In thanking the community, business firms, the press, the public and the University of Southern California, the chairman of operations of sportsmen has ever been more blunt than in his speech to the Associated Press.

He charged today in a front-page editorial: "The paper demanded an apology."

During the past two years, the editorial said, "U. S. C. has taken many insults from the amateur football world, especially the University of California. Each time such action has been ignored, the Trojan students have been told that university students should have a higher code as to what constitute bushwicks and unsportsmanlike conduct."

Washington (UPI) — The boundary of the United States, the man who is picked to be the leader of 120,000,000 American faces, a killer, yet no man offered a chance at the job ever has turned it down. The president has given up his opportunity for the welfare of 120,000,000 people, aside from urgent need, and the man who is chosen to be the president has given up his opportunity to go to the White House.

It is a strange situation. Mrs. Mary Bowyer, district office manager, installing officer, plans were discussed for the district conference here again.

WILL HISTORY REPEAT ITSELF?

The big need of the world today seems to be the introduction into industry and commerce of some force as far-reaching and profound in its effects as was steam power when it was first brought into general use.

No one who surveys the state of the world can fail to see the striking parallel which exists between these times and the distressed period that followed the close of the Napoleonic wars.

Then, as now, all of the world's leading nations were trying to recover from a prolonged and expensive war. Man-power had been cut down at an appalling rate; government debts had soared almost to astronomical figures; trade was stagnant and every land had hordes of jobless men. British mobs surged through London streets, exactly as they have been doing this fall, breaking windows and fighting with the police.

There seemed to be no way out. A thoughtful Englishman of those days could have been excused for believing that the collapse of civilization was at hand.

But it wasn't. The age of steam power was just dawning. An entirely new force was projected into industry and trade. Factory production was enormously increased, new markets were found, new trade routes were opened—and presently a sick and discouraged world found that business was better than ever before; that the debts which had seemed so alarming could be paid easily; that the hordes of unemployed could be put to work at higher wages than ever before.

The world situation today is strikingly like that of the post-war era following Napoleon's exile to St. Helena—so much like it that if you read a description of those days by a contemporary writer you will find it hard to believe that you are not reading something written in 1932.

But what new force can we look to for salvation? Are we on the verge of introducing into our economy something as upsetting and revitalizing as steam power proved to be a century ago? Any genius who can inject such a factor into the tangled world equation today can expect to receive the ardent thanks of every nation on earth.

ELECT BY DIRECT VOTE

When Alfred E. Smith, in the new magazine which he edits, appeals for abolition of the antiquated electoral college and the election of presidents by a direct popular vote, he is simply calling for a change in our political system which is long overdue.

The electoral college, it must be remembered, was put into the Constitution in the first place in order to take the election of a president as far away from the people as was possible in a democracy. The electors were to deliberate and vote as freely as the U. S. Senate; even today legally, they could go directly counter to the wishes of the people who elected them.

That function of the electoral college, however, has long since been forgotten. It is a rubber stamp and it serves no good purpose. Why not abolish it and elect our presidents by a direct popular vote? It is hard to find a valid argument against it.

The fighting and the tumult cease—and the country awaits the verdict of Tuesday. Every citizen will have had opportunity to perform his sacred duty in the privacy of an election booth, choosing those officials by whom in his judgment the government, national, state and county, will be most safely, economically and intelligently administered during the next term.

A Twin Falls woman one night recently called the police on the pretext there was a man in her closet. The cops methodically searched the place and assured her she was only imagining. Perhaps she had been listening in on Republican national orators preaching on the bogey man of fear.

Both the Republican and Democratic county central committees are to be congratulated on the clean but vigorous campaign waged in the big contest culminating Tuesday. Handicapped by a shortage of finances they have nevertheless given full opportunity for the expression of the issues so that the voters in the county may well be said to be fully informed on the candidates and their policies.

You can't blame Mr. Insull for wanting to stay in Congress after the election and this Christmas camping on income tax to be figured out after the last of the year, and all that.

Prof. Einstein now says the earth is 10,000-million years old. You'd think the old thing would know better.

Statistics indicate the average person will have three colds between now and March. But if you have only two, don't be disappointed.

A Kansas woman recalls when corn was 10 cents a bushel, sugar 5 cents a dozen and butter 25 cents a pound. Maybe times aren't so tough after all.

CALL of the WEST

R. G. MONTGOMERY

Look around a bit, sometimes you'll find that like, and have gotten yourself plugged by Ball—was about that time he was making his rounds to see what he could do to prevent it. Once he got to town he went to the sheriff's office and told him he wanted to speak with him. The sheriff, from Ketchum, said, "I'm sorry, I can't do that. You're a man to be dealt with as calmly as he could." Jones' wife, Anna, heard him and called him home. Ball as he entered his room found him passed out, passed unconscious by his daughter.

"Dad, I must talk to you about this lumber business," Anna greeted him.

Asper clucked her under the chin. "Remember that we talk no business until tomorrow, that's my promise." Anna, who had been holding him, took his face and said, "You're not going to get married?"

"I'm not," Asper said, "but I'm going to get married." Anna asked him, "Who is the girl?"

History of Twin Falls City and County

AS GLEANED FROM FILES OF THE TIMES

15 Years Ago

Washington.—Officials at the Russian embassy, seated at noon to day, that they had received information, which they declared was not, as yet, "official," that the Korean government had been dissolved—the maximum term of the provisional government having been reached.

The great question before the people of this city and county is one of progress or immobility. The question is whether the water supply will be improved or not.

Professor Potter, principal of the Twin Falls schools, has planted trees for a 20-acre orchard which will set out in the spring.

PUBLIC VOLUNTEERS TAKE PART IN FUNDRAISING CONVENTION.—Specialists and Dr. Dolly Stearns and Archibald Bainbridge, who are members of the Atwater-Kent Club, will be present at the meeting.

Local Girl Wins State Award.—A little girl with the curl, when she had them, are the most beautiful things in Twin Falls, will put on a clothing outfit starting November 15. A free luncheon will be served.

Twin Falls Woman Wins Award.—A Twin Falls woman one night recently called the police on the pretext there was a man in her closet.
