WORLD WAR II

THE story opens with a dialogue in a Washington office. Later, the author tells us that the author is not a professional writer, but a student of the general world-war problem. The author is not a professional writer, but a student of the general world-war problem.

HITLER STARTS TO SLIP Adolf Hitler seems to have passed the crest of the hill and to have started the trek along the downward slope. His party's vote in the recent German election represents a sharp falling away in popular support, which is even more significant than the numerical totals might indicate.

What it proves pretty clearly is that Hitler's program is no longer appealing to the people of Germany, as a sure-fire cure-all. The Von Papen government, for one thing, has stolen a good deal of its thunder; for another thing, the man's essential shallowness seems to be demonstrating itself a little more clearly every month.

Meanwhile, the Von Papen government is still a minority government—all the Communist vote is larger than ever before. Germany is not yet out of the woods, and her statesmen will need to exercise all of the intelligence and foresight they are capable of in the coming winter.

IN APPRECIATION Acknowledgment is hereby expressed to a group of sincere citizens for the co-operation during the campaign—co-operation, which never saw the light of day, but which nevertheless was wholehearted and generous.

Reference is made to that large number of persons who submitted letters, poems, clippings, cartoons, publications and other data, which could not all be used, chiefly because of the limitations of time and space.

The great quantity of such material a daily newspaper receives under ordinary conditions would be surprising to persons unfamiliar with conditions, but commencing early and lasting throughout the recent campaign, this newspaper was literally showered with contributions, some good, and some not so good, designed for reproduction in its columns.

Editors and clippers from favorite-home-town newspapers back east, were only exceeded in quantity by various versions of "Hoover Prayers", and an admixture of political propaganda which is interesting to scan through, now that the election is history. Despite the fact that little of this material could be used, for the reasons noted, the interest displayed by readers did not and does not lack appreciation.

It is to give assurance of this, and to thank the known, as well as some unknown, contributors, that recognition is here accorded them.

WHEN WAR DEBTS WALK THE PLANK During the campaign the terse and pithy character of the Democratic platform won a good deal of praise.

It was short and easy to read, and there was no mistaking its meaning. Its planks were things that the most hurried voter could digest; and one of the most clear and digestible was the following: "We oppose cancellation of the debts owing to the United States by foreign nations."

It is rapidly becoming evident that that section of the platform is going to be tested pretty strenuously before the newly elected candidates even take office. The plank is perfectly clear and straightforward. No one could possibly misunderstand what it says. At the same time, it becoming a little bit clearer every day that the war debts are not, any longer, collectable obligations.

No longer is it a question whether or not we shall be paid in full. It is hardly a question, even, whether we shall collect 10 cents on the dollar or 20 cents. The chief question now is whether we shall accept the loss gracefully and take it as an inevitable part of the post-war readjustment, which we still go through, or whether we shall have to have it rammed down our throats.

That being the case, what happens to the Democratic platform plank, the statement which, according to political theory, will form the guiding star for the policy makers of the new administration? The ballot made and provided for the occasion, was a regulation size with lots of circles scattered promiscuously here and there, and yonder, and was originally intended to be marked up considerably with the said marks and spread around like—But the trouble with the Democrats seemed to be they thought the circles were ornaments dropped in by the printer, and to crush the proposition. It was an awful waste of circles—wonderful! The election leaves a lingering doubt that only time can erase. Just how did those Ford employees vote?

Mr. Hoover apparently sees no need to ask for a count. Bank employees aren't worrying about their vacations these days.

CHAPTER IV I NDA—her former manner as a student she admitted, it afterwards. Of course, with the charming Mr. DeVos on her right, it was hard to pay direct attention to what Mr. Statter had to say.

It was hard to pay direct attention to what Mr. Statter had to say. But that she did so, she admitted, it afterwards. Of course, with the charming Mr. DeVos on her right, it was hard to pay direct attention to what Mr. Statter had to say.

Now the loaded ball of conversation had been being the length of the table and all were looking in the air. Africa—curious that that word should prove the one to set them off. She caught her self back. Mr. Statter held the floor. She would not repeat her earliest intuition. He was fairly bristling, as a traveling salesman expected that the man had a good talk; with him it was the center of attention or nothing. She followed him to India and there the firmament opened over her. She was to be a student of the world which was the start of a hymn of praise to all rebels, leaders, and the cause of the rights of unrepresented peoples.

"Now the fact is in the final hour of the current civilization, she said, she had a good talk; with him it was the center of attention or nothing. She followed him to India and there the firmament opened over her. She was to be a student of the world which was the start of a hymn of praise to all rebels, leaders, and the cause of the rights of unrepresented peoples.

AT ease for the moment, she studied the guests. Marvin was near Tom. She must be especially interested in the man who had been talking about the world which was the start of a hymn of praise to all rebels, leaders, and the cause of the rights of unrepresented peoples.

LOWER TENDENCY ON WHEAT MARKET
 CHICAGO, Nov. 21 (UP)—Lightening of December contracts was the dominating influence on the wheat market again today and prices dropped almost a cent a bushel as Chicago locale sold, to be followed by eastern exporters. Contingent reports about the December production were circulating through the Board of Trade. Some advisers were also reported to be reticent in the delivery activity. Some $2,500,000 bushels that will either have to be liquidated or changed over to later futures.
 Officers said that some mills are being fairly quiet in December wheat and that delivery will be below. It was also reported that the Stabilization Corp. is getting well advanced in the nearby delivery.
 At the close wheat was 1/2 cent lower, corn was unchanged to 1/2 cent lower.
