JACOBS DEMANDS "RIGHT" REFEREE

Manager Threatens To Keep Max Schmeling From Title Defense

NEW YORK (UPI) — Max Schmeling will not enter the ring in defense of his heavyweight championship against Jack Sharkey next Tuesday unless he falls in name the "right man" for referee, Jim Jacobs, manager of the title-holder, told the United Press today.

"Max," said Jacobs, "we say he should win and we are not going to jeopardize his chance by allowing him to enter the ring with the wrong official.

"There are plenty of rumors floating around New York right today. And the rumors are plenty ugly. You don't have to worry about them. You hear talk about the fight being in the bag."

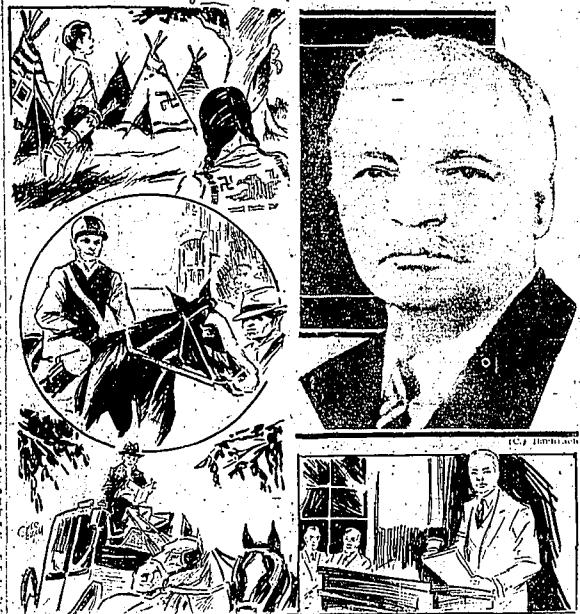

"I've been doing the boxing examinations asking that an outside referee be used. I want a good man in the ring. We have got plenty of capable men right here in New York, they told me and that was that."

Jacobs' threat made the commission which deserves the title vacate and award it to Sharkey, Jacobs laughed.

"With all those people there? Don't you think it would be better to have a man suitable to have and they'd have to like it?"

Jacobs said he had a conference with John Phelan, head of the commission, and told him to stay away. He told the commission he wanted the commission to wait until the rumors that have come to the Schmeling camp at Kingston.

"It's a good and far the good of having them right to end such rumors by agreeing not to name any of the men I object to because I can objecting only on grounds of their integrity," Jacobs said.

Vice President Charles Curtis is shown above with some of the colorful chapters from his life. He spent his early childhood with his mother's relatives on an Indian reservation in Kansas, became a lawyer, studied law while driving a team in Texas, went to the Senate where he became the Republic's leader and then was elected to the nation's second highest office.

The Phillips are fine examples of individuals directing them from the bench. To prove out, my point, would like to have the Yankees turned over to Freddie the Fireman right now and let him manage them the rest of the season. You know as well as I do that Freddie could easily prevent the New Yorkers from running one-way.

Players of the Heds is another instance, earlier in the season when the Heds were up against the Giants, Harry Hooley was handed us a wonder man — he may not deserve it, but Harry and Herman and Lombardi were the boys responsible. Chasing down the ball is the entrance. Alright, you say, but it was Hooley who saw the Red's need and went out and filled the void. Anybody can do that, but Hooley could have told you that such men as Harry and Herman would help a team, any team.

Players Win Games

Would Bert Shotton qualify as a mental genius if he should sit down and figure that the Phillips would be a better club if he could get the Heds? He could, but probably, a hellish club has no more to do with the making of a manager than that manager's manager has to do with the making of a club.

President of the Heds is in all around you. The Yankees are a prime example of what seems right, now Alvin Joe McCarthy and Stan Burke (the latter by the way, is the only one of the two who has been content) are being held fast and tight with pride for the manner in which they have the Yankees in there this year. The Yanks have improved about as much during as Daniel Boone did in his grub this year. They've been getting tremendous patted and rewarded, however, when they get the one combination it can take the manager and all his assistants over the right field wall.

New Players, Not Brains

In the same token, a team that isn't getting good hitting and good pitching can't be helped by all the managers. Ryne and dead,

GOLF By ART KRENZ

As a final tip on putting I advise the golfer to guard against turning the wrist-over as the ball is struck. This causes the club to turn across the putting line sending the ball to the left of the cup.

In order to avoid this common fault good putters will place the left hand in a position so that the back of the hand is toward the hole.

A smooth swing in the ideal, but the ball must be hit with the putter low and close to the ground and returning to the ball smoothly. Proper breathing will aid a player in this. In fact, it is likely inaccurate to say this may fall short or overrun the cup many feet.
