

NEW TAX PAYMENT PLAN IS PROVIDED

County Treasurer Ready to Accept Deposits Under State Law.

Not until April 1st can the new 1923-24 inclusive being received in the office of the county treasurer with the addition of ten days interest will the office be ready to accept payment of taxes on any property. The state law, P. L. Mrs. Cora E. Stevens, tax collector, announced today.

The new plan is made possible through provisions in Senate Bill No. 1, passed by the legislature last year, which authorizes collectors to receive in sums of $5 or more payment of taxes due in any amount on any taxes levied and levied.

These deposits are to be kept in trust in separate funds to be turned over to the state treasurer at the time of audit of the taxes assessed for one year, the tax collector is authorized to keep them.

When payments are made they are also receipted, which is evidence of payment, and may be used for payment of taxes. If any deposited funds are not turned over to the treasurer for a period of one year, the amount deposited revert to the original funds of the county.

Mrs. Stevens said: "I am doing what I can to take advantage of the new plan in meeting the tax problem."

Reports Highway 93 Now Open to Traffic Over Direct Route

Highway 93 is now open today by way of Twin Falls, Idaho, from the office of the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce. It helps ascertain that the highway is now open between here and that point by making round trips daily.

The roadway in some places is not yet cleared, but the highway is open, although travel is very light.

The same office is authority for the statement that improvement of the highway between here and Newell, S. W., has been commenced. Newell, S. W., is about 10 miles west of the town of Twin Falls.

Following a typical March day yesterday, during which it was not clear whether the weather had reached the roadbed surface, yet the highest temperature was 50 degrees. In the Spring season, the weather moderated today and warm conditions continued under the influence of a bright sun.

WHAT OF SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA?

There is some speculation as to just how far-reaching will be the effects of the earthquake disaster in southern California.

To be sure, the irrepressible spirit of that section will not permit of discouragement, but there is no discounting the fact that a severe blow has been dealt beautiful southern California. There are many persons who will not continue to live under the fear of recurring quakes, much less invest their all in risks as great as that involved with buildings which can be knocked down like toy blocks.

A further element of risk is seen in the matter of insurance; it being quite likely that premiums on earthquake insurance in that area will certainly be raised.

Long Beach, previous to the oil boom of about 12 years ago, was a city of some 55,000 inhabitants. In 1910 it had only 18,000 residents. But in 1930 the census gave it 142,000. If oil accounted for this increase, the fact that many of the wells of that region are rapidly drying up, suggests the question: what is there to warrant the city rebuilding to its former status?

It is to be hoped that it shall, and that the district shall forever hence be rid of the spectre of earthquakes, but no one can give this assurance. And the facts remain that San Francisco, with its catastrophe of 1906, and Southern California with the severe blow dealt it in 1933, are definitely put in the earthquake zone.

We in this section are prone to complain at times of wind or snow or heat, but put compared with many other sections with their cyclones, tidal waves, floods, earthquakes and other similar violent dangers, residents of this section should feel fortunate.

To those in any of the other less-favored sections of the United States who wish to live in a country free from the conditions mentioned, Idaho extends the welcome hand.

AMERICA IS SAFE FROM WAR

If there ever was a time when the ordinary American could thank his God that he lives in America, it is the present.

This is not written simply because a long talked-of "new deal" is in the offing, but because the tide of world events is moving in such a way that America is one of the few lands today in which a new deal is possible.

The press of great news from Washington has led most of us to ignore the dispatches from Europe. Those dispatches reveal a grave situation. Not since 1914 has there been such a black bank of storm clouds over Europe's horizon. The threat of war is in the air. Europe's immediate future is dark.

And on this continent, as on an island, we find ourselves removed from that peril. To be sure, a great war anywhere on earth would have profound effect upon us; but at least we are not occupying the storm center, the place where the cyclone's vortex will dip down with the most deadly effect.

We are, in short, exceedingly lucky. Our great problem today is not how are we going to defend our national existence against menacing enemies, but how we are going to shape our affairs so as to provide for a long era of peaceful and happy prosperity.

We need to realize this fact and to carry the realization with us constantly. We needn't go back to our old-time cocksure chauvinism, in which we felt that our good fortune came to us because we were wiser and better and in all ways more deserving than other folk. We simply need to realize that we are, very, very lucky.

No other great nation on earth today can plan its future without taking into account the strong possibility that all of its plans may presently be knocked into a cackled hat by war not of its own making. We can. In a unique sense we are masters of our destiny. We should face the future with a great hope, sobered only by a clear knowledge of the weight of the responsibilities we carry.

THE NEWSPAPERS HELPED

The heads of several of California's biggest banks have issued statements praising the state's newspapers for the manner in which they handled news of the banking holiday and subsequent financial developments. In the opinion of these bankers, the attitude of the newspapers was largely responsible for the maintenance of public confidence.

Just to toss a few bouquets at our profession generally, we believe that much the same thing can be said of newspapers throughout the United States.

The whole banking crisis of the past fortnight constituted a situation in which a newspaper whose editor was the least bit half-brained, excitable or unbalanced could have done a tremendous amount of harm. But the newspapers met the test. They gave their readers all of the news, in ample detail, holding nothing back and glossing over nothing; but they presented it in such a way that the disclosures restored confidence instead of shattering it.

moment. Then Holt said, "Hushing slightly, which way are you going?"

Holt wondered why she had come to him from the bewitched hotel. Janet was Saturday afternoon, and she was still here at 11 P.M. for some reason she didn't want to tell Holt that. She didn't want him to think she had nothing to do with a half-holiday, but no home and stay there now that she was no longer engaged to him. For an instant she considered pretending that she had a date. Then she said, "I'm not going anywhere alone. I'm on my way to Lansing."

"Lansing" was the town's last department store.

"Going that way myself. Mind if I walk along?"

"Not at all. Come on."

They walked the length of the block. Holt spoke of the weather which he had not noticed, but certainly was not there almost any day now. Janet agreed, adding that none of the shrubs in the hotel grounds had been touched by frost. Holt, with a slight air of self-satisfaction, told her he was building a new business. It was a secret, he said, but on the occasion some trivial office gossip.

Janet's face was an effective mask of innocence. She continued to look at her, her heart thumping feverishly, that her hands in their new black gloves were hot. She did not notice that Holt's face was pale, but his heart was bounding with excitement.

But at Holt's mention of Lansing,

D. It's nice — maybe you know that. Doesn't know anything about it, either, but he's been real good, too,"

"She's very pretty," Janet said.

"I saw a picture in the Tribune,"

After reading this statement needed no comment.

There was something he wanted to say, but it did not seem to come out. "The new Realtor's apartment where the only building was set back from the street. There was a tall man with a mustache who stopped and said, "Listen, Janet. I want you to know I'm sorry about the other night. We shouldn't have gone out that late. It's great with us could be friends."

She looked at him swiftly. The young man's eyes were straight.

Jane's own voice sounded husky and a little breathless.

"I'm sorry, too. I don't mean this means we can't go out again with that other girl. With Betty Kendall. Oh, Holt, these two weeks have been terrible. I've wanted to tell you I don't feel the way I did about getting married."

"I guess you're looking where you belong," Holt said quickly.

"Her companion had returned,"

"How are you, Holt?"

"I'm all right. It was a surprise meeting you like this."

"I'm sorry you have to wait so long. This very afternoon if you

The rate is that U. S. senators of the party in power name the postmasters in their own cities, all others being selected by the congressmen from among the three highest paid in their states.

The Hitler "presidential" office in this section, together with the retirement dates of the Reichstag members, has been paid, as recently published by the U. S. Senate.
