THE LEGISLATURE

Unusual interest has developed in the accomplishments of the twenty-second session of the state legislature now in session, and rightfully so. People are now more than ever interested in such matters.

Newspapers note that their editorial columns are read more thoroughly than ever. The Evening Times finds its column "The National Whirligig" one of its most popular features; and interest is intense in all plans and developments calculated to be of benefit to the public west, whether in Boise or Washington.

A clear summation of the legislative situation is given in a report issued by Glenn Balch for the state chamber of commerce, who goes back of more incidents and shows trends at the statehouse.

Now in its sixth week, the legislature is seriously endeavoring to find some satisfactory source of revenue to fill the gap between probable returns from the ad valorem tax and governmental requirements, he says.

The necessity for this is better understood when one considers that doubtless a large portion of the 1933 levy will go delinquent. Also it should be remembered that virtually all governmental units are now carrying a heavy burden of debt as the result of the failure on the part of the citizenry to pay taxes during the past three years.

The government, referring to all political units and not only to the state, when because of the ruling requiring each county to pay in cash its portion of the state levy regardless of delinquencies, is in comparatively good financial condition, therefore is faced with the necessity of raising sufficient cash to pay its operating expenses and to finance some plan for the retirement of its accumulation of indebtedness.

The state legislature is working on the theory that relief or partial relief to the counties from the state levy will assist local units to put their respective houses in order. Therefore, it is considered feasible to secure as much of the state revenue as is possible from sources other than ad valorem taxes.

With this idea in mind, numerous plans for additional revenue have been evolved. First and most discussed is the sales tax. Two bills, levying 2 percent on all retail sales, were introduced, only to be later withdrawn. It is understood now that a 1 percent bill has been drawn and will soon make its appearance in the House.

Another measure proposes a license on chain stores, the graduated fee ranging from $5 for one store to $500 for each store of chains of 19 or more stores. This measure, as might be expected, is finding considerable favor among single store and independent owners.

A third proposal for raising additional revenue is that which would increase the tax on insurance premiums from 2 to 5 percent.

Another group is endeavoring to raise the present tax on electrical power from one-half to one dollar a kilowatt hour, thereby doubling the revenue of that source.

A bill to revise the income tax, lowering the schedule of exemptions and increasing the rates, has been introduced. Another proposal provides for a flat rate of 5 percent on all net income above certain dependency allowances. And still a third income tax provides for a 10 percent collection on the net income from intangible property, bonds, securities, mortgages and so forth, on tobacco and possibly other things. This is the basis for a bill to be introduced this week.

We find therefore that the current legislature has under consideration no less than eight new proposals for raising governmental revenue, three based on incomes, one on retail sales, one on chain stores, one on electrical energy, one on insurance premiums and one on luxuries.

Also there is a group of which Twin Falls county legislators are members which believes the solution to the problem lies in a division between the state and the counties of the gasoline tax. One such effort has already failed, but it is understood that the proponents are trying themselves for a second attempt.

Having been successful in achieving a material reduction in the state budget, the big problem—and a highly difficult and delicate one—now remaining for the legislature is the bidding of the gap between the revenue in sight and the necessary cash to finance the reduced budgets.
