WASHINGTON, (UPI)—"A terrific struggle is being waged in the Middle West between the people who are inclined to hit them hard if they will. But many of them are restrained by the fear that the economic forces rotted in the days of Lincoln.

Indications of revolt are reported in this confidential survey now being made by the United Press, but some believe its extent and intensity will be far less than those almost entirely overshadow the uncertainties in the second tier of states.

This group consists of Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, and Iowa, and President Hoover four years ago.

Reports today show a turnover of political parties. They are numerous and unpredictable.

NEWSPAPERS

This business of making newspapers is a strenuous one.

Few persons sufficiently realize how important a part each plays in the scheme, but the successful publishing of such a periodical is dependent upon the one who thinks he has nothing much to do with the press, quite as much as upon the actual newspaper worker.

To commence with, each subscriber plays an invaluable part in the newspaper structure, for it is him primarily for whom the publication is issued. It is his interest, his subscription and dollars which makes the newspaper appeal as an advertising medium. Thus each subscriber is an important cog in the newspaper set-up, and is listed here first as being the principal component.

Then each person about whom news is written, even though he may never read the account, and cares less, is an invaluable element, for it is he who is acquainted with the doings of one's fellows that newspapers are read at all.

The advertiser whether it be a department store owner, or a patron of the classified advertising department, plays his part in sustaining the newspaper, which carries his message to thousands of folks, swiftly, appealingly and economically.

Then at the foot of the ladder we have the newspaper establishment itself, with its crew of solicitors, news writers, mechanics, carriers, office workers, correspondents and press associations reaching to all parts of the globe; its pressmen, and linotypists, and stereotypers, its producers of cartoons and comic strips and pictures, its producers of cartoons and comic strips and pictures, and drawings, world without end.

Each person mentioned, plays an invaluable and indispensable role in the making of a newspaper, for certain it is that each stage in its development from nothing at 7 o'clock in the morning, until it is read in all our history," he drew a true indictment. Extravagance, waste, a mistaken economic policy and ruinous taxation—all products of incompetent Republican leaders boast that theirs was "not a poor man's party." These instances might be multiplied indefinitely.

When Governor Roosevelt said in his Sioux City speech, "I accuse the present administration of being the greatest spending-administration-in-peace-times in all our history," he drew a true indictment. Extravagance, waste, a mistaken economic policy and ruinous taxation—all products of incompetent Republican leadership—are largely responsible for the present plight of the American people, including 11,500,000 unemployed.

The right in everyone plays a part in this humaness, the same as in most every other sphere of life.

This does the press continue to exert profound personal sentiment to join other agricultural states and follow the path indicated by Maine when the Pine Tree state forecast the Democratic landslide in November?

TARIFF AND PROSPERITY

If it is an interesting thought not a curious fact that the opposition to the re-election of Herbert Hoover is nowhere appreciably stronger nor more demonstrative in normal Republican states than in Iowa, where he was born, and in California, which is now his home.

The products of agricultural products in those states, and the very natural excesses of sentiment here-tofore left to a native or adopted son could not outweigh the resentment against the deplorable conditions which they rightfully charge in large part to the man they have previously been proud to honor.

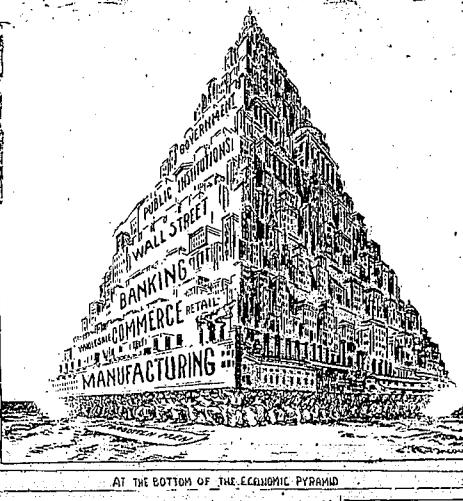

In Iowa upon the occasion of Mr. Hoover's emergency visit, a lion in the parade of the protesting farmers bore a banner citing the prices of the principal products of the state—so low that they would be a jest if they were less tragic.

From California have come frequent reports of rotting surplus fruit, and instances of growers burning their oranges for lack of a market.

The resumption of the agriculturists of Iowa and of the agriculturalists of California must be much the same as that exhibited by the people of Maine, where potatoes are piling off the barns at 19 cents a bushel, when they elected a Democratic governor and two Democratic Congressmen last month.

The well-informed voters of these and other agricultural states know the chief causes of their distress. They know that the depression is a domestic and not a foreign product. They know, for instance, that Mr. Hoover and the Republican leaders promised them in 1928 a tariff that would place their commodities on a parity with manufactured products, and they know also that they got a tariff act that was of no benefit to the major exportable agricultural products but increased the disparity between those and manufactured products. They know that the Hawley-Smoot-Sawyer Act was passed in 1930, and that it was passed by reason of retaliatory tariffs. Foreign trade loss, including August this year, is 70 per cent compared with 1929. The effect upon California's fruit exports by practically barring them from the Canadian market alone would have been sufficient to prove disastrous to the fruit growers.

The agriculturists of these and other states also know the extra burden they have had to bear through excessive taxation national, state and local, as a result of the overexpansion and spendthrift policies of Mr. Hoover and of the kind of Republican leadership of which he has been a part. Millions and millions upon millions of dollars of indebtedness have

While George Harvey disrupted his Border States campaign trip to make back to Washington by air, the word was passing around in the bird world that nothing could have been so impeded by his anti-bonnie hatchings.

Harvey disposed this a few days later by announcing he would return to the campaign trail over old before he will make eleven species in six days traveling by air, probably in a War Department plane.

SUCH IS seen again the internal aspects of Harvey's campaign, but two of his species will be broadest and these only locally.
