UNEXPECTED CRISES

NO matter how prosaic and well-regulated human life can become in an organized society, the possibility of a sudden, life-and-death emergency can never be removed entirely from any man's pathway.

The daily newspapers—which contain, week after week, the outline-skeletons for scores of novels, if you know how to look for them—emphasize this fact again and again.

A man goes his way through the routine of his daily life, and never so much as rubs elbows with excitement; then, suddenly, without warning, a situation arises, that tests him, usually in a fraction of a minute, and compels him to render an accounting, by his instinctive actions, of what he has made of himself.

For instance: you will occasionally find, in your paper, some little story of, let us say, a car accident—one of those mishaps whereby a loaded car goes careening down a hill out of control. And at the end of it there will be some such sentence as this: "Prompt action by John Smith got the car under control and prevented a disaster."

Or, perhaps, there is a near-drowning—and some unidentified person will, by his presence of mind, save a life.

There is a thrilling fascination about those little news items. They are so common—and so revealing.

Over and over, they tell you this or that ordinary mortal, confronted by a sudden emergency, rises to meet it and proves that he has the right stuff in him.

The most interesting thing is the fact that when such things happen one has no time to plan a course of action! One does what one does instinctively. The man who loses his nerve in a crisis of that kind loses it because, through the years before, he had permitted himself to become a coward. The man who comes through with the deed that saves the day, likewise, does it because through all of his life he has been unconsciously preparing himself for such a chance.

Day by day we go through the same old round of duties and diversions, never thinking of danger. Some day, if chance wills it, we shall be dropped into an unexpected crisis; and the way we meet the test will be decided by the thoughts and resolves that we have nourished during the long years of ordinary living.

SPEAKING OF POWER

AT THE present time practically every American community with 1,000 or more population has electric service; as have 50 per cent of all villages of between 250 and 1,000.

In 1907 the total number of customers of the electric industry totaled less than 2,000,000; now there are 20,000,000 domestic consumers alone and 70 percent of people live in electrically served homes.

There are over 200 household electric labor-saving devices, each performing a different service.

In 1902 an average of six pounds of fuel was needed to produce one kilowatt-hour of electricity; in 1929

the average was about 1.70 pounds. In some new plants, consumption is now less than one pound per kilowatt-hour.

In industry, electricity has revolutionized the earning power and living conditions of the worker. Great strides are being made in railway electrification, and 350,000 farms have been electrified in the past ten years.

In 1902 the light and power industry had an investment in plant and equipment of about $504,000,000.

That investment is now estimated to be $11,350,000,-

000. By 1940 it is said that this must be increased by $11,500,000,000.

Electric rates have declined 30 per cent since 1913

and now half of the individual users of electricity receive service for an average cost of 12 cents each day, and the other half for five cents.

LONGWORTH

A NATION is mourning over the death of Nicholas

Longworth, late Speaker of the United States

House of Representatives.

Like Rockne, and others, he died at the height of his career, and is being accorded all the honors his government can bestow: a special train bearing the President and Mrs. Hoover to his funeral; bereaved statesmen paying silent tribute to his memory; and a few of the people of the United States, a few whom have seen him, yet reading every word bearing on the magnificent funeral of a great man, demonstrating the love of Americans for the country's dis-distinguished personages.

Possessed of wealth, every resource was at command to combat the dreaded pneumonia, of which he was a victim but nothing saved him.

Important as he was in the Congress of the United States, his life ended as might the most humble, emphatic example of man in the face of Death.

As loved and admired today, tomorrow his contemporaries will take up where he left off, and soon

about whom revolved important affairs of our nation will have become only a memory, his place in history has forgotten.

Longevity and death
