OEHLER SCORES IN TRACK MEET

Cowboy Outfielder Circles Bases in 14 Seconds Flat

Vic Oehler, cowboy outfielder, shows the sports fans a new record in the Twin Falls-Idaho-Pala game. Oehler walked off with two first places in the "track meet" preceding the game.

Oehler circled the bases in 14 seconds flat to beat Bob James, Russel outfielder, and pegged three runs to catcher Hal O'Connell from centerfield to win that contest. Bill Randall won the 50 yard dash in 6 seconds, edging out Oehler an James.

Earl Kupper, rookie cowboy outfielder, aiming at a big barrel placed on second base won pole position in accuracy throw, although Edson Mure, Russel backstop, was the only one to peg the ball into the barrel. Lanny McComell won the accuracy throw from third to first.

What was to be called as the "big attraction, an umpire plying contest, with big Ed Smith as the umpire was called off when Manager Andra Harrison objected because "it was a real umpire's contest."

However, in the tenth inning of the game, Harrison and Russel Manager Eddie Marshall lambasted the "real" umpire. When the fracas was over, Harrison and Russel Manager George was still battling—so Harrison evidently had the edge.

QUAKE CAUSES $50,000 DAMAGE

Santa Barbara Clears Away Debris Left by Earth Shocks

SANTA BARBARA, Calif., July 1 (AP)—Santa Barbara clears up today its debris left by a minute-long, rolling earthquake that started at 11:32 p.m. (PST) last night, with estimates of the damage running up to $50,000.

It was one day after the 16th anniversary of a quake which turned some buildings into shambles and killed more than a score of persons.

Ever since, Santa Barbara has looked upon the end of June as more than the close of the fiscal year. It is the time when the center of a chills shap, acting as a hunch, seek out the earthquake insurance policy which covers June 29 through 30. It was thankful he had as he looked at apartment pieces on the floor this morning.

The quake sent residents, many pajama clad, into the streets. Some women screamed, others dropped to their knees in prayer. A few were killed or injured, and many buildings were damaged or destroyed. One big structure cracked noticeably.

Five glass windows in stores bent and broke, crumpling into fragments. In homes, a few windows shattered, glass tumbled from mantels, dishes from shelves. Clocks stopped at 11:32 p.m.

Missourian on Stand in Court Trial of Denver Mining Man

SPOKANE, Wash., July 1 (AP)—Friend B. Greene, Van Buren, Mo., attorney, testified in federal court here today that when Harrison of Denver had assured him he was a college graduate with extensive engineering experience.

Other testimony has been that Harrison graduated only from high school in Denver, what chemistry he knew by himself. Other assays the attorney said, showed no platinum and but traces of gold value. Harrison charged $550 for the job. John Plattner, Denver cedar tank manufacturer, testified that when Harrison was representing the American Rand company in the construction of a mill at Pollock, Ida., Harrison had a 10 per cent commission for himself added to the price charged the company. # "Can this kind of beer be brewed in any city but PILSEN?"

In the old-time City of Pilsen men learned to brew a brilliant light-hearted beer called Pilsner.

There was new keenness to its flavor—a satisfying smack that boosted a man's enjoyment of beer.

A body so light and lively—so refreshing—that Pilsner became king of the world's fine beers.

For three centuries the famous old City of Pilsen was celebrated throughout the world by virtue of its beer. For here you have a fine beer of superlative flavor and goodness... beer never to be forgotten by those who once enjoyed it, here in America.

We'll be gratified if you'll taste today a true-to-type Pilsner brewed in America. A beer produced with one idea—to make it fully equal to imported Pilsner.

Labeled Brown Derby Pilsner, this beer is made to our exclusive Pilsner formula and constantly checked by our own quality control.

As in imported Pilsner, costly malt goes into it, and hops chosen for delicacy of flavor.

Like imported Pilsner, this is beer that goes better however you drink it— with or without food.

MAKE your first taste of Brown Derby Pilsner a generous, mouth-filling "pull." Roll it cool goodness on your tongue. Judge this beer as you prefer, with or without food. Unless you find Brown Derby Pilsner all we claim here—unless it satisfies you in every way—return it to the store where you bought it and they will refund you your full purchase price.

PLANE'S SPEED UP EVERYTHING, EVEN THE AIRPLANE. Today, when everything depends on speeding up the production of airplanes and more airplanes, what's one of the leading means of speed that that production? Why, the airplane itself!

Hint of this comes with the newest figures on air express shipments, which show that shipments to and from airplane plants are the greatest in general increase in air express shipments over two years ago. That increase was 287 per cent. It means that plans, small parts, wing castings, etc., and high machinery are now being shipped from airplane factory to airplane factory, saving precious days and minutes in the creation of more airplanes.

ARMY NEEDS DISMUKES. A reporter at Memphis was indubitably in a hurry and found time for thought at a minimum when he wrote: "It's doubtful whether the army can find a job fitting James Dismukes' talents which is indicated by the fact that Dismukes is a lion tamer."

A headline writer was slipping them out at an even faster clip and made the forthright statement in 30 points: "Army Can Not Utilize Talents of This Lion Tamer." The reporter and the headline writer, doubtless both very young, have no doubt been told of their twin error before this. It should have been clear to them, inexperienced though they are, that the army always needs lion tamers.

How do they think the army gets top sergeants?

DRAFT CONFUSION. That the draft machinery is not yet functioning in a groove is indicated by instructions from selective service headquarters in Washington to local boards to use their discretion in the matter of twenty-eight years of age or older who may be deferred a few weeks hence under pending legislation. Unless local boards decide unanimously one way another which would seem impossible, men from twenty-eight to thirty will be drafted in some localities, and deferred in others. A senate-approved bill, now before the house would empower the president to suspend military training instructions to all men who have reached the age of twenty-eight by July 1. This bill has caused many inquiries to be sent to Washington by local boards for instructions.

It may be days, weeks, or months before the world will be able to arrive at a definite conclusion concerning the enigma of Russian behavior. The case of Germany, which is so wide, therefore, of Russia so great and the news from the totalitarian front so thoroughly confused and colored, that nothing short of complete Russian collapse could give an immediate inkling of how the war is likely to eventuate.

While the process of illumination is going on, England will gain the valuable consequence of the effective prosecution of the Nazis with events on their eastern front. Stalin has been prone to rather free use of the word "invincible" in referring to the Russian army. The case of Germany has demonstrated that in actual operation it falls far short of this characterization. Russia undoubtedly has a larger reserve of trained men between 6,000,000 and 15,000,000, but they are mostly untrained and cannot be prepared for service overnight.

It is likely that Russia has more than 2,000,000 men available for service at the present time. It has a great deal of mechanical equipment, most of which is obsolete, and that its total of planes of all types may run as high as 10,000, including those that are three or four years old.

NEW ATLANTIC AIR SERVICES. The probability that four new air lines will be operating over the Atlantic between America and Europe by fall illustrates the impetus being given to civilian aviation by the war. The need for speed and the havoc wrought by submarines is speeding plans for enlarged trans-Atlantic air service. Plans are being made, particularly by the British, and U. S. and Canadian, owned, would be in addition to the British-Libson service now feeding Pan-American Clippers. It is planned to equip the new lines with U. S. Army military type aircraft, and to employ for primary passenger and mail flights, according to reports from London. One report has it that these planes will be flown by United States Army pilots, but bearing civilian marks. Daily flights are planned.

One of the lines is planned to be an all-American undertaking, with a secret northern British flight as its eastern terminus. One of the lines after direct routes to services is reported to plan daily flights between Britain and Canada, bringing passengers and mail eastward and taking ferry pilots back to the United States to pick up new bombers.

According to the London dispatch, this line will be maintained by Atero, a civilian group organized in Canada for ferrying planes to Britain.

Other Points of View

KINDLING A FIRE. Should Price Administrator Leon Henderson lose his official head "with a suddenness," Vice-President Charles McNary, former director of the Federal Reserve, would be attributable to the fact that they are thoroughly "fed up" on President Roosevelt's refusal to consider the nation's economic situation from his unwillingness to place authority in a single director who could "get the job done" through a multiplicity of managers are falling. Henderson and McNary are falling "advice from the national capital, have indicated a campaign out to the states to bring pressure on Mr. Roosevelt to appoint a single man to direct the defense effort. This is being done, and the program will be wrecked unless duplication of effort is ended promptly. Business is behind them.

Recently two presidential favorites, both key men in the governmental picture, called on Roosevelt and left him with a serious question. The delay and confusion caused by the fact that agencies all over Washington are holding over power upon one another, increasing domestic demand, and the fact that the program will be wrecked unless duplication of effort is ended promptly. Business is behind them.

The president is reported to have listened patiently to the argument, but to have remained unmoved. They pointed out how the state department says Japan may have gasoline and then Federal Reserve says it has no more. ONE SOURCE OF PROPAGANDA. One of the greatest needs of the hour is unbridled and uncontrolled propaganda. One of the greatest needs of the hour is unbridled and uncontrolled propaganda.

POSTMEN, PLEASE NOTE. "Minimum temperature recorded was 47 degrees." "UPWARD AND ONWARD." "The spirit of the age is upward and onward."

WELL I SWAN DIRT. "Night Editor has become accustomed to starting war reports, but the most sensational case yesterday when the British reported loss of the transport ship, the German claimed they had shot down."

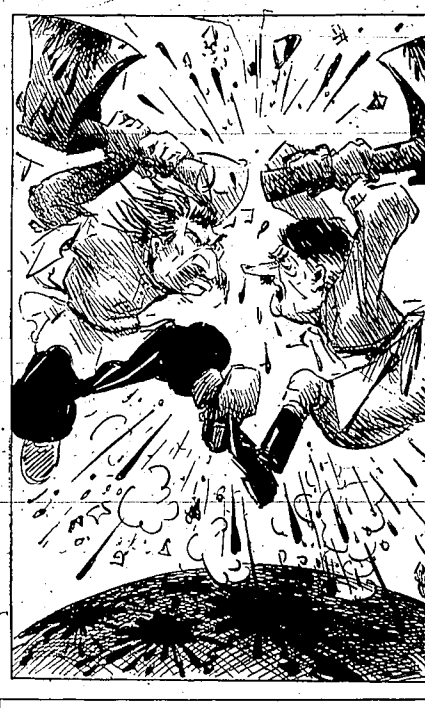

WE RISE TO DEFENSE. "As this department recently stuck out its departmental neck by trying to force a 'bacterial' impression on the weatherman. As the only cure for this is to pay attention to the weatherman when he has made a lot of people, the temperature is today as the subject for a highly typical account of a highly typical day."

Guild Faces Critical Test In N. Y. Times' Labor Election

NEW YORK WHIRLIGIG. OUTNUMBERED. One of the potentially critical key unions over which communists seized control during early C.I.O. days is facing a new test in New York. This is the American Newspaper Guild, and the trial is on the New York Times, considered by many newspapermen as this country's most important newspaper. The election is stacked in the Guild's favor by a split decision of the National Labor Relations Board.

An election to choose a bargaining agent for more than six hundred employees of the Times and the staff of the N. Y. Editor's Workers Union. The latter asked for a craft breakdown of the election and insisted that clerks, copyists, stenographers, bookkeepers, porters and other employees be included. # WANKING REGIME GETS AXIS NOD

Germany, Italy and Satellites Recognize Wang Government

SHANGHAI, July 1 (AP)—On the eve of an expected announcement by Japan of her position in the German-Russian war, Germany and Italy and their axis satellites today granted formal recognition to the Japanese-sponsored Wank government of China headed by Premier Wang Ching-wei.

This axis recognition came a full 17 months after establishment of the Wang regime to rule Japanese-conquered areas of China, but only 10 days after Germany invaded Russia.

After deliberations almost constantly since outbreak of the German-Russian hostilities, the Japanese government, according to the anti-axis Japanese news agency Domei, was expected to state tomorrow whether it has made a choice between Germany, its axis partner, and Russia, with whom it has a neutrality pact.

This recognition of the Wang regime appeared to have been timed to influence Japan's decision, or perhaps to make payment for pledges already undertaken by Tokyo.

O'DANIEL TAKES 1935-VOTE LEAD

Governor of Texas Apparently Defeats New Dealer in Senatorial Race

DALLAS, Tex., July 1 (AP)—The Texas election bureau today announced that on the basis of its complete unofficial returns Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel apparently has defeated the Congressman Lyndon Johnson by 103 votes in the race for United States senator to succeed the late Morris Sheppard.

Johnson claimed he had the support of President Roosevelt. Bob Johnson, manager of the bureau, said all the returns had been checked and double-checked, but cautioned there was always check for errors.

O'Daniel today wrested the lead from Johnson in the dramatic finish of a hard-fought campaign in the creek vote from "the forks of the creek" vote the state was generally conceded victor as he rolled along with a lead of from 4,000 to 5,000 votes.

Johnson carried the major cities of the state but the O'Daniel vote from the rural areas changed the trend.

Johnson's margin dwindled to 77 last night and the first report from the election bureau indicated the most amazing finish in Texas political annals.

O'Daniel's lead grew throughout today and the election bureau's final tabulation at 4:30 p. m., with returns from all states, indicated the complete, gave the governor votes and the count stood:

O'Daniel, 173,239.
Johnson, 174,273.
Attorney General Gerald Mann, 141,833.

U. S. Rep. Martin Dies, 30,001.
The report, which has not yet been corrected, included complete returns from 17 counties and was complete from the others by wire.

Johnson, on his way to Washington by plane, said this election would abide by the official count. The result will not be official until a canvass is made July 10 by the state election board composed of the governor, attorney general and secretary of state.

Here's What Boys' State Means to One Local Youth

Wearing a sweater marked by the Boys' State insignia and a smile of almost equal proportion, Ted Becher, one of 11 Twin Falls delegates to the state-wide event at Boise, last night told of what it has meant to him.

Young teacher, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Becher returned Sunday from the July 22-23 citizenship event, sponsored by the American Legion through cooperation of various other organizations and authorities. The youth was sponsored by the Twin Falls News and Idaho Evening Times. He first observed an educational program. I want to comment the American Legion for the great work it is doing—and I especially want to thank the News and Times for making my visit possible. The Boys' State for 1941 was an outstanding success, and I sincerely hope and believe that future events of this nature will be even more successful.

The youth continued by explaining that boys representing communities from throughout the state gathered at Boise for a week's training in the democratic form of government.

"There were 152 boys present at Boys' State sent by organizations interested in the governmental activity and knowledge of our future citizens. A well-organized program in studies and duties, rights and privileges of American citizenship was prepared; and special lectures on various phases of our governmental system were given by prominent citizens. Boys organized their own state, county and city governments, selecting their officers in accordance with regular election procedures."

Art As Slogan
Becher continued by pointing out that a two-hour lecture was organized and that bills of their own organization were drafted with proper rules governing legislative sessions observed throughout.

Last Thursday, all executive and legislative officers went to "mini" offices and "took over" duties for the day.

"I was privileged to be one of the state officers, and to me it was lots of fun and I believe I have gained a better understanding of the government. All of the fellows who did not have offices spent the day visiting the offices."

"Boys' State every fellow had the opportunity to learn for himself that his government is just what he makes it. Whether considered as a citizen or as a sportsman, his good citizenship."

"I am very happy that I could attend and be a part of this wonderful event, sponsored by the American Legion which will appear at 8 p. m. today at the Legion hall, Commander W. W. Thomas announced yesterday."

New Bohemian Equipment Assures Uniform Quality

The good taste of Bohemian Club Beer has met with increasing Idaho favor. But leadership in the field has only spurred its brewers on to greater accomplishment.
Over 32 tons of new machinery and equipment have just recently been installed in the Bohemian brewery at Boise to assure cleanliness, quality and uniformity in every bottle of Bohemian Club.

At a cost of $30,000.00 and maintaining the same brewery personnel, the Bohemian Club plant has become one of the most scientific and mechanically accurate in the country.

Installation Big Job
It was necessary to tear down part of a brick wall to get the two large machines into the brewery.

Here's How!
Bottles, fed in at one end of the new washer, are brushed, washed, sterilized and rinsed and go directly to other machines to be filled and capped, untouched by human hands.
The next step, pasteurization, all-important to taste and uniformly, is now done by Bohemian with the new 38,000 pound pasteurizer.
This thermostatically controlled machine pre-heats bottled Bohemian Club, brings to 140 degrees, pre-cools, sprays and finally brings it to 50 degrees for storage.
Master brewing, combined with scientifically accurate machinery, produce a finer beer of uniformly excellent quality and, above all,

Chapter 33
FIGHT FOR LIFE

To see your own mother weeping, if she is a kindly woman, is one of the most terrible experiences on earth. It ties the heart into knots of grief and pain.

"Mother," Anne cried, "it will be all right. We'll work things out. I know."

The natives had a man in a body. Sherwood sprang forward, fearing to see the man waiting for a word from the high priest. Anne rose and looked at the pale, deadly, "I shall be my parents."

"The man rose and ordered the native spectators to quiet their voices. The soldiers to step back. Then through the interpreters, he spoke to Anne sternly. "What are we to believe? The danger killed the man you told our people was to be your mate."

"I told them that was the man I had come to marry," she answered quietly. "He was the man my parents expected me to marry."

"Was he your husband?"

"You dare come to us alone, yet demanding the gift of our treasure? You shame and condemn your parents and bring death upon your own head. There is a murderer among the natives. The translator added, "He says you may speak now."

"You say that I carry the dagger," she said, holding the weapon up before them. "It recognizes my humanity. It has kept me from hunger and treachery and threat of death."

The high priest acknowledged her argument. "The dagger knows you. You have lost the dagger, but you have your place. But still you fail us. Anne knew she was lightning for her life. She glanced at the man who was staring down his nose and gave no sign. She went over beside Sherwood, sitting at the feet of the adunna beyond her father, and delicately put a hand on his shoulder. Her face was flushed and her eyes bright with determination. Her voice rang clear.

"I show them a son. I declare this man, your prisoner, to be my husband." Sherwood looked at her with a look of sharp surprise, and rose. Following the translation of her words, the common folk of the tribe more among the tribesmen. Some cheered, some growled, there was a high shriek and bayonet.

Beth was staring at Anne in delight—Larry hunched in doubt and anger. Dr. Martine, the silent, slender, dignified woman, turned her eyes toward her with mixed emotions.

"Diana quiet had come again, the high priest addressed her once more.

"We have been warned to watch for today. You tell me one woman is yours; then you tell us another man is yours. What are we to believe? Without waiting for her reply he reminded her, through the interpreter, how the first husband died in the death and she was subjected to the second to the same end. "Think carefully. If you speak not truth, you condemn him to death and make no gain for yourself."

Diana rose to her feet impatiently. "Diana, tell them the truth of it all."

Before he could reply Anne answered, "I have told the truth. He is my husband."

"You lie," cried Diana and appealed to the high priest. "This man, she desires his death. Her marriage is a mockery. She has wanted to betray her husband."

The priest listened to the translator and regarded Anne gravely. "What have you to say, Anne?"

"He is my husband," she repeated coldly. "But ask him. Let him make his own declaration."

The high priest asked him, "Does this woman speak the truth?"

Sherwood took his time. Anne's heart began to pound. "I am capable of anything," he said, "but I am not willing to see my wife brought to the gallows. I have become exceedingly quiet as if the natives sensed a terrible danger which I have not comprehended."

"She speaks the truth," he said quietly. "We are man and wife. Will you accept us?"

The priest listened to the translator and scanned a paper one of the scribes had handed him. "The stars accept you," he said. Anne gave Doddap a look of gratitude as the priest continued, addressing Sherwood. "You are in and in an inner circle. If you are the man of this destiny foretold in our prophecy, the task now before you is to wait for an answer. Then he nodded to Sherwood. "Now state the secret and cut the cords of the strength and the power is yours."

Anne held the strong weapon on the name of her husband and feeling the tingle, as if it had a life of its own.

He smiled, took firm hold of the dagger and turned to the door. She moved over quickly between him and the natives, half fearing that the element and frenzy might put a bullet in his back. He stood and said, "I have waited for you."

Sherwood's face was calm and intent. Anne argued and pleaded with a self-discipline which intensified in him the art of living, yet never shirked the contingency of dying.

"Ah!" he cried suddenly, struck the knife into the eye of the man and pulled down smartly. The mechanism gave. The wooden halves of the great door parted and began to swing outward. A mighty sigh went through the temple.

The high priest, knowing that she did, Mrs. Willard kept patting Sherwood's arm. But the interpreter hastily broke in. "The high priest is summoned for Sherwood to give the dagger to Dr. Willard."

"Seize the handle firmly, sir," suggested Sherwood, "otherwise it's a matter of minutes."
