Digest Vote Closes With Gov. Roosevelt Holding 3 to 2 Lead

Straw Ballotting Indic平ates Triumph For Democrat

NEW YORK (UPI)—Franklin D. Roosevelt leads President Hoover in 41 states with an advantage of 10,000,000 votes, according to the latest returns of the literary Digest presidential poll. The returns were received today.

More than 300,000,000 were cast. The sampling claimed it was the "largest" presidential straw vote ever held.

Well Comes In, Spreading Oil Over Derrick in Cut Bank Region

CUT BANK, Mont. (UPI)—A drilling oil well over the Derrick in the Tarrant-Yancey well in the Cut Bank region, which had been dry for two years, was drilled 15 feet into the oil-bearing structure after being left standing eight months. The well, which cost $125,000, was drilled 10 miles north of Cut Bank, a short distance from the town with a population of 1,000.

Terrace Weller, independent operator who drilled the well, said he had no way wealth he could get out of the hole.

Weller, who has been working on the oil bearing structures for a number of years, said he would not be interested in getting out of the hole.

In 30 states Roosevelt had a clear majority over all presidential candidates.

President Hoover made a slight gain over the semidemocratic and the nonpartisan returns, but still had less than 50 percent of the total vote, and in the quarter-million states, the nonpartisan.

If the literary Digest's forecast is correct, Roosevelt will receive 311 votes for the electoral college to Hoover's 319.

Hoover's victory forecast

"Unless all signs fail, unless some unexpected eleventh hour condition arises to reverse the Hoover-Hoover trend, by far the most probable forecast is that Roosevelt, the compromise candidate, will be elected president by a wide margin," the literary Digest said.

NATIONAL CHAMPS FACING CRISIS IN GAME WITH BEARS

Southern California Probably Will Win But Class Record
Is Expected

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—The members of the Golden Bear stand today in the path of the Trojans marching toward another national football championship.

The two forces will meet Saturday when the University of Southern California and the Bruins engage in their annual battle here.

As past record attest, almost anything can happen when these two ancient foes meet. The Bruins of Southern California are undefeated; the Trojan line remains unbroken; the two teams are still admittedly stronger; their gross weight is more ponderous. Yet they seem to have lost some of their roar margin. If they win at all,

Twice this season the Bears have gone to Los Angeles, once at the hands of the Trojans, once again by Washington State; once at St. Mary's—they emerged from both games with a single victory.

The Bruins, however, are not psychologically the same.

Psychologically, the game will be fought, certainly on the Southern California campus.

James Jones will be deprived of his best backfield star, the one that has been the main Trojan powder charge in the last four games. Stanford was beaten, but surprised, last week by a slim team, injured, suffered when he sprained his knee, and won a surprising victory over Stanford.

What effect his absence will have on Southern California's offensive prowess will settle Saturday when Homer Griffith and his mates at the signal crossroads of the gridiron will return from fullback and replaced Harry Bob Gehr. Jones hopes that this combination, supported by a stout line, will triumph with a short driving power.

CARL EDWARD LIND

Twin Falls pauses in the hurly-burly of affairs to breath a sigh of sincere regret in the sudden passing from her midst of one who did his share and more in the development of this section and this city.

In the death of C. E. Lind this city has lost one of its most valuable citizens and one of its most worthy characters. His life was an outstanding example to the youth of today of what indefatigable grit and determination will accomplish for man; the supreme example of a successful life devoted to his business, his family, his community, and his hobbies which were flowers and good books.

A stern business executive, he was kind and thoughtful, leading a blameless life, and a wholesome one, and though in the prime of manhood he left an indefatigable impression on the business life of this community and a place which indeed will be hard to fill.

It was less than a month ago in a mass meeting when he was called upon for remarks that he thrilled his hearers with the declaration that "we need to exhibit that old Twin Falls spirit." No one was better qualified to summon that spirit than he, for it was men like C. E. Lind who created it, lived it and sustained it.

His quarter-century of continuous business life in Twin Falls, engaging all that time in the one line of automobiles and their kindred demands, constitutes an achievement in itself, characteristic of the man whose career is now ended on this earth, and whom the community will join in paying deep respect.

His life and the record he leaves is a lasting tribute to his ancestry and a noble example to his associates, his family, his community and the Twin Falls he helped to build. The finest expression of appreciation than can be paid him is for his fellows here in southern Idaho to persevere to fight and to win the success which comes through industry, honor and the application of practical idealism in everyday affairs.

A PRIVILEGE

It is seldom that Twin Falls county has had the opportunity of voting to place one of her own citizens in an elective statehouse position, but this year that privilege exists in the candidacy of Harry G. Parsons, Democratic nominee for state auditor. Only two citizens from this county have ever held a state elective position, these being W. D. Gillis and Frank L. Stephan, who served as attorney-general.

This county is entitled not only to supply a state official once in a while, but it is justified in appealing to all the state to help elect Mr. Parsons this year because of his peculiar fitness to serve as state auditor, and ex-officio member of the state board of equalization and other such bodies.

From all over the state comes word of confidence in his election next Tuesday. Surely Twin Falls' county will want to demonstrate its confidence in Parsons and to contribute more than any other county to his majority.

There may be some selfishness in this county wanting to have one of its citizens a member of the executive branch of the state government, but no one can deny that it is entitled to the distinction from every standpoint: ability, geographical desirability and by virtue of the ticket it is running giving assurance that Governor Ross will have a colleague in sympathy with his program.

Parsons deserves a big vote from his home county and will get it November 8.

Hallowell helped to solve the problem of what to do with old razor blades—use them to scrape soap from windows.

The Literary Digest national poll, concluded this week in that weedy magazine, presages an overwhelming landslide for the Democratic nominee. The votes show Roosevelt winning by 41 states to Hoover's seven, and the magazine editorially concedes the possibility of Roosevelt carrying five of the latter.

As election day approaches the certainty of Democratic success in nation, state and county becomes more and more apparent.

The fact is stressed that the period for registration for the general election Tuesday, closes Saturday night at 6 o'clock. The books are closed at that time to permit registrars to prepare their records for the election, judges Tuesday. If you voted at the last general election or at the primary, and in addition have not moved from your precinct, you need not register; if you registered for the primary it is not necessary to register again. But if your name is not written there, be sure to register before Saturday night or you can't vote Tuesday.

R. G. MONTGOMERY

BORN HERE TODAY

STAN HALL, 10 months, of having been born here, is the latest addition to the list of our arrivals. He attended the funeral services of his father, Stan Hall, who died Saturday morning leaving his wife, Anna, and two sons, Stan and George, to care for him. Anna, a widow, has come from California and tells her story to others to get her father to give up his home and go to live with her.

JUDITH VANZANT, in love with her mother, has come to see her. She is to marry Anna and gets a chance to meet her father's son, Stan, who is married to Anna's mother.

SWERLIA plucked her up and carried her to the hospital where she was born. Her husband held his wife close as he watched only he could have accomplished.

Carefully, he rode down the mountain trail into camp.

After dark he sat on the porch, finishing his preparations for leaving the river. When Swerlia came to him he said, "I'm going to leave at the first brook ridge. I will never leave the burden of timber, boss has in his arms so long from the north.

"I'm going to leave him and his father's arms and rush for the doctor. Asper carried his daughter to her room tenderly. "We'll have to leave him at the first ridge with fear as he bent over her silent form."

The doctor came. Rapidly he asked, "How long has he been here?"

"About three hours," he replied.

"What caused it?" Mally was showing unusual interest.

"What caused it?" Asper snapped.

MALLY eyes narrowed. He had seen the doctor's face, eyes never wavering from Don's white face.

"The medical man turned to Asper. "Bad shock. Must have had a fall from horse. You'll have to keep her in bed for some time. Give her constant attention for 24 hours."

"Will she make it?" Asper whistled, leaning over her.

"She will," Asper said, "but she needs a good deal of rest."

SWERLIA agreed in twin blinks.

DAILY through a whirling black veil she heard, vaguely at first, the sound of voices. Her mind flitted and sleep escaped. At length her heart was anchored to the features of Swerlia. She was familiar with his cap and mustering loudly.

"Get that dirty skunk," he cried.

Seeing that she was coming around he turned round vigorously and his mouth spread in a wide smile.

"Did you get him?" she asked.

"Did you get him?" There was a blinding light.

"Did you get him?" he said again.

SWERLIA moved to go on.

"Are you ready?" Asper demanded impatiently.

"I'm going to catch him," he said grimly.

"Wait a minute," Asper said, holding him outside of the door. The doctor mentioned him outside. "You might hurt her husband."

"I'll get him in time," he said.

"I'll get him in time for you," Asper added by way of reassurance.

"I'll get him and get him good," he added by way of reassurance.

SWERLIA waited, eyes fixed on the curtains. He was irritated and being able to find Dudley.

"Have you seen Winters?" Asper asked again.
