LAUSANNE TREATY ENDING GERMAN PAYMENTS SIGNED

Ramsay-MacDonald Refers to Future Settlement With United States

FRIENDSHIP AMONG NATIONS IS URGED

Failure to Sell Bonds Within Fifteen Years Will Cancel Issue

WASHINGTON, (UP)—The state department today issued a formal statement hailing the Lausanne reparations settlement as "a great step forward." At the same time it announced, in effect, that the United States was opposed to the cancellation of European war debts to this country.

By reference to President Hoover's moratorium announcement of June 20, 1931, the department implied that any temporary readjustment of European debts would be made on the basis of their capacity to pay.

LAUSANNE, Switzerland, (UP)—The Lausanne treaty ending Germany's world war reparations payments was signed today with Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain declaring "our agreement must have response elsewhere."

It provided that Germany pay in one lump sum one cent to every dollar demanded by the victorious allies—if she can sell the bonds to raise the money.

Collection and payment of inter-European war debts was declared suspended until "ratification of the treaty."

Prime Minister MacDonald was the first statesman to sign.

MacDonald referred directly to a future settlement with the United States in an extemporaneous speech.

"It is no good collecting sums from one government, or any country, which disturbs world trade," MacDonald said. "The United States, the country most injured by general economic shocks, is now as severely hit as any European country."

"We have opened a few book. There are many reparations. Those great payments, sums which, represent an irritant of goods, have not been a punishment to one nation, but an affliction to all," the Prime Minister said.

UNDERSEA CRAFT LOCATED BY DIVER

Experts Seek Plan to Raise Submarine and Determine Cause of Disaster

By EDWARD COMPERE
United Press Staff Correspondent

ABOARD WARSHIP ANTRIM, OFF CHERBOURG, (UP)—The sunken submarine Promethee, which carried 63 men to their death while on test cruise, was found today lying in a mudhole 40 fathoms down.

The craft sank Thursday with only seven members of the crew escaping. They were on deck when a big new submarine dropped suddenly under the water, carrying the crew to their deaths.

A diver on the boat now working on it, said recovery project from the steamer Arlillo, went down today to find what had happened to the big submarine. While hundreds of navy men, technicians, and others stood anxiously on the decks of a dozen craft, the diver put on a steel uniform and slipped into the water.

Forty fathoms down he found the vessel, sunken into a mudhole. There was no trace of life.

After the diver came up, technicians started working on a plan to bring the craft to the surface. There is the possibility, also, of a four inch cable slung under the ends and middle of the craft, the Promethee may be raised and the full story of the tragedy be told.

BOISE, (UP)—C. C. Compton, Medford, Ore., was low bidder on the oiling of 20.5 and 7.4 miles of highway 93 in Twin Falls county, extending from Godwin siding to Rogerson, on his bid of $31,093.16, the state highway department announced today.

TORCH SINGER HELD AS INQUEST WITNESS

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C. (UP)—Libby Holman Reynolds, former Broadway torch singer and widow of Smith Reynolds, was held as a material witness today in the investigation of her young husband's death along with Albert Walker, a friend of Reynolds.

The coroner's jury also asked that Blanche Yurka, well known Broadway actress and friend of Mrs. Reynolds, be requested to remain at Reynolds subject to call.

The action came at the close of today's session of the secret inquest into the death of the millionaire playboy over which officials hitherto had termed suicide. Walker, first detained last night and jailed as the hearing was taken this afternoon to the Forsythe county jail while Mrs. Reynolds was allowed to return to Reynolds, the Reynolds family estate.

The inquest was occupied with several witnesses after resuming this forenoon, but the testimony was kept secret from the press and public. Upon adjournment this afternoon, the coroner set 11:30 P. M. Monday for further hearing.

Her pulse shaken through the day by the strain of the inquest, the former Libby Holman spent overnight became famous through the singing of "Moanin' Low," testified that her mind had been a blank for 48 hours—some time previous to and after the shooting of her husband.

Porkers Lead Commodity Price Advance As Value Increases $250,000,000

New Feeling of Optimism Spreading From Farming Communities of Nation to Industrial Centers

By HARRISON SALISBURY
United Press Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, (UP)—Sharp rise in thousands of American farms today shrilled a message of cheer as experts estimated the nation's swine worth $250,000,000 more on paper than six weeks ago.

The fattening porkers were leaders in a commodity price rise which analysts hope will go far to shake the nation of the long depression. For the broad backs of the hogs which provide an eighth of the country's farm income were changing on a advance against corn spreading today to nearly all of America's agricultural commodities.

Butter Advancing

Beef cattle sold at quotations 25 per cent above those of May. Lambs are 25 per cent higher. Butter is advancing steadily. Grains are up. Cotton prices are better.

The total potential buying power of the farmer has been increased fully $1,000,000,000. And farmer, economists point out, is the backbone of national prosperity.

A new feeling of optimism was spreading from farming communities to their industrial neighbors today as the gains of the past month were noticed.

That feeling, H. S. Campbell of the livestock bureau of the department of agriculture asserted, is more important than the paper profits which have been recorded.

Psychological Effect.

NEW CONFIDENCE BASED ON TREATY

Believe Last Major Obstacle in Way of Business Recovery Removed

By RICHARD L. GRIDLEY
United Press Financial Writer

NEW YORK, (UP)—Hope that the Lausanne reparations settlement will remove the last major obstacle in the way of world business recovery was expressed today by leading and commercial circles.

What share of the European debt load will be shouldered by the American people through reductions in the $11,000,000,000 war debts owed the United States is a matter of conjecture.

The problem is whether any business improvement might accrue from general slashing of debts will be sufficient to offset the loss suffered through possible cancellation or reduction of foreign debts, cancellation of the debts would cost the American people $11,000,000,000 in increased taxes.

Bankers minimized the importance of the American position. More important, many bankers say, is the new confidence that would accrue to any plan of world cooperation.

Economic necessity requires that billions into European loans will stand greater chances of collecting their moneys.

Many of the reparations agreement have asserted themselves in commodity prices. Some of these have shown recuperative tendencies for several weeks.

Many of the major business indices in the past few weeks have reached further upward levels for the current depression.

The steel industry is the principal set back in the industrial picture operations during the past week dropping to 12 per cent of capacity.

Action of the securities markets is somewhat disappointing to business circles. Stocks have been influenced by poor quarterly and earnings prospects.

$12,000 RANSOM PAID KIDNAPERS

ST. PAUL, (UP)—Chief of Police Thomas E. Dahill today said that $12,000 ransom was paid for the return of Haskell Bohn, 30, recently released by kidnapers after being held for a week.

The money was thrown from a speeding automobile on Superior boulevard west of Minneapolis, Dahill said. Police in every part of the metropolitan area were alerted, the chief said. Bohn was released on the ransom payment, Dahill said.

Two $10 bills given young Bohn before his release were a part of the ransom payment, Dahill said.

PRESIDENT HOOVER MAY CALL SPECIAL CONGRESS SESSION

Demands Passage of Legislation Acceptable To Administration

PLANS TO CONTINUE FIGHT WITH GARNER

Chief Executive Will Use Veto Unless "Individual Loans" Item Is Eliminated

By HENRY MISSELWITZ
United Press Staff Correspondent
(Copyright 1932 By United Press)

WASHINGTON, (UP)—President Hoover will call a special session of Congress if that body adjourns without passing relief legislation acceptable to the administration.

The President, in open battle with Speaker Garner of the House, believes relief legislation is the most vital question still before Congress. He is now willing to end adjournment-before-election deadlock if such legislation is passed to meet the needs of the nation.

The house put itself on record as opposing the Wagner-Garner relief bill to lend $2,000,000,000 to states and cities. Even in it, the "individual loans" phase—he will veto it. The chief executive hopes that the bill, however, will go to conference again for revision.

He does not want to be forced to use the veto—but will do it, with no hesitancy at the White House, if the bill comes to him in its present form, as passed yesterday in the House.

If that happens, and he sends it back to Congress and adjournment then is voted without adopting relief measures, the President will call a special session immediately, the United Press learned in an unquestionable authority.

The banks, which Garner claims already have been aided in discrimination against the "common people," have strongly urged the President to yield and permit the "individual loans" item to go through.

They want to dump their frozen paper into the federal government, the President feels, and therefore are adding their pressure to that of the Democratic political leaders. Nevertheless, he feels that in the end his contention against his broadening of the R. F. C. credit powers will be upheld—and in the meantime he intends to stand pat.

Senate Votes 43 to 31 for $2,122,000,000 Program Of Unemployment Relief

Speaker Turns Down All Compromise Proposals

VETO EXPECTED

WASHINGTON, (UP)—The Senate finally approved the $2,122,000,000 unemployment relief bill today, starting it on its way to the White House and an inevitable veto.

Senate approval came after Democrats sought vainly to persuade Speaker Garner to abandon his relief fend with President Hoover. The Speaker rejected and I compromise proposals.

The bill provides $300,000,000 for relief loans to states on condition of need by governors, $1,500,000,000 for self liquidating and private loans by the Reconstruction Finance corporation, $132,000,000 for public works to be undertaken when the money is available to the treasury or can be borrowed at reasonable rates.

The measure cannot reach Mr. Hoover until Monday. The House is in recess over the week-end, and the final draft of the bill must be signed by the speaker with the House in session and by the Vice President before it can be sent to the White House.

Democrats and insurgents combined with a scattering of Republicans to pass the relief measure on which Speaker Garner and the President have been deadlocked for weeks. Garner has insisted that private loans be realized and Mr. Hoover has been equally firm in demanding their elimination.

The roll call was as follows:

For the completed bill, 43: Republicans 11—Borah, Borah, Brookhart, Frazier, Howell, Johnson, Jones, McNary, Norbeck, Norris, Nye, Robinson of Indiana, Schall, Sielwer.

Democrats 30—Ashurst, Bratton, Broussard, Bulow, Byrns, Cawapay, Coolidge, Costigan, Dill, Fletcher, George, Harrison, Hayden, Hull, Kendrick, Long, Pittman, Robinson of Arkansas, Sheppard, Stephens, Trammell, Wagner, Walsh of Massachusetts.

AVIATORS REMOVE PLANE FROM BOG

Mattern and Griffin Bitterly Disappointed After Crash on World Flight

BORISOV, U. S. S. R. (UP)—Two bitterly disappointed American aviators removed their damaged airplane today from a peat bog, the end of their attempt to establish a new world flight record and prepared to ship the machine back to the United States.

The Americans, James Mattern and Bennett Griffin, planned to continue to Moscow by train and there begin repairs on their plane.

Mattern and Griffin were in good health, practically unexcited after narrowly escaping injury in which their plane was wrecked.

Mattern and Griffin said that when trouble developed in the steering apparatus, they decided to land on the outskirts of Borisov, repair their machine, then continue. At that time they were over 10 hours ahead of the round-the-world flight record held by Wiley Post and Harold Gatty.

The flyers said there appeared to be plenty of space for a forced landing on the edge of the town of 25,000 persons. They were flying at night and in bad weather, however.

They brought their machine down easily on what appeared to be a level surface, but which was a peat bog. The "Century of Progress" sank the wheels quickly in the swamp, came to an abrupt halt, and nosed over with a crash.

They ended the attempt to fly around the world.

Cricket Control Workers Battle New Infestations

POCATELLO, Idaho, (UP)—Troops of control workers flushed to Idaho today prepared to attack the onset of three new cricket infestations.

The new insect swarms were reported here yesterday and control arrangements were completed last night. The insects are full grown—over three inches in length—and are feeding at present on sage brush. They are stripping the desert plants in the area.

Poison-dusting machines, so effective in past infestations, were to be employed today. Little difficulty was anticipated in controlling the menace.

LIBERALS SUPPORT THIRD PARTY PLAN

Movement for Formation of United Organization Gathers Strength

CLEVELAND, (UP)—A movement for the formation of a united "third party" with a progressive platform gathered momentum today as delegates to the Farmer-Labor Reconstruction convention began arriving in the city for the opening session of the convention of the League for Independent Political Action.

Proponents argued that a third party would gather support from all united organizations in the nation who believe in the abolition of capitalism.

Efforts to form a "third party" turned from the major parties to the league to control themselves to either sanction or condemnation by the convention of political action was declared.

Opposition was expressed by several leaders who said the convention was premature and that the time for action would be after the national party conventions.

"I think simply call, as a united body, a national convention to form a third party," declared Paul Blanshard, executive secretary of the league.

Many of them talked of making their liberal movement a permanent one such they said would result in a more party than a political party.

Until now, all liberal movements have been personal organizations, built around a leader, or a spokesman, and it has been demonstrated that such movements die when the personality behind them is removed, we want to build up the movement first, then select the personalities to head it."

PROHIBITION PARTY OPENS CAMPAIGN

Former Representative Heads Ticket Named by 'Dry' Organization

ATLANTA, Georgia, (UP)—Leaders of the Prohibition party today were preparing to launch a campaign which they believe will sweep the country throughout the nation.

With former representative William D. Upshaw of Georgia heading the party's ticket as presidential candidate, D. Leigh Colvin, New York, who asked Senator Milton Tydings to become campaign manager, will be in active charge of the campaign. Colvin was re-elected national chairman at the Prohibition convention.

POLICE DISCOVER BODY OF SLAYER

Suicide Ends Greatest Manhunt in History of Province

KELVINGTON, Sask., (UP)—The trail of William Miller, fugitive from the Royal Canadian mounted police, ended today in a clump of muskeg where his crumpled body was found, apparently a suicide.

Miller's .38 caliber automatic pistol was in his right hand. He apparently had killed himself after he could no longer travel because of a gunshot wound in the right leg and lower abdomen, sustained during a gunfight yesterday.

More than 40 mounted police and several hundred civilians took part in the 34-hour chase which began after Rails was killed as he sought to question three men in an automobile at Ham Lake.

Mike Kurulek and his brother, William, were detained as the result of posses which were thrown out the trail of the killers. The brothers confessed they killed Rails, and Miller, they said, was the slayer of the actual killer.

The hunt extended from Ham Lake to Lake Valley, taking both the township region and north to Porcupine, reversed to the Saskatchewan border and Denaire wooded country.

Lawmakers to Obtain Information Before Favoring Investigation

WASHINGTON, (UP)—The House rules committee today considering the possibility of a congressional investigation of the treasury department, the day called to invite Secretary of Treasury Mills and Governor Eugene Meyer of the federal reserve board to appear at a hearing Monday.

The action was taken at the urgent request of Rep. Parnell, Democrat, Texas, and leader and member of the committee.

Parnell said the two high government officials should be summoned to testify "in all fairness" before the committee voted to report favorably the investigation resolution.

VETERANS URGED TO RESIST OFFER

"The Government is Not Giving You Anything," Waters Declares

WASHINGTON, (UP)—Leaders of the bonus expeditionary force pleaded with the veterans at a mass meeting today to reject the government offer of transportation to their homes and remain in Washington until the bonus is paid.

More than 200 veterans have accepted transportation to their homes, but Commander-in-chief Walter W. Waters said the ranks of the B. E. F. had been swelled by 617 new arrivals.

"The $1,000 thousand dollar offer is an effort to send us back to our home town so we can starve again," Waters told the men. "The government is not giving you anything. It is lending it to you and you will have to pay it back."

Waters said 235 men had taken advantage of the government offer, but the veterans administration said that number left last night and several hundred new applicants reported this morning. The transportation is provided under the Howell-Hall signed yesterday by President Hoover.

Waters said he told Vice President Curtis that "we are not going to give up the ship any longer."

"And I'm going to see Herbert Hoover next and tell him we've got to be full-hand-bosses," he added.

The insurgent element among the B. E. F., sent a delegation to call on Curtis today. There were more communists than veterans in the group, which protested against what they said was discrimination in favor of Waters' men.

Curtis received them and said their petition for action towards cash bonus would be treated with the regular Senate procedure.

Athletic Migration and Ticket Sale Encourage Olympic Officials

Entries of Fourteen Countries Arrive In California

2,000 IN GAMES

By George B. Beale
United Press Staff Correspondent

LOS ANGELES, (UP) — The 1932 Olympic games have come upon happy days.

With the opening of the tenth Olympiad only three weeks away, the ticket sale has picked up, eliminating the last dark cloud.

Six months ago, three months ago and even two weeks ago there were many local sports observers who predicted the July 30 to August 14 competition would flop.

It was claimed that world-wide depression would prevent foreign countries from sending athletes here. If the athletes did come, it was held, they would play to empty seats because of that same depression.

As it to support the first pessimistic prophecy, Japan, Great Britain, Germany and many others spoke of eliminating their teams or curtailing them.

But one by one they fell into line until now one of the greatest athletic migrations in history is under way, a migration that eventually will place some 2000 men and women, representing 58 countries into competition.

The arrival today of the Philippine Island delegation boosted to 14 the number of foreign countries that already have teams on the ground.

The "empty seat" prediction began to falter, as railway, steamship and airplane agencies reported greatly increased reservations for the period just preceding the Olympics. Then the Automobile Club of Southern California announced that requests for best travel routes to Los Angeles were double the usual amount for this time of year.

Today the Olympic games committee, all smiles, was very pleased to state that between 850,000 and 900,000 seats already had been disposed of for the 137 events of the competition.

Especially pleased was the committee because tickets were being bought at twice the rate they were last week and there still were three weeks to go.

The fourteen countries that now have Olympic entries on hand are: Argentina, Austria, Colombia, France, Germany, Haiti, Holland, India, Japan, New Zealand, Philippines, Uruguay, Sweden and Switzerland.

COACH CRITICIZES RACE STARTERS

Keane Says "No Man Ever Ran the 100-Yard Dash in 9.6 Seconds"

SANTA CRUZ, Cal., (UP) Tom Keane, Syracuse university track coach and one time famous sprinter, today added new fire to the debate over the timing of western stars in the 100 yard dash.

"No man ever ran the 100 yard dash in 9.6 seconds," Keane told a luncheon club here yesterday.

"It probably will take a long time before California learns that its sprinters aren't as fast as they are timed."

Keane defended the timers declaring that the trouble rested with the starters who permitted the sprinters to "beat the gun."

A few days ago Dink Templeton, Stanford university coach, blamed the timers for the "slow times" made in the dashes at the U. S.-Japan meet held last week end at Berkeley.

Further fuel for the argument over timing practices is expected to be provided at the final tryouts for the American Olympic team to be held at Palo Alto next week end.

EQUIPOISE SEEKS SEVENTH TRIUMPH

C. V. Whitney's Horse Favorite to Win $20,000 Added Arlington Cup

CHICAGO, (UP) — Equipoise, 4-year-old unconquered, sought his seventh straight triumph of the 1932 turf season and the first victory of his career at a mile and a quarter.

C. V. Whitney's dark chestnut horse has never won a race at a mile and a quarter, but indications were that he would rectify that shortcoming in the $20,000 added Arlington cup at Arlington park.

Seven entries were named overnight for the third running of the Arlington cup, but Equipoise ruled a prohibitive favorite.

In iron play it is absolutely necessary that the wrists be firm. Floppy wrists are allowed for no one in driving, or the clubhead will turn as it makes contact with the golf ball.

As one uses the long irons, due to the longer shafts, one must stand further away from the ball. The open stance will not be as pronounced as in mashie play or when you use the pitching clubs.

The club is taken back much the same as when playing the shorter sticks except that the body will not move to enable one to lengthen the backswing. At the top of the backswing the club should be in a halfway position between the vertical, which is used in playing a pitch and the horizontal for the drive.

N. Y. CATCHER TO PAY $1000 FINE

President of American League Fixes Suspension at Thirty Days

CHICAGO, (UP) — Bill Dickey, New York Yankee catcher, was fined $1,000 today by President William Harridge of the American league and his indefinite suspension set at 30 days.

The heavy hitting catcher was suspended after he broke Carl Reynolds' jaw in a fight during a Yankee-Senators game.

Dickey will be eligible to play August 4.

Harridge announced he had issued an order to all American league umpires to try to curb the growing use of the "bean ball" throughout the league.

Harridge said that entirely too many pitchers were attempting to "dust off" batters and that such tactics had caused "ill-feeling between several clubs and players." He said he hoped to avert a tragedy such as took place in 1920 when Ray Chapman, Cleveland shortstop, was killed by a pitched ball.

The Eldorado Heights Sewing club members are working very hard on their sewing and report five new members. Pauline Alexander, Grace Alexander, Lalah Cheshen, Elsie Fuller and Vera Frost. This is a second year club, and those five new members plan on completing both first and second year work so they may continue with the group next year in this club.

work after the end of the reparations conference.

"We are wasting money, we are throwing it into armaments," the prime minister continued, "if we completely put an end to reparations from our hearts, we could reduce and reduce. It is a moral as well as a material issue."

MacDonald concluded by appealing for a return of economic cooperation and greater friendship among nations, especially between France and Germany.

The agreement enabled Germany to make a final payment of $645,120,000 in long-term bonds, or one cent for every dollar collected for in the original victorious allied demands of $59,000,000,000.

No Time Limit Set

The agreement buried the Young plan; its preamble said it "completely put an end to reparations."

Germany will not pay anything for three years, pending return of German prosperity which means that if Germany can't sell the bond issue in 15 years, she will pay nothing.

No time limit was set for ratification of the agreement.

The signers of the agreement meant that a settlement of the bill for the World war had been reached after 40 conferences during 12 years of international wrangling.

The question of "war guilt" was not mentioned specifically in the preamble. But the Germans accepted the phrase "full end to reparations" as voiding the famous war guilt provision of the Versailles treaty.

Pay In Bonds

The convention formulated a scheme by which Germany would pay 3,000,000,000 marks in bonds, not to be issued before three years and to be marketed at a time when German prosperity permits. The bonds will be priced at 90, and will yield five per cent with a one per cent amortization charge. If, by 15 years from 1932, the bonds are not marketed, the issue will be cancelled.

The second part of the convention—provided an extension or suspension of payment until the convention is ratified.

The third action established a commission to deal with other German reparations.

The fourth part provided that the Young plan scheme do not function with the cooperation of the League of Nations and the European Union commission.

The fifth section dealt with the

A's Replace Detroit in League's Second Place; Pirates Down New York

Mackmen and Tigers May Crowd Yanks In Flag Race

CARDINALS LOSE

NEW YORK (UP) — Connie Mack, astute manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, may have spoken prophetic words when he predicted that the American league was destined for a real pennant race this season, despite apparent supremacy of the New York Yankees.

During the past week the Detroit Tigers and Connie Mack's once aggregation have supplied a belligerence which may make a fight out of the pennant race.

While the Detroit Tigers were in second place, they chopped down the Yankees lead to six and one-half games. And yesterday, when the Yanks defeated Detroit, the Athletics romped into second place.

The Athletics replaced the Tigers by virtue of a double victory over the Chicago White Sox, 6 to 4, and 11 to 5.

The Yanks nosed out the Tigers, 3 to 2. A home run by Earl Coombs in the third inning accounted for three Yankee runs.

Joe Vosmik's single in the eighth inning, scored two runs, giving the Cleveland Indians a 6 to 5 decision over the faltering Washington Senators, and the St. Louis Browns downed the Boston Red Sox, 8 to 4.

In the National league, the leading Pittsburgh Pirates nosed out the New York Giants, 8 to 6, and the Brooklyn Dodgers replaced the Philadelphia St. Louis Cardinals in fifth position by overwhelming the Cincinnati Reds, 13 to 5.

The Chicago Cubs defeated the Phillies, 6 to 4, aided by five Philadelphia errors, and Bobby Brown bested Dizzy Dean and Paul Derringer as the Boston Braves trounced the St. Louis Cardinals, 6 to 1.

Estimated Saving To The People Of The Twin Falls Tract, Due To Our Recent Refusal To Raise The Price Of Gasoline

Possibly you noticed that just recently almost every service station and garage in the Twin Falls tract raised the price of gasoline from 25c to 26½c per gallon—and that within a few days almost all of them were again selling at 25c.

Funny, wasn't it?—Well there's a reason for all things, and here's the reason for this:—In the first place, selling gasoline is only one of the things we do—another is farming—and when we would think of the price we get for beans, potatoes, eggs, cream and everything, we decided we were going to sell gasoline at just as low a price as possible, at least until prices of what we produce on our farms shows a little profit instead of a loss.

Now, when the oil corporations, big and little, found out we meant just what we said, most of them just naturally came down.

But we got a big surprise when we figured up what 1/2c per gallon on the gasoline used on the Twin Falls tract amounted to in a year; we estimate it at about $200,000.00—and we believe our home folks need the money just as bad as the oil corporations.

The greatest part of the profit from the better prices is going direct to the growers, figures showed. The price increase has not yet spread to products in the hands of packers and retailers.

Though increases in grain and cotton have been small compared with those for livestock and cattle prices, they are running somewhat extensively for the better-ed hog and cattle prices. This movement is being carried on by speculators, it was believed, but the influence of the new harvest

95c a yard

What does this mean to you? Nothing, of course.

That's what we say continually. A price tag alone doesn't mean a thing.

Even though 95c a yard indicates the price of a yard of silk, still it doesn't mean much, unless you are sure of the quality of the silk you are getting. Because 95c a yard is a high price for "cheap" quality silk that won't give you the service or the satisfaction you are entitled to expect.

And since "cheap" silk and good silk look much alike before they're used, you have only one sure method of knowing what you are getting. That is to buy from a store where you know quality is always right. And where prices are right as well.

This applies not only to silk, but to every piece of merchandise you buy. You must get quality as well as a low price in order to get a good bargain.

It Pays To Buy

PARTY HEROES

To anyone who finds national political conventions interesting, there must occasionally come the melancholy thought that the great party heroes—the patron saints, so to speak, whose names must always be mentioned reverently in the keynote addresses—get a whole lot more devotion from their parties after they are dead than while they are alive.

Each party has its great heroes, and each party always drags out their images at its conventions.

The Republicans, of course, specialize in Abraham Lincoln; and lately, they have begun to enshrine Theodore Roosevelt in an adjacent niche. The Democrats start with Thomas Jefferson, pause to bend the knee before the figure of Andrew Jackson and then drop the rest of their wreaths at the feet of Woodrow Wilson.

But a good many of those men got something less than complete devotion from their followers during life.

Lincoln, for example, is on a pedestal now. But the dawn of 1865 found his party bitterly divided. A large section was almost incredibly hostile to him. If Booth had not killed him, Lincoln and not Johnson would have felt the wrath of the "radicals" in the late '60s; his attempts to save the south from the horrors of the reconstruction period would have brought to him the blind hostility of that section of his party which ultimately tried to throw Johnson out of office.

Roosevelt, likewise, was not always the idol of his party; he was roundly snubbed in 1912, and he had to break the party in half and help elect Wilson to win back his place in the G. O. P. councils.

And Wilson, before his public career ended, sat at the head of a divided party. Not all of the votes that killed the treaty of Versailles in the U. S. Senate came from Republicans; and in the campaign of 1920 there were plenty of party leaders who found it inexpedient to do battle for Wilsonian doctrines. Not until after his death did his party really enshrine him.

The moral of all this is that the great party leaders always are fighters, and that the battles they start cannot be forgotten until the leaders themselves are in their graves.

FOOTBALL BROADCASTS

Collegiate football, at least in the east, seems sure to come in for a certain amount of de-emphasizing this fall. A dozen of the most prominent eastern colleges have agreed not to permit their games to be broadcast by radio; furthermore, there are indications that the leading middle western colleges will follow suit.

That this step will have the effect of deflating, at least slightly, the frenzied publicity which is attached to intercollege football seems obvious. However, it must be noted that that is not the reason for the step.

The colleges want their gate receipts. Fearing that many prospective customers will stay at home if they can hear descriptions of the games over the radio, they have decided to abolish broadcasting. That is all there is to it. A real effort by the colleges to minimize the importance of football still remains to be made.

A news item reveals there is on deposit in the banks of Twin Falls county something like two and a third millions of dollars, indicating there is a big opportunity for people with goods to sell to appeal to these potential customers. Now, of course is the time to buy. If you need a new suit, a new dress, a new lawn-mower, a new automobile, tractor, binder, radio, refrigerator, piece of furniture—no matter what, NOW is the time to buy. You perhaps will never be able to get more for your money. If you have idle dollars now is the time to put them to work by buying deflated real estate. If prices are down, certainly they will rise. He who buys now will reap a handsome profit.

The man who said there is much to be said on both sides of any question forgot to add that too much generally is said.

Huey Long says he is sorry he ever went to the United States Senate. Which makes it just about unanimous.

An Ohio lawyer has found that there is no law forbidding birds to sing early in the morning. How did the lawmakers ever overlook that one?

Build a good mouse-trap and the world will beat a path to your door, says the old proverb. And the same thing will happen if you have a sharp lawn mower.

That vaudeville actor who married the ventriloquist is certainly taking a chance. Imagine hearing yourself suggest that your wife needs a new summer outfit when that thought is farthest from your mind.

The History of Twin Falls City and County

AS GLEANED FROM FILES OF THE TIMES

15 YEARS AGO

Asked whether there was anything to the current rumor to the effect that an unexploded bomb had been found at the Milner dam, Sheriff F. M. Kendall said that he doubted whether any bomb had been found there. He added that some mysterious things had occurred in that neighborhood and that at present there were people in the county who would blow up the dam if they could. The dam is well guarded, Sheriff Kendall said that the people had not yet awakened to the danger of the I. W. W. movement since it had fallen under the direction of German agents.

The Twin Falls school board has let a contract to P. R. Thompson to build a barn for the school teams connected with the Washington school, and a contract to Beutler brothers for the tinting of the Lincoln school.

27 YEARS AGO

The first mail went to Kimberly today, July 6, and the office will have a good patronage from the first. The Kimberly country is quite thickly settled and new people are coming in all the time.

Entrymen who placed legal advertisements in the columns of The Times announcing their intention to make final proof on land included Henry M. Hall, Charles E. Lowe, Thomas Sweeney and Theodore H. Niemeier.

On some future date when the railroad is here, Twin Falls will hold a monster celebration. Excursions will probably be run from Salt Lake and Boise. The sale of the state school lands will take place at that time.

Airport Site Is Leased From State

The land which comprises the Twin Falls airport belongs to the state and is leased, this newspaper is informed, following publication of a statement that the site was privately donated.

The inadvertency is accounted for by the fact that land for an airport was offered the chamber of commerce by Robert Bard, but was found unsuitable for the purpose and an arrangement was then made with the state for rental of the present property.

The Call of Moses

Text: Ex. 3:10-15; 1:10-12
The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for July 10.

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of The Congregationalist

The life of Moses would form interesting material for a discussion of the relative effects of environment and heredity upon character and career. Here we have a man coming to years of responsible choice with two dominant and more or less conflicting influences that have been upon him since babyhood.

We may be sure that his mother, who by subterfuge had become his nurse, instilled in him in some way the spirit and teachings of his race, though, of course, she was under the strict necessity of concealing her relationship to him.

On the other hand the interest of Pharaoh's daughter, and the environment and teaching that she provided for the child, must have been a very powerful factor, so powerful that it would have swept away anyone but a strong character in whom had been instilled high teachings and loyalty to his own.

A mother's influence, and Moses' consciousness of his alliance with the oppressed Hebrews, conquered. We are told that "by faith Moses when he was come to years refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter." (Hebrews 11:24.)

He chose rather the lot of the oppressed people and to be one of them. Such choices brighten the dark pages of history. For the man who reads history with regard for its spiritual highlights, the notion that every man seeks his own interest, that every man has his price, and that the prevailing motive in human conduct is selfish is disproved.

Material advantage suggested to Moses that he should hold with the government and scorn his people. He might easily have justified a selfish and personally ambitious choice by persuading himself that it was in this way that he could ultimately serve his own race best.

But Moses was too clear seeing and too courageous a man to fool himself with any such arguments. He saw an oppression which filled him with the passion of protest and suffering of his own people that moved him to pity and to action.

The impulsiveness and intensity of his protest were evident when he slew an Egyptian who was in strife with a Hebrew and when his deed was discovered and he was forced to flee for safety. It was the separation from his people and the failure of his people to recognize his allegiance with them that troubled him most.

It was under these circumstances that the call came to Moses to be the leader of his people, and the first task in that leadership was to appeal to Pharaoh to let the people go. A strong man might well have qualified before such a responsibility, but the reluctance of Moses to assume the task did not arise from his weakness or from any cowardice, but rather from his qualities of strength. It was a modest fear concerning his own abilities and powers, and not any cowardly hesitancy, that made him reluctant.

It is an experience that most great and real leaders have had. The true leader is not the man seeking honor and place and emolument. The world has suffered all too much from that sort of pseudo-leadership. The real leader is the man of conviction who sees the tasks of righteousness and truth to be so large that his own strength and abilities seem inadequate.

The inevitable effect of this feeling is to throw such a man back upon the divine resources. He goes forth, not trusting in his own strength, but trusting in God, and it was this conviction, that God was with him, that sent Moses forth to his task.

Outing Parties Attract Edenites

EDEN, (Special) — The Eden community for the most part celebrated the Fourth at Hailey, Jerome, Milner dam, Rupert and Magic Hot springs. Others remained at home.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Stone of the Eden elevator are vacationing in California.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Gager and family, Jarbidge, Nev., are assisting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Wanchope, at the Gem State service station.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Gordon and family and Mr. and Mrs. N. L. Swensen and daughter, Ruth, left recently on a trip to Yellowstone national park.

Miss Joy Rugh entertained at a lawn party recently, electric lights forming the illumination. Games formed the amusement of the evening.

Mrs. Albert Freeman has returned from Nampa where she was a delegate to the Seventh Day Adventist convention.

Miss Joada Day, graduate of the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, is spending the summer vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jon Day.

W. C. Rice, Mountain Home, Ark., is conducting evangelistic services at the local Christian church.

Mrs. A. M. Kleinkopf and Mrs. Paul Larsen have gone to Moscow where their sons are attending summer school.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Henry and son, Paul, are visiting friends in Salt Lake City.

McKaig Now Favors Third Party Idea

BOISE, (UP) — Formation of a third party whose standard would be carried by Senator William E. Borah was strongly advocated here by Ray McKaig, Idaho progressive leader and former state chairman of his party.

McKaig firmly believes that between Borah's tremendous drawing power and the protest vote against the two major parties, the third party would block Republicans or Democrats from the necessary electoral vote majority in November.

This, he argued, would throw the presidential election into the House of Representatives. Borah, then, presumably, would have shown midwestern and coast strength that congressmen representing those states would feel compelled to vote for him.

RIVER REALLY IS BAY

PORTSMOUTH, R. I., (UP) — The Sakonnet river is a misnomer. It actually is a bay, running between the island of Rhode and the mainland.

GERMAN ESTIMATE AFFECTS WHEAT

CHICAGO, July 9 (UP)— The drastic decline at Liverpool on the bearish German crop estimates dropped wheat sharply on the Board of Trade today. Buying on resting orders and against bids worked the market back to around the previous close, but the finish was at small losses. Northwest interests were reported good buyers largely by way of removing hedges. The wheat movement continues to lag due to the unfavorable harvest weather. A local crop expert in the northwest indicates that black rust on both sides of the International line may do more damage than the trade believes.

At the close wheat was ⅛ to ⅜c lower, corn was ⅛ to ¼c lower, oats were ⅛ to ¼c lower, and rye was ¼ to ⅜c lower. Provisions were steady.

PACKING SHARES SHOW STRENGTH

NEW YORK, July 9 (UP) — Packing shares picked up activity and strength to feature the late trading on the stock exchange, their rally responding to recent sharp advances in hog prices. The market generally closed irregular after rallying from an early decline.

The opening was firm in most sections on better feeling engendered by the accord on reparations at Lausanne announced yesterday. Weakness in American Telephone, Coca Cola, Peoples Gas and Union Pacific touched off another reaction, however, and the list subsequently reacted. Near the close prices rallied, many crossing the previous close.

Buying went ahead in German bonds and their strength carried up other foreign issues. United States loans moved up today. The domestic list was irregularly higher although movements were less spectacular than those in foreign loans. Grains and cotton eased off. The American dollar moved up in terms of European units, special weakness being displayed by Swiss Francs and Dutch Guilders.

Today's boom in packing shares came near the close and was a factor in the recovery of prices generally. It was the first genuine demonstration for the rise in hog prices which has been going on in livestock centers for a month.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

CHERRY DIXON, pretty 19-year-old daughter of wealthy parents, falls in love with DAN PHILLIPS, newspaper reporter. She quarrels with her father about Dan and then, taking advantage of Leap Year, asks Dan to marry her. They are married and move into a cheap apartment. Cherry's struggles with housework are discouraging. DIXIE SHANNON, movie critic of the News, is friendly with Cherry. She meets handsome MAX PEARSON, also of the News.

After several weeks Cherry's mother becomes seriously ill. The girl is called home and there is a reconciliation with her parents but pride will not allow her to accept financial aid from them. When MRS. DIXON is stronger she and her husband leave for several months at the seashore.

Cherry and Dan are invited to a swimming party at a nearby resort. Dan is delayed and Cherry starts with Pearson. A storm overtakes them and while they are waiting for it to pass he tells her he loves her. They finally reach home but after that Cherry avoids Pearson.

BRENDA VAIL, magazine writer, comes to Wellington. Dan meets her and she asks him to collaborate with her on a play. Dan spends most of his evenings at Miss Vail's apartment. He and Cherry plan an evening together but a telephone call comes for Dan from Miss Vail.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVII

DAN put down the telephone. "I'm sorry," he said. "Guess we'll have to see the Caseys some other night. That was Brenda calling. She's just had a new idea for the ending of the first act. Wants me to come over and rewrite what we did last night."

"Couldn't it wait until tomorrow?"

"Why, Cherry, I can't very well ask Brenda to wait. It's a big opportunity for me, you know. It's not every author who'd be willing to collaborate with a person entirely unknown. If she wants to work on the play tonight I think it's up to me to be there."

"I suppose you're right," Cherry said slowly. "You'll have to go."

Dan disappeared into the dressing room. A few minutes later he was back, pulling the ends of his tie through to make a neat knot. "Listen, Cherry," he said, "why don't you come along with me?"

"You mean go with you to Miss Vail's?"

"Sure. Maybe we'll be through early and we can pick up somebody at the office for a game of bridge. Or we might see a late movie."

Cherry shook her head. "No. I guess I'll stay at home."

"But why don't you come? You said you'd been in the house all day. It would be good for you to get out."

Cherry was not to be persuaded. "You go," she said. "If Mrs. Moreau's upstairs I'll go up and talk to her. I'd like to have her see if I've cut that dress out the way I should."

Ten minutes later Dan was gone. Cherry hesitated before she finally took the folds of yellow cloth over her arm and went upstairs to knock on the door of the Moreaus' apartment. Why should she feel jealous of Brenda Vail, this woman who was almost a stranger? What did it matter to Cherry if Dan spent so many evenings with Miss Vail? They were writing a play—the play that was to make Dan known to the world as a talented young author.

"I should be grateful," Cherry told herself. "She's doing what I can't for Dan—helping him make a name and a place for himself. It means everything for me, too. Money. The sort of life we've dreamed of. Happiness! Dan could never be happy with things as they are now. He's too ambitious. Oh, I should be glad Miss Vail came to Wellington and glad she's staying!"

Somehow, although she told herself all this several times, she could not quite believe it. Not a single thing had happened to plant in Cherry's mind the seed of jealousy and yet the restless, troublesome thing was there.

DAN did not come home early that evening or the next. He told Cherry enthusiastically that at last the play was progressing. Two acts were almost completed. The third, which was to be the last act, was going to be difficult to handle. There was so much about the mechanics of writing for the stage of which he was ignorant. Brenda seemed to know, though. If the play really "clicked" the credit would be Brenda's.

"She's great!" he assured Cherry with glowing eyes. "Brenda knows life. She's as different from the sort of people you meet around here as day is from night."

There were evenings Dan did not spend working with Brenda. Occasionally Miss Vail had other engagements. Once some friends came for her and drove her to a town 50 miles away. She spent two days there, returning to tell Dan that she had been horribly bored. She managed, without saying so, to convey the impression that the time had been dull because she had missed understanding companionship.

There were other evenings when Dan had assignments or was busy at the office. He telephoned to Cherry on a night when he had been working late. It was almost 9 o'clock.

"Listen, honey," he said. "Max and I are going to stop for you in 15 minutes. Can you be ready? It's a grand night and we're going to drive out to a new barbecue place on Stewart road. Better have a coat—it's cool out. Yes, we'll be there in 15 minutes. Twenty at the latest!"

The 20 minutes were not yet up when the roadster halted before the apartment house. Cherry came down the steps wearing a knitted sweater suit. It was brown and pulled close over her head was a scarlet beret. She looked unusually childish, unusually attractive.

Cherry called "Hello!" gayly and stepped into the roadster. She had not seen Max Pearson since the night of their drive through the storm.

His greeting was friendly, casual. Dan wanted to know if Cherry was sure she would be warm enough and she said that she was. A moment more and they were off down the street.

The week had brought the first foretaste of autumn weather. There was a sharp nip in the air and once as they neared the limits of the city the odor of burning grass came to them. It must have been the first fall bonfire. Overhead the sky was almost black and the stars gleamed with chill, bright frigidity.

Cherry felt Dan's arm around her and snuggled close. She was glad that she had worn the wooly sweater suit. The cold wind struck against her cheeks and sent her blood back tingling.

Her fingers found Dan's hand, slipped into it. He was saying something she could not hear because of the wind. Cherry laughed and turned her head.

Dan repeated, "I said we hadn't driven out on this road since June. Remember? Max brought us that night, too."

Cherry nodded. The memory of that spring night was still sweet. All the happiness she had known with Dan suddenly came crowding back. Oh, how could she have thought for one moment that anything could affect her love for Dan or his for her? Of course it was nonsense! She had been making herself unhappy over nothing. Nothing was wrong and nothing would ever take Dan away from her!

PEARSON was talking now. He had to raise his voice so as to be heard above the wind. Cherry did not even listen or hear Dan's reply. She was glad the conversation was about something at the office about which they would not expect her to express an opinion.

They were riding along a well lighted highway. Presently, far ahead, an electric sign loomed up.

"That's the place," Pearson told them. "Jo and I were out last week. Elegant fried chicken they serve. That is if you're in the mood for fried chicken—which I certainly am!"

"Chili for mine," Dan announced. "Haven't had a good bowl of hot chili for ages."

"Why do they call it a barbecue?" Cherry wanted to know. "It looks just like any other place to eat."

They had reached the lighted building. A dozen cars were parked by the road and there were more in an enclosed space at the other side of the structure. Pearson brought the roadster to a halt and the three stepped to the ground.

"There's a theory," Max explained, "that these places actually barbecue their meat—cook it whole, you know, over a bed of coals. As a matter of fact I think their kitchens are just about like any other restaurant's. You get good food and not much service—which suits most folks when they're driving."

They entered the long low building. Three men in white caps and aprons were serving customers who sat on high, swivel stools or lounged against the counter. There were two girls with escorts at one end of the room. The other customers were men.

One of the men behind the counter was making sandwiches. Another was filling cups of coffee for a tray that was evidently to be carried to customers waiting outside in a car.

* * *

CHERRY and Dan and Max found places at the counter. They gave their orders and were served almost immediately. The hot coffee was strong and delicious, the chicken delicately tender. Though the portions were huge Cherry finished every crumb.

The talk drifted to Dan's play. "Putting a lot of time on it, I suppose," Pearson asked easily.

"Every minute I can spare. You know I had no idea there was so much work to a play. It's not just writing the lines but thinking the thing through and planning how it's to go."

"How about the collaboration?" Pearson wanted to know. "Do you both write and put your work together or how do you manage it?"

"Oh, we just talk together and work it out. I sit at the typewriter and do the actual writing but Brenda has most of the ideas."

"I see. What do you think of the play, Cherry?"

The girl laughed. "I don't know a thing about it. Dan's keeping the whole thing a surprise until it's finished."

"Seems to me you might be rather a valuable critic," Pearson said.

Cherry had been avoiding his eyes, but now she looked at him. There was nothing in his manner to suggest that impetuous night of the storm. Cherry was not quite comfortable in Max's presence and she glanced away quickly.

"Say, there's something I wish you'd do," Dan was saying. "It's darned lonesome for Cherry with me spending so much time working. Drop in to see her now and then, won't you, Max? Cheer her up. Cherry doesn't see enough people or get out as often as she should."

Pearson's hesitation was almost imperceptible. He said, "Why, yes, of course. I'll be glad to come to see her. Any time that I'm welcome."

"Welcome!" Dan grinned. "Say, I guess you know you're welcome any time at our place. Isn't he, Cherry?"

The girl said "Certainly." Her eyes did not meet Pearson's again.

HUTTON CASE IN HANDS OF JURY

Defendant Refuses to Discuss Trial; Reports Condition of Evangelist

Los ANGELES, (U. P.) The Hutton-St. Pierre romance of romance all was placed in the hands of a superior court jury here today by Judge Lester W. Roth.

The jury of middle-aged men and women was to decide whether David L. Alan Mans Hutton, banker and son of Nellie Sounds McPherson, evangelist, is responsible for the alienation of affections charged by Myrtle Elizabeth Hutton, mother of Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, in a $100,000 suit.

Hutton and Mrs. St. Pierre followed with interest every step of the jury's march to the courtroom. The former appeared more refreshed than at any period during the three weeks trial, at which she fainted and became hysterical by times in moments of sensational testimony.

Hutton had nothing to say immediately after the case. He spoke in fond of the health of Mrs. Mc-Pherson-Hutton.

"We moved her from Lake Arrowhead last night," he said. "She needs to be entirely alone. It she is to recuperate from her illness."

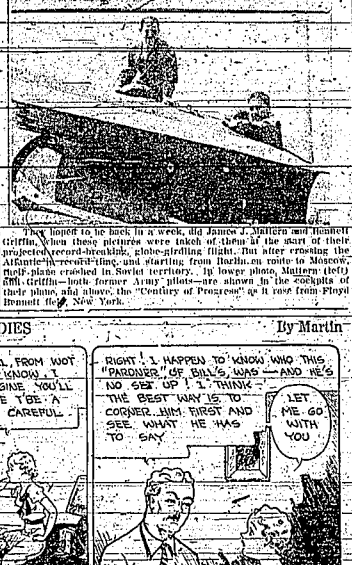
The Justtome singer of Angelus Temple described his wife's illness as a "very serious nervous breakdown." He said a doctor and two nurses were in attendance.

Judge Roth pointed out in his instructions that the defendant had set up two lines of defense, one a general denial of any passion for Mary Mrs. St Pierre, and a separate defense based on the contention that if he had committed the alienation he had been induced to do so by the plaintiff's own conduct.

He told the jury that in case the defendant had been induced to do so by the plaintiff's own conduct, the damages would be increased and the plaintiff's case would be stronger as a result.

Should the jury find the plaintiff was not unchaste except as the defendant was concerned, the condition should not be evidence against the latter unless it was found the desire was natural, the judge ruled.

At Start of Flight



They hoped to be back in a week, did James J. Mattern and Bennett Griffin, when these pictures were taken of them at the start of their projected record-breaking, globe-girdling flight. But after crossing the Atlantic in record time, and starting from Berlin en route to Moscow, their plane crashed in Soviet territory. In lower photo, Mattern (left) and Griffin—both former Army pilots—are shown in the cockpit of their plane, and above, the "Century of Progress" as it rose from Floyd Bennett field, New York.

Editor Idaho Evening Times:

Sir: In your issue of July 2 is an editorial entitled "American Interest." In that editorial you speak of a degree of enthusiasm without precedent. I fear that you, as I, listened in on the ballyhoo, not to give it a more direct and descriptive name, which was staged at the Democratic convention. You can go on to say that for the most part national conventions are now conducted in the open. The fact really believe that these parades at conventions are the product of manufacture. I have been in the open? Or were they carefully manufactured and organized in great secrecy? Are you of the opinion that Gov. Ritchie's forty minute demonstration of enthusiasm was spontaneous?

When you speak of the enthusiasm brought forth by these contesting you show wonderful lack of sensing the despair that speaks in the hearts of millions of Americans. And Democrats. I have been a Democrat all my life. I have hated the Democratic ticket for years than 20 years—except when compelled by decency had to respect to vote for the Republican candidates. All that I have heard regarding the Democratic convention leads me to believe that decent, law-abiding Americans of other party are hearsick. A lot of your readers must be of that type. How dare you speak of "enthusiasm"?

The Democratic party's platform has no wensed words." True, they have capitulated heart and soul to the wet racket, and the lies. The dry element is not a propaganda bunch and paid for bunch. Support of wet sentiment and supreding of wet interest is very largely responsible for the return of alcohol legal. What prohibition failure there has been. The wet press of America will ultimately have to stand at the bar of public opinion when prohibition will have been proved a tremendous success.

If the saloon is not to return, then legalized alcohol will have to be handled by our elected representatives. These representatives will be of no better grade than those we have now who have sworn to enforce the laws and to support the constitution—and have violated that oath.
