MAY DAYS

Approaching May will bring with it two significant days. Mothers day and Memorial day—certain days which have appeal for all.

Significantly they come during the beautiful spring season, when there are flowers and sunshine and radiating happiness.

Each month, it seems, has its holidays and commemorative events at most appropriate times. New Year's day, of course could be at no other time than at the beginning of the year; then there is Valentine day in February; April this year had its Easter; May has been referred to here, and in addition the month has May day on the first; June brings Flag day; July, Independence day; September has Labor day, and November with its Thanksgiving time and December with Christmas; round out a galaxy of significant days which form an important place in the lives of all.

Not the least of these are Mothers day and Memorial day which events we are privileged to commemorate next month.

THE WEST TO BENEFIT

Silver legislation now in prospect at Washington is certain to be of outstanding benefit to the West—and it is high time.

Indications point to an early resumption of mining activity, especially in the northern part of this state where silver is one of the important resources. Gold mining already is receiving an impetus which augurs well for this part of the United States.

It is surprising the interest which has been shown in placer mining along the Snake river right in this county. W. H. Simons, state mining inspector says the entire Snake river area from this point to the Seven Devils country below Weiser is due for a spurt that may result in reclaiming millions of dollars of the yellow metal.

All this sounds good for the Gem state and for Idahoans, for in addition to the great agricultural and timber resources of the state, not the least is the mineral wealth here which only awaits an adequate price to insure further mining development and increased millions of dollars in production.

That is why Idaho is intensely interested in the present legislation in Congress, and why the West stands ready to profit tremendously by the prospective enactments.

INFLATION ISN'T A CURE-ALL

Americans seem to be an incurably hopeful people. And there are times when our excessive optimism is apt to flip around between our ankles and trip us up.

For some reason the nation's departure from the gold standard has raised a new crop of hopes. To a certain extent these hopes are justified. We are getting bold and decisive action, at least; for better or worse we are on the move, and there is every indication that the rise in price of commodities and basic securities will have a deeply beneficial effect on the life of the country.

But we shall simply nullify these gains if we take it for granted that the controlled inflation plan is going to solve all of our troubles.

Senator Thomas, commenting on the proposed issuance of United States notes to retire government bonds, remarked:

"If this amendment goes into the farm bill it becomes the chief element. The rest of the bill will be forgotten. Inflation in itself will be farm relief and bank relief. In my judgment this amendment solves every problem we have so far as a money policy can solve them."

This statement probably true enough—provided that its final words are always remembered. The new scheme will solve our problems "so far as a money policy can solve them"; but it must not be forgotten that some of them cannot be solved by a money problem, and that the reform and recovery program previously outlined by the administration still needs to be pushed ahead.

The problem of direct relief for unemployment is still with us, for example. The affairs of the railroads need straightening out. The measures designed to rectify the glaring faults in our banking system are just as much needed as ever. The federal "blue sky" proposition is as vital as ever. The plan to float a huge bond issue for public works still needs to be pushed ahead.

A start has been made, and there is plenty of reason to believe that it is going to do a lot of good. So long as we don't get so optimistic that we assume there is nothing more to be done we ought to make out splendidly.

Hawaii is out of beer already, and the nearest brewery 2,000 miles away. Water, water everywhere and not a drop to drink!

Heavy thinking, says Dr. Bruno Oettinger of Columbia, is no cause of baldness. But the opposite is true when your wife notices that thin spot.

GUARDSMEN RULE SCENE OF UNREST

Governor Herring Declares Martial Law Today in Plymouth County

them were heard. Hippo talked at length with the farmers and succeeded in persuading them to remain in their homes all night, after which both disappeared.

The mob then started for the courthouse, where the judge presided at hearings in both the Becker and Prinichar cases.

Judge Bradley was on the bench. One man was allowed to speak at the hearing. His head was swathed in bandages as the result of the fight with Prinichar.

"What's your name?" Judge Bradley demanded.

"I'm Morris Conner of Plymouth, Ia.," he said. "I started to speak, but, after several words, Judge Bradley cut him short."

Juris Is Relied

After the hearing, the farmers seized the jurist and pulled him from the courtroom; they dragged him past the sheriff's office and office of the attorney general, but none dared go to his assistance.

Five men wearing blue bandanas across their heads entered the courthouse. They attempted to force the Judge to promise "not to sign a foreclosure paper."

"I can't do that," Bradley answered. He was knocked to the ground, and several attempted to force him to take off his cap, but none was大胆.

"I am not to be trucked."

A truck was driven up and pulled the jurist into the rear. Sixty other farmers joined the caravan. It started for the entrance of the state highway.

A half-mile from the city Bradley was jerked from the truck. One farmer took a hub-cap from the truck and placed it on the judge's head.

"This is my crown," the farmer said.

A noise was thrown about Bradley's neck over a pole. Several farmers pulled the judge from the crowd, and he was dragged to the ground. He fell, hit his head, and collapsed. Then they lowered him.

After Bradley was revived, no one would let him make good his promises. Bradley, still defiant, the angry crowd was taken down the street to the county jail. The iron again was piled tight about his neck. Bradley refused to take the oath.

"I am not to be trucked," the farmer commanded Bradley to pray.

"I'll do that gladly," he managed.

Still bloodied and with his face black with dirt and grime, the judge knelt in the dust and prayed.

"I am not to be trucked," he said again.

Wyoming Cuts Its Fish and Game Fee

GRANGEVILLE, Idaho—Wyoming Fish and Game fee for out-of-state sportsmen have been reduced in Wyoming.

Wyoming hunting license fees for visiting sportsmen, formerly $60, have been reduced to $20 per acre.

The price reduction, effective Jan. 1, has been made to encourage more hunting.

It will come into effect Jan. 1.

DRIFTING RECORD SET BY BOTTLE

Crosses Atlantic Ocean in 683 Days; Finder Gets Two Bits Reward

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The bottle of Fisher, just announced shot a bottle tossed into the Atlantic Ocean by a fisherman in April, has been recovered, effecting the movement of schools of fish and marine life.

The fisherman who found the bottle has been awarded $500, the regular legal amount, for the return of a post card inserted in the bottle.

The fisherman, who is unknown, was mailed a check drawn on the United States Treasury.

Hundreds of bottles set adrift by the Bureau have enabled it to determine that the average time required to cross the Atlantic is 683 days.

The Bureau has been struck by the remarkable accuracy of the bottle.

Some bottles have been found
