THE POMERENE APPOINTMENT

Whatever were the motives that impelled the appointment of Atlee Pomerene, a Democrat, as chairman of the great Reconstruction Finance Corporation, it appears that the probable political effects of that unusual move have been considerably exaggerated.

The truth is that nearly everyone has been unimpressed. As a master political stroke, it's an attempt to increase popular confidence in the R. F. C., it has only resulted in a certain amount of eyebrow-raising.

There is no more point, if as much, in saying that the president took the R. F. C. out of the political campaign by appointing Pomerene than there is in asserting that the R. F. C. is just as much in the campaign as it ever was.

Whether the Democratic leaders have been planning to make an important issue out of the corporation and its operations is very doubtful. If they do their effort will be directed at the basic idea of the corporation as a method of relieving depression and distress to the exclusion of more direct relief to small business men and other individuals.

And any attacks upon the acts of the R. F. C. would be directed at past performances and at Republican officials responsible for them—including Hoover—rather than at Mr. Pomerene or anything likely to happen under his chairmanship.

The summer and fall operations of the R. F. C. became pretty well barred off as a source of political issues when the Senate voted to investigate it through a committee headed by Senator Conover, and after the House Democrats got through an amendment to the last R. F. C. bill under which the corporation must report its loans to Congress each month.

Those two developments killed-off chances that the big federal lending agency might be used for political purposes by the administration during the campaign and similarly ruined any chance the Democrats might have had to prove that it was being used.

There is nothing in the Pomerene appointment to prevent the Democrats. If they so desire, from hammering at the fact that when the corporation was under Republican auspices it turned over $80,000,000 to the Dawes bank in Chicago or to slam at anything else the organization did under Hoover, Dawes and Eugene Meyer.

Meanwhile nobody seems to have discovered just why Hoover picked on Pomerene. It is pretty certain now that he first propositioned Al Smith and Owen D. Young, both of whom refused. There are plenty of other Democrats of more or less comparable stature and ability. Pomerene was once a senator but he has been defeated in his last couple of attempts to get back in.

Although prominent in Ohio, Pomerene's national fame has rested on his association with Owen J. Roberts, now Supreme Court justice, as one of the two special prosecutors in the naval oil reserve cases. Roberts did most of the work and appeared to much the better advantage.

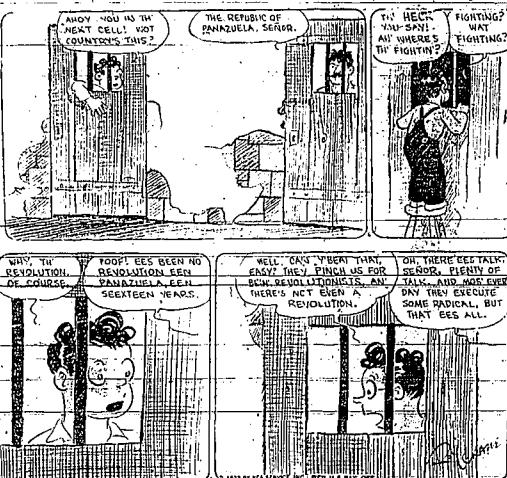

Charles C. Miller, the banker from Utica, N. Y., who becomes president of the R. F. C. is another appointed not widely known to the country—has much as the R. F. C. is the keystone of the Hoover effort to meet the depression, since Hoover's future is so importantly involved in its success and because its leadership is about as important and powerful as any job below the presidency; it is reasonable to suppose that Hoover, Moyer, and Secretary of the Treasury Mills will keep a watchful eye on it.

Meanwhile, with Pomerene and Miller in their chairs, its aspect will be less that of "Wall Street" and the "big bankers."

The breaking up of the R. F. C. in the East appears as the next step in the hectic career of that unique organization—but that does not mean we never are to hear any more of it. Because of the encouragement received in many quarters by the bonus marchers, we may during future sessions of Congress see similar demonstrations. However, considering the lack of immediate success met with by these men, it would appear that such methods, while spectacular, are likely to be ineffective. Just as the demonstrations made years ago by suffragettes were ineffectual in themselves.

of which was that he was unable to
