NEW YORK.—Businessmen followed the railroad wage negotiations in Chicago this week hoping that the new regime's railroad credit and permit resumption of normal purchases of supplies and equipment.

The railroads, which had a 10 per cent railroad wage reduction, would bring considerable buying by the carriers, the industry's best buyers. Automobile demand has been light.

Watch Finance Corporation
Economists continued to watch formation of the administration's fiscal policy, particularly the finance corporation, expected to go far in alleviating economic stress when it starts into operation in January.

The first earnings statement made poor reading for stockholders of the railroads.

The Chinese Steel Corporation report, showing the preferred dividend half earned last year, served to underline the point.

Bridge Builders
Pennsylvania railroad directors ordered its regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share and held off from a stock dividend, contingent upon future business.

War talk from the far east stimulated a stir in business circles, notwithstanding the fact that the value of U.S. exports to Japan last year was $15,000,000.

Federal Reserve authorities continued to press for a strict budget policy to stop business despite the threat of heavy foreign withdrawals of gold.

Reindeer skins, which were forecast to top them by a Chinese count, struck Saturday, and the Chinese themselves were reported making more than 100,000 skins last year.

The suit seeks $7500 for personal injuries. Dr. Lang claims to have received a head injury in a collision with a car driven by a man who was driving the other machine.

The balance of the sum sought in the doctor's claim and related to his medical bills and related expenses.

Dr. Lang and his sister were returning to Oregon after a trip to visit relatives in Missouri when the accident occurred.

The suit, accepted by the district court here, with Judge W. A. Babcock presiding, all day Friday and Saturday morning, Attorneys for the plaintiff and the defendant, J. P. Thomas, for the defendants, met to discuss the case.

The first issue of the Idaho Legionnaire, dated February 1, made its appearance over the state Saturday.

It is published at Boise under the editorship of Mervin D. Duerk, department commander and editor of the Turkey Bullettton.

The Legionnaire is a monthly newspaper or regulation newspaper and the first issue contains four pages.

It is the official publication of the Idaho department American Legion and application has been made for a subdivision of the magazine to second, monthly.

Subscriptions are free to American Legion members in Idaho.

No. 1 of Vol. 1 is replete with news items from all the lodges in the state, containing a number of illustrations as well.

The idea of publishing an official Legion monthly publication is not new, having originated with Commander Duvivier, who offered to print the first two issues free as an experiment. Those who have seen the results of the first edition find it prettily printed and believe it will become one of the permanent activities of the Idaho department.

PHILIPPINE INDEPENDENCE

APPEARANCE before the House Insular Affairs Committee of the Philippine Independence Mission, whose members pleaded our freedom through a gradual withdrawal of U. S. sovereignty in the islands puts before Congress once more the troublesome and important question of the nation's policy toward those island possessions.

In considering this question, one should never forget, as a starting point, that the nation stands solemnly pledged to give the Filipinos their freedom. The government at Washington promised it to them, and the promise has awaited redemption for a long, long time. According to all the rules of honesty and decency, the question before us is not, "Shall we set them free?" but "How can we set them free in a way that will be best for all people concerned?"

THAT FINANCE CORPORATION

It is quite possible that historians a few years from now will date the beginning of the end of the present depression from the establishment of the Reconstruction Corporation.

"Big money," always a phenomenon of hard times, has seldom been more in evidence than it has in the past year. It has been responsible for a tremendous amount of industrial stagnation. The new credit facilities now made available by the government should go a long way toward restoring normal conditions in business.

Of course, the job can't be done overnight, and it would be foolish to look for a return of prosperity by next month. But there is a pretty general belief that an extremely important step forward has been taken, and that from now on a slow but steady upward tendency will be evident.

SETTING THE POLITICAL STAGE

(Call and Tribune)

WALTER F. BROWN, postmaster general and candidate of President Hoover, has dispelled any doubt over the candidacy of the chief executive for renomination. His informal statement that the president is in the race practically fixes the head of the Republican ticket for the campaign. The Democratic lineup is not so certain.

One of the penalties of public office is to be the target for criticism, just or unjust. The readiness of the average man to lay both national and private misfortunes on the doorstep of the White House is well known. This state of mind is seized upon by political foes and turned to their own advantage. The practice is not indulged in by any single party. It has become a part of political strategy. Just criticism, constructively given in the interest of public welfare, should be encouraged. Bitter personalities, however, avan little except to cloud the major issues, injure individual reputation and stifle personal ambition and initiative.

Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, a potential candidate for president on the Democratic ticket, displays a broad-minded viewpoint that indicates that even in politics we may expect a reformation. He opens a barrage on those who direct the policies of the Republican party, takes issue with the organization's activity during a national crisis, but refrains from attack upon the nation's chief executive. His warning to party men that the Democratic organization cannot tolerate abuse of the president of the United States places the welfare of the country above the possibility of party or personal gain. This fearless attack on vilification wins instant approval from citizens who have questioned the sincerity of unwarranted accusations.

Until the national conventions of the two parties are held, the campaign will not be officially underway. The power of the opposing armies and the identity of their leaders remain in doubt until then. Nothing is certain in politics. There will be material contributions to the nation, however, if the New York governors words are heeded by both parties. Mud-slinging is of no value except to obscure the vital problems in which the entire country is interested.

A New England man has spent his life studying law. What looks like he'll have to go to California to write to continue.
