on the 3rd Tuesday of each month at 9 Beans and a Burrito (704 Cheney Dr.) from 12noon to 1pm. The forum is a roundtable discussion of the labor market, real estate, economic development, and other issues that impact the economy. We also have guest speakers who present on specific topics. Support for Beautification in Our Community

The Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce Beautification Committee is kicking off another 5-year program for the Shoshone Street Hanging Basket Project. Over the past 10 years, the financial support of individuals and businesses has helped to grow this program to include 70 flower baskets that are hung each year on the historic lampposts along Shoshone Street from Twin Falls City Park to just south of the Old Towne Bridge. The baskets are maintained throughout the growing season to provide beautiful natural decoration in the heart of our community.

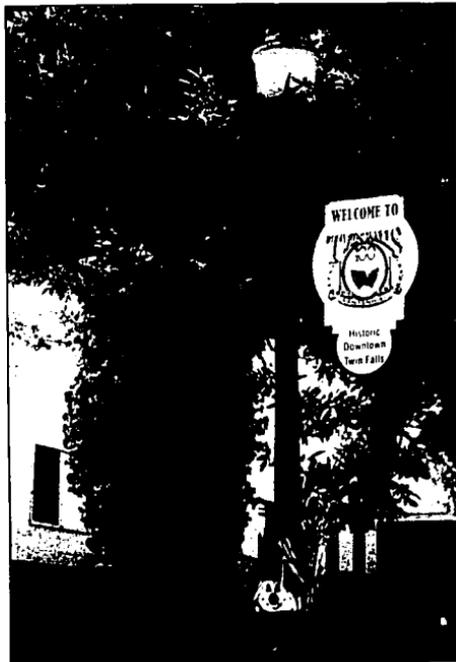

The Beautification Committee is looking forward to the continuation of this program with your help. We are seeking sponsorship commitments to fund the costs of the baskets and maintenance. Sponsorships are available at various levels.

- 5-year commitment (2009-2013)
SAVE 20% $220 per year
- 3-year commitment (2009-2011)
SAVE 10% $247.50 per year
- 1-year commitment (2009)
$275

Billings will be sent to you in March of each year of your commitment.

Your sponsorship covers the cost of growing the baskets, installation, watering and fertilizing, sponsorship sign, maintenance, and removal of the baskets at the end of the growing season.

If you're interested in joining the Beautification Committee, the Chamber, and the current sponsors in supporting this fantastic program, please call Judie at the Chamber at 733-3974.
