The Clew of the Forgotten Murder

W. CARLETON
MEMORANDUM
ON THE MURDER

URGIN HINTS TODAY

When DAN BLEEKER, junior publisher of the Idaho Evening Times, was mysteriously killed by a bullet in his study, the police were at a loss to solve the murder.

It has been assigned to solve all the puzzles of the case by a writer called FRANK H. CATHY, wealthy and prominent in the community.

The Idaho Evening Times reported that the murder had been reported in the news columns of the paper.

A day later Morden to found that Bleeker received a telephone call from the editor of the Idaho Evening Times, FRANK H. CATHY, who had been in the city for some time. The editor of the Idaho Evening Times was in the city for some time.

"There's a woman mixed up in the case somewhere," Griff said.

DAN BLEEKER'S face gave no hint of excitement. "Frank H. Cathy," he said, "died about 20 minutes ago. For some reason they were trying to push up the news of his death. Bleeker sent a special reporter out to the house. The reporter got wise to it. There were two doctors and there's going to be a scandal. One of the doctors says Cathy was poisoned."

Kenney stared at Bleeker with wide, startled eyes. "Poisoned?" he said.

Bleeker nodded.

"That," said Kenney, "makes things look a little touch for his wife. I presume there was a lot of property."

"Around two million," Bleeker said.

"How long had Cathy been sick?"

"He was taken sick yesterday morning. Apparently there's no question about the illness. He was taken to the hospital. As a matter of fact, the doctor looked around with a lot of funny ideas, and then Cathy lost consciousness. That was about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He's been unconscious ever since. He died without regaining consciousness."

"Then his wife," said Kenney, "must have known he was seriously ill."

Bleeker nodded his head in slow acquiescence.

"And," Kenney went on, "the man was on his deathbed when she and the lawyer made such a hurried trip down here to push that bill case. Why did they do that if Cathy was going to die? Dead men can't bring that suit. And it's not likely that their reputations will be blasted."

"Perhaps," Bleeker remarked, "they didn't know how serious the illness was when they came down."

That she thought his sickness was the result of a nervous collapse from worrying over what we might do to his reputation. And the cabinet have possibly made a better picture that would show she regarded the illness of her husband as a relatively trivial."

Kenney stared thoughtfully at the junior publisher.

"But," he said, "if Cathy was murdered, then the person who poisoned him knew that Cathy was going to die. If he knew Cathy was going to die, what was the object in killing Charles Morden?"

"I told you," said Bleeker emphatically, "that you're jumping at conclusions without knowing enough about the facts. You get the facts. Then we'll put them together."

"I'm getting the facts all right," Kenney told him grimly.

"Get more then," said Bleeker and banged the door behind him as he strode into the corridor.

SIDNEY C. GRIFF was in his lute 30 minutes. A wadded bathrobe stretched to his ankles, slapped about his legs as he walked. He was pacing the floor with a restless rhythm.

Dan Bleeker sat in an overstuffed leather chair, his teeth clamped on the stem of a pipe. His dark eyes watched Griff with an expression of frowning irritation.

"You've told me everything," Griff said.

"Everything," said Bleeker. "And I wish you wouldn't keep pacing the floor. You're making me nervous."

"Sorry," said Griff with a grin and dropped into a big chair. He pulled up an upholstered stool and thrust his legs out in front of him, wrapping the bathrobe around the legs. He settled back in the chair and lit a cigarette.

"I'm a restless cuss," he said.

"I know it," Bleeker told him.

"But on one thing, what do you make of this business?"

Sidney Griff was long-armed and long-legged. He reached out with his right hand, spread the extended fingers apart and made little wavy motions with his arms, as though he might be feeling the texture of the air.

"It's something that requires work and thought," he said.

"Have you any ideas about it?" Bleeker inquired.

"Yes."

"Let's hear them."

"In the first place," Griff said, "I can't understand why the man who was arrested took the name of Frank H. Cathy. Of course, he'd taken the wallet. Let's suppose that he did pick Cathy's pocket. Now he was either a professional pickpocket or an amateur."

Bleeker regarded the outstretched arm.

"My God!" he said, "that makes me nervous too."

Griff smiled and dropped the arm back to his lap.

"It's a habit of mine," he said, "when I'm thinking. I don't know why I do it—it seems to give me some measure of contact with the people I'm thinking about. Are you interested in any of that sort of stuff?"

"What sort of stuff?" asked Bleeker.

"Mental telepathy, hypnotism, and all that," Griff said. "You know there's something peculiar about our personalities. They're filled with the life vibrations. Vibrations are sent out and received. Every man's brain is, to a certain extent, a broadcasting station. There's too much interference in the receiving stations. Too much static to bring it to clearly, particularly with the conscious mind. The subconscious mind gets a lot of that, that's the conscious mind doesn't complain."

"No," he said, "I'm not interested in that stuff."

There was silence for a moment.

"What were you saying about the pickpocket?" asked Bleeker.

"He was either a professional pickpocket or an amateur pickpocket," Griff said. "If he'd been an amateur, it's hardly possible that he'd have managed to pick Cathy's pocket without Cathy knowing it. Of course, he might. On the other hand, a professional pickpocket invariably strips the wallet of money and throws the wallet itself away. Obviously there's nothing that's more interesting than to be caught with a man's wallet in your possession, particularly when that wallet contains cards and other means of identification."

"That doesn't mean very much as far as the solution of the mystery is concerned," Bleeker pointed out.

"It may and it may not," Griff said. He was on his feet again.

"Now, there's something else. There's a woman mixed up in the case somewhere. This Mary Briggs, the hitch-hiker. She must know something about the man who posed as Cathy."

"We're going to find her," Bleeker said. "I've already figured she might be a key witness."

"All right, as much for that," Griff said. "Well let that wait a moment. Now we come to the fact that Morden told you he was contacting a woman, but didn't want to mention her name."

"I don't think there's any question," Bleeker said, "but what that woman was one who was connected directly with Cathy."

PAUL MALLON'S NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

An Exclusive Evening Times Daily Report on the Fast-Moving Events in the National Capital by an Interpreter and Commentator

(Copyright, 1934, by Paul Mallon)

POPULARITY

WASHINGTON—A Literary Digest editorial carried the bad news about the decline in Mr. Roosevelt's popularity to the President some weeks ago at Hyde Park.

The figures were about the same as those just published, showing a decline of about 33 per cent in the Roosevelt "yes" vote. The President said then, or later, that he had no objection to their publication.

That is why the usually confidential Digest now is out officially. Also, the Digest has had some consultations with the business element began about that time.

SUB-STRATA

Several reasons why the New Dealers have no serious objections to publication of the poll, if you consider the Maine situation, you will get the idea.

Some Digest readers were made in Maine during the time of the Maine election (Sept. 10). The poll showed only 38 per cent in favor of the New Deal and 62 per cent against. Yet the "New Deal" won the election, winning two out of the three congressional seats and the governorship, and they almost won the senatorship.

An explanation for that may be that the Democrats must have hidden strength among a sub-stratum of voters not covered by the Digest poll. At least that is what they say, and everyone will admit that the Roosevelt strength in great part among those on a voter roll. The Digest names, come from many sources, mainly from directories, telephone books and farm publications, which may be top-heavy with names of people who are the New Deal help.

INCONSISTENCIES

In fairness, it should have been pointed out in a recent column that the New Dealers have sacrificed consistency to meet relief requirements.

A rather inconsistency which could have been cited was the use of money for irrigation and reclamation while trying to cut down farm acreage. However, that is an old inconsistency of government which was not instituted by the New Dealers.

MAKE-UP

The day after the story got out about the tax plan differences of Treasury Assistant Oliphant and Train Trustee Viner, they went to Mr. Morgenthau's office, stood before his desk and shook hands to show there were no hard feelings.

You May Not Know That

Jack Morgan, former pugilist, whose most recent bout was with Jack Dempsey in Reno, some five or six years ago, travels this territory as a salesman for a manufacturer of fever thermometers.

IN THE MIDDLE OF THE STREAM

It is perhaps no exaggeration to say that much of the campaign being waged by the "outs" against the "ins" is futile.

So many persons are too busy looking after the improved business which has been brought about by the present national administration, to be much interested in changing horses in the middle of the stream.

The public recognizes that national recovery is gradually being accomplished, and that it would be folly to jeopardize these splendid efforts by attempting to pick out individual officers for defeat. What is needed, is a united front of officials in harmony with the administration's recovery drive, and not public officials who will devote themselves to blocking progress, defeating the broad purpose of the advance now underway, or, because of an unsympathetic attitude, seeks to prevent accomplishment, when what is required now is a blending of the whole program.

By any yardstick which can be chosen, the nation, this state and this county are better off than they were on March 7, 1932. Much of this is due to the fact that the administration, by mandate of the people, was given a comparatively free hand to fight the forces which were gradually embroiling the country into an economic morass.

This battle has not yet been won. The programs are underway, and none there are who would wish that we go back to the conditions which prevailed under the old dealers.

Because of the ability and records of the present officials, and administration candidates, because of the achievements which have been made in national and county, and because of the need for a continuation of the present improvement in industry, business, agriculture and in other endeavors, the best way that appreciation may be expressed for the efforts so far made, and to insure a continuation of the improvement, is to avoid making questionable changes at the election next month.

If ever the advice of Abraham Lincoln, warning not to change horses in the middle of a stream, applied, it is during this present situation. The voting public recognizes this, and can do its part by recording these convictions in no uncertain terms at the polls November sixth.

There'll be more leisure for us in the future, predicts a famous theologian. Is he thinking of another era of unemployment?

NATURE OUTDONE

The devices by which a mechanical age seeks to improve itself often smacks of the miraculous—and, occasionally, a very odd sort of miracle to boot.

Experts in the animal nutrition laboratory of Cornell university recently completed experiments in the raising of sheep on synthetic foods. They grew two sheep to maturity, and fed them never a single blade of grass.

Instead, the sheep were given a weird mixture of casein—the solid part of milk—cellulose from chemical mills, starch, vitamin concentrates, and salts containing essential minerals.

The sheep liked it. They got fat on it. They became, indeed, very healthy and robust. Sheep that fed on the greenest and lushest grass ever grown would not have looked better.

The whole business leaves one with a rather dizzy sense of admiration. That herbivorous animals can thrive on a mixture of by-products from chemical factories is about as startling a reversal of nature as one can easily imagine.

William Fox may reap millions from his patents on the talkies. Being the result of sitting silently by and letting others do the talking.

'RED' IDEA, BUT GOOD!

It seems to be heresy of the blackest—or reddest—sort to suggest that the Russians ever have a notion worth copying in this country. Still, the land of the Soviets does seem to sprout a bright idea once in a while.

Probably you read about the solemn trial in which a pair of galoshes was convicted and found guilty of being of inferior workmanship. The galoshes were formally arraigned before a Moscow court. Witnesses testified that they just weren't good for anything—they leaked, they fell apart, they didn't fit, they looked like the dickens.

The result was a sentence ordering the quality of the galoshes to be improved at once.

Now this notion that it is a crime to inflict shoddy goods on the public—well, those who have occasionally paid good money for articles that proved practically worthless might easily feel that is a pretty sensible sort of idea.

Dizzy Dean has been voted the most valuable player in the National league for 1934. He already had voted himself the dizziest.

HISTORY Of Twin Falls City & County

As Gleaned from Files of The Times

15 Years Ago

Breeders of the thoroughbred Shorthorn, the animal which is coming into South Idaho like a locust, have gathered this evening at the Hotel Bannock in this city on guests of C. A. McMaster and Son, local pioneers of the Shorthorn industry. The banquet, served at 8:30 p. m. was not only a brilliant and elegant social occasion, but was also of the high order which the fancy livestock movement has secured upon this community.

With $1000 in Twin Falls city and an additional $500 for the rest of the county, a drive will be conducted for this community's allotment of the Roosevelt national memorial fund. The campaign will probably start tomorrow and is expected to be over the top by Monday.

27 Years Ago

KIMBERLY Land Thursday evening Kimberly had quite a thrill in this there, the eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Romig being tried and not wishing to go to bed, slipped into a chair, laid down and soon was fast asleep. Mrs. Romig, who had been in the child and began calling him but to not purpose, she then crossed Mrs. Harrington who helped her hunt around the premise and finally not being able to find him went to town to tell Mr. Romig who was in the town hall meeting. Together with Mr. Harrington and Mr. Romig the four hunted away toward the corner. Almost the whole town was alerted and no less than fifteen men were ready to make a regular search when Mrs. Romig came rushing out exclaiming that she had found him in a far corner of the bed room closet fast asleep.

Modernization LOANS

It is our earnest desire to assist in the Government's Modernization Credit Plan relating to the alteration, repair and improvement of real property.

Applications for loans coming under this classification, must necessarily be considered, and will be accepted provided they individually meet the credit requirements of this bank.

It must be understood that the funds loaned by the banks on Modernization Loans are the same as on all other loans, their DEPOSITORS' FUNDS, and that there has been no special deposit by the Government with the banks for that purpose.

ALL LOANS

Many people are under the impression that the banks are unnecessarily refraining from loaning money. This is a wrong impression, as banks are desirous of building up their communities and assisting worthy individuals, and welcome applications for loans to responsible people, however, all loans made by this Bank, of whatever kind or nature, must be sound in the Bank's opinion to the end that the interests of DEPOSITORS and STOCKHOLDERS are safeguarded.

Workers Begin Survey to Aid Home Modernizing Program in Twin Falls

To stimulate the home modernization program in Twin Falls, crews working on behalf of the local committee, which is headed by Capt. J. W. Porter, today started a house-to-house canvass.

They will visit householders and point out the availability of funds which can be used to make modern improvements, receive applications for loans, and otherwise explain the details of the program.

Encouragement will also be given to those who can make improvements without resorting to borrowing. It is stated by Porter, who today asked that residents give the collectors a welcome, admit them to their homes and get the best information on the purposes of the national housing act.

Blanks Available

Application blanks are available also at the office of the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce, through R. E. Leighton, who is in charge of the division of information.

He said today that all persons making construction improvements of any kind on their property are asked to apply for a permit at the office of the city clerk. There is no charge for the permit. By asking for permits, regardless of the smallness of the work proposed to be expended, a record is available which is valuable in revealing the progress being made here, officials say.

COLOR OF ROOF VITAL TO HOUSE

Harmony Essential If Outdoor Appearance Is to Give Proper Effect

Who can resist the charm of a yellow shingled cottage with a roof of weathered gray? Or the dignity of a gleaming white colonial home set off by a deep green roof?

The color and tone of the roof can make a house appear striking or commonplace, no matter what the color of the walls may be. It is a simple matter to make any well-proportioned home the most attractive one in a community by choosing a roof tone that harmonizes with the colors of the walls and effects, whether they appear in the side walls, landscape or surrounding buildings.

Dark Roof

Light walls, generally appealing, are at their best with a dark roof. Dark walls are always more attractive when highlighted by a bright, warm roof. That is why the gleaming white walls of a colonial home are beautiful when emphasized by a dark green roof, gray walls when brightened by a red roof, or yellow walls when subdued by a gray or blue-black roof. Brick walls require a light, warm colored roof in any shade that harmonizes with the color of the brick. Wood shingled siding calls for a roof of weathered natural finish.

Except where architectural tradition limits the selection of color and finish or where the tones of neighboring buildings may clash, the unique effects which can be had by following the rule "light walls, dark roof; dark walls, bright roof" are almost numberless.

Housing Hints

Tips on How and What to Improve

Troublesome knots in exposed wood are killed by the application of a hot iron or scorching, and two ounces of salt or silver leaf before painting.

This is a good time of year to have the catch basin in the house sewer line cleaned. Periodical cleaning is important.

A kitchen ventilating fan will draw out cooking odors and prevent steam air from being driven into the room on fabric and curtains.

If wall brackets are controlled by switches, many unnecessary wires can be taken off and the wires, if moved, each pair should be controlled by the same switch.

Dark, old halls and vestibules with woodwork finished in dark colors will be remarkably lighter if the woodwork and walls are refinished in light colors.

LINOLEUM CARE AIDS LONG LIFE

A new linoleum floor will show additional beauty, give prolonged service, and be remarkably easy to clean if a few simple rules are followed from the time the floor is laid.

An immediate waxing, with occasional repetitions later on, will give the floor a rich sheen, preserve its beauty and durability, and make cleaning a simple matter. When furniture and equipment are placed on the new linoleum, sharp edges should strike the floor. Such edges, as well as the legs of heavy pieces, should rest in gliders to prevent marring or denting of the floor.

Tracking dirt and most spilled things will wipe up at any time; however, stains as strong as iodine must be wiped immediately if they are to leave no trace. Scrubbing, or even the use of a scrub brush, is unnecessary if the above precautions are taken. A daily dry mopping will be sufficient in most cases.

FURNACE SHOULD GET 'ONCE-OVER'

Now that the time for furnace fires is here, many furnaces that were not properly cleaned after the last fire probably are found to harbor a troublesome accumulation of soot, and in other ways be in a condition that needs remedying before a satisfactory fire can be burned.

Before being used again, the furnace should be thoroughly cleaned; all door hinges, damper hinges and regulator parts oiled; flues sprayed with light lubricating oil, and boiler or floor pans cleaned. In the event a fire is built, this is the procedure that should have been taken immediately following the last fire, the preceding spring.

Harmful Method

When ashes are left in the furnace and soot is allowed to accumulate, the effect is much the same as if an empty shell and powder were left in a gun. Moisture accumulates in the soot, corrosion sets in, and there is certain result if such neglect is repeated often.

If new parts are needed, or an entire new furnace or an oil burner is required, a plumbing contractor should be consulted at once while ample loans on easy terms can be obtained from local financial agencies working in connection with the Federal Housing Administration.

Basement Can Yield Another Valuable Room

Some basements have a delightful way of being cool in summer and warm in winter.

The use of a basement auxiliary room is varied. With the addition of appropriate equipment and furnishings, it can serve many purposes. It can be turned into an additional living room, which is the most popular usage, where the family can read in comfort or have a rousing good time without disturbing the neighbors. It can become a playroom to keep the children off the streets and out of the rain. It can be turned into a work-room where mechanical work can be done in comfort. Or it can be a laundry that is cool in summer and out of the way all year.

Any or all of the above rooms can be had in the average basement with the aid of a carpenter, painter, mason, electrician and possibly plumber. They will pay for themselves many times over in usefulness and added value to the house.

COLOR IS VITAL TO ROOM BEAUTY

To be backgrounds of beauty, walls cannot be chosen haphazardly. They determine the effectiveness of the entire room. Backgrounds for furniture and drapes, they should be beautiful but inconspicuous, and selected to meet the most specific needs of each room.

There is warmth in buff and light brown, for instance, for rooms that lack sunshine. Delicate and dainty furnishings are perfect against pink and pale blue. Green is cool and refreshing for a room that is flooded with sunshine. Off-white and gray have dignity and are just neutral enough to go in many different types of rooms. Cream is soft and much more interesting on a wall than dead-white, and will harmonize with almost any color in the spectrum.

With an easily repainted or repapered with the help of the Federal Housing Administration, which makes attractive loans possible for homeowners who would otherwise be unable to do this work at present.

Question Box

Q. What causes a ponding noise in the water pipes of my house when the faucet is turned to shut off the water?

A. This is the condition which plumbers call a "water hammer." It may be due to loose washers in the faucet, but it is more likely to be caused by a lack of cushioning in the piping system or the fact that existing air chambers have been filled with water. Call an experienced plumbing contractor and he will be able to help you correct this condition.

FAMOUS FOOTBALL FEATS!

ROY REGGLES' run in the wrong direction, and a costly gallop.

It happened during the Georgia Tech-California Rose Bowl game of 1922. California's drive had been checked on the yard line. On the first play, Misset of Tech fumbled. Reggles, defensive end, grabbed the ball and turned around and run toward his own goal.

It wasn't until he was almost on his own line that Benny Lion, Ben's half brother, downed him on the six.

California lined up for the next punt. Lion's kick was a dud. The Tech right tackle, a star, was in the line.

FILER'S JUDGING TEAM IS LAUDED

Congratulations Bill Coming In for F.F.A. Boys Who Won—Coast Honors

Robert Corson, instructor in agriculture at the school, is sharing in these honors.
There were 25 teams of three men each in the contest which included representation from Idaho, Oregon, Washington and California. The event was the largest of its kind in the United States. Ranking fourth in the contest, the Filer team had taken first place for Idaho. Ed Buller, Filer, was second high boy of the 235 boys entered at Portland, his score being 814.5 out of a possible 1,000. High boy was Russell Webber, A1, Bangor, Ore., with a score of 817. One-half a point higher than Buller's.
The members of the team had the opportunity of seeing some of the best livestock in the northwest and of watching the expert judging officials. The show is considered one of the largest and best in the entire country, comparing with the American Livestock show at Kansas City, and ranking second to the Chicago International Livestock show. The team members were guests of the Portland show management at a home show and at rodeo, and while in the City of Roses also saw the Oregon State-Standard football game.

Local Woman Reveals Letters From Owners of 'Talking Dog'

When Mrs. H. K. Metherson read in the Evening Times last week the report of the death of Princess Jacquelline, only talking dog in the world, it reminded her of an interesting correspondence she had conducted in 1926 Mrs. Metherson is herself a dog fancier and when in 1928, she read the reports of how the Princess came into prominence at a Boston dog show, she wanted to know if these reports were true. So she wrote the owner, Mrs. Michel A. Robinson of Bangor, Maine.
Mrs. Robinson did not answer immediately, for she was in Cleveland, Ohio, exhibiting the Princess at the special attraction at a dog show there. But her husband, Walter P. Robinson, answered the letter, and Mrs. Metherson's questions.
It was all true, he said. Princess could not only say "Hello," "I will out," and "elephant," but also could utter such "bull" and "hunger." He couldn't explain the dog's powers, he said, but she and her mistress were constant companions, and as Mrs. Robinson was not in very good health she was free to devote almost her entire time to training the dog. And, as he was employed on a railroad, the two were left alone a great deal.
Mrs. Robinson substantiated what her husband said when she wrote from Hotel Gibson in Cincinnati about a week later. Princess had picked up talking as a child does by hearing adults talk, Mrs. Robinson said. "She knows nothing of a dog or a dog's life, for she has what we have, good when we go, and bad when we are away from the home of the house," she wrote.
The letters also relate that Princess, who was a French bulldog, was a number of blue ribbons simply on her merits as a pedigree dog.
