AGENT REPORTS ON GROWING CONDITIONS

Unusual Weather Prevents Maturity of Alfalfa in Southern Idaho

Complications arising from abnormal weather conditions which have affected alfalfa are practically all other parts of the country are beginning to be affected by unusual weather which is curtailing the present crop situation.

Low temperatures and an unusual amount of rain, which has accompanied darkened skies, has helped some crops and interfered with the progress of others. It is believed, at the same time assisting in the filling of reservoirs and postponing the start of irrigation.

According to Harvey S. Hale, county extension agent, wheat, corn and alfalfa have benefited largely by the current weather. While some alfalfa has been injured, pastures are short on account of low temperatures, and some alfalfa has been injured on account of early rainfall.

May have to be planted. Bean fields have been the most seriously affected. The condition of Mr. Hale being that because of the poor start this crop has had, with some alfalfa being planted, the present bean acreage will largely have to be replanted or some other substitute planted. The present weather has also prevented maturity of the first crop of alfalfa, which normally is ready by this time.

Some indications of the rainfall in revealed in the statistics received from the Bureau of Entomology. Low temperatures for the forecast of May have ranged in the 30 to 40 degree mark, while the rainfall since the first of May has totaled 2 1/2 inches.

INSECTS THREATEN GEM STATE CROPS

Authorities Fear Spread of Crickets Throughout Lower Valley

DOCATILLO, (UP)—T. C. Coffin, Docatillo's mayor and Democratic congressman, has just received a reply to his latest plea for federal aid in combating the insect pest infestations of southeastern Idaho.

Continued from page one: "Congressman Coffin's plea for assistance in combating the insect pest infestations of southeastern Idaho, which has been the cause of a $200,000 loss in crops during the past year, has just been authorized a $500,000 appropriation for work to halt the advance of crickets."

In the meantime cool weather which renders the crickets inactive has given worried farmers and control workers a brief respite. However, agricultural authorities believe that the situation has never passed its peak, and if no check is made it will be brought on the entire lower Snake River Valley section.

The insect infestation is a control method has been found partially ineffective. The most efficient check is the use of DDT, which has been used in the West Jersey Homeopathic hospital. The child, who lay there on a broken nursing bottle, when she fell from the crib in her home at Hazelton, N. J., Richard J. Bloomer, who has been in the ambulance and with two paramedics started for the hospital, where she was taken from the ambulance, which had been overturned, and she was taken to the hospital, where she died.

ROCKEFELLER ENDS DRY LAW SUPPORT AND URGES DEPEAL

Anti-Prohibition Forces Claim New Strength in Drive for Referendum

NEW YORK, (UP)—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., born and bred in the East, today announced the prohibition amendment and came out for its repeal.

The starting point, after years of general and financial support of the dry cause, led anti-prohibition forces today to see a tremendous impetus for national and state prohibition, while drys charged him with erroneous conclusions on prohibition's effects and insisted they still would win.

Rockefeller made known his change of heart in a letter endorsing Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler's proposal for a repeal plank in the Republican national platform.

Arden By Walker, head of the Standard Oil, prohibition and abolitionist work, Rockefeller said his life has been an abstainer and an ardent worker for dry legislation. His father and grandfather were abstainers, and his mother, Rockefeller says in his announcement, was one of a band of ardent workers who took prayer into the drink to combat the evil of alcohol.

Rockefeller had hoped the old Butler, that the 18th amendment will be generally supported by public opinion, and that the cause of temperance would be advanced.

"That this has not been the result," he wrote, "but rather that drinking generally has been increased; that the speaking has replaced the silence, not only only few abstain, but probably two fold."

DAWES RETURNS TO CHICAGO BANK

Hoover Announces Resignation of Finance Corporation President

WASHINGTON, (UP)—It is reported and plain spoken Charles C. Dawes is closing another page in his long book of service to the nation. He retires on June 15 from the presidency of the Reconstruction Finance corporation to return to his Chicago banking business.

His resignation was accepted last evening by President Hoover with deep expressions of regard and praise for his "lifetime devotion to public welfare." Dawes had given his resignation to the Reconstruction Finance corporation to return to his Chicago banking business.

He submitted his resignation with an expression of confidence that the country is on the road to better times.

"Now that the balancing of the national budget by Congress is accomplished," he wrote, "I have decided to return to my Chicago banking business."

Democratic Leaders Triumph in Test on Garner Relief Plan

Adoption of Dastic 'Gag Rule' indicates Final Passage of O'Connell Bill $2,300,000,000

WASHINGTON, (UP)—Democratic leaders today won a clear-cut triumph in the first test vote on the Garner $2,300,000,000 relief bill when the House agreed to accept drastic "gag rules" to govern the measure's consideration. The rule, which restricts other possible parliamentary advantage to the Democrats, was bitterly fought by administration leaders who declared that the majority party was attempting to "hog" the membership into passing the bill.

Indicates Passage of Bill. Adoption of the resolution was taken to indicate that a Democratic majority would obtain passage of the relief bill itself.

The vote on the "gag rule" resolution, which technically came on a Republican motion to consider the resolution, was 205 to 159. The House then by a vote formally adopted the "gag rule."

The House immediately began consideration of the Garner bill. Administration supporters indicated later by the day, to present Mr. Hoover's plan for bringing relief through the Reconstruction Finance corporation and substitute for the entire Garner bill.

This was scheduled to occur immediately after the speaker's plea. The speaker's plea was to bring relief through the Reconstruction Finance corporation and substitute for the entire Garner bill.

Child's Injury Results In Death of Six Persons

CHILDREN, N. J. (UP)—Three-year-old Emma Bloomer, who was killed in a fire from her home and started a chain of events which resulted in the deaths of three children, died today at the West Jersey Homeopathic hospital.

Bloomer, who has been in the ambulance and with two paramedics started for the hospital, where she was taken from the ambulance, which had been overturned, and she was taken to the hospital, where she died.

OFFICERS' ARREST PUBLIC DEFENDER

Frank Egan, Wanted on Charge of Murder, Surrenders to Authorities

SAN FRANCISCO, (UP)—Public Defender Frank J. Egan, wanted on charge of murder in connection with the mysterious death of Mrs. Jessie Scott Hughes, his old time friend and business partner, was arrested here today.

He was taken into custody at Pacific station after he was called in and calmly remarked, that he would go to surrender. He was not dressed and clearly alarmed. There was nothing to indicate that he had been hiding out, but he was dressed and clearly alarmed.

The lawyer's sudden and unheralded appearance set at rest widespread rumors that members of the Egan family had been arrested and contact had been made with the city and state authorities.

Egan's attorney, Vincent Hallinan, was not surprised when Egan was taken into custody. "I knew he would do it," Hallinan said. "The police have accused him of murder. Let them prove it."

The public official was today identified with Vernon L. Moran and other persons in connection with charges of killing Mrs. Hughes. The woman, who reputedly let her name to Egan, was killed in her home. Later an automobile was run over her body to make it appear she had been killed by a hit-and-run driver.

IDAHO'S FUTURE

Idaho and Oregon are unique in their possibilities for growth and development.
Just contemplate the situation in the United States at this time and you must agree the assumption is warranted that during the next decade such strides shall be made in this region as to stifle present-day pessimists.

Outside of Arizona, which will profit greatly from the benefits of Hoover dam, the southern Idaho and eastern Oregon section is among the very few where there is potential large-scale development in the immediate offing.

The Owyhee dam which has just been completed near Ontario at a cost of six million dollars is going to make thousands of new irrigable acres available to homeseekers. The same thing holds true with regard to the six million dollar canal system which is now completed to Gooding, with Snake river water flowing to territory north of Shoshone and Gooding.

There are other states besides these few with virgin soil, it is true, but not all states combine with that factor an available supply of continuous-flow water, fertility of soil, diversity of agricultural opportunity, and favorable climatic conditions.

In Arizona for instance the agricultural products are necessarily limited to citrus fruits, early vegetables, and more perishable commodities; Nevada has the area and the land, but is lacking in available water; Montana with its colder climate and altitude for some reason has proved unsatisfactory agriculturally, either because of its immense distances, limited number of possible products or lack of development. Wyoming does not have the possibilities; Washington, with the exception of the Columbia basin, has already reached a comparatively high state of development, as has California.

Now a few millions of the teeming hordes who have gravitated to metropolitan centers certainly now have ambitions to establish homes for themselves, to attain economic security of some sort, readily attainable to those who can raise chickens and cows, pigs and gardens and food of all sorts, meanwhile providing homes, plenty of breathing room, along with the availability of recreation, accessibility of scenic spots and sportsmen's paradises.

The West always has had an appeal; and there is still a spirit of adventure in the land. What is more; there still is a West and here there is the one remaining remnant of the frontiers.

And it is Idaho and Oregon which are destined to profit in the colonization movement certain to come with the reestablishment of normal economic conditions. In fact this movement is already underway. People everywhere are wondering where they can go next; just where they can settle down. The millions who have lost their homes, their farms, yes, their savings, much like the pioneers who settled this area after the upheaval at the turn of the century and following the stringency of 1907, will be after cheap land, and will have the spirit to pioneer.

Other thousands anxious to get away from flood-infested districts, cyclone-ridden sections, rainy regions and arid areas, will be looking and are looking for the security which comes with irrigation, the productivity of such soil as Idaho and Oregon has, and the favorable climatic factors which make people carefree of frigidity, earthquakes, floods and pestilence.

Where have they to turn but to the region mentioned? They cannot all go to the coast. But they can come to Idaho and Oregon, definitely a part of the Pacific slope and the Great Northwest, the "bread-basket" of the Pacific coast which one day will have added teeming millions to its population. The east, the south, the middlewest offers little inducement agriculturally. The one-crop cotton, wheat and corn belts lacks the advantages of diversity.

The fact that the west coast is due for a steady growth will continually create increased demands for the products of this rich area and will tend to solve in a measure the present freight problem and the necessity for transporting the bulk of the products to the east.

And in this picture, this particular section, with its railroad connections south to Wells, similar connections with eastern Oregon, its American Falls dam, its Shoshone-Gooding development, the proximity of the Owyhee dam project, and the yet undeveloped Bruneau tract of half a million acres on the immediate west, is in a strategic position to capitalize on the benefits of the promised exodus.

The situation pictured is inevitable. America is growing and will continue to grow. Idaho now has only half a million population, yet it cuts no small figure in the scheme of things. Think what an additional half-million residents would do. The population would be doubled and that would

LEAP YEAR BRIDE

I've been chasing all over town. I don't care, we have to call off that leak dog."
 "Oh, Dan,"
 "It's your luck, but there's no way out of it. I'm parked out here at the airport and there's no telling when we'll get away."
 "I can't do anything but stay here," Dan assured her. "I hate to leave you here but you can't help yourself. Try to find some way to amuse yourself and we'll make it out of here as soon as the party tonight. Is that all right?"
 Reluctantly she told him it was. Phillips said something that brought her back to the fact that she and the conversation was over.
 Well—not only a long morning to herself, but the afternoon as well.
 The newspaper in which she had tentatively searched for apartment houses had been employed by Stanley Cherry's interest had waned.

She held the dress up. It was certainly not a costume to wear to breakfast.
 mind. After all there was nothing to do until Dan called. A breath of fresh air to break what would be good for her.
 She discarded the dressing robe and she was certainly not a costume to wear to breakfast. The tiny cap sleeves and beaming neckline were of lace, over which skillful French fingers had labored for long hours. Too elaborate, too intricate in its simple, unusual manner of cutting and seaming for the street.
 "It was not a choice," Cheryl stepped the frock over her head and snapped the fastenings.

Do you inhale?

"We're not asking you — we're telling you!"

7 out of 10 smokers inhale knowingly — the other 3 inhale unknowingly!

Do you inhale? Lucky Strike can meet the issue fairly and squarely. For it has solved the problem. Lucky's famous purifying process removes certain impurities that are concealed in even the choicest, mildest tobacco leaves. Luckies created that process. Only Luckies have it!

Do you inhale? Of course you do. Every smoker breathes in some part of the smoke he or she draws out of a cigarette.

And since you do inhale, make sure — make absolutely sure — your cigarette smoke is pure — is clean — that certain impurities have been removed, protect those delicate membranes!
