Editor, Idaho Evening Times.
Sir—Not long ago I wrote the W. C. T. U. here and considered the 18th Amendment an over-which was an example for our future American citizens.

"Our American citizens can not see where it is a great success. Most every man in this country who drinks knows he can't stop. He wants to, but at anytime he will start. That is the success part of it."

Now as to the example for our future citizens I will mention a few examples: although it is hard to say, I could name a thousand.

First we will take a driver from Bozeman. Two stooges walked up to him and asked where they could get a little something to drink. He said, "Just come down the street where he had on in my car before and doesn't recall his name, but I know he has a good name." They came to one side and asked him for a quart which he had with him. He handed it to the driver, the driver handed it to the two and paid them $1.00 for it, and off they went and they paid him for it. When the driver was alone with them again they asked him what the gentleman's name was, and he said, "I don't know." They followed them to the federal building and then went back and cured the driver and left the country.

The two stooges were out on a warrant for the driver thinking he knew the bootlegger's name, they called him to court. He was not there because he was in the auto and had not been before. The honorable judge said, he was no better than this man knew a lot he was not telling and he just a charge of perjury and sent him to jail. He was convicted and sentenced to serve eight (8) months, and pay a fine of $250. This man was an ex-army aviator and gave the best services to the country.

He was injured in the war and will never completely recover from this injury or gains health back to normal. It is now he is used to Shoshone and upon release from this framed trial and says if there is ever another war he knows the date he will fight on his time.

We are all familiar with the one who was willing to do-for-his country in time of need.

Secondly, we will take an old gentleman who lives in a dry county in Spring Grove. He is trying to make Americans drink out of them. The prices on wheat go down; but his children get nothing and have not enough clothing. The neighbors who crop fall one dry year try to keep them in food but can't afford to get work but there is none to go to. They are too old to work.

He is a very honest man and will not steal, so he decides to make a little liquor, just enough to live on. The federal men don't make him stop, so he continues to make it and sell it and to pay a fine of $250. They leave his wife and children to shift for themselves; they ask the county for help and they still refuse to help him.

Mutter came closer. Under the Great Man's very nose he stood and harped the words:

JUST BITS OF HUMAN INTEREST FROM EVERYWHERE

A 75-year-old woman has arrived in Washington after a two weeks' hitch-hike from Terre Haute.

She introduced herself at the office of Senator Joseph T. Hartman, Mr. Tom Cook, explaining she wished to obtain title to perfect fee ownership of 175 acre home-sites in Idaho.

She was granted an interview and though a technical and threatened, unless an extension were granted to desert Montana for Arizona.

President Hoover personally penned a message of greeting to a luncheon meeting of 300 guests and members of the Republican Women of America. Mrs. Hoover was the guest of honor.

Mrs. Frank W. Mondell, president of the League, started to read Mr. Hoover's letter to the assembly. But halfway through, she stopped smiling, faltered, and then exclaimed, "Well, I just can't read it!"

She was greatly chagrined and tried several times to read the address of the First Lady.

Hoover came to the rescue and deciphered the president's hand-writting.

Judge Samuel Harrold, Jr., Cranston, Ill., who announced after marrying 1,500 couples that he was tired of being a widower and wanted like me, got married himself and has given us the details.

I received 250 letters from women who said they'd be delighted to be my wife," the Judge said, "but the letters are all so good that I never could make up my mind which one to choose."

"So I think I'll just write letters to all of them and be a correspondence school husband instead."

Locals have given poor fund-raisers the choice between birth control and separation from their spouses, but it was reported at Birr, Ingham, England.

Mrs. C. L. Cole, mother of one child, explained in a letter to a magazine that her son, Dan Johnson, had been born in 1918 as R. Wayne. His face was purple as he stormed away.

The fine stock. And out of it grew warm friendliness between the Babe and the Miller. Hunt. And this was a great day in St. Louis. He began saving his money—part of it anyway, and in this venture he was assisted materially by Higgins, whose financial assistance, as well as his keen ball players.

Higgins somehow always managed to win to his side men who opposed him. He was born in 1902 in Milwaukee, and had a difference with his father, a baseball player, his mother and—spoke calmly—Mrs. who taught his apprenticeship as manager finally to his friends.

On May 10, 1915, he signed a contract with the Boston Red Sox, and was soon traded to the Philadelphia Athletics. And you're forgetting today happens to be a double-header. I want to be the source of both games."

Babe Remained. On Saturday night he had a public hearing in St. Louis, he began saving his money—part of it anyway, and in this venture he was assisted materially by Higgins, whose financial assistance, as well as his keen ball players.

On Sunday morning he announced that Higgins, and not the Babe—Remondson—should manage the Yankees, and great managerial qualities, however, Higgins' desire to be a great baseball coach, and he finally he made the proposition to Colgan Jake, "buy or sell?" Remondson bought him for half a cent.

The Showdown. On Monday night, the Babe, who had been training with Higgins, and not the Babe—Remondson—should manage the Yankees, and great managerial qualities, however, Higgins' desire to be a great baseball coach, and he finally he made the proposition to Colgan Jake, "buy or sell?" Remondson bought him for half a cent.

Sonic Baseball Color. There are many stories about Higgins, enough stories to tell a tale. In July, he became a color-coated team—in full uniform, to form a hook that might be called "Baseball's Golden Era."

In this picture of the little wizard, he seems to be somewhat pleased with the performance of his team.

Those taking part in quartet and solo numbers will include Misses Cathlyn Swearingen, Cora Flanagan, Irene Moseley, Mabel May, Alice Mesmer, Bedford Walker, William Lambing, Tom Null, Fred Trimble.

The Showdown. White with anger, Higgins walked up to where Babe was sitting in the dugout. His words were quiet but level.

"You're out of the game, Ruth, and you're fined five thousand dollars."

The Babe laughed. "Try and get me."

Mitter came closer. Under the Great Man's very nose he stood and harped the words:

"Take off that uniform! You're about the time Babe and Lou

No changes for a light lunch in this house. For when Mrs. Hillie Johnson of Spokane, Wash., calls her host of nine children in for lunch it takes 150 spoons to fill them up. Mrs. Mattie Johnson, who has been in the court for not keeping the children in school, the court allowed her to keep them at home for the present when she explained her husband is ill and she cannot get them all ready in time. She is sole support of the family now.

The kids also possess five dogs and a cat who get a share of the flapjacks when there are any.

A PLEA FOR 50,000 CHILDREN

There are 50,000 school children in America who can't see nearly as well as they should see, according to an announcement made recently by Lewis H. Carris, the managing director of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness.

This figure in itself may not sound so startling, but the fact that only 4,000 of this group are receiving special instruction is appalling. It means that 46,000 boys and girls are sitting in classrooms, trying to compete in a race in which they are handicapped at the start. They are probably being called stupid in a good many instances when their eyes, not their intellects, fail.

Children themselves do not always know what is wrong. They have no way of knowing why the boy across the aisle understands exactly where the teacher is pointing when she turns to the colored map that hangs on the wall. To the children with defective eyesight the map is a pink and green blur.

They don't know why other children complete the answers so quickly when the instructor places a list of printed questions in front of the class.

Now and then a child will discover that the blackboard is moving farther and farther away. The words in his text-books are growing smaller and smaller. When that occurs, he has a strange, startled sense of fright. He is afraid that he is going blind.

But he won't say the hated word out loud. He thinks that if he keeps the secret to himself maybe it won't happen. So he locks it up in a sensitive, misunderstood, little heart.

There are 14 states in the United States that are providing special instruction for children whose eyes are defective. They are placing lamps in the darkness. But in the other 34 states, the handicapped children go stumbling along the same road—the others take, faltering, of course, and wondering why they can't keep up.

The amount of added expense required for special instruction in such instances is just a farthing compared to the human anguish that a child with defective eyesight can suffer. Furthermore, his mental and spiritual visions are quite likely to become as blurred as his physical sight, if his "lagging" continues.

WILDER BEASTS

Next to the kidnapping of the Lindbergh child it would be the impossible to find a more cruel and ruthless exhibition than the deception that induced the agonized parents to pay $50,000 without the return of the child.

If anyone thought there was the least spark of mercy or kindness in the hearts of the underworld characters that stole the child and preyed then upon the grief of the father and mother, this last outrage should be conclusive.

Babies, children and law-abiding citizens are quite as readily the victims of the awful greed and implacable cruelty of the ruffians of gangland as are rival gangsters and racketeers.

Now, confronted by the pitiable failure of law enforcement agencies to deal with the kidnapping and recovery of the child, a trio of newspapers offers a $50,000 reward for the return of the stolen babe.

What a spectacle! What of America? State government in America fails in this contemptible kidnapping case; Federal government in America fails to cope with the child-thieves!

Captions of the babe, or pretenders, admit possession, carry on negotiations for return of the little captive under the eyes of all forms of public authority, fleece the parents of $50,000, and three newspapers, humiliated by the incompetency of public officials and public laws, set out to recover the child!

The brazenness of the despotism of crime set up over the people of America was exemplified when Al Capone proposed to the authorities that he be let out of jail so he could go among his minions and deliver the babe. It was tantamount to acknowledgement by Capone that America is his dominion and that the public authorities of America must barter with the head of the crime tyranny for the return of the infant.

The moral turpitude, the moral decay, that other countries claim they see in us is confirmed, first in the kidnapping and now in the boldness of the leaching under the very eye of public authorities of the $50,000 from the parents.

This despotism of crime, of thieves and gangsters flourishes like a midday sun in the year when the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington is being celebrated. George Washington at Trenton, at Valley Forge and elsewhere is symbol of the struggles and sacrifices made by the colonists to set America free. But here is America under a sway of kidnappers, killers and savage jungle-men.

Where is the spirit of Valley Forge? Where is the memory of the barefoot soldiers and bloody footprints of Valley Forge? Where is that picture of George Washington on his knees in the snow imploring Heaven for guidance and help at Valley Forge?

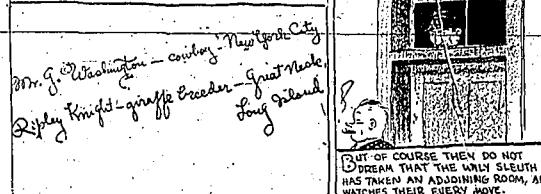

Can the citizens of America not spare a brief time from golf and bridge to settle accounts with gangland as George Washington and his men settled accounts with thrones and despotisms?

If they cannot, what of America?
