SOLONS PUT THEIR RELATIVES ON U.S. OFFICIAL PAYROLL

Congress Considering Bill To Cut Salaries of All Employees

By HAYWOOD CLAPPER
United Press Staff Correspondent
(Copyright 1932 by United Press)

WASHINGTON, (UPI) — Some of the most prominent figures in Congress carry relatives on the official payroll.

One of the more eminent of those disclosed today is the Senator from the Senate, Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas. He allowed five clerical employees. They are selected by him and paid one of three amounts according to their relatives. One is a brother-in-law who is a Senate president in Little Rock, Ark., and another to whom he gave a pension to help him get along.

He is the Senator's "contact man" in Arkansas. Another is the Senator's aged mother-in-law. The third, a nephew, works regularly in Senator's office here.

Refuses Comment

Senator Robinson confirmed the information obtained by the United Press but did not comment.

The information, which applies to six single individuals, is the practice is widespread, as revealed by the dozen or more examples names listed by the United Press.

It reflects the same general attitude toward the public's money that is shown in the little luxuries like fancy mineral water and other items of personal comfort which the senators treat themselves generously. There is nothing illegal about any of it. Congressmen do the same.

The Republican leader of the Senate, James E. Watson, also was asked if he had any relatives on the payroll. He said he did, but temporally as a typist. His husband was ill and out of work, he said. Others confirmed his statement that was no competent and industrious worker.

WHITE SOX TRIM TIGERS AND REDS HUMBLE ST. LOUIS

Chicago Cubs Take League
Leadership By Defeating
Pirate Club

NEW YORK. (UPI) — Babe Ruth is doubly pleased now that the Detroit Tigers have dropped into second place in the American League, permitting the wretched aces to boost the New York Yankees into first position. Every time the Tigers lose a game, this big fellow, however, adds another to his record of "I'm not afraid they'll beat the Yankees, but they've been threatening his reputation as a prognosticator. He reckoned them to finish sixth in the league.

Detroit dropped into second place yesterday when the Tigers succumbed 4 to 3 to the Chicago White Sox. The Sox won in spite of six errors and a wild, erratic pitching by Irving Hadley contributed to the victory.

The Cleveland Indians defeated the St. Louis Browns, 7 to 1, and by Wes Ferrell's excellent pitching.

Washington and New York and Boston at Philadelphia were free.

In the National League, the Chicago Cubs celebrated Rogers Hornsby's 35th birthday by jumping over the Pittsburgh Pirates 6 to 4. The Braves, who had been tied with the Cubs in first place, remained idle at Boston as their game with the New York Giants was frozen out.

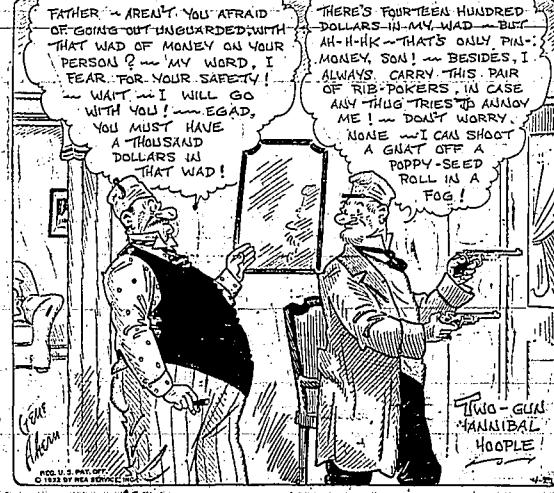

The Cincinnati Reds beat the St. Louis Cardinals, 6 to 4, hitting three home runs, all straight drives. The defeat dropped the Cards to sixth place while the Reds moved up to fifth.

Yesterday's Hero

Irving Hadley, who took the Chicago White Sox mound in the ninth with one out and two on and hit a single, drove the Detroit scoreless to win the game.

DARROW MAKES ELOQUENT PLEA FOR HIS CLIENTS

Noted Attorney Waxes Emotional While Addressing Murder Jury

COURTROOM, HONOLULU, HI. (UPI)—An emotional plea was made by an attorney for his 50 years as "counsel for defense" in the most notable criminal case in Hawaii history, from the death of Clarence Darrow, as he sought to save four persons from serving prison terms in Hawaii's honor.

"There were few dry eyes in the courtroom as the 75-year-old Chicago attorney alternately pleaded, raged, and chattered in his effort to save the life of Clarence Darrow, the founder of a movement to free four persons from serving prison terms in Hawaii's honor."

Darrow spoke mostly of his own life, in the middle of his argument, but he urged the jury to read carefully the account of the trial of Darrow, the then chief of the defense team, which was held at the time Darrow was shot.

Dr. Crotton testimony, given positively and in what Darrow said, was the most dramatic part of the trial.

"He spoke of Mrs. Fortescue's great devotion in coming to her daughter's aid when she was accused of killing her son now," Darrow said.

"Mrs. Fortescue was only acting as any other mother would act when she came to her daughter's aid," he said. "She was worried and upset away. She knew her daughter needed help and she responded. It was her love for her son that moved there would be no life on that plane."

"Mrs. Fortescue came 500 miles to see her daughter and that was also herself and misfortune."

"Gentlemen, do you want to permit that woman for compensation to be paid to her? Do you want to sentence her to death?"

"If you do gentlemen, go to it."

Darrow pointed toward the jury and pointed, "for there she sits in that courtroom."

"Let me say, when the husband of your daughter and their children have come to you in their affliction, prison won't be the first prison sanctified by a miscarriage of justice."

"I am sure that fate can have against this family," he said slowly, "when fate will take his toll and allow it to go to pieces."

"Strikes a dangerous stories when you have a wife who has never been assaulted. Stories that her husband forced her jaw."

"She is a beautiful island, no matter when the first place they will come to see will be the prison where she will be confined because of their love and devotion."

"The world will be the most compassionate place on the planet when women attendants, Dr. Fortescue's, located in J. C. Penney block."

TRAIN DERAILLED; TWO MEN KILLED

Car From Maple Leaf Flyer Plunges Through a House In Indiana

SOUTH DAKOTA, IND. (UPI)—Two men were killed and a man and woman injured when the freight train, "Maple Leaf Flyer," carrying Grand Trunk express train, was derailed on a high embankment here.

The train was en route from Grand Creek, Indiana, and engine and tender, "Shining Battle Creek," were burning.

No passengers were hurt.

"Would you, you and I have been?"

"Strong drives men insane."

"Strong men have gone mad from fright."

"Tommy was not strong and I was weaker all this was based upon him."

"He began thinking of vindictive things's name?"

Attacks Cotton

In the middle of his argument, Darrow turned his head suddenly to attack Dr. George Cotton, San Francisco attorney, who had been cross-examining the two other defendants, A. P. Jones and E. J. Lord, seamen.

Dr. Crotton testimony, given positively and in what Darrow said, was the most dramatic part of the trial.

"The court probably never heard such a bitter searching as Darrow gave the attorney."

"Cotton," he said as he drove a sharp point home, "He takes the first one that comes. He would just as soon never to destroy a man's life as to save it."

"With a smile, Darrow continued in his fury, "It merely depends who gets to his door first."

Having disposed of Cotton in this manner, Darrow turned again to events preceding Kahului's descent.

He told how the jury was hung when Kahului and four other Islanders were tried on charges of assaulting Mrs. Massie.

Whispering Campaign

Reported a whispering campaign to discredit Mrs. Fortescue, "I unleashed suspicion upon as many as ever was ever used against man or woman."

"Strange, a dangerous stories about her, these fallacious boys—Conrad and Lord—were in prison it won't be the first prison sanctified by a miscarriage of justice."

"I am sure that fate can have against this family," he said slowly, "when fate will take his toll and allow it to go to pieces."

"Strikes a dangerous stories when you have a wife who has never been assaulted. Stories that her husband forced her jaw."

"She is a beautiful island, no matter when the first place they will come to see will be the prison where she will be confined because of their love and devotion."

"The world will be the most compassionate place on the planet when women attendants, Dr. Fortescue's, located in J. C. Penney block."

WE NEED CANNERSIES

IT IS AN old complaint and a threadbare one, that this section is lacking in necessary manufacturing establishments. The ones we do have, and they are more numerous than is ordinarily supposed, are literally god-sends to the community and, it may be presumed, are greatly appreciated.

To mention a few, such as creameries, meat packing plants, cheese factories, condensaries, the sugar factory, printing plants, laundries, mills, hatcheries, bakeries, egg, poultry and produce plants, together with utilities like the power company, the telephone company, water works and transportation lines, are all invaluable to the community for the services they render, but also for the reasons that for the most part the concerns mentioned convert locally-grown products into saleable and marketable material, and create what is a necessary and highly desirable result: employment and pay rolls.

It is difficult, of course, to list every institution that is a manufacturer, for after all most every industry, including agriculture really comes under that head, but the fact still remains that southern Idaho, Twin Falls county, Twin Falls itself, along with the other towns in the area, do not have the number and variety of manufacturing institutions which are their due and which they eventually must and will have to successfully fill their sphere in the economic scheme of things.

Reference is not made to any particular manufacturing institution, but broadly, what we all should encourage at the appropriate time are canneries, packing plants, and legitimate enterprises having for their purpose the conversion of locally-raised materials into marketable products, as is being done so successfully in other similar communities.

Fruit and vegetable canneries should be encouraged. We ship our beans away from here and let some one can them back east; the same thing applies to other products. Huge quantities of apples are grown here, yet none of them are packed here; instead we ship in dried and canned fruits.

Seattle, Washington, is the manufacturing point for a brand of peanut butter that is well-known wherever this commodity is used. How many peanuts are grown in Washington?

Oregon, our neighboring state, is famous for its blankets, yet who ever heard of an Idaho blanket?

Utah woolen mills are heard of frequently. The Gem State produces more wool than the Beehive state, but does not have a single woolen mill as far as is known.

But Idaho has coffee-roasting plants, with the product shipped in from foreign countries. The state has some candy manufactures of high-repute, broom and cigar factories, and many other institutions like print shops, which ship in materials and convert them into useable material. But outside of the manufactures like those already-located-in-Twin-Falls, there are few plants actually converting locally-grown material into condensed merchandise.

The field is large. What about Idaho pickles, Idaho vinegar, horseradish, and catsup? Honey is being taken care of on an ordinary scale and there are dozens of other commodities which will suggest themselves in a survey, such as breakfast foods, canned trout, stock feed, pop-corn, etc.

The point, regardless of the particular items which might have been mentioned here or forgotten, the reconstruction period which is to follow this present era, will be the logical time for the setting up of such manufacturing industries in communities as this, as will convert the produce which we have to market and insure a demand and a price better than is available under ordinary conditions when creation of markets is left pretty much to the enterprise of outsiders.

We here are just as smart as the average middle-westerner, but we have been content to do the producing and let him do the manufacturing, we taking what he chooses to pay. Let's convert more of our material right here and sell him food for his table, or at least for our table. Let's not always be content to buy Ohio catsup, California peaches, Oregon blankets, Iowa corn-and-Utah pickeles.

Let's resolve to see if that another five or ten years will see southern Idaho launched on a sustaining manufacturing program, confident because of the success already attained in our limited way, that we will not have to take a backseat to Oregon, Utah or any other neighbor state for enterprise, chaffiness or ability to utilize the resources and the opportunities at our command.

That way lies prosperity.

Observance of Music week in Twin Falls commencing May 1 will be welcomed by the populace from all over the region. Those responsible for staging the series of events should have the wholehearted cooperation of every one in the community to the end that the week will become an annual affair.

Events in connection with the completion of school terms are now of absorbing interest to the younger generation on every hand. It is remarkable how this interest is shared by parents and others, all concerned with the happiness and welfare of the children, out-
