NATIONAL REPRESENTATIVES

WHAT OF BEANS AND POTATOES?

Designation of beans and potatoes, two of the principal crops of this section, as basic commodities under the AAA, and enactment of control legislation for these products, similar to the Kerr-Smith act for tobacco is now a most subject.

Legislation for making beans a basic commodity is now before congress, and recommendations that potatoes receive similar benefits was made by representatives of 11 potato-growing states at a meeting in Washington last week.

At the latter session the state representatives favoring the plan included those from Maine, North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland, New Jersey, South Carolina, Ohio, Kansas, Alabama, Michigan and Louisiana. The Connecticut representative voted against the proposal. Not voting, pending further study of the plan, were representatives of Minnesota, North Dakota, New York and Florida.

Idaho was not represented officially, but it is known that the Idaho Vegetable Growers, Inc., has expressed disapproval of the proposal. Whether or not that organization's attitude is representative of growers as a whole is not known, but doubtlessly, they will be permitted to express themselves. Senator Borah attended the meeting, as did Representatives D. Worth Clark and Compton L. White of Idaho. Senator Borah is reported by the U. S. Department of Agriculture to have said that his state was deeply interested in the proposed potato program and that he would endeavor to cooperate in a program that would advance the welfare of the producers.

At a meeting of the Southern Idaho Bean Growers' association here tomorrow, the matter of making beans a basic commodity will be discussed, it is announced.

It appears that the subject should merit keen interest on the part of all growers, especially now that the production-control program, as carried out with wheat, hogs, corn, and sugar beets is no longer an experiment, has been tested, and the results already known.

With Idaho an important producer of both beans and potatoes, it is essential that the attitude of growers, in this as well as other western states, be ascertained before either a bean or potato program advances far. It is necessary, then, that growers themselves give the subject immediate consideration to the end that any possible benefits be made applicable to the next crop.

IN FAIRNESS TO AN IDEAL

Return of the Saar Valley to Germany cleaves up one of the least defensible tangles bequeathed to a troubled world by the makers of the Versailles treaty.

Here was a region which was solidly German and always had been. To detach it from the fatherland and hold it under alien rule was to go completely counter to the fine words about "self-determination" and "democracy" which the allied leaders were so fond of repeating.

To turn its mineral riches over to the French was simply to add to a reparations load already too heavy to be borne.

Now, long years after the armistice, the Saar goes back to Germany; and the step is a long one in the right direction. It hints that the rule of simple justice, and not of vindictive-nationalism, may yet prevail in settlement of the problems born of the war.

"ABSURD"

In the days when we struggled through geometry, we all used that method of disposal which led up to a final conclusion... which is absurd.

The kind of dictatorship which insists that people shall have only such plays, books, movies, and newspapers as the rulers believe are best for them, always runs afoul of these absurdities in wholesale lots.

Two shining examples recently cropped up. In Russia there was a public scandal over the fact that a radio station was caught red-handed broadcasting—Negro spirituals! Southerners saw insidious counter-revolutionary propaganda in the haunting melodies and sweet choirs that had wandered so far from their home in the Old South.

And in Germany, a movie-film which was immensely popular in Germany in 1928, was today harshed as "not coinciding with world philosophy of the present day in Germany." It was Charlie Chaplin's "The Gold Rush."

If a man is a political dictator, he inevitably thinks he knows better than the rest of us what we ought to see, read, and hear. Which is absurd.

Congress may be more liberal than the President, with his program for social legislation, provided the people will remember this in 1936.

Last year's drought, the U. S. Weather Bureau decides, after long and deep study, was caused by excessively hot and dry weather. That's a hot report, and dry, too.

ANN HOLLISETT breaks her fast this morning in the same room that MARY HENRY, her mother, had everything prepared for her. Her husband, Peter, makes a sandwich for her while she sits at the table, and they go to the window and are joined by their son, John, who has come home from college to make a visit.
