Meet the Nation's Woman Senator

An Intimate Glimpse Of Mrs. Caraway Of Arkansas

By EDWIN JOHNSON (Copyright, 1932, NEA Service)

(OJESBORO, Ark., Jan. 14)—The mid-winter visit of the illustrious senator in Arkansas' history whose life was never even touched by the blighting rays of publicity that played so fiercely upon her famous husband for 20 years is the new senator from Arkansas.

A country girl, whose upward path in life indicated that of her husband—she began as a cotton picker and saw mill laborer and worked his way through law school to Congress and the United States Senate. Mrs. Hattie Caraway is in Washington as a member of the body. Appointed by Governor Holt to succeed her husband who died some weeks ago, Mrs. Caraway became the first woman senator in the nation's history except for the aged Mrs. Rebecca L. Pelton of Georgia who, as a compensation, was appointed to serve one day some years ago.

To understand the life of Mrs. Caraway, you should understand the life of her husband:

Born of a fighting Confederate family that in southern Missouri, Thaddeus W. Caraway was orphaned at six months when his father was killed in the war and he grew up with three small children and $25.

At 7, he was a farm hand, at 13 a stationer, at 15 a mill hand and a railroad section hand.

He became a tenant farmer and studied at night.

He went across the river to Dickson, Tenn., worked his way through law school, went to Jonesboro and hung out his shingle. He was elected county prosecutor. Later he was elected to Congress and then to the Senate.

At Dickson College he met his future wife and when he graduated she went to Jonesboro with him. Her husband was always a fighter. "There are a lot of instances where I know that he was not afraid of anything or anybody."

An prosecuting attorney in Jonesboro, he was engaged in a fierce courtroom fight with the defense attorney. The latter called Caraway a liar. Caraway grabbed an ink well and hurled it in his face. They charged. Caraway's shirt was striped from his body before attendants finally separated them.

"Your honor," said the half-baked Caraway deputy, when center bench called him out. "I object for the prosecuting attorney a 15-minute recess. He wants to go home and get on a shirt."

At the height of the all-out scandal debates, he publicly assailed Senator Fall as "a mediocre frequenter Arnold and a traitor to his country."

On route home from the Senate in a street car one day, a rude strap-hanger shoved Caraway. The senator chased him into the street and watched him over the hood with his umbrella.

Not so long ago a member of the lower house threatened to call Caraway a liar in a certain debate. The senator struffed over to the house and stood by. I just wanted to be here when he did it," the senator explained. The congressman was promptly rebuffed.

"Never prominent in politics. And so, Mrs. Hattie Caraway, the widow of this man, now goes to the Senate to take her late husband's place. The public knows little about her; she never took any prominent part in politics, clubs or society, but steadily tended her own home and reared a family of three lanky boys. They have chosen army careers; the third is of high school age.

"Neither taught us all to write," says Lieutenant Paul Caraway who looks a lot like his father. "But my mother—she smiles—the biggest smile in the look real white we drive."

"Yes," puts in 15-year-old Hubbie, "and she's a good cook, too—and she can play pool."

"Well, I made a hole in one once for this morning. My score for nine holes is 67, for 120."

Elizabeth Flowers

During Congress' sessions, Mrs. Caraway lived with her husband in Washington, but the rest of the time they spent here. They have a pretty old southern home with flowers all around it. She likes to tend those flowers.

She has never made a political speech in her life or taken much part in politics except to assist at her husband's campaign headquarters. But if a neighbor is sick, she goes to see or care for him, sends him gifts and "broth and help—things that behind this reticent, retiring little woman whom 'her public enemies' have called an 'ingenue'—or far deeper. She who in her hands' commandeer 'each evening at home' may call on her neighbor, the senator was considering, helped him prepare his speech for the next day. Perhaps she knew so much about his job as he did—but he was the senator, not she. She preferred to remain in the security of her home.

Now Hattie Caraway, 35, is 33 and her choice for senatorial Arkansas is confident that she will move to the world the almost ability that she has possessed all along—in fact, Jonesboro is certain of her victory.

Every letter and word missive will relieve four thousands people here and home attendants. At Dr. Foster's office, located in J. C. Foster's Hotel.

WOOL-INDUSTRY FIGURES GIVEN

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Jan. 11 (AP)—Facing figures indicating the present condition of the wool industry was given at the National Wool Growers association convention Wednesday by C. A. Burdette, secretary of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

The future of the sheep industry depends on whether the sheep will make drastic readjustments in pointed out.

Burdette said that the number of sheep in the United States had increased by 100,000 since the production in the price paid for the wool was $20,000,000 or about 30 per cent. Gross income of all livestock for 1931 was 10 per cent over that of 1930.

Immediate outlook of the sheep industry is up to us partially on whether the consumer will buy in the present indications point, this in a severe winter throughout the country, with the consideration that the mild winter of 1931-32 accounted largely for the huge lamb crop.

First labor reaction in depression in the sheep industry, he said, in replacement. And replacement will probably be required during the next two or three years.

Wool prices for January, 1932, were higher than for the same month last year.

OUR LIVING STANDARD

The long awaited report on comparative living costs for American and European workmen, compiled by the International Labor Office at the request of Henry Ford, who wanted to know how much he should pay his European employes to put them on a par with his workers in Detroit, has at last been made public. It is a highly interesting document.

Living costs in Detroit are shown to be substantially higher than those abroad. Those of the Paris factory hand, for instance, are only about 80 per cent of those of the Detroit; in Manchester, the figure is about 75 per cent; in Berlin, slightly below 90 per cent. Part of America's high wages are eaten up by higher living costs.

But not all. The reports shows that the American enjoys a far higher standard of living. Autos, radios, electric refrigerators and washing machines have a part in the American's life. The European workman never sees them.

Artificial Grass

The strangest and most futile of all the peculiar inventions of this mechanical age seems to have been made in New York recently, with the installation, along a mid-town boulevard, of a strip of artificial grass.

Yes, that is correct; artificial grass. There is a semi-parklike strip between the two roadways of this boulevard, and formerly the city tried to nourish a grass plot there; but waste paper collected there, and the grass didn't grow very well, and the strip always looked slightly brown and untidy.

So now, in place of the grass, the boulevard bears a strip of green composition—an asphalt and slate affair—which is always neat, always green and always easily cleaned.

It probably looks very nice, from a distance, and is probably very efficient and all that, but what for all, is the modern city worth it if it has to substitute artificial grass for the real article?

Gleanings

After three days' wandering through the sub-zero stretches of Cedar Swamp, Tom Kenyon, 27, of the town of South Carolina, who 15 years ago brought his bride here on their honeymoon, was so much impressed with the deliberations of this lady's dignity and his honor that he was carried off by a newspaper publisher's sales tax junkie to County Jail.

He was carried through three feet of snow for more than 30 miles before reaching quarters where he could be treated.

News of the rescue filtered into Plains over a forest ranger's telephone wire. Sheriff E. J. Spaulding of Madison County, New York, says that he is finding it extremely hard to feed prisoners, assigned to hard work, satisfactorily on 11 and three-quarter cent a day.

His wife prepares the meals. "Families should be able to have their meals for just a little higher price," he said.

W. L. George, druggist at Fort Worth, Texas, and at other Texas points for 56 years, is having a record of success.

A girl asked him for styrene to fight off the biting cold and snow. His Monday night matches were out.

Kenyon was held in a summer shirt, a light vest, silk undergarments and a hat which was wet from the rain.

George entered the drug business in 1876 at Stoughton, later he moved to Brownwood, Lancaster in Washington, when they asked the removal of two members of the Hoover cabinet in speeches from the floor. Patman asked the impeachment of Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury, after the Harding administration, and Francis Adams, secretary of the State. Adams suggested that Charles

Looking Back

During 1931, the Idaho Power Company, in spite of Adverse Prices . . .

- Spent approximately $700,000 in new construction, extensions and improvements giving employment to hundreds of workers, and helping other industries to keep going.
- Placed in operation 123 miles of additional rural distribution lines, so that service is now available to approximately 8,624 farms in the territory served by the Idaho Power Company;
- Electrified 426 additional farms;
- Increased the amount of electricity furnished to homes by about 11 1/2 per cent;
- Reduced the average price of domestic service 2 1/2 per cent (the price of electric service did not increase as other commodities did during the war);
- Maintained its high quality of service;
- Paid more than $925,000 in taxes;
- In one of the driest years on record it loaned 40,000 acre feet of its American Falls water to the North-Side Canal Company of Jerome and Mindohn Irrigation District;
- Loaned 7,107,000 kilowatt hours to the U. B. Bureau of Reclamation for the use of the Gen and Ontario-Nyssa Irrigation Districts to pump water and with which they were able to mature their crops;
- Reduced the production of power from its American Falls plant in order to save 241,000 acre feet of water in the American Falls Reservoir, for the use of the irrigators;
- Released 10,000 acre feet of its storage water from the Dundwood Reservoir in order to make this water available for irrigation;
- Is now holding more than 109,000 acre feet of storage water in the American Falls Reservoir until such a time as water prospects for next summer can be determined. If these prospects are unfavorable, this water will be held for irrigation use.

Top Blanton, Loudcut and Proudcast Congressman of All

By George Clark

DAILY WASHINGTON LETTER

By RUDNEY BUTCHER

WASHINGTON—The House voted in the House floor and realizes that at least it cannot be said that this Congress brought in the first President Tom Blanton of Idaho. It has almost certainly done so.

Blanton is the loudest, proudest congressman. He bellows on all occasions, usually in a high, shrill, shrill voice. His heart is in the blanton business. He has spent many days and long hours in the Congressional Record writing his own virtues. He has convinced many of us that he is a blanton, shrewd and sincere as well as—wonderful, brilliant, and intelligent.

Tom voted for the Senate in 1928, lost and was off the federal payroll. It is Q. Lee, the man who got his name out, and in his wild, howl to succeed him. Blanton, shrewd at such semantically pointed out that Congress would give his husband a salary for a year and branding him as showing how much money the government spent on buying congressmen. Many persons held their noses, but Blanton deflected the howl and came back.

THE LaFOLLETTE BILLS

SEVERAL bills are pending in Congress providing for appropriation of federal funds for relief.

Senator Costigan has introduced one such measure which would authorize the expenditure of $375,000,000, and Senator La Follette another asking for $250,000,000.

As the New Republic points out, President Hoover, of course, repeatedly indicated his opposition to such legislation, but even he cannot maintain his head indefinitely in the face of such conditions as they confront us. Senator Costigan summed the matter up in words which deserve to be remembered, when he said: "Throughout history, public money has been used to provide for the poor. America must not serve while we quibble over words."

Continuing, that magazine says, among other things concerning the latest of several bills providing large sums for public works brought forward by Senator LaFollette just before the Christmas adjournment of Congress which calls for a federal bond issue in the scale of war days, in the amount of $5,500,000,000; that the proceeds would be used partly to pay for federal construction, partly as loans to states, counties and municipalities for similar purposes. The objections to such efforts as these are familiar; it takes some time to get such a program under way, and only a part of the money goes directly in wages. But whatever the validity of such arguments in normal times, they have no meaning in days like these.

Such a bond issue as Senator LaFollette suggests would be far more than a mere relief for the unemployed; it would, in effect, give us that "limited and controlled inflation" which increasing numbers of economists are now recommending. If it be asked why the states and cities are not already undertaking such activities, the chief answer is that they cannot; they have neither the money nor the credit.

The federal government has the credit, but has thus far refused to use it; our readers hardly need to be told that Mr. Hoover's repeated statements about the public works now under way—statements which usually differ with one another by several hundred million dollars—are mostly based on a parading of the normal annual building program and have no relevance in the emergency.

It is going to take some kind of a jolt like this to jar loose the apathetic attitude of commerce. And regardless of the principle involved in such an extreme measure, it is now manifest that the first and best way of bringing agricultural relief to this nation is to create consuming power on the part of the masses and not to make it easier for the farmer to get himself indebted either to Uncle Sam, the banks, or any other lending agency.

Well, even if it did snow Thursday at Riverside and in the southern California points the Native Sons still don't know where the old alibi. This is a most un-

MELWAIN'S Annual Shoe Sale

It's the talk of the town and country. Thousands from far and near have attended this unusual sale and from remarks overheard from many traders and their friends we feel confident as in the past that our efforts to put over a real sale have not been in vain.

The results obtained so far have been truly remarkable considering the time, and right there we want to thank you one and all for your patronage. It is certainly appreciated.

This great shoe sale is just entering the half way period. This week will set a new selling mark—if TRUE VALUES mean anything.

Twelve hundred pairs of shoes, slippers and rubbers have been sold to date. About fifteen hundred pairs remain to be sold—so just watch MELWAIN'S during the next few weeks.

We Are Not Closing Out Nor Quitting Business

as has been circulated around town. Far from it. Instead we are just snapping after business in a big way and preparing for Spring in the usual manner.

In other words—we are turning the larger portion of this beautiful shoe stock into cash before February 15th!

Our store has always been noted for quality footwear—and now we combine the features of quality and PRICE in this great sale—so here you have the opportunity to buy nationally known shoes of real quality at the lowest prices in a quarter of a century.

Just imagine such shoes on sale at Bargain Prices—in some instances around today's wholesale prices—or even less.

Visit our store anytime—take a look around—such a display of fine footwear will amaze you—as will the prices!

You are always welcome here!

Signed TOM MELWAIN, himself, now in charge.
