Pirate afternoon and tomorrow morning. The Seals took on the Pirates again yesterday and triumphed, 10-3. The Angels will meet them Sunday afternoon. The victory added to the spectacular pre-season record of the Angels, who in 10 games played against the Pirates, Chicago, Cubs, and Detroit Tigers.

In Field Day

The Oakland Aces also had a field day, defeating the Tigers 6 to 1 with a third of Fred Ortman's home run. George and Akers were the only Tigers who scored Ortman's curve, and while he kept the Detroit man from hitting, Ortman ruled up a good score for Oakland.

The Los Angeles Angels provided another Coast League victory.

With the exception of the "Wild Bill" Thornton, who beat away Root to 12 hits, or defeated the Chicago Cubs, 9-10, 2, our players and players.

The Indianapolis Stars came up from San Diego today to wind up their training with a two-game series against the Cardinals, who dropped the first game of the week with the San Diegoans, a local team.

Paul reminds the Corinthians of the fact that Jesus died for our sins. He was buried. He hath been raised on the third day. He was sent to preach to the twelve, then to above five hundred brethren; then to the church of God which is at Corinth, and to the apostles, and he spake to me also.

Paul continues: "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom. We all shall not sleep, but we shall all be changed; so shall be raised incorruptible and we shall be changed. For this perishable must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality; then shall come to pass the saying, 'Death is swallowed up in victory.'

EASTER

THE word Easter, we are told, is derived from the name of the Saxon goddess Eostre, whose festival was in April.

In A. D. 325 the Council of the Christian churches at Nicaea adopted the present rule for determining the date of Easter, which is that Easter shall be on the first Sunday following the Paschal full moon which happens upon or next after the twenty-first of March.

The principal reason for placing Easter Sunday on this date, say contemporaneous writers, was that the pilgrims needed moonlight to travel on their way to the great yearly Easter festivities. The date of Easter may vary at present between March twenty-second and April twenty-fifth, over a period of thirty-five days.

This year Easter Sunday is April fifth. Last year it fell on April twentieth; next year it will be on March twenty-seventh.

But regardless of the Sunday upon which it occurs it always is in observance of the Great Resurrection and as such it becomes one of the universally recognized and celebrated holy days.

Like that other day, Christmas, Easter time holds various meanings. Ofttimes the bunny and the egg joke predominates over the religious significance, just as Santa Claus becomes the patron saint of the Yuletide, not in any sense proclaiming the event, but rather, it seems, to give it universality of appeal.

It is a fine commentary on civilization—that among our greatest and most universal holidays are the deeply religious ones of Easter and Christmas and that in America the annual Thanksgiving day is designed as an humble tribute to God for deliverance, and the blessings of the preceding year; that Memorial day, Independence day and Armistice day, while patriotic in character, take on the elements of sacredness and are indeed pious acknowledgments of man's obligations to Divine Providence.

On the approaching joyous Easter occasion all will wish to worship; to hear again the story of the Son of Man, his death and resurrection; to have new faith, and come to learn what Jesus taught; that how a man dies is of small importance compared to how he lives.

Easter brings with it a mighty lesson for all mankind.

GENTLEMEN GANGSTERS

THE rise of the gangster from criminality to respectability is not a new thing under the sun. In the old days, robber chieftains often retired, in the fullness of time, to placidity under the shadow of a country mansion. In more recent days, such men as Pancha Villa have given up the excitement of the chase to go back to rural simplicity and peace. And now, unless dispatches from Los Angeles are in error, Al Capone is feeling the same urge.

Capone, it seems, has his eye on a vast ranch in California. It is a huge tract of land that has been under cultivation since the early days of the Spanish occupation; a tract 35 miles long and approximately half as wide, running down to the Pacific and boasting of a fine old adobe ranch house bordered by eucalyptus trees.

Capone would like to have this ranch for his own. His broad acres are wide enough to form an attractive principality even for one accustomed to rulership in Chicago. Peace and quiet are to be had there, with rolling green fields and herds of contented cattle to soothe the eye.

Now, California, probably, will see to it that the transfer does not take place. But the thought is attractive, nevertheless. There are things in this dull world worth giving much to see and one of them is the ex-gang leader of Chicago, entering prize cattle in a county gentlemanly, entering prize cattle in the local stock shows and beaming with pride as his tomatoes and plums win fair at county fairs.

Life would be peaceful, but there would be diversions. On the hills of this ranch there is said to be buried treasure, hidden there by the Spanish padres years ago when brigands raided the place. Cannot one picture Senor Capone, picayave over his shoulder and pack mule trudging alongside, faring hard to travel for lost diamonds and plate? And if it hard to imagine him in chaps and sombrero, turning into a vaquero and riding his estate to see that all went well?

Politically great brigands usually do manage to end their days in some such way as this. There seems to come a time when banditry, if only it is bold enough, is unsuccessful enough, confers a sort of immunity or invulnerability. The lawless men of other days who went to the country in the gray and yellow and laid their weapons aside to take up ploughs and spades usually managed to get away with it.

Herrumian has a way of faltering and losing its voice in the presence of such men. Will we do you suppose, yet see the underworld king of Chicago live out a life of peace on a somnolent country estate?

IDAHO EVENING TIMES, TWIN FALLS, IDAHOTAKE HEART, 'TIS EASTER

Now Easter comes, and sun-bright days hold magic. And soft winds blow a stronger, cleaner perfume. And skies, still dimpled, bend in the lower. There is no death . . . the sun is in the tomb.

Who sometimes thought that every hope was gone,

Will again, take heart, go singing on.
