SPEED

WHEN Theodore Schneider drove his automobile head-on into one of those monster auto stage demons of the road, and was buried with his companion into eternity, he experienced what most everyone who ever drove a car has feared.

These motor stages powerful, heavy and speedy, move faster than most auto stages— they resemble railroad locomotives more than anything else. Ponderous, they cannot twist and swerve like the ordinary car, but they move straight ahead, a challenge to all that is in front of them.

For safety's sake, a huge auto stage should be given the right-of-way. With rods as dusty as the unsurfaced and unoled ones are now, every car should be given the right-of-way.

It is our speed and our haste and our hurry which is killing us, on our auto highways, as well on life's highway.

A FEDERAL DEFICIT

SECRETARY MELLON'S insistence that the government must continue to meet its sinking fund requirements as in the past in spite of the pending deficit in the federal treasury is eminently sensible. So, too, as his remark that the federal tax structure is "out of balance"—remark that probably paves the way for an increase in the income tax.

The administration now is planning economies for next year that will, it is hoped, total approximately $125,000,000. If it can put this program through, and can thereby avoid a tax increase, well and good; if not, no fear of political consequences should delay an increase in taxes if that becomes necessary to avoid a deficit.

Meanwhile, it is worth bearing in mind that economists generally agree that income tax rates in the higher brackets could be increased materially without working any hardship on any one. It is the taxpayer in the lower brackets who has suffered the most from the depression; if an increase is in order, his taxes should be the last to be raised.

A LITTLE BIT SILLY

NOT long ago Miss Mary Anderson, chief of the women's bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor, went to Europe. She planned to listen in on a conference at Geneva, held under the auspices of the League of Nations, at which the possibilities for an international agreement on night work for women were to be discussed.

Now, however, official Washington has decided that our government cannot possibly have any such official relations with the League of Nations; and Miss Anderson, accordingly, has been instructed by cable to let the conference severely alone.

Apparently we have been saved from making a shameful and costly mistake. Heaven knows what might happen if we had an official representative at a League conference. But doesn't the whole thing look a trifle silly?

HEROISM IN THE AIR

EVERY additional accident on the "hell-stretch" of the transcontinental air mail line—the section that crosses the Alleghenies between Cleveland and New York—merely emphasizes anew the great technical skill and the magnificent devotion to duty that are displayed by the young aviators who fly over that route.

The death of J. D. Cleveland, who crashed near Bellfonte, Pa., the other day, is the twelfth to occur on that run. It is probably the most dangerous aviation route in the country, and bad weather can make none of the worse on earth.

But the air mail goes over the Alleghenies regularly, twice a day each way, in spite of snow, sleet, fog, wind and rain. The weather has to be more than usually bad to keep the planes on the ground; it has to be superlatively atrocious to cause an accident.

ANOTHER PRISON RIOT

ONCE more the newspaper front pages bring news of a prison riot—in the State Penal Farm at Vandale Hill, this time, where some 600 men were awaiting transfer to a modern new building.

And for we do not seem to have made much progress in the matter of discovering how to prevent such riots; indeed, our method of coping with them after they have started is just what it always was. They occur sporadically in widely separated parts of the country, giving evidences of some deeply rooted defect in our penal system. Yet we refuse to be worried, and when we meet each one as we met the last, confident that the guns and tear gas bombs will do all the trick.

Our present system doesn't seem to work very well, so why will it take us to discover that the whole system needs radical revision?

A Column Conducted by
LELAND D. BELL

THIS COLUMN offers no competition to "This Curious World." Only you'll have different stories to tell. I am sure you'll get two statements made in yesterday's edition. Of course the chamber of commerce here has a sign that does not do a hazard sign because it seemed to be an emblem of a dead tree. The sign said "No Auto Stage." It explained that it was not built in a small hamlet in Arizona. The sign was built in a small town between a camp and a smoke. The tale not quite originate here, as was the case in California. There are three of these signs, and no offense meant.

AN incident of this kind may go well to illustrate how many good ways there are of getting around the phone. At midnight the manager of the store believed all was over for the night, but he was wrong.

At one o'clock, Russell completed his telephone conversation and raised a "jus' this" off. Officers were called and when he turned at 3 A. M. with the key, "Boy, Oh Boy," said Russell, "that was a long conversation. Wasn't it?"

WALTER HOPPE of Latona, California, has started a little business here, peddling wheat farms. He is trying to win a wheat that he can push the wheelbarrow over. He has come from the Mexican border to New York in less time than it took him to Sanders to ride a horse. He is a tall, thin, slender man, dressed in a suit and tie, and looks like a cowboy. He was "justin" as he left Brownsville, Texas, as far as he is ahead of the bulk record.

FISHING EPISODE: Little Gordon Wehrle and Ward Miller, both of Twin Falls, Idaho, returned with eight trout. They maintained they had to fight practically everything that they saw in the water, including the Kuehne River. The river had a water meadow made of a red bottom over possible gravel. The boys had to wade to move up to avoid the company of a skunk; ran a wildcat and a mink; and a porcupine with several scratches and a brown bear. The bear hunting was a minor surprise, but the boys were not surprised in the scrabble the men were almost buried by a landslide that was started by their flying feet.

FRANCIS EPPENFELD, 21, of that switch, a dog catcher, trying to drop his net over a stray lamb. Eppenfeld was thrown into the water just outside of the city limits of butte where the dog catcher had no jurisdiction. The dog, however, had the dog and the dog came on a run. Eppenfeld judged at the dog catcher and thereby made his net. The dog, however, called for help and got it. Eppenfeld went to the hooker; the dog, however, had been stung and ran off after interfering with an officer. No recent bullet on the dog.

THE WHISTLING SWEEP, which caused to be received a call from a police station, Casey Berger was wrestling Vanya Zelenitsky in Newark. Berger was squatting on Zelenitsky's back, holding him with a punishing leg hold. A fan at the "ringside" tossed a lit cigarette into the melee. Zelenitsky applied it to Berger's leg, thereby breaking the hold... In Baltimore Dick Davis, a 10-year-old, was riding a streetcar when a conductor became overly excited at the tucus used by Davis. The conductor, however, had to stop several swings at the wrestler. The "hook" ended without a decision owing to the near riot created by spectators.

The Negro fighter-wrestler has been whining at the mat game recently by his knowledge of fine points of the art.

The Pole was knocked out for full three minutes at Cleveland, but he recovered and fought with a two hold. Prior to that however, Zbysko had been slapping Godfrey's face with great regularity.

EARLY BEDTIME: rates are making babies instead of weasels out of people. Dr. Margaret Clegg, of the University of Idaho, Slim deplores the lockout rules in vogue and holds the enforcement of such rules responsible for the retardation and independent growth.

A MAN WAS arrested in Boise, Idaho, and charged with driving a car while drunk. He was given $10 and costs but had no money. The police held his car for six weeks, then to avoid serving out his sentence he agreed to pay the actual cost of the auto, which was used as a "square car," because he had to pay the cost of a break room, the man after his arrest. The man announced he "got no break car, so that particular morning
