AFTER THE DEPRESSION
 THE existing business depression will pass, in the course of time, like all other disasters. Tided signs are beginning to appear which indicate that it is already leaving us, slowly but surely. But one seems to have thought very much about the problems we shall have when the depression is at last over.
 In that connection, a recent report from the Russell Sage Foundation presents some suggestions of considerable importance.
 It points out, in the first place, that the end of the depression will find us in a reconstruction period which will present a number of difficult problems. As John M. Glenn, general manager of the Russell Sage Foundation, writes:
 "While no one can tell how long the present depression will continue, we know from rather full records of previous unemployment periods that the ill effects of the present situation on individuals and families will be felt long after the business situation is improved. The sooner a community begins to organize to counteract these ill effects, the more speedily will be its recovery."
 And Joanna C. Colcord, who wrote the Foundation's report, adds:
 "Long after factory wheels are again turning, and to the average citizen it seems that things are back to normal, the social agencies will be trying to put together the pieces of human lives which have been shattered by the disaster. People with health of body and mind impaired, people whose courage and independence have been undermined, people at odds with society, broken and scattered family groups, will be long as a heavy burden resulting from the period of unemployment. The need of the social agencies for increased public support will be prolonged for years the period of acute distress. An emergency committee should make its plans with this fact well in mind." The Foundation's other recommendations that employment agencies continue their studies of unemployment after the depression ends. For we have a good deal of unemployment in this country even in prosperous times—seasonal, technological and otherwise—and we have never yet made any attempt to learn its causes or devise a cure for it.
 That, indeed, is the crux of the matter. We have had many periodic business depressions in America, each one bringing an enormous amount of suffering in its train. But we have never learned anything from them.
 In good times we refuse to get ready for them—and they catch us, as this last one did, utterly unprepared.

FIGHTING FOR NOTHING
 JACK DEMPSEY'S action in knocking down one of the participants in a wrestling bout which he recently refereed in Texas reminds one that few pugil-ists, in this day and age, ever use their fists except when they are in a ring getting paid for it—which is something of a contrast with the old days.
 On this occasion Dempsey seems to have been quite justified; and it goes without saying that his action drew roars of approval from the audience. But the point we are trying to make is that neither he nor any other boxing champion or near-champion has indulged in any fist fighting, except for pay, for a long time.
 The old-time champions were different. They were rough-and-tumble chaps who fought because they liked to. They were like John L. Sullivan, who loved to see his opponent take a few drinks and then swaggle in to fight. He could lick 'em so-and-so in the house. But that sort of thing doesn't seem to happen now. Professional boxing may be in the hands of a fearful bunch of high-binders and chiselers; but the boxers themselves are more polished and gentlemanly than their predecessors ever dreamed of being.

NO CLEMENCY
 DURING the past two years Governor William H.
 Adams of Colorado has not once utilized his prerogative of executive clemency, according to the governor's own statement to the Colorado general assembly.
 Governor Adams says that many cases were brought before him during those two years, but that he carefully investigated each case and concluded that he had no reason to set aside the sentence of the courts.
 This is a curious record—possibly unique in all America. It seems to indicate that Governor Adams is a conscientious governor, anxious to do his duty as he sees it. But is it not a bit strange to think that not one case reached him in two years' time in which an injustice had been done? The Colorado courts must be operating on a higher standard than those in most other states.
