AS CHINESE RESISTED JAPANESE THRUST IN MANCHURIA

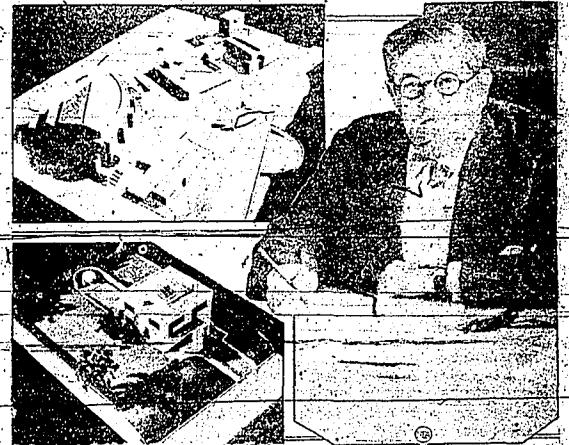

Japanese shells and aerial bombs found their mark. This picture, taken on a main line railroad near Kouyangtzu, Manchuria, shows how the tracks were ripped up by the heavy bombardment which preceded the fall of the city. Chinese workers are shown vainly trying to repair the damage before the advance of the Japanese forces, while a train awaits for their passage.

Chinese, incapable of countenance, typical soldiers of China are shown above as they "marched up" to the front in the region near Kouyangtzu, Manchuria. This picture was taken in a railway train on the Heilung-Kiang line a few days before the surrounding area fell into the hands of the Japanese. Note the far hats—a special protection against the bitter Manchurian cold and the rain.

PLANS FOR COSTLY SOVIET PALACE REVEALED AT URBAN'S ONE-MAN BENEFIT SHOW FOR JOBLESS ARCHITECTS

Joseph Urban, right, in an exhibition of his work in New York, reveals for the first time his design for the proposed Palace of the Soviets, represented by the model pictured upper left. Below is another sample of his modernist architecture—an American home.

NEW YORK In a benefit exhibition for unemployed architects, Joseph Urban, one of the world's foremost architects, revealed his plans for the Palace of the Soviets, which will be built in Moscow on the site of the Czars' cathedral. The one-man show, although it includes numerous other samples of his work, is devoted primarily to the monumental project of a Soviet government headquarters, including a train building and a library and Urban was one of two American large reading rooms.

TANKS PROWL THROUGH SMOKING RUINS OF CHAPEI

While Chapei shook under bombardment by Japanese war vessels anchored in the Whangpoo river, swift armored tanks roared through the smoking ruins of the Chinese district of Shanghai, as shown in the exclusive battle picture above. Leading the advance by parties of Japanese marines, the tanks moved through avenues that littered the streets of Chapei while the sea spiders behind and Chinese snipers, sharp-shooting from the tumbled walls. Some above is near the gateway of Chapei, showing a scouting party ready to advance.

WHEN FLAMES DANCED AT FAMOUS AMUSEMENT PIER

The spectacular blaze that lighted up the Atlantic City, N. J., Boardwalk while famous Steeplechase Amusement Pier burned is vividly shown in this night photo. Though firemen fought to check the flames, the high one-story wooden building—nationally known for two generations—was almost completely destroyed at an estimated loss of $500,000.

CHINESE SNIPER STRONG HOLD

Harassed by the fire of Chinese snipers secreted in houses along the line of the Japanese advance, the invaders sent out parties of marines to mop up the fighting zone after the first sharp thrust into the Chapei and northern segment of Shanghai. This shows the position of Japanese snipers in a trench in the Chapei area.

"HEE, HAW, WE'RE COMING BACK!"

THE encouragement which comes with the favorable "white fly" report of the local bureau of entomology, is just another factor which points to the restoration of more normal agricultural conditions locally.

While no bureau or student of agriculture can definitely prophesy either growing conditions or market prices, yet there is security in the knowledge that the prospects for low leafhopper populations foretell an absence of this sort of pest this season.

And not only is the sugar beet crop given encouragement, but it is good news also for bean growers, and growers of some other crops, inevitably affected by leafhopper to a greater or lesser extent.

When it is realized that so little stands between this great agricultural empire and prosperity as we know it, there comes satisfaction in speculation. Now that there is excellent prospects for beets, all that is needed is normal prices for wheat, potatoes and beans, and this section would have little to cry about.

Gradually these much-desired factors will be realized. To see a start in that direction should prove to us that the rest are not as impossible as some would think and that surely and certainly southern Idaho will presently occupy the place which it so manifestly deserves from the standpoint of fertility, desirability and productivity.

CALLING THE BOYS DOWN.

REPUBLICAN efforts to "build up" President Hoover for the presidential campaign have brought retaliation from the Democrats.

For weeks Democrats have been speaking for and voting for White House reconstruction measures. The Glass-Steagall credit expansion bill was introduced and steered through both houses by Democrats.

Whatever liability the depression has been to President Hoover it has saved him from a good deal at the Democrats' hands. The La Follette-Costigan direct unemployment relief bill was killed with the help of Democratic leadership.

Thus far the reward of the Democrats—except for two choice appointments on the reconstruction corporation board—has been virtue's own reward and the privilege of listening almost every evening to radio speeches by Republicans which laud the president's reconstruction program, and ask why the Democrats had no program to offer the country.

They are beginning to feel bitter about this. Instead of drafting their own economic program and precipitating endless fighting in congress over rival party plans, they have cooperated in supporting administration measures, most of which were worked out in conference with Democrats. Naturally they grow angry when a Republican speaker claims all the credit in behalf of the administration. Hoover has been scrupulous to emphasize that the reconstruction program is non-partisan. But this is too fine a line for most of the Republican speakers to draw.

Democrats have been good boys about as long as they can stand it. They have got out their paddles for the administration. They started in with them this week. There will be more of it as the presidential campaign progresses.

Speaker Garner Monday called on the president to cooperate with the Democrats, not to attempt to dictate. "Nobody can dictate to the Democratic group in Congress," said Garner, who as presiding officer of the House, ought to know what he is talking about.

And Garner, bear in mind, occupies what is admittedly the second most powerful office in the nation. That explains why it is his duty and privilege to "call the boys down!"

JOSEPHUS DANIELS

WHEN delegations of North Carolina citizens visited Josephus Daniels recently and urged him to become a candidate for governor, he refused, stating that he preferred to continue in his present post as newspaper editor, and adding that he could serve the people of his state more effectively in that capacity than he could in the gubernatorial chair.

The ideal conception of the newspaper editor's function and privilege has seldom been better set forth.

To see to it that one's fellow citizens are given honest, complete and unbiased accounts of the events of the day, to wield untold influence for good in furthering civic loyalty, to promote education, industry, success, to encourage young lives in achievements, to interpret the daily scene in this wonderful age, and to do what one can to uphold the truth—is not that, after all, about as high an ambition as a man can entertain? And if a man is in a job where he can do those things, why should he long for public office?

From the way the vets talk, you'd think prosperity was just around the corner saloon.

JUST BITS OF HUMAN INTEREST FROM EVERYWHERE

NEW YORK (UP)—Irish form one M. Lavin has leased his own decalogue—the "ten commandments of marriage."

The law, according to Lavin, is: 1. Continue your sweet citizenship of love throughout married life.

Remember that you are both human, not perfect, hence liable to err.

2. Confide in each other; keep no secrets from each other.

3. When you are in wrong, admit and "make up."

4. Respect the parents of your wife or husband; your home will be happier for it.

5. Encourage your husband and he will strive to live up to your estimate of him.

6. Never forget the seventh commandment: Do not commit adultery. If you do, it is but the beginning of a long and unhappy life.

7. Live within your means; do not take your neighbors.

8. Accompany your husband or wife whenever you are asked to go even at a moment's notice. We all have our whims and inclinations to do things suddenly at times.

9. Belong to your house of God, both of you; be active in it. God will bless you for it.

CLARENCE HARVEY, manager of sport at the Los Angeles heavyweight boxer, can't knock out fighters the way his charge does, but can fight normal battles for $5000.

Police revealed his achievement, relating that Harvey knocked out the sign of two bandits who followed him to his hotel room at Los Angeles and snatched with them.

He received a severe beating, but raised such a furor the mobsters fled just before license arrived in response to his cries.

The $5000 had just been received as the prize. Lutas was by knocking out Armand Emmanuel.

With three cents in his pocket, and a homemade parachute on his back, Hollie N. Lane leaped from a 12-story Los Angeles building in search of fame and fortune, and found death.

The contraption failed to open and Lane's body was broken on the pavement below.

A letter found in his pocket indicated he had asked Mrs. Margaret C. Ambler of Dallas, Tex., to marry him, and recounted the fortune he expected from his invention.

LET'S BE HAPPY

By ALTA LOUD

By the way, I'm happy and I'm glad to see you are too. Life's an assortment of trials and tribulations, but many and joys may be few.

Yet just a glimpse in our life's book discloses that we should be happy whatever we do.

We do not have to be happy though dark clouds eat depression.

Push over the country for only a while.

Why not exchange that dark, gloomy expression for one that's happy and shining a bright smile?

Why not be happy? There's many a reason.

Why we should all of those dark, gloomy expressions.

If we but stop them and smile in their place, how many and how long a time can we stay out of depression?

Really, there's bits in this old life of care.

More than a person would hardly suspect.

Why have weeds growing instead of the flowers.

REPORT ON BEET LEAFHOPPER CONDITIONS FOR TWIN FALLS, JEROME, MINIDOKA AND CASSIA COUNTIES, IDAHO, FOR 1932

This report gives all the available information on probable leafhopper populations during the coming spring and early summer in Twin Falls, Jerome, Minidoka and Cassia Counties, and is not applicable to other areas. Its purpose is to advise regarding the planting of any crop, but is not to furnish available information to the grower.

The report cannot take into consideration the numerous factors other than leafhopper damage, involved in the production of a good beet crop, nor the possible effects of abnormal spring weather on the time of the leafhopper migration to low leafhopper populations during the coming spring and early summer.

Populations last fall in the desert were severely reduced by drought and hot weather and were the lowest recorded since the fall of 1926. This fact, coupled with the heavy reduction in breeding area by the dry weather of last season, means that an abnormally small number entered the winter.

Full germination of cutworms, the spring and winter cutworm, was greatly delayed and sparse, making winter survival conditions much less favorable than last year.

Winter conditions have been moderately favorable for further leafhopper population reduction, being quite similar to the winter of 1926 and 1927, which was followed by a season of low populations and good beet yields.

Winter survival, as indicated by laboratory cages in which 20,000 leafhoppers were kept, is significantly lower than for last year when large fall populations entered the winter under favorable conditions.

From the standpoint of possible leafhopper injury the prospects for a good beet yield for 1932 are very favorable.

Attention is called to the fact that even in years of good average yield some damage can be expected in marginal areas. No information available at this time would justify the assumption that beets can be grown with safety in areas in close proximity to breeding ground even under the present conditions of low leafhopper populations.

Additional information obtained as the season progresses will be made available upon request, and information of particular importance will be made known as has been the past policy of this office.

STIMSON BACKS HAY'S DOCTRINE OF FREE TRADE

America Will Insist on Continuation of Oriental Policy

WASHINGTON, (U.P.)—Secretary of State Stimson, aware of popular sympathy among other American nations toward the Chinese attitude in China, has made a re-statement of the "open door" policy. The state department has learned, quite informally, that the press and public opinion in China, Mexico and Cihito are taking an increasing interest in the Chinese situation.

Takes Firm Stand Stimson, following an important conference with the foreign ministers, during which the famous John Hay doctrine of free trade for all in the Orient was considered, was said to have decided that the United States must stand firmly by this policy.

In connection with the Canadian-Mexican-Chinese agreements, it should be emphasized that the state department has been negotiating with these countries for military support in the event of American involvement in the Far Eastern embargo. Such negotiations regarding Mexico have been un-successfully denied.

Yet it is the function of every foreign office to keep the fingers on the pulse of opinion in other countries, and in the present matter the state department has learned of the trend of sentiment in the three other American nations. It is being prospective sellers of goods to China, are said to be interested in maintaining free trade under the doctrine set forth by Hay.

Officials have been surprised by the failure of a large part of the American public to understand the reasons for America's interest in the present Far Eastern trouble. Hence they believe that some new and lucid statement of this policy based on the John Hay doctrine is necessary and desirable.

Between 1933 and 1934 exchange department reports show, America's trade with Europe was worth an average of $56,000,000 annually, or 4.5 of its world total. At the same time, the average annual volume of American trade with Europe was $255,000,000, or 15 1/2 per cent of its total commerce.

By 1935 conditions had changed drastically. In that year American-European trade was $505,000,000 in value, but was only 20 1/2 per cent of the United States' foreign commerce. But trade with Asia had increased to $57,000,000 in value, or 28 per cent of the total, only 1 1/2 per cent of the commerce with Europe.
