SCHOOLS START SEAL CAMPAIGN

Annual Drive Extended Into Grades as General Sale Shows Progress

The Christmas seal and anti-tuberculosis campaign of Twin Falls county Anti-Tuberculosis association began this week in the grade schools of the city. Simultaneously encouraging reports were received from Mrs. Maude F. Kleinkopf, county supervisor, in a letter to the director of the drive in rural schools. The response to the seal is unusually good this year, Mrs. Kleinkopf reports. The Union school has already sold $175 worth and has asked for more.

Mrs. Fay Reed, assisted by Mrs. Ruth Reed and Mrs. Betty McCleary, is conducting the grade school campaign.

A feature of the drive in the schools is the sale of a pencil given to each child who purchases 15 cents worth of the stamps. No child can obtain more than one of the pencils, explains Mrs. Orr Chapman, chairman of the county association, but he can order pencils for other children if he wishes to buy more than his quota of stamps. Rooms that average a 15 cent stamp purchase for each child will receive a pencil for each one, she says, and an attempt is being made to sell a number of rooms "one hundred per cent."

Special Honors

In addition to the pencils, special honors for individual schools will be given. In each county two children will receive special honors from the state association for the highest and second highest number of seals sold.

With the return from the mail campaign still near the 100 per cent mark, Mrs. Chapman announces that a receipt for money has been placed at the Main street pharmacy. Those who wish to donate their donations there instead of mailing them may do so. Seals are also on sale at the pharmacy, Mrs. Chapman says.

Work Endorsed

A number of endorsements of the work have been received, among them one from Mrs. John E. Hayden, president of the Idaho Congress of Parents and Teachers. "Since each year we are given the opportunity to help overcome the tuberculosis blight on American civilization, through the purchase of Christmas seals issued by the Anti-Tuberculosis association," says Mrs. Hayden.

"Parent-Teacher association have helped with this work year after year and now that we are undertaking one of our own projects in tubercular tests for high school and junior high school students, we are more than ever concerned about the success of the Christmas seal campaign.

"When the sale begins this year, let us remember that each gay little stamp purchased, brings us a tiny step nearer the goal of tuberculosis-free nation."

New Group Faces Death on "Terrorism" Accusation in Russia

MOSCOW, Dec. 11 (U.P.)—Thirty-seven men arrested in the Ukraine awaited trial for their lives today before the military section of the supreme court.

Charges are similar to those which caused the execution of 65 men and one woman last week after the death of Sergei Kirov, Lenin's Soviet leader, assassinated by Leonid Mlekov. They are accused of "terrorism."

It was announced that 43 men tried at Stalingrad, charged with theft of state property, three, including ex-prime minister Maxim Litvinov, have been sentenced to death. Sixteen were sent to prison for 10 years and the rest received lighter sentences.

As a application of the military of interior, the assassin Mlekov had been remanded until Dec. 20 to permit further investigation of his motive for killing Kirov.

SCOUTS COLLECT DISCARDED TOYS

Youths Canvass City's Homes For Playthings to Receive Yule Renovation

It wasn't old rags or rags. It was old toys that Boy Scouts were collecting this afternoon in a door to door canvass of the Twin Falls district. They started today a drive for old toys, dolls and books for children, which the Salvation Army is to distribute to needy children during the holiday season. Every home in Twin Falls will receive a call.

The Civic Service committee, of which C. E. Allen, G. J. Nordling and W. E. Hutter are members, announced the drive yesterday as a feature of Boy Scout Christmas activities. The suggestion was made by Adjt. Bert P. Black of the Salvation Army.

Under the sponsorship of a committee of Scout leaders, a selected group of Girl Reserve, meeting with Miss Bernice Halbert, and a group of Camp Girls, directed by Mrs. W. E. Hutter, Engelen, Will Take Care of the Renovation and Dressing of the dolls.

What happens to Fabrics at the LAUNDRY ?

FABRIC FASHIONSHOW AT THE TWIN FALLS EMPIRE EXPOSITION

In this very interesting exhibit you will find article after article in evidence of this fact: When you send your things to the laundry you actually improve the appearance and life of the article—in many cases, even when it is compared with a brand new one. From overalls to the finest lingerie, the comparisons show that the Laundry is a tonic for worn fabrics.

We believe this one of the most interesting exhibits on the floor and earnestly urge you to attend and learn for yourself that it pays to let the Laundry do it.

For Years The Diamond Hardware Co. Has Had The Pleasure of Presenting at Christmas Time, This Beautiful Thought Van Dyke
"The Value of a Smile at Christmas"

It costs nothing, but creates much. It enriches those who receive without impoverishing those who give. It happens in a flash and the memory of it sometimes lasts forever. None are so rich that they can get along without it and no one so poor that it is richer for its benefits. It creates happiness in the home, fosters good will, business and is the counteragent of strife. It is rest to the weary, daylight to the discouraged, sunshine to the sad, and Nature's best antidote for trouble. Yet it cannot be bought, begged, borrowed, or stolen for it is something that is no earthly good to anybody till it is given away!

GIVE!
Folks, did you ever stop and think how much happier it makes you feel to GIVE than to receive?

Guests Entertained At Pretty D.A.R. Tea

One of the most attractive events of the month was the annual guest day tea given yesterday afternoon by Twin Falls chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, at the home of Mrs. H. W. Wilson on Fifth avenue north. Mrs. Margaret Peck and Mrs. J. W. McCall were assistant hostesses. Twenty-four members attended and had as guests twenty ladies from Twin Falls, Kimberly and Piler. A tall vase of red carnations was the center of the artistically arranged table. Tall ivory taper made a pleasing contrast. Mrs. P. W. McRobert, regent, and Mrs. T. M. Robinson presided at silver service during the tea hour.

Equally attractive were the decorations of holly and Christmas greens, brightened by red tapers, in the other rooms of the home. An exquisite small white Christmas tree completed the color effect. Mrs. McRobert gave a short address of welcome to the guests and presided at a brief business session. Miss Edith Clark opened the musical program, which followed, with a piano solo. Mrs. Peck and her daughter, Precilla, played a piano duet and later Mrs. Peck accompanied her son, Hubert, in two chorale solos. The tea is an annual event.

PLANS ANNOUNCED FOR ELKS CHAIRTY BALL
 Tickets have been placed on sale for the annual Elks Charity ball, which will be given this year the evening of Wednesday, Dec. 19, in the lodge hall. The dance is the first of the two annual holiday events scheduled by the Elks lodge. The second will be the New Year's Eve ball at the hall the evening of Dec. 31. Miller will also be chairman of this event.

SANTA CLAUS DISTRIBUTES GIFTS
 A group of the Baptist church met at the home of Mrs. Bert Sweet on Blue Lakes boulevard last evening for the annual Santa Claus party. The program included the hot-plate dinner, which was followed by a program. A gift-exchange was conducted with Santa himself passing out the gifts. The singing of Christmas carols closed the evening's entertainment.

Y. O. T. DANCE

 Delightful informal tea to be the dance given by Y. O. T. club Thursday evening in Legion Memorial hall, according to Mrs. A. R. Eldred, who is general chairman. The dance is the first of two to be given by the club. Ladies are to be given the privilege of choosing partners all evening, and tap waltzes and novelty features will be prominent in the program. Mrs. Eldred announced as her assisting committee Mrs. Paul Detweller, Mrs. O. E. Weldon, Mrs. Ellis F. Gardner and Mrs. J. G. Tomlin. Glen Bates' Night Hawk orchestra will furnish music. Punch, to be served throughout the evening.

RED KNIGHTS SET DATE FOR FORMAL PARTY
 Members of Red-Knights club will entertain about a half dozen New Year's night, according to announcement made at a meeting last evening at the home of Elmer Laubenthal. The dance will be held at Elmer's home and will be preceded by a stag dinner at the New Rogerson hotel. Chuck Helm's Continentals have been secured to furnish music and present a floor show at intermission. Jim Sinclair, presided at last night's meeting. HURDLES ABOVE AVERAGE
 In honor of her thirtieth birthday, Miss Kamelle Hendrick entertained 12 friends at an attractive 1 o'clock luncheon Sunday afternoon at her home in the Reed apartments. A birthday cake led in green and white the center of the table and contrasted with red Christmas tapers. Tiny Santa Claus favors marked each cover. SECOND SECTION

CHAMBER TO ASK DRIVERS' LICENSE

State C. of C. Will Convene Late in Month to Ponder Statute Proposal

BOISE, Dec. 11.—The highway safety committee of the Idaho State Chamber of Commerce will be called together later this month to consider recommending a driver's license law and a financial responsibility law to the legislature, it was announced by L. F. Parsons, secretary. Men from all parts of the state are named on the committee.

The loss of life on our highways from automotive transportation is now reaching appalling proportions. For the first 10 months of the year, 392 accidents killed 10 persons, and this does not include deaths from automobile accidents on streets and highways not included in the state highway system, points out Mr. Parsons. This number is approximately the same as the number of deaths from the same cause in Oregon, a state with twice the population of Idaho and twice the number of automobiles.

"As a means of limiting this appalling loss of life and destruction of property, it is suggested that Idaho enact a driver's license law and also a financial responsibility law."

"The board of directors of the Idaho Chamber of Commerce unanimously endorsed the passage of such a law, and the Idaho State Automobile association," explains Mr. Parsons.

Members of the committee are T. J. Martin, chairman, J. W. Callaway, J. A. Miller, Edmund Proff, commissioner of law enforcement; Harry Holden, public utilities commissioner; L. O. Cole, secretary; and L. A. C. Peterson, Automobile Dealers' association.

WORK STARTS ON '34 FILM PRIZES

Committee Holds Meeting on Wednesday to Begin Job of Selections

(Copyright, 1934, United Press) HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 11.—Hollywood's most important event of the year is fast approaching. It isn't the Christmas season, either, but the annual Motion Picture Academy awards for outstanding acting, directing, writing and other skillful acts that make up an outstanding film.

The job starts this week. The committee in charge of conducting the vote among the academy's membership and presenting the awards at a gala banquet will hold its first meeting Wednesday. Voting will be conducted in January and the awards announced the following month.

Lionel Atwill, DeWitt C. Jennings, Jack Holt and George Irving will represent players on the committee, while Academy President Frank Lloyd announced today. Directors chosen for committee posts are King Vidor, John Cromwell, Fay Garnett, Henry King, Frank Capra, Frank Borzage, and Norman Taurog. Writers, producers, technicians and assistant directors also are represented.

The academy has lost most of its actor-members to the newly-formed Screen Actors' Guild since the last vote, but the event will have lost none of its importance. Katharine Hepburn and Charles Laughton were last year's winners of individual honors.

An umbrella would have been a fitting vehicle for Harry Abitz, studio "property man," and the former Lee Remick of St. Louis to have returned from their appointment.

The bridegroom's head was swathed in bandages while the bride nursed a bruised face. After the marriage at Las Vegas yesterday they were rushing back to the airport in a taxicab when a tire blew out.

Jean Harlow's Story

As Told to Leicester Wagner, United Press Staff Writer

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of six stories on the life of Jean Harlow, as told by her Leicester Wagner, United Press staff correspondent at Hollywood.

CHAPTER TWO
Somewhat I never went through the usual youthful romances that young people know, with the exception of Noel Adams, who was compatible, but for 17 years I never dreamed of marrying. In fact, I much preferred passing my weeks with mother and Marie to having "dates."

One time after passing the afternoon at home I was called back to school for some classes the next day. As I walked in the building, I heard a noise from the gymnasium, and I decided to drop in where I would not be noticed before going to bed.

Mrs. "Chuck"
I was looking on, when a friend of mine, a senior, came toward me with a tall good-looking young man. I was curious, so to speak, and so met "Chuck." I never dreamt it at the time, but I was shaking my first step toward Hollywood and no less pictures. We talked awhile and then I left.

The next morning my friend told me that Chuck had asked her to invite me to lunch with him the following Saturday in Chicago. It was a mistake, my dear. I fairly counted the hours.

Instant Love
I was love at first sight. From the beginning it was serious. All that summer Chuck and I were talking constantly. Then he started talking of marriage. Like most youngsters who are infatuated, we refused to listen to the advice of our elders.

Finally they gave their consent provided we waited until I was 18. We laughed at the idea of waiting. It was happened that Chuck's grandparents were planning a trip to California at Christmas time. They invited me to go with them. After long arguments, we persuaded both father that we should make it a honeymoon trip.

They Vied
Christmas was so far away, and it seemed silly to wait. So one night when we were out driving, Chuck said, "Let's get married tonight—why wait for Christmas?" We stopped the car and discussed the matter. After 25, our families already had commented. So we walked into marriage as gaily and as carelessly as we had laughed and played through that happy summer.

We drove back to ruffled Park and walked into the living room where Mother and Marie were sitting and told them what we had done. If Mother was disappointed, she gave no sign. She simply put her arms around us both and wished us happiness.

Changed Plans
Our sudden marriage changed the family plans. A short time after our wedding, Chuck and I went to New York. From New York we sailed through the Panama canal to Los Angeles. So much had happened to me since that day when I stepped off the boat in California that it seems almost impossible that only six years have passed.

Soon we found just the house we wanted, a pretty Spanish bungalow in Beverly Hills. Then began the fun of furnishing our home. We were more like two children playing at housekeeping than a method, young married couple.

No Party
There were no action pictures, no work, no studio, in my life then. Chuck loved people and excitement. Since he had inherited a comfortable income there was no necessity for him to work, so we had 24 hours in which to play. Our life was one continual party.

It was fine for 2 years. But all play and no work can become just as dull as the other extreme. I had some restless year to find something besides fun to fill the days.

And as Chuck and I drifted gradually away from each other, I became more and more lonely for the companionship of my mother. Mother and I had been such close friends, and I missed her as a companion.

I didn't write Mother of my unhappiness and heart-ache. I was ashamed to admit the failure of my marriage. Understand, I don't blame Chuck for what happened to our happiness. I blame our youth.

Family Comes
Finally Marie and Mother moved to California. They found a home a few blocks away from our home, and once again Mother and I had the "crushing" sister-like companionship of my school days.

I was entertaining a small group of girls at luncheon one day. One of the girls, Lucile Lee, was a young bride who played an occasional part in motion pictures. She had to leave the party to keep an appointment with the Fox studio and, since she had no car with her, I offered to drive her to the studio.

Enters Studio
Lucile took me through the gates with her and I stood on the sidewalk of one of the studio streets, watching all the activity around me while she went into an office to keep her appointment.

When Lucile came out, she introduced me to three men who told me that they had noticed me as I stood there. They asked me if I had ever thought of trying to break into pictures. I told them that I had not. One of the men offered to give me a letter to the casting director of the studio and to the director of the Central Casting Bureau, which serves as a clearing house for the army of Hollywood extras.

I took the letters home with me, put them away and forgot about them.

Accepts Job
A few weeks later I told some friends about the letters. They wagged me that I would not have the nerve to take the letters to the casting director. In the same spirit of fun they accepted the bet and went to call on the two men.

The letters opened the doors for me. But there was nothing definite. When I registered in the casting office, I got my mother's maiden name, Jean Harlow. A few days later the telephone rang and a strange voice asked for Jean Harlow. At first, in my surprise, I said there was no Mrs. Harlow in the house. Then I remembered. It was the Central Casting office calling me for extra work.

Accepts Job
I answered that it would be impossible for me to accept. After my wage-impaired trip to the casting office, I had lost my nerve. I received several calls during the next few days, and finally accepted one to report at the Fox Studio.

I'll never forget the terrifying bewilderment of that first day's work. Fortunately, there were dozens of other extras and my inexperience was unnoticed. It was a thrilling experience.

When I was called the next week for extra work at the Fox and Studio, I accepted it immediately. I felt almost like a veteran that second time. The work lasted several days. The picture was "Morah of the Marines," with Richard Dix and Ruth Edder in the leading roles.

Gets Letter
Not long after that I got a call from the Hal Roach Studios. It happened that the casting director had seen me in "Morah of the Marines." They were always on the lookout for new talent, and so they called me.

So I stepped from the extra ranks into the first-time lead with Laurel and Hardy. There was a friendliness and camaraderie about that small studio that was vastly different from the impersonality of the larger studios. And I wouldn't trade my experience in these comedies for anything. No one was too busy to

After I had played in two counties, Hal Touch offered me a five-year contract. As I signed that contract I realized that I was definitely deciding the course of my life.

Negro Preacher Forming Huey's New York Clubs

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—The Rev. Joseph A. Huey, a Negro, who claims to have been an missionary to Africa, Egypt, Liberia and many other islands, told reporters that he is the principal organizer of Southern Huey Long's Share-the-Wealth club in Manhattan.

Frankly displaying a sheet of letters reportedly from Huey Long, the Rev. Huey said the fact that the Louisiana senator probably is unaware he is a Negro "don't make a bit of difference."

"I've taken the notion," he said, "to tell the senator that I could certainly run this town for the benefit of the poor and hungry. If the senator gave me the word to go, I could step out into the streets of Harlem and pass out furnished rooms and boxes of bread to fill corners."

He is Disciple
"The senator is a powerful man, and I am his disciple. The time will come when me and the senator will take this town like an epidemic, like the influenza. All I am waiting for is the word to go."

Rev. Huey operated an office in a building in which he also directs a garage, a federation of furnished rooms, a school, a political school, a mission of which he is the chief agent, and a general office, and a church. He also directs a clothing store, an overcoat tapper.

"I dress like a poor man," he explained. "That is because any people could think I was including them in my dress and robe around in a big automobile."

Time to change Motor Oil! don't give SLUDGE a chance this winter... NOW READY... TWO NEW WINTER GRADES [10-W-20-W] ISO-VISID Anti-Sludge Motor Oil... *Of course these new winter grades meet the latest recommendations of motor car manufacturers for easy starting winter oil. But that's not all— 10-W flows at 20° below zero, 20-W at 5° below. These oils circulate at the first stroke of the oil pump even in sub-zero weather... Provide easier starting. They have low viscosity at low temperatures. Cold does not make them sticky. They allow your motor to turn over easily. They are the easiest starting motor oils we ever offered... Do not thin out dangerously under heat. Their viscosity (body) is so little affected by heat that except for slightly higher consumption they would be entirely safe to use in mid-summer. They protect your motor after it warms up... Will not sludge! Sludge forms faster in winter, and is more dangerous. It clogs filter screens, causes sticky valves, makes motor sluggish. This winter use Iso-Vis "D" and don't give sludge a chance. GEM STAR OIL COMPANY

Inside Story Reveals New Lindy Case Data

(Editor's note: This is the first of a series of twelve dispatches which present a complete, inside picture of the Lindy case from its inception to the present. The Lindy case is a trial for murder in Flemington. The series, by Sidney H. Whipple, has appeared over the major American news stories for a number of years, will contain an expert analysis of the crime, many hitherto unpublished details and an inside account of the men, methods and causation of the crime, and the progress of the army of detectives which led to the sensational report of the former German machine-gunner in the Bronx.)

By SIDNEY H. WHIPPLE (Copyright, 1934, United Press)

The absolute, rain-drenched Southside mountains of New Jersey looked, during the day of Nov. 10, 1932, a setting for the most shocking crime in modern American history—the kidnapping and murder of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.

In an effort to escape the unrelenting attention and adulation of the world and to rear his son in the atmosphere of an average American family, Col. Lindbergh on an isolated country near Hopewell, N. J., built his home, a rambling, white-masonry, two-story colonial architecture, dominating a small which overlooked an estate of some 600 acres. To its north, penetrated by dirt lanes and rough roads, lay a 10-mile tangle of woodslands. On the south, were rolling meadows and occasional swamps, descending gently to the village.

Col. Lindbergh, his wife, Anne Morrow Lindbergh, and their 20-month-old son had not yet established themselves permanently in the grand white house. His habit, however, to spend week-ends at the manor, supervising the touches that were transforming it into a year-round residence, and to spend the remainder of the week at the home of Anne's mother, Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, in Englewood, N. J.

History March

That March came in like a lion. On the morning of March 1, Mrs. Lindbergh looked out upon the dismal prospect, and decided not to risk driving through the storm to Englewood, with her son. The child had a slight cold, accordingly, she telephoned, shortly before noon, to call Harry Whitely, a local doctor, who was at the Morrow home, also told her of the change in plans.

Betty, a Scottish maid who had attended the family since the baby's birth, promised to take the Hopewell home by midnight. But before she left Englewood, she attempted to telephone to Henry Johnson, a red-headed young man with whom she was friendly, to break an engagement with him that evening. Unable to reach him at his boarding house, she left word for him to call her at Hopewell.

What's Expected Home

Col. Lindbergh, who was in New York, was not expected home for dinner. He had promised to be present at the dinner of a New York organization of university men—promising, it developed, he had completely forgotten.

At 7 p. m. the child was put to bed in his crib in the large nursery on the second floor. His mother, disbelieving to his cold, had rubbed his chest with oil. Betty Gow had dressed him warmly in a woolen sleeping garment, to the sleeves of which were affixed the aluminum cups, devices of modern mothers to prevent the habit of thumb sucking.

Thereafter, at half hour intervals, Nurse Betty Gow looked in at the sleeping infant and saw that all was well. The lights were turned out and she went below stairs to visit with the impeccable English butler, Otis Whately, and the butler's good wife, Elsie.

Lindy Returns

Shortly after 7:30 p. m., Col. Lindbergh unexpectedly made his appearance. He inquired, as usual, about the baby and was told Charles seemed to be suffering from a slight hic congestion. At 8:15 p. m. Otis Whately announced: "Dinner is served."

After dinner, the colonel retired to his study, adjoining the living room, and became engrossed in the work. Anne Morrow Lindbergh, tired with the day's contacts, went upstairs to her own bedroom, and prepared to retire.

Col. Lindbergh recalled, afterwards, that at some moment between nine and ten o'clock, he was startled from his reading by hearing a loud noise outside the window. With a furious wind blowing, however, he laid the sound to the possible crack of a tree branch, and resumed his studies.

Crib Empty

A little before 10 p. m., Betty Gow made a final visit to the nursery. She turned on the lights and went to the crib. It was empty.

Puzzled, she sought Mrs. Lindbergh and asked, "Did the colonel take the baby?"

"Perhaps you'd better go down stairs and see," Mrs. Lindbergh suggested casually.

Betty Gow went down stairs to the study. The colonel was at work and no child was to be seen.

"The baby isn't in his room," said the nurse. "I thought you might have him."

Hasten Upstairs

Col. Lindbergh and Miss Gow hurried upstairs. With Mrs. Lindbergh they stared at the vacant crib and then began a frantic and fruitless search of the upper rooms.

The conclusion dawned that the child had been stolen. The open shutters of a nursery window—warped shutters which could not be closed—appeared to point the trail of the kidnapers.

Col. Lindbergh told that suave, official butler, Otis Whately, to call Harry Whitely, chief of the Hopewell constabulary. Then, in desperation, he seized a rifle and rushed almost out of doors, to be met only by an impenetrable darkness, falling like a curtain between him and his kidnapped son.

Police Arrive

Town police, alerted by the highest official of the New Jersey state police, headed by Col. H. Norman Schwartzkopf, reached the Lindbergh home within an hour. Teletype messages spattered over the police wires of three states, galvanizing the newsrooms of newspapers and press associations into frantic action.

Out of New York and into New Jersey rolled an army of newsmen, special writers, professional and amateur detectives. Back of them marched another di-

REPORT PREDICTS NEW FARM PLAN

Wide Rehabilitation Program Forecast in Summary by Secretary Ickes

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11 (AP)—Possibility of a $500,000,000 administration program of rural rehabilitation was seen today in the 1934 departmental report made to President Roosevelt by Secretary of Interior Harold I. Ickes.

The government already has spent $25,000,000 on subsistence homestead projects, an attempt by the New Deal to decentralize industrial areas, raise the standard of living for needy farmers and transplant groups of people isolated in metropolitan centers to country settlements.

Financial 100 Trojans

The $25,000,000 financed, in part at least, almost 100 projects, Ickes said 601 new projects, requesting $500,000,000 in government loans, "have been considered in some degree worthy."

The feature of a huge subsistence homestead program most attractive to administration is the national loans "have been considered worthy, but loaned to farmers until their land is producing and they can pay back what they borrowed."

Would Lessen Relief

Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins estimated that 1,000,000 families could be taken off federal relief rolls by a subsistence homestead program large enough to care for 500,000 farmers now receiving aid and 500,000 idle families with agricultural backgrounds.

Ickes' report revealed the soil erosion service has spent $10,000,000 attempting to end the $10,000,000 toll wreaked against agriculture through land impoverishment.

The bureau of reclamation spent $103,630,000 irrigating arid land, most of it in western states. The geologist survey mapped 21,534 square miles.

The national park service was given almost $4,000,000 for improvement of parks and development of forest reserves. The bureau of mines spent $1,441,111 studying methods of preserving mineral natural resources.
