THE BEST STUDENTS
A SURVEY recently made at Temple University discloses that students from small towns usually carry off the scholastic honors at colleges and universities, and that students who are working their way through usually rank higher in their studies than students whose expenses are being paid by their parents. These findings are interesting, but not especially surprising. The youngster from the small town usually has a better chance to learn how to study while in high school, for the simple reason that there are fewer distractions. And the youngster who wants an education badly enough to wait on table or tend furnaces in order to get it can ordinarily be depended on to do some good, honest work in the classroom and study hall.

WHY WE PAY
THEY wait a lot at Washington on the claim that they cannot "balance the budget" except by more taxes, but they are sending out approximately 300,000 free pamphlets, documents and bound books every working day in the year. Much of the matter is profusely illustrated, at great cost. One week's output of this printed matter scattered over the country is equivalent to a whole year's output of books by any of the large publishing houses of America. With the expense of preparation considered, some of the more elaborate pamphlets thus issued cost more than the printing of an ordinary novel.

In the establishment in which this stupendous volume of matter is printed there are 5043 employees in the mechanical department alone. The number is only a little less than the force in use during the tumultuous days of the World War. And the work in the printing office is rapidly increasing.

The government printing office is the largest printing establishment in the world. In the fiscal year 1931 it issued 3,400,447,250 copies of printed matter. Of this tremendous number 88,524,726 were publications of government departments ranging all the way from a bulletin on the value of skunks to a 25-volume set of "Writings of George Washington," the latter issued in connection with the bi-centennial. Nearly all the publications are issued free, although for some there is a nominal charge, most frequently 5 cents, and rarely more than $1.

These publications by the government cover more than 10,000 subjects. They supply advice and information for the individual, usually on points concerning him anywhere from babyhood to old age. Many of them have to do with abstruse scientific details with which the mass of people are little concerned. Many of the publications are very valuable, but thousands are merely amusing.

Here is the name of an elaborate treatise just issued by one of the Washington departments: "Flowering Behavior of the Hog Peanut in Response to Length of Day." What thrills must stir the inner feelings of all who happen to read that masterly publication!

The total annual cost of all these documents never will be known, says Harold Brayman in the New York Evening Post. The facts are superbly and impenetrably concealed in the mass of budgetary figures of the departments.

The appropriation last year for printing alone was $15,500,000. The sum represents but a fraction of the real cost. Nearly all the pamphlets are prepared by experts trained in the respective special subjects who make long investigations under salary from the government. When the data is brought in, other employees are called in to assist in the preparation and printing of the matter.

Of course, back of these publications is good intention and a desire of an earnest government to afford information to its people. Properly poised and guided and reasonably limited and practically applied, a highly valuable service would result.

But a tremendous waste results from the profligacy of the government in the field of distribution. As one example of public waste, the annual report of the public printer states that in the last 10 years approximately 24,000,000 copies of government documents, printed but not distributed, have been sold as waste paper. And more than 7,000,000 available for sale by the superintendent of documents have become obsolete. And nearly 6,000,000 uncalled for were returned to the government by depository libraries.

This waste is part explanation of why the government that cost only $75,000,000 in 1913 now costs nearly six times as much, or more than $4,000,000,000. And it helps explain why there is so much fuss and fury at Washington over plans to "balance the budget." The main thought in that big town seems to be, Always add, but never subtract.

Political Note: Drys are making a shrewd effort to head off a damp plank in the Republican platform. They are cheering the President at every turn, and without any apparent cause. Their idea is to pin a dry rose on him whether he wants it or not. At the same time the always different Dr. Clarence True Wilson is saying the drys would even go for Al Smith if Hoover forsook them.

And already we hear of invitations to swim at natatoriums and of their opening for the season.

College-Quartet Sings At School
Jerome (Special)—At a special assembly Monday night, the high school choir, the Gauding college quartet and three groups, other entertainment, were featured by one of the girl students who gave a humorous reading. An address was given by Mrs. H. J. Jones, principal of the college, who gave several instances of college men who made good out of their having had a bad time.
 The Monday night dinner club met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Smith with four tables in play after the dinner. High scores went to Mrs. John H. Smith for ladies, and to Shanon A. Peterson for men.

Hoover Presents Economy Program
WASHINGTON, (AP)—Following the challenge of Democratic leaders in Congress for a specific program, President Hoover today Tuesday urged action as follows:
 1. Direct reduction of appropriations.
 2. Economies through changes in laws governing activities of executive departments and bureaus which may be continued until Congress directs otherwise.
 3. Consolidation of government bureaus to eliminate overlapping and needless bureaus and commissions.
 4. A re-organized however from existing and bureaus by name.
 President Hoover laid down his program in talking with newspaper correspondents at the very moment that Speaker John N. Garner was expressing his disagreement with the president's disapproval with Mr. Hoover's economy message of yesterday and calling upon the President to submit definite recommendations. About the same time a resolution was introduced in the senate to make effective President Hoover's earlier recommendation for a joint commission to study reorganization.
