Twin Falls deputies: Massage parlor dealt in prostitution

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office authorities say more than just back rubs were for sale at Osaka Massage and Spa on Addison Avenue.

Two women were arrested this week at the business and charged Friday with prostitution crimes. Prostitution wasn't charged at all last year in Twin Falls County, and this is the first case so far in 2008.

Myeong Sook Mickley, 46, is charged with one count of misdemeanor prostitution and Sun Do Chong, 57, is charged with two counts.

Authorities assert the women led undercover male deputies by the hand into rooms and offered to perform sexual acts for money. Costs were $60 for "house pay"

Study: Idaho 44th in gov't integrity

The Associated Press

BOISE — A new survey ranks Idaho 44th in the nation in governmental integrity, openness and accountability.

The survey by the Chicago-based Better Government Association examined open records laws, open meeting laws, whistle-blower laws, campaign finance requirements and conflict-of-interest laws. It then created a government "integrity index" that put Idaho near the bottom of the list.

"I think we need to stop and do a little introspective, and ask ourselves what's going on," Sen. Mike Jorgenson, R-Hayden Lake, told The Spokesman-Review. "I think there is too much gray area in open meetings."

Public input sought for new Jerome County jail

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

Jerome County officials said they want to break ground on a new jail sometime next year, but first they want to know what county residents think.

The commissioners met last week with Sheriff-elect Doug McFall and consulting company Rocky Mountain Corrections to discuss plans to build a new facility, because they say the old jail isn't filling the need.

"At this point, the next real step is to form a citizen advisory committee of people from all walks of life," McFall said on Friday.

Getting a new jail is a pressing concern in terms of space and costs, said Jerome County Commissioner Charlie Howell.

McFall said remodeling the current jail is out of the question because it's "too small and it's just too old and worn out."

But much of the jail plan is

tentative including location, exact size, cost and financing, said Howell.

Almost half of Jerome County's jail population is usually held elsewhere because there's not enough room in its own lockup. A bill last month for Jerome County inmates to stay at the Gooding County jail was about $26,000, said Howell.

"We want to bring those issues to a citizen committee," Jerome County had been in discussions with Gooding, Carnas and Lincoln counties

M.V. irrigators propose plan to recharge the aquifer

By Nate Poppo
Times-News writer

It's not as easy as one would think to put water back in Idaho ground.

Joining other efforts to do so, a group of seven Magic Valley canal companies and Irrigation districts has come forward with its own proposal to develop aquifer recharge projects in south-central Idaho.

The Surface Water Coalition plans to spend this winter developing a three-to-five-year plan for pilot recharge projects, with the projects themselves starting in spring 2009.

The goal, coalition attorney Tom Arkoosh said Friday, is to move the search for recharge water from a confrontational approach to a cooperative one. He cited an ongoing fight over using part of the Milner Dam power plant's water right for recharge projects as one example of what's not effective.

"The ultimate goal is to remediate this aquifer," he said. "As long as we fight, we don't accomplish it."

Firefighters battling Calif. blaze at wind's mercy

By Amy Tazin
Associated Press writer

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Firefighters were holding their own Friday against a wildfire that destroyed more than 100 homes in a wealthy, celebrity-studded enclave, but authorities warned that evening wind gusts could send the blaze on another destructive sprint.

Much of the damage to homes and a small Christian college occurred Thursday night, but several more homes burned Friday in Montecito, a quaint and secluded area that has attracted celebrities such as Bob Lowe, Jeff Bridges, Michael Douglas and Oprah Winfrey. More than 1,000 firefighters worked to contain the blaze ahead of winds that were expected to pick up after sundown.

"It's not a time to relax," said Santa Barbara County Deputy Fire Chief Tom Franklin. "Everybody's got to be diligent through tonight. It's the last evening of these wind events."

Franklin said more than 150 homes may have burned in the area and asked for patience from residents as crews try to catalog the devastation in remote hill areas

Open enrollment for Medicare begins

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Now is the time for seniors to take a look at their Medicare prescription drug benefits — even if they are happy with them.

Open enrollment for Medicare prescription drugs programs, known as Medicare Part D, starts today and runs through Dec. 31.

The federal plan is subsidized with tax dollars, but administered by private insurance companies with various plans that seniors 65 and older can choose.

Seniors may see changes in 2009 to the plans that have served them well in 2008, so they should still look at their options for next year, officials said.

"It's very important that they check to make sure that the prescription plans they're on are going to work best for them in 2009," said Tamara Stricker, regional coordinator for the Senior Health Insurance Benefits Advisors program in Twin Falls. The program is part of the Idaho Department of Insurance.

The best plan for seniors depends on the prescriptions they take, she said.

The SHIBA program will have staff assisting seniors from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday at the Twin Falls

Senior Center, 530 Shoshone St. Seniors will be helped on a first come, first served basis. They'll need to bring their current Medicare information and a copy of all their prescriptions and dosages.

The internet-savvy seniors can visit www.medicare.gov and find their options through searches that look at their age, location and prescriptions.

Seniors can also get good information from talking with their pharmacist, who will be familiar with Medicare plans that are best for their prescriptions, said Peter Pitts, president of the Center for Medicine in the Public Interest, a nonprofit focused on health issues.

"The thing to keep in mind is the beauty of Part D is that seniors get to choose their plan," Pitts said.

There are also government regulations for how companies can market plans to seniors. Insurance companies and marketers cannot do the following: provide meals as part of their marketing activities; do telemarketing or door-to-door solicitations without the beneficiary's invitation; have sales presentations and take applications where health care is delivered; and have sales activities at education events.

Sun Valley Co. moves ahead with River Run

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

Sun Valley Company isn't letting the sluggish economy get in the way of its plans to build a hotel near River Run Lodge.

The resort's General Manager Wally Huffman introduced his vision for a 160-acre property to members of the Ketchum City Council, Planning and Zoning Commission and about 100 spectators at the River Run Lodge this week.

Huffman said he doesn't know if the economy will rebound in a couple months or a couple years. But he wants to be positioned to act when it does. And that requires being annexed into Ketchum and going through the city's planning process.

"We're not looking to over-build or to ask for entitlements beyond what the area can support," said Huffman, noting that only 83 acres are suited for development.

The preliminary vision encompasses a "vibrant neighborhood community" that complements the city of Ketchum and includes the possibility of a nature preserve, said Huffman. It would also offer enhanced access to the Big Wood River and Trail Creek and create a gateway to the city of Ketchum.

The vision includes a 150- to 170-room hotel near River Run Lodge and Pete Lane's. Retail would be limited to avoid competition with downtown merchants.

Multi-family condominiums and possibly apartments would sit on the bench in what is now the northwest corner of the existing River Run parking lot. Townhouses, duplexes and four-plexes east of it could include community and employee housing.

Several large single-family lots would be located on the southwest corner of Sun Valley's property south of Trail Creek in an area now used for snow storage.

"We want this to be a neighborhood of Ketchum—not an isolated resort village," said Becky Zimmerman, president of the Denver-based Design Workshop, which is helping Sun Valley plan the new hotel area.

A nature preserve with interpretive trails would be in the southwest corner. A community park with playing fields would be placed in between the condominiums, duplexes and four-plexes.

The portion of the bike path that runs through Sun Valley property would be rerouted at Sun Valley's expense. And trails connecting to the mountain and other areas would be constructed through the property.

A parking garage would round out the plan.

Vanessa Cosgrove-Fry, director of Citizens for Smart Growth, said she was impressed with Huffman's invitation, for government leaders and others to "put their heads together" to work on the plan.

"The nature preserve is very exciting and I'm also excited about the workforce and community housing this would offer, as well as the trail system," she added.

"And I like the fact that the parking structure would be available for the city of Ketchum to use in its efforts to cut down on traffic in the city."

Police identify body found in paper bale

BOISE (AP) — The Ada County coroner says the man found crushed to death in a bale of waste paper has been identified as 51-year-old Terence Fitzpatrick of Boise.

Fitzpatrick's body was found in Twin Falls on Monday inside a 1,500-pound bale of paper that originated in Garden City, a town near Boise.

Erwin Sonnenberg released a statement Friday saying that Fitzpatrick had been identified after a fingerprint analysis. The autopsy indicated that he had been crushed to death.

Police said Fitzpatrick wore clothing consistent with what a homeless person would wear.

Local director speaks to Burley students

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

Writer and director Rocco DeVilliers stopped by to chat with Burley Junior High School students Friday on the opening-day-of-his-movie "The Flyboys."

DeVilliers, who grew up in Twin Falls, is traveling cross-country as his first movie hits test markets.

"I made my first little movies in this area," DeVilliers said. "And I'm thrilled to be back here."

DeVilliers said he became interested in making movies when he was in junior high school in Twin Falls and used to save up money to rent a video camera for a day.

"I'm speaking here today because I was so passionate about film making and there was no one when I was this age to speak with me," DeVilliers said.

His independently made film has won 60 major awards so far on the film circuit and is about two 12-year-old boys in a small town who love airplanes and accidentally stow

"Hollywood is not making this kind of movie any more," DeVilliers said. "It has the old-fashioned values that I care about that you don't see in movies today."

If the movie, which cost $2 million and includes Hollywood star Stephen Baldwin, does well in test markets it could open nationally within a couple of months.

"It took me six years to make this movie and it was a tough road. I'm really excited for people to see it," DeVilliers said.

Burley chamber honors businessman, farmer of the year

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

Two Mini-Cassia men were honored for outstanding achievements as farmer and businessman of the year by the Mini-Cassia Chamber of Commerce during its 15th annual banquet Thursday.

Brent Stoker, honored as Farmer of the Year, was born into a farming family and as soon as he was big enough to see over the steering wheel began driving a tractor.

He became involved in his family's Declo-based business, Wheat Nuts, and when other family members took over that business he formed a farming partnership with his brother LaVel Stoker and began raising super beans, potatoes, grain and hay.

After more partners were added to the business they opened Moo Mountain Milk in 1998, which meant adding corn to their crop rotation as well as more hay acreage.

Stoker assumed the responsibilities of managing the waste on the dairy and he learned by trial and error the finer points of composting and has remained diligent in his efforts to improve his business operations.

Stoker works for the Viking Man Triathlon along with his wife Martha, which brings hundreds of athletes to the area each year.

He has been active with the West Cassia Soil Conservation Board serving as a supervisor since 2001 and for the past two years has served on the United States Potato Board.

Stoker is in his second term on the Mini-Cassia Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors and lends an agricultural point of view to the chamber.

Larry Roberts, also a Mini-Cassia native, was honored as the chamber's Businessman of the Year, and is president and general manager of Land Title and Escrow, Inc., a Mini-Cassia-based company.

The business was started in 1855 by his father Vern Roberts along with several other partners.

With an accounting, Roberts joined his father's company in an entry-level position and learned every element of the title insurance business as he worked his way up. He has been a long-time supporter of Mini-Cassia schools and athletic programs as well as civic organizations.

He has served as director of the Mini-Cassia Chamber of Commerce, as well as president of the Mini-Cassia Development Commission and has held numerous positions on professional boards in the state.

Over the years, Land Title and Escrow expanded its business to Jerome, Gooding, Rupert and Twin Falls and now employs more than 60 people.

with Idaho Power Co., the plan is still just a framework that needs to be fleshed out, Arkoosh said. Among other tasks, those involved with the project would measure the winter finding available water to use, establishing a monitoring program to measure the effects of the recharge and searching for ways to fund the work — including those listed in the state's Comprehensive Aquifer Management Plan, as well as through a program offered by Idaho Power.

Recharge water diverted from somewhere along the Snake and Wood rivers would be run through both local canals and experimental sites in both spring and fall. Getting all of the parties with a stake in the aquifer together, Arkoosh said, would promote consensus and possibly help avoid the costly litigation that has touched all water users in recent years.

The coalition currently has support for the project from Idaho Power and the Idaho Department of Water Resources, which was briefed on the plan at a Thursday evening meeting in Jerome. The meeting and release of the plan were triggered in part by rising tensions from the Milner issue, Arkoosh said.

On Friday, IDWR Director Dave Tuthill said he was pleased to see the proposal fit with the objectives of his department's draft plan for healing the aquifer. The idea, he said, is another sign of a change in approach he's seeing across the state.

This is a good example of a positive step forward to address water supply issues, initiated by water users," Tuthill said.

Also likely to be happy with the plan are the members of the Idaho Water Resource Board, who have made it clear in recent years that they view recharge as a priority. Both the board and a group of eastern Idaho water users have their own recharge projects going.

At a Nov. 6 meeting in Boise, the water board questioned IDWR technical engineer Bill Quinn about recharge projects across the state and talked about the need to move on from a pilot project at the W-Canal near Wendell that scientists say does not appear suitable for a long-term site.

Several members peppered Quinn with questions about how recharge effects are measured. It is "imperative," chamber member Gary Chamberlain said, that water officials have concrete evidence of what recharge can accomplish to take before the Legislature. "We've got to get some answers."

Groundwater users have also been invited to participate, Arkoosh said. Lynn Tominaaga, executive director of the Idaho Ground Water Appropriators, could not be reached for comment Friday afternoon. Both groups are on opposite sides in an ongoing water delivery call made by the coalition.

and $200 more for "everything," court records show.

The arrests were part of an investigation that began last year after a citizen complaint and authorities said the business has been lucrative and thriving in the area.

On Oct. 23, police say they counted nine men go into Osaka's and then leave 25 to 30 minutes later, court records show. Alleged prostitution customers, however, haven't been charged.

"In the cases charged here, there aren't any Johns," said

Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loeb. "These arrests were made and these charges were filed based on the police being there and these people soliciting the police with prostitution."

Mickley and Chong allegedly told police an Asian woman in New York instructed them to come to Twin Falls. Another Asian woman came once a month to pick up "house money" along with $2,000 rent, Chong allegedly told police in court records.

Authorities say the case may be connected to another from the Treasure Valley. An owner of the business Insuk Anderson-Groff, was convicted of prostitution in Boise, and violating a city ordinance for sanitation of a massage parlor, court records show.

A woman at Osaka, which was closed on Friday, said no one there could talk to the Times-News.

Court dates for Mickley and Chong have not yet been set.

conflict-of-interest category. Idaho is one of just four states with no requirement for state legislators to reveal their personal finances.

The state also did poorly for its open meeting laws.

"It doesn't come as a surprise," Sen. Kate Kelly, D-Boise, said about the survey. "It's just one more indication that this is an area we need to focus on."

In February, Idaho Attorney General Lawrence Wasden investigated the State Board of Education amid concerns it had violated the state's open meeting law. He concluded that the board might have violated the law, but he couldn't prove they had "knowingly" done so.

"We're working on some improvements" to the law, Wasden said. "That's an issue that we're trying to address right now. We're wrestling with exactly that."

Idaho did better for its whistle-blower laws, ranking 10 in the nation. Its state ranked 24th in open records laws, and 29th in campaign finance rules.

Idaho Court of Appeals overturns parents' drug tests

By Rebecca Boone
Associated Press writer

BOISE—The Idaho Court of Appeals says a northern Idaho couple had their constitutional protection from unlawful searches violated when a magistrate ordered them to submit to drug tests as part of their daughter's probation.

The couple were not named in the ruling to protect the identity of their juvenile daughter.

In the unanimous ruling handed down Thursday, the appellate court found that 1st District Magistrate Robert Burton's ruling served a laudable purpose in requiring the parents to be tested for marijuana. But the appeals court said it was still a violation of the parents' right against unlawful searches.

The case began when the girl was charged with two counts of petit theft and was placed on probation for a year by Burton. A term of the probation was that the girl's parents, referred to in the ruling as John and Jane Doe, II, were required to submit to random drug and alcohol testing.

Six months later, the girl was accused of violating her probation in several ways and the parents were accused of testing positive for marijuana. None of the girl's violations involved drugs, according to the court.

Burton continued the girl's probation and again required that her parents undergo random urinalysis drug tests.

The parents appealed that order, but 1st District Judge John Luster upheld Burton's ruling. They appealed again to the Idaho Court of Appeals, where they prevailed.

FTA dumps 'Buy America' waiver for trainmaker

BOISE (AP) — Idaho locomotive maker MotivePower Inc. won a victory Friday when federal officials refused to waive "Buy America" rules that prevented a European rival from bidding on a contract from Boston's public transit agency.

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority had requested the waiver to allow Germany's Vossloh AG to compete for the contract for 28 locomotives, worth as much as $186 million.

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority had requested the waiver to allow Germany's Vossloh AG to compete for the contract for 28 locomotives, worth as much as $186 million.

Vossloh insisted that 60 percent of locomotive components for the Boston contract would be manufactured in the United States, and that final assembly of most of the locomotives would be at a Caterpillar

Bridge design flaws may not be as rare as thought

By Frederic J. Frenzer and Joan Lowy
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — The design flaw that brought down a highway bridge in Minneapolis went undetected for 40 years. Federal safety officials say that, even today, government design reviews might not detect similar problems.

The National Transportation Safety Board made official Friday what has been clear for months — that the failure of undersized, steel gusset plates was the probable reason Interstate 35W bridge buckled and then fell into the Mississippi River.

The board found that engineers who designed the bridge in the 1960s either failed to calculate or improperly calculated the stresses needed for the plates that were to hold the bridge together.

They also blamed state and federal highway officials for not catching the design flaw at the time the bridge was approved for construction.

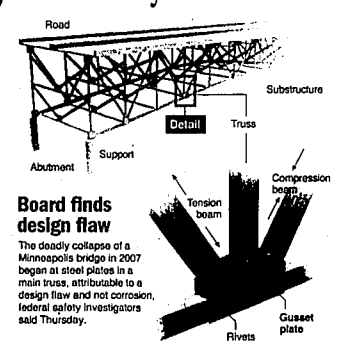

On Aug. 1, 2007, under stress from 287 tons of construction material and rush-hour traffic, the bridge's center span shuddered, then collapsed, dragging other spans into the river. Thirteen people were killed and 145 were injured.

One of the chief lessons of the tragedy, board members said Friday, is that state transportation officials may not probe deeply enough into the design details of their bridges.

"As the stewards of the public dollar, it's the obligation of government to trust but verify," board member Debbie Hersman said.

The board recommended the federal government establish a program to detect errors in bridge designs to prevent a repeat of the tragedy. The Federal Highway Administration has guidelines for how states should review bridge designs, but no formal standards.

In a statement, Transportation Secretary Mary Peters said she was directing the highway administration to work with the states to improve quality controls during bridge designs

Board finds design flaw

The deadly collapse of a Minneapolis bridge in 2007 began at steel plates in a main truss, attributable to a design flaw and not corrosion, federal safety investigators said Thursday.

and to review its guidance on the kind of plates that failed in the bridge.

Major bridge collapses are rare. Over the last four decades, the NTSB has investigated 24 bridge collapses, only five of which resulted from something other than a ship or a truck running into the bridge.

Design flaws, however, may have occurred more often than thought before the Minneapolis bridge collapse.

After the tragedy, safety investigators asked transportation officials in 14 states if they had found instances in which bridges had design flaws. Ten states responded they had found at least one.

The only 10 examples out of about 80,000 bridges built during the time frame state officials were asked about. Not all the flaws found were "safety-critical," said Mark Bagard, chief investigator for the safety board. "Thankfully, it's not all that common."

Board member Kitty Higgins called the bridge collapse "a wake-up call" for the government and those who design and build their bridges.

"We found through our conversations that there are a number of examples (of bridges with design flaws) that states fortunately caught on their own," Higgins said. "It says to me that this is a bigger problem."

Some board members were reluctant to blame Minnesota and federal transportation officials for not catching the design flaw, saying they followed the accepted practices at the time. The bridge opened in 1967.

Hersman, however, said that was no excuse.

"Just because standards or checklists don't exist doesn't mean we don't hold people accountable when they happen," Hersman said. "The people who are accountable are the people who designed the bridge and the people who accepted that design."

The bridge was designed by the engineering firm of Sverdrup & Partners, which was acquired in 1999 by Jacobs Engineering Group Inc. of Pasadena, Calif.

Although there may be problems in detecting design errors, some states, including Minnesota, now have a second engineering firm do independent reviews on major bridges.

Dan Walsh, an official in the NTSB's highway safety office, said that states need more additional safeguards, such as requiring that firms designing complex bridges have engineers on staff with experience in such design projects.

Intermountain Gas feels your pain

CHEERS: To Intermountain Gas Co., for giving something back. The utility recently filed with the Idaho Public Utilities Commission for permission to decrease a charge to customers that changes yearly to reflect the utility's costs. Customers have received credits for the past two years. But the PUC approved an increase this year. As a consequence, the average residential customer who uses natural gas for both space and water heating is paying $12.30 more per month, or $7.90 for those who only use it for space heating. Citing strong supply predictions and high natural gas inventories, Intermountain Gas wants to cut that increase by about $7.41 for space heating and water heating and $5.18 for just space heating. With the PUC also considering a 9.89 percent rate increase request by Idaho Power, Intermountain Gas' action couldn't come at a better time. JEERS: To Ada County Republican politicians for trying to curb absentee voting in Idaho elections. Outgoing Congressman Bill Sali and state Rep. Raul Labrador of Eagle say mass voting before Election Day is disruptive and disadvantageous some candidates. They want the 2009 Legislature to take up the issue. That's absurd and undemocratic. More than three-fourths of registered Idaho voters cast ballots in last week's election, an achievement largely attributable to efforts by Republican Secretary of State Ben Ysursa and the Idaho Association of County Clerks and Recorders — 82 percent of whose members are Republicans. About a third of the 653,000 Idaho voters this year cast absentee ballots. "There's a reason historically that we've had elections on a specific day," Labrador said. "For the convenience of county workers, we're expanding it further and further, and I'm not sure it should be that way." No, Rep. Labrador, it's not for the convenience of county workers. It's for the convenience of voters. "Apparently, people like it, because we had over 190,000 people vote absentee," said Deputy Secretary of State Tim Hurst, a former Cassia County administrator. "When you're talking about a democracy, don't you want participation by the people?" CHEERS: To state Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna, for threatening to take a $5 million contract away from a Minnesota company hired four years ago to help students who struggle on statewide tests. The department inherited the contract from the state Board of Education last year, and found that fewer than one-third of the computer-based programs the PLATO Learning company has implemented in Idaho classrooms are in compliance with state standards for math, reading and language. That's pathetic. The state board awarded the contract in part because PLATO Learning is politically connected; its action was part of a power struggle with then-Superintendent of Public Instruction Marilyn Howard. The PLATO Learning debacle illustrates why the state board should supervise public education, not run it.

Republicans need to start from scratch

Well, we Republicans have just made victory. Not the type of history we wanted to make, mind you, but history nonetheless. Not only did we lose the White House but, after losing our House and Senate majorities in 2006, we followed it up Tuesday night with even steeper losses in Congress.

REP. JEFF FLAKE

In January, Democrats will enjoy lopsided congressional ratios not seen since the 1970s. Let's face it: We Republicans are now, by any reasonable measurement, deep in the political wilderness. The temptation for Republican members of Congress today will be to assume the role of the post-Watergate Republicans of 1974 and accept minority status as a permanent condition. Indeed, the terrain is more difficult for us now than it was in 1992. Then, Republicanism was still largely defined by the Reagan years. Today the party is defined in the public mind by the Bush presidency. We've got a steep hill to climb.

Much of the backroom maneuvering and media speculation in the coming weeks will focus on identifying new standard-bearers for the party. This is important, and after a second straight drubbing, the House Republican leadership should be replaced. But the far more critical task is determining what standard these new leaders will bear. I suggest that we return to first principles. At the top of that list has to be a commitment to limited government. After eight years of profligate spending and soaring deficits, voters can be forgiven for not knowing that limited government has long been the first article of faith for Republicans. Of course, it's not the level of spending that gets the most attention; it's the manner in which the spending is allocated. The proliferation of earmarks is largely a product of the Gingrich-Delany years, and it's no surprise that some of the most ardent practitioners were earmarked by the voters for retirement Tuesday. Few Americans will take seriously Republican speeches on limited government if we

Republicans can't wean ourselves from this insidious practice. But if we can go clean, it will offer a stark contrast to the Democrats, who, after two years in training, already have their own earmark favor factory running at full tilt. Second, we need to recommit to our belief in economic freedom. The free market is still the most efficient means to allocate capital and human resources in an economy, and Americans know it. Now that we've inserted government deeply into the private sector by bailing out banks and businesses, the temptation will be for government to create its welfare and force the distribution of resources to serve political ends. Substituting political for economic incentives is not the recipe for economic recovery. Most House Republicans opposed the recent bailout and will be in a strong position to promote economic freedom over central planning as the Obama administration stumbles from industry to industry trying to determine which is small enough to be allowed to fail and which is not. Since timeables will be in vogue, perhaps Republicans could even insist on a timetable for getting the government out of the private sector. There are, of course, other pillars of the Republican standard — strong national defense, support for traditional values and the Second Amendment — but these are not areas where voters question Republican bona fides. In any event, as we have seen over the past several months, economic woes tend to subsume other concerns. We shouldn't complain. We can now play our strongest hand. In some respects, raising a new standard was made easier by Tuesday's rout. The Republican Party is not bound by election-year promises made by its presidential nominee. More important, the party is finally unshredded from the ill-fitting and unwelcome big-government conservatism that defined the Bush administration. This is not to say that it will be an easy transition. Congressional Republicans picked up some unattractive habits over the years in an effort to hold on to power. Whether it was relying on the redistributing process to help us choose our constituents, using the appropriations process as an ATM or passing legislation — such as a generous prescription drug benefit and a bloated farm bill — to pacify individual constituencies, these habits and voting patterns will be hard to break. But there is reason for Republicans to feel optimism. Politically, America remains a center-right country, and America loves a chastened and repentant sinner. As surely as the sun rises in the east, the Democrats will overreach. As long as we Republicans are willing to admit our folly, get back to first principles and work like dogs from tomorrow, we've got 'em just where we want 'em. Jeff Flake, a Republican, represents Arizona's 6th Congressional District in the U.S. House of Representatives. He wrote this commentary for The Washington Post.

Good Samaritans assist motorist in trouble

On Sept. 29, I was driving from Twin Falls to Hagerman. On Pole Line Road, the sunlight blinded me, so I pulled the car off to the side of the highway. A lady in a red car stopped behind me and, sensing something was wrong, telephoned for the services of an ambulance and the police. The ambulance came, as did — I believe — the highway patrol. I was physically OK but in no condition to drive home. The highway patrolman or Sheriff Hilliard drove me home.

I do not know all the names of those who came to help me, but they know who they are.

My problem was a cataract, which was operated on in October. I am so grateful to the system and to those who make it work.

Many thanks to the lady who telephoned for help, to the Magic Valley Paramedics and the Highway Patrolman or Sheriff Hilliard of Buhl.

Obama weighs Clinton, Richardson to head State

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President-elect Barack Obama has interviewed primary election rivals Hillary Rodham Clinton and Bill Richardson for secretary of state, according to Democratic officials who revealed his secret meetings with both as he weighed the decision on folding former foes into his new administration.

Richardson late Friday afternoon, a day after conferring one-on-one with Clinton at his Chicago office, said several Democratic officials. He plans to meet there Monday with his Republican opponent, John McCain, but advisers to both of the general election rivals say they don't expect Obama to consider McCain for an administration job.

The meeting with Clinton, revealed to The Associated Press Friday, excited a burst of speculation that Obama would transform the former first lady and his fierce campaign foe into one of his top Cabinet officials and the nation's chief diplomatic voice. But where she stands in contention for the post came into question as other Democrats, also speaking on condition of anonymity about the private discussions, said Richardson was brought in as well.

The two are not the only candidates Obama has talked to about the job, Democrats said. One senior Obama adviser said the president-elect has given no evidence whom he is favoring for the post. Obama asked Clinton directly whether she would be interested in the job, said one Democrat, who cautioned that it was no indication that he was leaning toward her. Obama was deciding on his presidential staff as well, naming longtime friend Valerie Jarrett as a White House senior adviser. Jarrett met Obama when she hired his wife for a job in the Chicago mayor's office years ago and has been a close confidante to the couple ever since.

AP Photo Democratic presidential candidate, Sen. Barack Obama, D-Ill., points to reporters as he holds a set of Mickey Mouse ears with his name stitched on them Oct. 20 at the airport in Orlando.

Obama getting more threats than previous new presidents

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Threats against a new president historically spike right after an election, but from Maine to Idaho law enforcement officials are seeing more against Barack Obama than ever before.

The Secret Service would not comment or provide the number of cases they are investigating. But since the Nov. 4 election, law enforcement officials have seen more potentially threatening writings, Internet postings and other activity directed at Obama than has been seen with any past president-elect, said officials aware of the situation who spoke on condition of anonymity because the issue of a president's security is so sensitive.

Earlier this week, the Secret Service looked into the case of a sign posted on a tree in Vay, Idaho, with Obama's name and the offer of a "free public hanging." In North Carolina, civil rights officials complained of threatening racist graffiti targeting Obama found in a tunnel near the North Carolina State University campus.

And in a Maine convenience store, an Associated Press reporter saw a sign inviting customers to join a betting pool on when Obama will be assassinated. The sign solicited 51 entries into "The Osama Obama Shotgun Pool," saying the money would go to the person picking the date closest to when Obama was attacked. "Let's hope we have a winner," said the sign, since taken down.

In the security world, anything "new" can trigger hostility, said Joseph Funk, a former Secret Service agent-turned security consultant who oversaw a private protection detail for Obama before the Secret Service began guarding the candidate in early 2007.

Obama, of course, will be the country's first black president, and Funk said that new element, not just race itself, is probably responsible for a spike in anti-Obama postings and activity. "Anytime you're going to have something that's new, you're going to have increased chatter," he said.

The Secret Service also has cautioned the public not to assume that any threats against Obama are due to racism.

The service investigates threats in a wide range. There are "stated threats" and equally dangerous or lesser incidents considered of "unusual interest" — such as people motivated by obsessions or infatuations or lower-level gestures such as effigies of a candidate or an elected president. The service has said it does not have the luxury of discounting anything until agents have investigated the potential danger.

Recently tinged graffiti — not necessarily directed at Obama — also has emerged in numerous reports across the nation since Election Day, prompting at least one news conference by a local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in Georgia.

Outlooks point to painful holiday

Retail stores post worse than expected declines

By Mae Anderson
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — The nation's largest retailers posted quarterly profits that fell by about half, and gave outlooks for the rest of the year that were far below Wall Street expectations.

Department said retail sales fell last month by the largest amount on record, the news painted a bleak picture of the industry and the prospects for its all-important holiday season.

Department said October retail sales fell 2.8 percent because of a huge drop in auto purchases and weak demand for other products from clothing to furniture. That was a bigger decline than analysts expected and the fourth straight decrease.

Nursing home changes name, not owner

SunBridge Care and Rehabilitation for Twin Falls has changed its name, but is still the same nursing home owned by the same company, officials announced this week.

The facility is now called River Ridge Care, and Rehabilitation Center, administrator Derrick Glum said. The name was chosen by local managers and employees, he said, as part of a company-wide rebranding after parent company SunBridge Healthcare Corporation purchased two larger companies. Other SunBridge facilities across the country also selected new names for themselves, he said.

Freddie seeks gov't aid after $25.3B loss

By Alan Zibel
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Freddie Mac is asking for an initial injection of $13.8 billion in government aid after posting a massive quarterly loss.

The mortgage finance company is making the first request to tap the $200 billion promised by the Treasury Department to keep it and sibling company Fannie Mae afloat after the two were seized by federal regulators more than two months ago. Freddie Mac said it expects to receive the money by Nov. 29.

The company posted a loss Friday of $25.3 billion, or $19.44 per share, for the third quarter. The results compare with a loss of $1.2 billion, or $2.07 a share, in the year-ago period. Analysts were looking for a loss of 89 cents per share for the latest quarter, according to Thomson Reuters.

The loss was mainly due to a $14.3 billion charge to reduce the value of tax assets, but also was driven by $9.1 billion in writedowns on mortgage securities, and $6 billion in credit losses due to soaring mortgage delinquency rates and foreclosures.

Freddie Mac said that rising unemployment rates, tightening credit and deteriorating economic conditions "contributed to a substantial increase in the number of delinquent loans," including prime loans made to borrowers with strong credit.

"Continuing home price declines and growing unemployment are now affecting behavior by a broader segment of mortgage borrowers," the company said in a Securities and Exchange Commission filing.

"Continuing home price declines and growing unemployment are now affecting behavior by a broader segment of mortgage borrowers."

— Freddie Mac

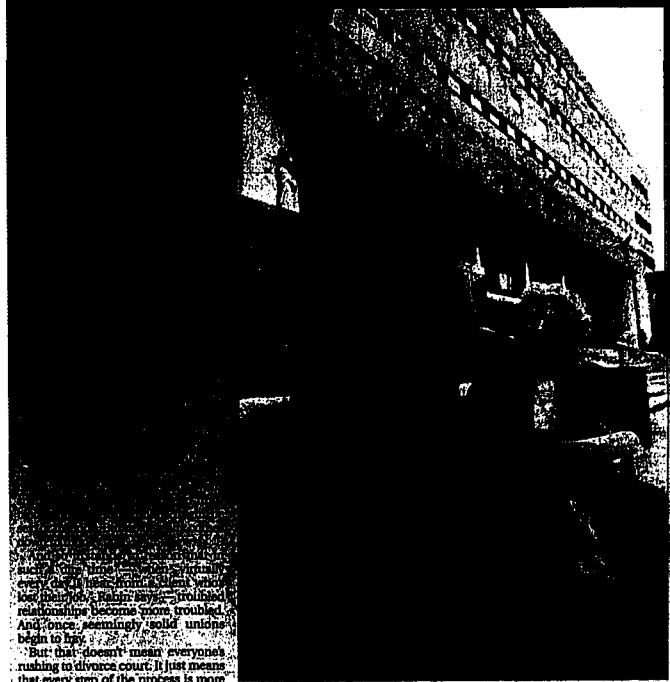

Freddie Mac's overall delinquency rate rose to 1.22 percent, from 0.5 percent at the end of June, and 0.5 percent a year earlier. The number of foreclosed properties that Freddie Mac holds rose to 28,000, from 22,000 in June.

On Monday, Fannie Mae posted a $2.1 billion loss in the third quarter as it took a massive tax-related charge. While Fannie Mae said it may have to tap the government's for help in the coming months, it has not yet done so.

Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac, which own or guarantee around half of the $11.5 trillion in U.S. outstanding home loan debt, operate in a conservatorship that enables the government to inject up to $100 billion in losses in exchange for ownership stakes of almost 80 percent. They also are facing a federal grand jury investigation into their accounting practices.

Both Fannie and Freddie have charged their accounting in their deferred-tax assets, which can emerge from operating losses, and can be used to reduce future tax expenses. Companies must be able to show they will be profitable if they intend to use the tax assets for earnings in later periods.

HARD TIMES

Attorney Melinda Rabin, right, confers with an unidentified associate outside Brooklyn Supreme Court in New York, Wednesday. Rabin says that the financial crisis has sent her and other divorce attorneys to court countless times, negotiating agreements for clients who've lost assets and can no longer meet their obligations.

But that doesn't mean everyone's rushing to divorce court. It just means that every step of the process is more fraught, more complicated, more difficult. Breaking up in this economy, it seems, can be a lot harder to do.

So while some of Rabin's clients are taking the plunge, others are hesitating, figuring they'll ride out the worst of the economic storm, hoping their homes will regain value, their stock portfolios rise again, their 401(k)s recoup before the pile needs to be cut.

"These days, a lot of people can't afford to even maintain one home, let alone two homes with two mortgages or rents, cable, electricity, phone, two health insurance policies," Rabin says. And there's a whole other group that's taking up Rabin's time these days: Clients who are already divorced or separated, and finding they simply can't live up to obligations they made in flusher times.

Says Rabin: "They're saying, 'I just can't pay for that private school anymore, that sleepaway camp, the piano lessons and the art classes. I know the judge ordered this, but I can't do it anymore.' And so we need to go back to court.

Whatever the status of a client — long divorced, just divorced or not yet — this is the season of facing up to cruel realities. And so a crisp November day begins with Rabin in a Brooklyn courtroom, arguing to the Urban Renewal discusses expansion of revenue allocation

The City of Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency is discussing an expansion of its Revenue Allocation Area to encourage private development in the downtown area.

An allocation area would pave the way for revenue collection procedures that help finance agency projects.

Economic Development

Director Melinda Anderson wrote in an agency summary, that "to facilitate and encourage new private development downtown, it will be necessary for the (Urban Renewal Agency) to expand its current Revenue Allocation Area.

"Currently it ends at 3rd Ave. S. and Shoshone St. It should be expanded to include streets over to 2nd Ave E and N and up to Eden St.

"When that happens we can help reimburse public utility and other infrastructure costs that are generally necessary at the same time."

• In other news regarding Urban Renewal Agency discussions, the city Parks and Recreation Department made a request to the URA to acquire 11,200 square feet of property on Maxwell — adjacent to the department's current office space.

City officials say the department is growing and has additional storage needs.

URA board members said in a meeting last week that the department has maintained URA property for many years, so there is a sense that the acquisition would be a fair trade.

Parks and Recreation Director Dennis Bowyer will present a formal request with an agreement and legal description for URA board consideration at a future meeting.

Crude continues decline despite OPEC signals

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Oil prices slumped Friday, despite signals from OPEC that it may slash production again, with the price of oil futures on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Light, sweet crude for December delivery fell $1.20 to settle at $57.04 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Oil prices have fallen about 60 percent during the last four months after reaching $147.27 in July, which produced about 40 percent of world supplies, has said it may cut production by the end of this month if prices continue to fall.

J.C. Penney 3Q profit falls by more than half

NEW YORK — Department-store operator J.C. Penney Co. said Friday its third-quarter profit fell by more than half as consumers cut back on spending and took fewer trips to the mall amid the deteriorating economy.

The company also said mail traffic in general has been weak so far this month and issued fourth-quarter guidance well below analyst expectations.

J.C. Penney shares fell $1.68, or 8.7 percent, to $17.60 during midday trading, nearly its 52-week low of $16.93.

The company said profit for the three months ended Nov. 1 fell 52 percent to $124 million, or 56 cents per share, from $261 million, or $1.17 per share, last year.

Revenue slid 9 percent to $4.32 billion from $4.73 billion last year. Analysts surveyed by Thomson Reuters expected profit of 56 cents per share, or a slightly higher revenue of $4.38 billion.

Sun Microsystems to cut 6,000 workers

SAN FRANCISCO — Sun Microsystems Inc. plans to cut up to 6,000 jobs, or 18 percent of its global work force, as sales of its high-end computer servers have collapsed.

The drastic move announced Friday highlights Sun's desperation to cut costs and survive as an independent company.

Sun's shares have fallen so steeply they've crossed an ominous threshold, driving the company's market value below its cash on hand.

Sun shares fell 2 cents to $4.06 in midday trading Friday.

Boeing delays delivery of 747-8 airplanes

CHICAGO, Ill. — Boeing Co. said Friday it is delaying deliveries of its 747-8 freighter and intercontinental airplanes due to design changes, limited engineering resources and an eight-week strike that shut down the company's factories.

Plano, Texas-based J.C. Penney said third-quarter profit fell 52 percent, hurt by weak mall traffic and lower consumer spending.

The company said it expects the tough environment to last well into next year and predicted that sales would drop 7 percent to 9 percent during the fourth quarter — usually a retailer's best time of year.

Department stores have been among the hardest hit retailers as consumers cut back their spending and trade down to discounters for their holidays. Analysts expect the third-quarter profit to fall 17 percent and its outlook for what it called "the most challenging" holiday season in years.

Likewise, upscale chain Nordstrom reported its third-quarter profit fell 57 percent and it slashed its full-year forecast.

J.C. Penney said it was increasing its marketing and improving its customer service, including opening store hours, during the holidays.

"Our focus is on delivering a great customer experience," Ken Hicks, the company's chief merchandising officer and president, said during a conference call. "We are fully aware of the challenges. Facing our customers, this is not a new situation."

Even Wal-Mart Stores Inc., which has performed better than most other retailers as consumers hunt for bargains, is not immune. While the company reported Thursday that third-quarter profit rose 10 percent, helped by positive response to early Christmas promotions, it lowered its profit outlook for the fiscal year amid the difficult economy and because of the stronger dollar.

Perkins said Best Buy's statement about consumer spending in the midst of negotiating "underlies what is really going on."

"It really does feel like a seismic change taking place," he added. "It's amazing how quickly things deteriorated since Lehman Brothers went under in mid-September."

Jerome scores on game's final play to stun Minico

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

Jerome backup quarterback Cameron Stauf took the snap, scrambled to his right and threw a desperation heave into double coverage along the far sideline. It looked for all the world like Minico would bat the pass away and escape with a victory over its Great Basin West rival.

Somebody forgot to relay that to Ross Hillier.

Hillier somehow came down with the ball for an 11-yard touchdown pass as time expired to give Jerome a stunning 41-38 win over Minico on Friday, advancing the Tigers to next week's Class 4A state championship game.

The play capped a 98-yard Tiger drive during the final 2:30 after the Jerome defense stopped Minico running back Skylar "Poke" Morgan at the 2 on the other end to give the offense a chance. That stop served as the final turning point in a game that will go down as one of the best high-school games in recent memory.

"As soon as our defense stopped him, I knew we were going to win," said Stauffer who was 32-for-57 for 305 yards to go with five touchdowns and an interception, in addition to 143 yards on 11 carries. Kevin Williams led the way for Jerome with seven catches for 72 yards and three scores, including a 2-yarder from Kris Bos on a fake diver, Boise State-style Statue of Liberty halfback pass in the first quarter.

Such were the plays this game brought out. Sekdom does such a hyped game live up to the billing. But Friday night's showdown at Bill Matthews Field in Rupert didn't just meet the lofty expectations, it blew right past them like an Indy car would a Pinto.

The Tigers had an opportunity to kick a game-tying field goal from the Minico 11 with seven seconds left, but there was never any thought of sending kicker Sergio Mendoza on the field.

Oakley quarterback Mark Pickett celebrates the Hornets' state semifinal win.

Oakley rolls into 1A title match

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

The defending champs are back in the title game. Oakley will get the chance to defend its state championship after Friday's 46-12 rout of Raft River in the Class 1A Division I semifinals in Malta.

The Hornets extended their winning streak to 25 games by beating their Snake River Conference rival for the second time this year. Now it's on to the title match where the Hornets will face the Prairie-Deary winner next week at the Kibbie Dome in Moscow.

"We stepped up and got it done," said Oakley lineman Jake Sagers. "We're not done. We want to repeat."

Raft River had a tough time keeping up with the Hornets' speed. Giving the ball to Oakley's offense is like handing the keys to Dale Earnhardt Jr. — it's that fast. The Hornets averaged 10 yards per carry and rushed for 376 yards.

Oakley (11-0) was also able to overcome four turnovers as the swarming Hornet defense held the Trojans to 188 yards on the ground — 136 of those were by senior Bridger Barrett.

"It's a tough road when you've got a big target on your back like that," said Oakley coach Nick Greenwell. "These kids have a lot of heart and desire. To come through the whole season with all the pressure hanging over their head, I couldn't be more proud."

Hornet running back Brian Babbitt was a beast, plowing over tacklers to three long touchdown runs. The first came on Oakley's second drive, as Babbitt found room over the left side and scampered 60 yards for a score. After forcing a Raft River punt, Oakley needed just three plays to go 42 yards, capped by Colten Wadsworth's 9-yard TD.

"We had a couple mistakes right off the bat, but we weathered the storm," said Raft River coach Randy Spaeth. "To be down 16-0 at the half, we felt pretty good about it."

Greenwell said it was important to seize the momentum early in the second half, and that's just what the Hornets did. Babbitt scored an 85-yard touchdown the first time he touched the ball in the third quarter to give Oakley a 24-0 lead.

But the Trojans wouldn't roll over. Babbitt tossed two third-quarter touchdown passes to

The Buhl Indians tried to head a game of it late in the fourth quarter, but Fruitland's three-score lead was too much to overcome. Buhl fell 21-7 Friday in the Class 3A state football semifinal round.

For the third straight year, the Grizzlies ended the Indians' season. Two years ago, it was in the state championship game and last year, the quarterfinals. Now, Buhl will take the third-place trophy and finish with an 8-3 record.

"It's nothing to hang your head over," Buhl coach Stacy Wilson said. "Any time you can bring home some hardware, it's a good sign."

Fruitland scored its third touchdown early in the fourth quarter, and the Indians were facing a shutout.

Buhl started its only scoring drive at its own 26, and big passes from Cader, Owen to Kurran Kelly along with a few tough runs from Eric Sengvanhpheng eventually put the Indians on the board. Buhl drove down to the 1, and Sengvanhpheng took a Superman leap over the pile to break the plane. Officials took a brief minute to confer before confirming the touchdown.

"We finally figured it out," Kelly said. "Short passes. Those flats were open all night."

It was a stunning resurgence on offense considering the squandered opportunities early in the second half. Three times, the Indians started drives in Fruitland territory, and three times they couldn't make plays to get into the end zone.

The Indians went for an outside kick after their score and recovered on the Fruitland 42, the sideline and Buhl crowd erupting simultaneously as hope that an upset lived on. The Indians began to drive again, but Owen threw his fifth interception of the game. Fruitland's Kyle Smith grabbed the ball on the 5 to stop Buhl.

The Indians were mired by a sluggish offense all night, accumulating less than 200 yards. Owen completed 10 of 28 attempts for 164 yards and six

POCATELLO — Amorrow MORGAN scored two free throws in the final seconds and a layup near the buzzer as Idaho State won its opening game of the season 75-70 against NAIA Eastern Oregon on Friday night.

UTAH STATE 75, MSU-NORTHERN 50

LOGAN, Utah — Gary Wilkinson scored 24 points and grabbed a game-high 12 rebounds to help lead Utah State past Montana State-Northern 75-50.

Jerome coach Gary Krumm and Minico coach Tim Britgot both noted the importance and the classic nature of the game, and said that it was unfortunate that there had to be a loser.

Jerome scored the final two touchdowns of the game, overcoming a 10-point deficit with seven minutes to play. Particularly so for Morgan, a senior, who carried 40 times for 252 yards and four touchdowns in the game for the Spartans.

Jerome will face Hillcrest for the state title next week, with a date to be decided. The game will be at Holt Arena.

For the Tigers, it means another week of practice and a huge carrot to avoid a letdown from such an emotional game.

With ISU up 71-70 with 17 seconds left, Morgan, who finished with 12 points, hit two of four free throws on consecutive trips to the line before adding his layup.

No. 22 Cincinnati wins, sets up showdown with Pittsburgh

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Tony Pike threw for 250 yards and two touchdowns and No. 22 Cincinnati remained in the hunt for the Big East title with a 28-20 win over ...

It was more than enough to hold off the mistake-prone Cardinals (5-5, 1-4), who have lost three straight for the first time since 1997.

Hunter Cantwell threw for 204 yards and a touchdown but also was stuffed on a fourth-down sack by the Louisville 35 with less than 4 minutes to go. The Bears also couldn't extend a lead as Jake Rogers missed his third field goal of the game.

mer UCLA All-American Courtney Dane. CSI softball coach Nick Baumber and members of the current CSI team will join former CSI players Debbie Dodds and Desi Thomson, along with U.S. Men's National Fast-Pitch softball team member Cody Thompson.

The victory gives the Bengals (2-2, 4-1) a half-game lead over idle West Virginia and No. 21 Pittsburgh in the conference tie race. Cincinnati beat its Mountaineers last week and host the Panthers on Nov. 22.

Not matter, as the Bengals forced Cantwell into four straight incompletions to beat their rivals for just the second time in 11 tries.

NASCAR bans 2009 testing to save teams cash

HOMESTEAD, Fla. (AP) — NASCAR has suspended all testing at its sanctioned tracks next season in a cost-cutting measure that should help teams save several million dollars in their 2009 budgets.

The announcement, announced Friday at Homestead-Miami Speedway, was being made at any NASCAR-sanctioned track, including facilities where its low-level Camping World East and West series races are held.

"Hopefully, it's a temporary situation," said NASCAR president Mike Helton, who estimated the move will save "in the range of 10s of millions" (of dollars) to the industry.

The suspension is an about-face from just a few months ago, when NASCAR considered expanding the testing schedule to as many as 24 days at any track, which includes the traditional "preseason" Daytona 500 testing, which NASCAR used

Edwards outqualifies Johnson

HOMESTEAD, Fla. (AP) — Carl Edwards got the jump on Jimmie Johnson in Friday's qualifying for the NASCAR Sprint Cup finale at Homestead-Miami Speedway.

Edwards, leading a daunting 144-point deficit heading into Sunday's 400, qualified fourth, trailing only first-time pole winner David Reutemann, rookie Scott Speed and Roush Fenway Racing teammate Matt Kenseth. Johnson, who needs only to finish 36th or better on Sunday to wrap up his third straight Cup title, will start a disappointing 30th.

It's only the seventh time in 26 races this season that Johnson has started 20th or lower. The good news for Johnson is his worst finish in any of those races was 33rd.

to promote his season-opening showcase event.

"The ultimate decision was that the best-case sce-in the August race at Bristol. Edwards, who knows his chances of winning the title mainly hinge on Johnson leaving a parts failure or crashing, shrugged off the qualifying spread.

"We just race as hard as we can," Edwards said. "No matter what happens to Jimmie, we have to run very well to have a chance to win this championship."

The qualifying discrepancy does give Edwards one edge, since pit selection is based on qualifying.

"Pit selection will be big — not as big as other places, though, because you can pass so easily here," Edwards said. "But I'll take whatever I can get. This will make it a little easier to sleep tonight and have a little confidence going into the race."

nario was no means no, and it being applied across the board for the entire season," Helton said. "There are other ways we can promote the start of the season."

Reaction was mixed among drivers, who generally loathe the midweek test sessions but value the data that's gathered.

Although Jimmie Johnson is poised to win his third consecutive Sprint Cup title in Sunday's season finale, he struggled at the start of the year with NASCAR's new car and used extensive testing to kickstart his season.

"I think it's a mistake," Johnson said. "I do understand and recognize that we need to cut expenses... Now we're going to focus on other ways to collect data — create simulation programs or machines to create on-track activity and then test at tracks that may not work and on tires we won't race on and try to find a baseline."

"It's going to slow things down and make it more expensive. We still have to get on the track. We still have to test. We cannot sit still."

The testing ban comes as NASCAR is trying to cut costs to save struggling teams.

Sponsorship dollars are extremely difficult to find, and several teams are in danger of folding if they can't get a midsize or a merger.

Chip Ganassi Racing and Dale Earnhardt Inc. agreed this week to combine their teams next season, and the partnership resulted in 100-plus layoffs at DEI. The Wood Brothers, who have been in NASCAR since 1953, lost the AR Force as a sponsor this week when it said it was moving to Gillett Evernham Motorsports next year.

Furniture Row Racing, an independent one-car team based in Denver, Colo., said it will run a limited schedule in 2009. The Furniture Row company had owned the team and sponsors the No. 78 driven by Joe Nemechek.

Carl Edwards, who drives for Roush Fenway Racing's five-car team, applauded the immediate cost relief if the league can't get it.

"I think it gives a little bit of respite to the teams as far as expenses and the team owners," Edwards said. "As long as everyone operates on the same rules, you are going to have nearly the same competition whether you can test every day of the year or not test at all."

Estimates say it can run much more testing actually costs. Rick Hendrick said it can cost $1 million per car, while Ray Evernham said every test costs around $70,000.

"It is very, very expensive to go 'track testing,'" Evernham said.

The current testing policy was seven tests over 15 days at tracks selected by NASCAR. Teams also could rent time at NASCAR tracks that don't host Cup races — Nashville, Kentucky, Memphis — and were free to test at any facility not on the NASCAR calendar.

Bobcats top short-handed Jazz

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Larry Brown and Jerry Sloan have combined for more than 2,000 NBA victories. On Friday night they both had to work hard searching for the right lineups because of key injuries.

In the end it was the well-traveled Brown, now in Charlotte, who edged the permanent fixture on Utah's bench.

With Raymond Felton scoring 23 points, Gerald Wallace adding 22 and Adam Morrison leading an effective band of reserves, the Bobcats held off the Jazz 104-96 in a matchup of undermanned teams.

"Naturally, they're short-handed with three really great players out," Brown said. "But you've got to take it any way you can get it."

While the Bobcats played without top scorer Jason Richardson (knee), the Jazz were without point guard Deron Williams (ankle), sixth-man Andre Kirilenko (finger) and center Mehmet Okur, who is with his sick father in Turkey.

It produced a night of odd lineups and matchups as Brown and Sloan matched wits, with Charlotte's backups the difference in giving Brown his third win in his ninth NBA job.

STORRS, Conn. — Hasheem Thabeet had 23 points and 17 rebounds, including three of a season-opening 81-55 win over Western Carolina on Friday night.

The 7-foot-3 junior, who towered at least 7 inches over any defender for the Catamounts, also blocked five shots. He was 7-of-11 from the field, with most of his attempts from inside 5 feet.

NO. 5 PITTSBURGH 86, FAIRLEIGH DICKINSON 63
PITTSBURGH — DeJuan Blair was overpowering inside with 17 points and 13 rebounds in slightly more than a half and Pittsburgh got a big lift from point guard Levarae Fields' return from a broken foot.

NO. 7 TEXAS 68, STETSON 38
AUSTIN, Texas — A.J. Abrams scored 21 points, leading five 3-pointers, and Texas opened the season with a victory.

The Longhorns' career leader in 3-pointers with 289, Abrams made four in the first half. The wispy 5-foot-11 guard had considered going to the NBA after last season, but opted to return to the Longhorns for his senior season. It was his 18th game with at least five 3-pointers.

NO. 11 PURDUE 82, DETROIT MERCY 50
WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — E'Twan Moore scored 18 points to help Purdue get the win.

Moore was a second-team all-Big Ten selection last season, but Purdue's depth has forced him into a reserve role. He made six of 12 shots, including three of four 3-pointers, in 23 minutes.

H.D. Puckett cut Oakley's lead in half at 24-12.

"We were a little worried because we were fumbling the ball (on offense) and then we were breaking down and losing coverage (on defense)," said Caleb Greenwell.

"But we pulled together and did just fine."

The Trojans were forced to the air in an effort to play catch-up. But Oakley's defense stiffened and didn't allow Raft River into Hornet territory in the fourth quarter.

Oakley put the game away when Babbitt added a 26-yard score, 14-yard TD Pickett threw a 14-yard pass to a diving Hunter Wadsworth. Pickett scored

LDS wards donate to Christmas Council

Thirty-nine leaders and 101 children from Emerson 1st and 2nd wards and Paul 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th wards, recently met at the Paul Stake Center to sack commodities for the Mini-Cassia Christmas Council.

The children sacked 800 pounds each of both sugar and beans that had been given to the council by various donors.

The children also donated items they made such as blankets, toys and make-up kits, as well as approximately 400 books.

Helping organize the event were Stake Young Women President Judy Barclay and Young Mens

VA budget expected to strengthen health care

President Bush's budget for Veterans Affairs requests $53.7 billion, with health care and disability compensation receiving most of the funding. The budget is $3.4 billion more than the current spending level.

Dr. James B. Peake, Secretary of Veterans Affairs, said the new budget will help strengthen the VA's collaboration with the Department of Defense to deliver health care benefits to veterans, such as members and their families, including progress toward development of secure electronic patient health care records that can be accessed by both departments.

VA, DOD work to improve cooperation

Secretary of Defense Robert Gates said, "We have a moral obligation to see that the superb lifesaving care that wounded warriors initially receive is matched by quality outpatient treatment. To provide world-class health care to all who are wounded, ill or injured serving our nation, the Department is taking action on the recommendations by the President's Committee on Care for America's Returning wounded warriors."

"To do this, the Department of Defense and VA will examine several key areas including disability and compensation systems, data sharing, traumatic brain injury and psychological health issues and medical case management."

People who vote twice in election risk felony charge

Q: With the elections now over I was wondering what would happen to somebody if they were caught voting twice?

A: My first thought was that if they voted for the opposite on each ballot then it would be no harm, no foul.

The truth of the matter is that if anybody were caught voting twice they would be guilty of a felony. That means that not only would they have a chance to find out how the prison system works but they could also lose the right to vote. For someone without voting privileges who tried to vote, the same rule would apply.

Q: I bought a house and inherited a vehicle from the previous tenant, I believe. What are my options for getting the vehicle removed?

A: Dynamic works the best but I prefer death by monster truck. That's a joke so please blow out that match and throttle down the truck. There are three options to this question, so let's talk about them. The first option depends on where the vehicle is. If the vehicle is just somewhere on your property then you'll need to call the police. The police will tag the vehicle for 48-hour removal and try to contact the owner. If the owner fails to remove it or can't be contacted, then it gets towed away.

The second option is that if your property was posted for vehicle removal prior to the vehicle being there then you can have it towed yourself.

The third option is that if the vehicle is blocking the owner's driveway or is interfering with the use of, or enjoyment of private property, it can immediately be removed by an authorized law enforcement officer.

Shortness of breath cuts quality of life; doctor suggests testing

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband, age 76, has suddenly developed atrial fibrillation. He had an active life, walking 3 to 4 miles five days a week and hunting. Now he can get short of breath while sitting in a chair. If he goes outside to do yard work, he gets short of breath within just a few minutes.

the pulse rate), but they didn't help for long. His rhythm remained normal in the hospital, but once he was home, he went back to being abnormal. His heartbeat was rapid, so he takes warfarin to prevent a stroke. He has his levels monitored every few weeks.

My husband's heart rate is now at a normal level of 80, but he continues to be short of breath. His heart specialist says he'll have to live with it. His chiropractor says he had has the same thing for more than 20 years and has learned to dispel it by taking several deep breaths and slowing down for a bit. My husband tried this, but it doesn't seem to work for him.

I have also gotten several e-mails from a woman who wrote a book and claims to know how to reverse atrial fibrillation, but I am doubtful that she knows something doctors don't.

DEAR READER: Your husband may be suffering from congestive heart failure. I urge him to seek a second opinion from another cardiologist. He needs heart testing, such as an EKG, stress test and more. The sooner he is diagnosed and treatment has begun, the better his chances will be at a more normal life. If left untreated, your husband will worsen slowly, becoming more short of breath and eventually developing edema (fluid retention and swelling). Get him to another cardiologist and let me know the results. To give you related information, I am sending you a copy of my health report

MINIDOKA VIEW Parent-teacher cooperation is key to student success

By Terry Garner
For the Times-Herald

I recently came upon a poem by Mark Taylor titled The Sculptors, which details the success of a child. Without a doubt, parents are a child's first and most important teacher.

It offers an eloquent reminder that a partnership between the school and the parent is most likely to ensure the success of a child. Without a doubt, parents are a child's first and most important teacher.

The school teacher is generally most responsible to teach the child the components and concepts of reading, math, science and other subjects. The child spends more time at home than at school, so support from the home is vital.

As an educator, I want to emphasize the importance of this partnership. Parents, grandparents and caregivers can provide support to formal education by performing only a few important tasks.

*Read with your child for 20 minutes every day. It can be the best 20 minutes of the day.

*Ask your child every day what he or she learned and what happened during the day. Be aware not only of what your child is doing but also how your child is internalizing what is happening at school.

*Support your school by participating — volunteer in the parent-teacher organization or in the classroom, and attend after-school functions.

*Finally, support the teacher. When misunderstandings occur, go to the school with an open mind and try to resolve the issue in an amiable way. I believe I speak for most educators when I say it's a privilege to work with your children. They are delightful and amazing. But it's hard work and the task at hand is enormous.

Our goal is to help children grow and develop into well-educated and well-rounded adults. We appreciate your support.

Terry Garner is the Heyburn Elementary School principal.

Burley's Gochnour to volunteer in Ecuador

Kimberly Gochnour, daughter of Marilyn and Jim Gochnour of Burley will travel to Cuenca, Ecuador, on Nov. 20 to spend 10 weeks volunteering in orphanages.

Gochnour graduated in 2004 from Burley High School and in April from Brigham Young University with a bachelor's degree in public health.

Gochnour will travel with other volunteers through Orphanage Support Services. The organization is a nonprofit charitable organization that sends volunteers on a regular basis to help in orphanages in both Cuenca and Quito, Ecuador. Volunteers help in various aspects of the program doing everything from changing diapers and feeding infants to giving physical therapy or teaching English.

Gochnour has a background in child care. In addition to babysitting for many years, she has worked with children as a camp counselor for SNARF, volunteered for the Special Olympics and worked at Aspen Grove Family Camp and volunteering as an occupational therapy assistant. She currently works at Clear Horizons Academy.

Other volunteer activities she has been involved with include volunteering at the Food and Care Coalition, the 5K Break the Silence Against Domestic Abuse race, the Provo City Hall Marathon, Baskin Robbins Donation Celebration for children with autism, at nursing homes in Provo, Utah, and for service projects to improve the community's parks and recreational areas.

New pastor in town

Carol Thompson serves Methodist-faith communities in Filer and Jerome

"The reason I'm in rural ministry today is because of a profound sense of God ... saying you need to be in ministry with people who love and work with the land." — Rev. Carol Thompson

By John E. Swayze
Times-News correspondent

FILER — Much like the saints mentioned in Ephesians 4:12, meeting the challenges of small town ministry takes people dedicated to the service of God.

Rev. Carol Thompson, the new pastor of United Methodist congregations in Filer and Jerome, has accepted the appointment to assist both faith communities in better defining what that role means for them.

"The reason I'm in rural ministry today is because of a profound sense of God, during my second or third year as pastor of Monroe United Methodist in Monroe, Ore., saying you need to be in ministry with people who love and work with the land," she said.

Before coming to the Magic Valley last month to fill vacancies left in Filer by the Rev. Noel Morfin and in Jerome by Rev. Laura Rockwell, Thompson spent five years in New York and traveled the nation for Town and Country Ministry. The ministry's purpose is to create an advocacy, leadership and worship training resource network linking 20,000 rural churches that are a vital part of the United Methodist denomination.

"Small congregations can compare themselves to larger churches and start thinking they're not worth much or can't accomplish much without being big, so the ministry is there to help them reach those goals," she said. "I haven't been in Filer or Jerome long, so I'm doing a lot of listening to find out what's needed, the dream God has planted within them and creating worship that is meaningful for people dealing with any number of issues."

Filer Methodist Church parishioners expect that Thompson's tenure as pastor will energize worship services and lead to expanded educational opportunities.

"There's something wonderfully angelic about Carol, and when they announced that she was coming back to Idaho, I felt like a little kid with a secret," Mary Jeanne Elliott said. "I think she has great sermons and hope we'll be able to start having confirmation classes again."

Priscilla Parsons echoed the same sentiment. "I think she'll be a big asset to the church in many ways, including our children's ministry," she said. "I also like that she's available during the week."

In accepting the position as pastor, Thompson is actually returning to the Filer congregation after a 10-year absence. Between 1994 and 1998, she was acting director of the Western Small Church Rural Life Center housed in the Wesley building on church grounds. Until funding ran out it provided a smaller scale western states outreach, similar to that offered by Town and

Rev. Carol Thompson, the new pastor of United Methodist congregations in Filer and Jerome, poses in the Filer church on Tuesday. One of her goals as pastor, she said, is to help her flocks create worship "that is meaningful for people dealing with any number of issues."

Country Ministry. "A lot of our work involved helping pastors fresh out of seminary and more familiar with city conditions learn how to cope with life in small towns and minister to the needs of rural congregations," she said. "Some had difficulty with the fact that their lives were no longer private: one pastor called up and mentioned that Starbucks was a family in the church or that a Kinkos (printing store) was so far away."

Leaving Filer in 1998, Thompson spent the next several years in academia as a faculty member of the Northwest House of Theological Studies in Salem, Ore., an extension program of the California-based Claremont School of Theology. Her daughter's family and a grandson currently live in Oregon.

"I taught spiritual formation classes in experiencing (prayer) and the use of prayer," she said. "We also had field practicum education classes where students would work with hospital chaplains and pastors in their church."

Born in Oregon's Willamette Valley, Thompson can't remember a time when her family didn't attend church services. As she grew, those worship experiences sparked a desire to enter the mission field.

"We were steeped in church," she said. "In fact, I think my earliest memory was of a Christmas Eve service when I was around two years old."

After graduating with a bachelor's degree in recreation management from the University of Oregon in 1967 she began serving as a US2 short-term missionary for the Methodist Church and working with children at a community center in Arizona.

After her mission obligation was completed, Thompson held a series of jobs, including that of case worker for child welfare services and with Camp Fire Girls in California. Then around 1975 she took a staff position with the Rose City Park United Methodist Church in Portland, Ore.

It was during this time, helping to lead youth Bible studies and programs for the elderly, that it became clear she couldn't answer many difficult questions from junior high and high school students. The experience gradually made Thompson recognize a call to ordained ministry that had been there since her time as a US2 missionary. Attending the Vancouver School of Theology in British Columbia, Canada led to the completion of a Masters of Divinity degree in 1985.

"Attending seminary shook me to the core, shattered everything I thought I knew in pieces and broadened my understanding as well," she said. "One time, I heard a bishop say something about his 700th conversion. I believe faith conversion is a daily process and we all can become more aware of the presence of God in what we're doing."

Catholic bishops will fight Obama on abortion

By Rachel Zoll

BALTIMORE — The nation's Roman Catholic bishops vowed Tuesday to forcefully confront the Obama administration over its support for abortion rights, saying the church and religious freedom could be under attack in the new presidential administration.

In an impassioned discussion on Catholics in public life, several bishops said they would accept no compromise on abortion policy. Many condemned Catholics who had argued it was morally acceptable to back President-elect Obama because he pledged to reduce abortion rates.

Anger over California gay marriage vote directed at Mormons

By Eric Gorski
Associated Press writer

DENVER — Supporters of gay marriage, frustrated over a ballot-box defeat in California, have channeled much of their anger toward the towering white spires of Mormon temples.

For months, the Mormon church sought to portray itself as just one member of a coalition of Catholics, evangelicals, black Protestants and others supporting Proposition 8, a measure to stop gay marriage in California.

Some opponents of the measure sought to dispel that in the campaign's final weeks, pointing to extensive Mormon organizing and the staggering amount of money donated by individual Mormons at the behest of church leaders in Salt Lake City.

Since the measure's passage by voters last week, media outlets reported chants of "Mormon

Catholic priest faces excommunication

Reverend attends ceremony to ordain woman

By Victor L. Simpson
Associated Press writer

VATICAN CITY — A Roman Catholic priest faces excommunication for attending a ceremony to ordain a woman in the United States, a Vatican official said Friday.

The Rev. Roy Bourgeois joined a June 29 ceremony in Lexington, Ky., to ordain Janice Sevre-Duszynska, a member of a group called Roman Catholic Women-priests.

His excommunication would likely be automatic, requiring no further action from the Holy See, said the chief Vatican spokesman, the Rev. Federico Lombardi.

Bourgeois told The New York Times, however, that he recently received a letter from the Vatican's doctrinal watchdog, the Congregation of the Doctrine of the Faith, offering him a chance to recant within 30 days to avoid excommunication, the newspaper reported Friday.

Lombardi said he did not know of such a letter. The Times said Bourgeois informed the Vatican he would not repent.

Recent popes have said the Roman Catholic Church cannot ordain women because Christ chose only males as apostles. Excommunication is the most severe penalty under church law, cutting off a Catholic from receiving or administering sacraments.

The ordained woman, Sevre-Duszynska, also faces excommunication.

She said the Vatican had threatened her with participating in the ceremony and giving a homily in support of women priests. She apparently was referring to excommunication.

"We condemn this action by the Vatican as a blatant abuse of power" she said in a statement, expressing her solidarity with the priest.

The Vatican in May issued a warning against ordaining women after reports of Catholic ordinations of women around the world. In March, the archbishop of St. Louis excommunicated three women — two Americans and a South-African — for participating in a woman's ordination.

A small group of women from Catholic organizations across the world gathered for a march during the Vatican's meeting of bishops in October to call attention to the female ordination. Wearing signs with the names of prominent women from the church's early days, they marched across the Tiber River close to St. Peter's Square.

Bourgeois is a member of the Maryknoll religious order.

Powder in envelope at Temple Square shown to be nontoxic

SAULT-LAKE CITY (AP) — The FBI says the white powder that spilled onto a mail clerk's hand at Temple Square is nontoxic.

FBI spokesman Juan T. Becerra says the powder that spilled Thursday from an envelope addressed to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Salt Lake City was tested in a laboratory for known biological hazards and toxins.

These tests came back negative.

Another letter with a suspicious powder arrived

Thursday at a Mormon temple in Los Angeles. It too has been determined to be nontoxic.

The Salt Lake and Los Angeles temples were the sites recently of protests against the church's support for California's gay marriage ban.

Becerra says the FBI is still investigating both cases. It's a crime to release a threatened harmful substance to stoke public fear.

"Even if you send a hoax threat, you're still in violation of federal law," Becerra said.

N.J. student sent home for dressing as Jesus for Halloween

PARAMUS, N.J. — Children often dress as historical figures for Halloween, but one northern New Jersey school decided a costume of Jesus Christ took it too far.

Alex Woinski, an eighth-grader at West Brook Middle School in Paramus, was sent home from school on Halloween.

Woinski, who has shoulder-length brown hair, wore a white robe, a red sash, sandals, a fake beard and a crown of thorns. His mother said Alex was told he could keep the costume on if he removed the beard and crown of thorns.

Superintendent James Montesano said the district doesn't want students wearing costumes that could be distracting.

Woinski's mother is Catholic, while his father is Jewish. She says her son recently celebrated his Bar Mitzvah and is studying Bible scripture.

Dalai Lama says his faith in China shrinking

TOKYO — The Dalai Lama said the situation in his native Tibet deteriorating and he has little faith that ongoing negotiations with the Chinese government will lead to greater autonomy for the region.

The exiled spiritual leader has allowed a "realistic" approach with Beijing in which he seeks some form of autonomy that would allow Tibetans to freely practice their culture, language and religion. But lately he has grown increasingly frustrated and vocal about the lack of progress, despite the departure of two of his envoys for new talks with China last month.

"Now my faith in the Chinese government is becoming thinner, thinner, thinner," he told reporters in Tokyo.

The Dalai Lama said conditions in his homeland continue to deteriorate despite his efforts to negotiate with Beijing.

"Inside Tibet, the situation is worse," he said.

The exiled Tibetan spiritual leader was in Japan to give speeches and visit monks and children throughout the country. He has often visited Japan in the past, but rarely has official meetings with government officials, who are wary of a negative reaction from China.

Christian-themed license plates

COLUMBIA, S.C. — South Carolina has begun taking online orders for Christian-themed license plates that are the subject of a lawsuit by a group that tries to keep religion out of government.

The new plates depict a stained-glass window with a cross on the left hand side and the words "I Believe" across the top. The Department of Motor Vehicles said it will begin making the plates after it gets at least 400 prepaid applications.

If the department does not get enough orders, the plates will not be made and those who did send in money will get refunds.

Washington-based Americans United for Separation of Church and State sued state officials on behalf of two Christian pastors, a humanist pastor and a rabbi in South Carolina, along with the Hindu American Foundation.

The group's executive director, Barry Lynn, said until the state began taking orders, some could argue his group's lawsuit was premature.

"Now the court can find a state-produced Christian license plate to violate the Constitution," Lynn said.

People who want to order the special tag can pay $5 in an online transaction to cover the additional cost of making the "I Believe" plates. The usual annual vehicle registration fee of $24 would also apply.

Li Gov. Andre Bauer, who helped push the measure through the General Assembly, said: "A lot of people can't understand what the hype is about. Nobody is mandated to have this tag ... it's an option."

Crosses on N.M. logo won't be contested

LAS CRUCES, N.M. — Two men have given up their fight to remove crosses from Las Cruces' logo after appellate judges ruled a request to rehear their lawsuit against the city, whose name means

"the crosses" in Spanish.

Paul Weinbaum said he and co-plaintiff Martin Boyd decided not to pursue further action because of the cost and a U.S. Supreme Court he views as conservative.

Weinbaum, who is Jewish, and Boyd, an atheist, have argued that the crosses on the logo violate the constitutional separation of church and state. The city and the Las Cruces school district use logos that include three crosses.

In September, the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed a lower court ruling that dismissed the men's lawsuit against the city. The judges also rejected another lawsuit by Weinbaum against Las Cruces Public Schools. The appellate court last Friday denied the men's request to reconsider, leaving the U.S. Supreme Court as their only option.

"We can't go forward," Weinbaum said. "We don't have enough money and it would be a pathetic trip to Washington (to the Supreme Court)."

Bush says faith sustained him through presidency

By Ben Feller
Associated Press writer

UNITED NATIONS — President George W. Bush said Thursday that faith changed his life long ago and has sustained him through the challenges of his presidency.

"Faith will sustain me for the rest of my days," Bush told a conference at the United Nations. The two-day conference was designed to bridge differences between religions and cultures.

Bush met on the sidelines of the conference with King Abdullah of Saudi Arabia, a country criticized for religious intolerance. All 192 U.N. member states were invited to the event, which the king set up following one he helped organize in July in Madrid.

"We may profess different creeds and worship in different places, but our faith leads us to common values," Bush said, adding that all people have the right to worship as they see fit.

Abdullah, whose country bans non-Muslims from openly practicing their religion, has expressed interest in increasing inter-religious goodwill, encouraging meetings between sects of Islam and asking Muslims to reach out to their non-Muslim neighbors. Abdullah warned delegates Wednesday that human beings must "live together in peace or harmony, or they will inevitably be consumed by the flames of misunderstanding, malice and hatred."

The king, however, made no mention of criticism from Human Rights Watch and others about Saudi Arabia's refusal to allow the public practice of any religion other than Islam and restrictions on those who do not follow the strict Wahhabi interpretation of Islam.

Abortion

on their failures to follow church teaching, Bishop Joseph Martino of Scranton, Pa., singled out Vice President-elect Biden, a Catholic, — Scranton's native who supports abortion rights.

"I cannot have a vice president-elect coming to Scranton to say he's learned his values there when those values are unity against the teachings of the Catholic Church," Martino said. The Obama-Biden press office did not immediately respond to a request for comment.

Archbishop Joseph Naumann of the Diocese of Kansas City in Kansas said politicians "can't check your principles at the door of the legislature."

Naumann has said repeatedly that Kansas Gov. Kathleen Sebelius, a Catholic Democrat who supports abortion rights, should stop talking Holy Communion until she changes her stance.

"They cannot call themselves Catholic when they violate such a core belief as the dignity of the unborn," Naumann said Tuesday.

"The discussion occurred on the same day the bishops approved a new 'Blessing of a Child in the Womb.' The prayer seeks a healthy pregnancy for the mother and makes a plea that 'our civic rulers' perform their duties 'while respecting the gift of human life.'"

Chicago Cardinal Francis George, president of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, is preparing a statement during the bishops' fall meeting that will press

Obama on abortion. The bishops suggested that the final document include the message that "aggressive pro-abortion policies" would be stewed as an attack on the church.

Along with their theological opposition to the procedure, church leaders say they worry that any expansion in abortion rights could require Catholic hospitals to perform abortions or lose federal funding. Auxiliary Bishop Thomas Paprocki of Chicago said the hospitals would close rather than comply.

During the campaign, many prelates had spoken out on abortion more boldly than they had in 2004, telling Catholic politicians and voters that the issue should be the most important consideration in setting policy and deciding which candidate to back.

Yet, according to exit polls, 54 percent of Catholics chose Obama, who is Protestant. The new bishops' statement is meant to drive home the point in a way that cannot be misconstrued.

"We have a very important thing to say. I think we should say it clearly and with a punch," said New York Cardinal Edward Egan in a statement.

But some bishops said church leaders should take care with the tone of the statement.

Bishops differ on whether Catholic lawmakers should refrain from redefining Communion if they diverge from central church beliefs. Each bishop sets policy in his own diocese.

"We must act and be perceived as acting as caring pastors and faithful teachers," said Bishop Blase Cupich of Rapid City, S.D.

Dr. Patrick Whelan, a pediatrician and president of Catholic Democrats, said angry statements from church leaders were counterproductive and would only alienate Catholics.

"We're calling on the bishops to move away from the more vicious language," Whelan said. He said the church needs to act "in a more creative, constructive way" to end abortion.

Catholics United was among the groups that argued in direct mail and TV ads during the campaign that taking the "pro-life" position means more than opposing abortion rights.

"We're calling on the group's executive director, said, 'we honestly want to move past the deadlock' on abortion. He said church leaders were making that task harder.

"What are the bishops going to do now?" Sorgen said. "They have burned a lot of bridges with the Democrats and the new administration."

William 'Bill' Frank Ling

William "Bill" Frank Ling, 91, of Twin Falls, passed away Tuesday, Nov. 11, 2008, at Heritage Assisted Living in Twin Falls.

Bill was born April 12, 1917, in a m. Henry—and Ida Elzada (Allred) Ling in Gilmore. He was the youngest of eight children. Bill and Rosa Ruth Loveless were married on May 16, 1936, in Salmon. In 1940, they moved to Burley, and two years later to Filer, where they resided until moving to Twin Falls in 1984. Bill worked for many years for Bean Grovers until his retirement in 1982.

Bill is survived by one daughter, Wilma (Richard) Farnsworth of McLean, Va.; one son, Ken (Lillian) Ling of Twin Falls; six grandchildren; 17 great-grandchildren; and one great-great-grandson born the day after Bill's passing. He is preceded in death by his wife, Ruth in June of 1988; his parents and all seven of his brothers and sisters.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Monday, Nov. 17, at White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park," with a viewing for family and friends from 4 to 8 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 16, at White Mortuary. Interment will follow the service at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls. Please join the family in sharing remembrances of Bill by signing the online guest book at www.McM.com.

The family would like to thank the staff at Heritage Retirement Center for the wonderful care that they provided to Bill over the past four years.

Sam Skinner

On Tuesday, Nov. 11, 2008, Sam Skinner passed away peacefully at his home.

He was born Feb. 4, 1932, in Amsterdam. He attended the Amsterdam and Hollister schools and then Filer High School. He met his wife, Myrna Gay, at the Amsterdam Post Office, and they were married Dec. 6, 1950. They shared 57 full and meaningful years together on the family farm. Sam lived his dream of raising a family, farming, custom thrashing, ranching and working in his shop. He had a knack for building and repairing machinery. He took great joy in keeping his equipment running and helping his neighbors with theirs when he could.

His wife, Myrna, father and papa, many special times were shared picnicking, fishing, hunting and camping. Sam never missed an opportunity for a road trip or a new adventure on the place. His spirited outlook on life will be remembered by many. Sam relied heavily on his faith in the Lord and the power of prayer. He rejoiced in his many blessings and always steadily encouraged his family's faith.

Sam is survived by his wife, Myrna—son, Danny (Shirley) Skinner; three daughters, Sonia (Chuck) Wells, Susie (Brian) Switzer and Laura (Greg) Rambo; four grandchildren, Corey (Heidi) Skinner, Randy (Amber) Branch, Hedy Branch and Kristy (Jerry) Forster; five great-grandchildren, Mikayla, Kylee, Hannah and Brady; as well as his brother, Tom (Leah) Skinner. He was preceded in death by his parents, Ed and Marjorie; and two sisters, Avas and Nadine.

A celebration of Sam's life will be held at 2 p.m. Monday, Nov. 17, at Reynolds Funeral Chapel, 2466 Addison Ave. E. in Twin Falls, with Pastor Dale Metzger officiating. Viewing will take place following the funeral service. Burial will follow at Sunset Memorial Park.

Report: U.S. mistreating illegal immigrant minors

DALLAS (AP) — Federal authorities have compromised the rights and safety of some unaccompanied illegal immigrant children by leaving them in inadequate government guidelines are partly to blame, according to a Texas-based research group.

Many children appeared before immigration judges without legal representation, some were transported home in shackles or cages, and the medical needs of some were ignored, according to a report released Thursday by the Center for Public Policy Priorities, a nonprofit think tank.

"There's no consistent policy. There's nobody who's responsible for these kids, in looking out for their safety," report author Amy Thompson said.

The Department of Homeland Security, which oversees immigration and border enforcement, disputes the center's findings. "DHS and its component agencies treat all minors, including unaccompanied alien children, with dignity, respect and special concern for their particular vulnerabilities," spokeswoman Laura Kechner said in a statement Thursday evening.

The report was compiled by examining U.S. immigration agency documents and immigration policies and statistics in the U.S., Mexico and Honduras. The center also interviewed children who were apprehended, government officials, contractors and nonprofit workers in the three countries, and toured two Texas facilities where unaccompanied illegal immigrant children are held.

An estimated 43,000 unaccompanied illegal immigrant children were removed from the U.S. in 2007, according to the report.

WASHINGTON

Econ summit opens: Big ideas, modest action expected

WASHINGTON — World leaders launched extraordinary summit talks on the economy or crisis on Friday, preparing to adopt a modest action plan that leans more on the U.S. approach of boosting oversight of shaky financial markets than the European desire to increase regulation.

Nearly two dozen leaders from big industrial nations and developing countries came to Washington, with almost as many different plans for dealing with the crisis. Diplomats sources said the leaders were likely to agree to a series of moves, some to be completed by March 31 and others meant for the longer term.

"A lot of handwringing people are counting on us to strengthen the financial system for the long term," Bush said in a toast to fellow leaders before their gourmet meal at the White House that opened the week.

A draft of the joint communiqué to be issued today after a day of closed-door meetings contains several ideas for making global financial markets work better by making them more transparent and accountable to investors, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity because the leaders had not yet signed off on the final document.

INDIA

India's first lunar probe lands, sends images

NEW DELHI — The first lunar probe from India landed successfully on the moon Friday as part of a two-year mission aimed at laying the groundwork for further Indian space expeditions. The Indian Space Research Organization said.

ISRO chairman G. Madhavan Nair said cameras on board have been transmitting images of the moon back to Indian space control, the Press Trust of India news agency reported.

Chief among the lunar mission's goals is mapping not only the surface of the moon, but what lies beneath. If successful, India will join what is shaping up to be a 21st century space race with Chinese and Japanese crafts already in orbit around the moon.

The unmanned moon mission was launched from the Sriharikota space center in southern India on Oct. 22. The box-shaped lunar probe carried a video imaging system, a radar altimeter and a mass spectrometer.

NEBRASKA

Nebraska starts fixing child abandonment law

LINCOLN — Nebraska lawmakers got to work Friday in a rare special legislative session designed to repair a unique "safe haven" law that has unintentionally allowed parents to abandon nearly three dozen children as old as 17. Legislators introduced bills calling for limits on the age of children who can be dropped off at hospitals in an effort to prevent newborns from being dumped in trash bins or other dangerous places.

Nebraska was the last state to enact such a law but didn't include an age limit. That has resulted in 34 children so far being abandoned there, some of them from other states.

Even as the session to correct the law approached, a 5-year-old boy was dropped off at an Omaha hospital on Thursday night. Earlier in the day, a woman dropped off two teenagers at another Omaha hospital, but one of them, a 17-year-old girl, fled. Authorities have not found her yet.

It can be especially challenging to play in a 4-3 part fit game...

The defenders led out three rounds of spades, and South seriously considered discarding a club on the third one.

In fact, South ruffed the third spade and cashed the heart king and queen...

This was a fine defense, but South had one final counter left.
