On Roosevelt's Program

EMMETT, Idaho, Oct. 17 (UPI)—Sen. William E. Borah, Idaho's dean of the Senate, said yesterday he still believes that "there is room under the Republican flag for a member of that party to give credit where credit is due" and that "nobody need join in an attack on the New Deal."

"I have been in the minds of some an impression that I have not been sufficiently vigorous

Borah said.

"I have not criticized and I shall not criticize those things because I am acting in accordance with the demands of the people in this state to open out and to denounce

measures which I supported

as a whole."

central party stopped for several minutes to inspect the new Grand Island bridge, which cost $1,000,000 in federal funds.

Acknowledges
The President acknowledged the need for a campaign to keep the highway by waving greetings and smiling.

In the final day of a 6,000-mile campaign tour that took him as far west as Wyoming, through the central states, and across the Great Plains west, including Kansas, Gov. Alf M. Landon's home state, and through Michigan and Ohio.

From the rear platform of his train in Cleveland last night, the Roosevelt administration declared the financial interests "of Wall Street" declining that "other people pay for the war," and that the New Deal was welcome, it is announced.

"Every now and then," he declared to thousands of Cleveland citizens who were gathered and bunched in the United States and business leaders, "we are flooded with literature warning them that the New Deal has ruined the system of free enterprise and private profit."

"They probably will be appealed to by some literature, but being sent out from the center of the great financial District of New York, it is clear that the New Deal is being used to finance literature."

"This waste of attack literature is being put out by the same men who brought us the depression as a whole to the doors during the dark days of '32."

Fight Money Dictators

"We fight only against that kind of money power and economic power which in the old days used to dictate not only to the people but to the entire government itself—that small minority of financial interests—so far as not to consider the fate of business, not the welfare of business in America, but solely the extension of their own power."

EKINS READY TO HOP FOR COAST

Leader in Globe Race Takes Off from Honolulu Today

For Alameda

HONOLULU, Oct. 17 (UPI)—Twenty thousand miles around the world with still 5,000 more to go, H. C. Ekins will be off tomorrow for Alameda, Calif., to compete in the annual Aloha Cup.

Ekins' streamlined seaplane dropped down in Pearl Harbor with the New York World-Tribune reporter, G. E. Clark, and pilot, Fredricka St. John, and eked out a record time of 20 hours, 45 minutes.

Ekins and St. John, who had been flying in his apartment first, isn't all he does, however. Ekins, who is accused of stealing a pearl necklace from the girl who identified his wife, is a man of many talents. He was falling in love with her, but nevertheless, notwithstanding his wife's infidelity, he was still a Mickey Mouse color cartoon and newspaper comic strip artist.

They point out that the Delosites come out this year not only at a time when they are more popular than ever, but also when the organization of criminal syndicates in America can smash the organized crime syndicates which are around the world.

A tremendous welcome featured by the fans, the press, and friends of the Delosites.

Ekins hoped to be in Alameda Saturday afternoon, but the weather was bad.

Ekins, who was not engaged in heated political argument, was asked if he would not engage in heated political argument, he said, "No, I am not interested in politics."

Ekins' best effort to actually see the race was to get a seat in the grandstand.

GOVERNMENT'S WHAT THE PEOPLE MAKE IT

It might help our political arguments a good deal if we could understand, once and for all, that a stream never can rise any higher than its source.

That is to say, it is foolish of us to expect anything more from our government in the way of intelligence, tolerance, and foresight than we, the great body of undistinguished voters, are willing to give it.

I can't go above our level. If it does, the chances are that we rashly shall yank it back down at the first opportunity. Washington is a reflection of Main street.

All this is brought to mind by a reading of the set of principles proposed at the recent National Progressive conference in Chicago.

The last item on the list of objectives for progressive voters reads like this:

"The right of every American to live under a government strong enough to suppress the lawless, wise enough to see beyond the selfish desires of the moment, and just enough to consider the welfare of the people as a whole."

That is a noble objective. It is well to reaffirm that every American has that right, and to insist that the reality at Washington come as close to the ideal as is humanly possible.

But to do so will be necessary for us to remember, constantly that a river cannot rise above its source; that government never will be any better than the people as a whole want it to be.

For we, the people, are the government. Our constitution was skillfully designed to make us so. When we demand strength, wisdom and justice for our government, we simply are demanding those qualities for ourselves; contrariwise, the very forces which assail the government and occasionally prevent it from exercising those qualities come also from our selves.

"The government must be strong enough to suppress lawlessness — as, for instance, during prohibition, when the lawlessness of bootlegging drew its support directly from the great mass of citizenry.

The government must be wise enough to see beyond the selfish delusions of the moment — as, for instance, in 1928 and 1929 when any attempt at Washington to curb the runaway boom would have drawn from all corners of the land a blast strong enough to level the walls of Jericho?

The government must be just enough to consider the welfare of all the people — when the people, all across the land, organize themselves into pressure groups to make sure that their own group problems shall receive attention before the problems of the nation as a whole.

The problems of democracy are many, but none is greater than this: that democracy calls on individual citizens to give to their government a strength, a wisdom, and a tolerance greater than they ordinarily know they possess themselves.

Democratic government is a mirror in which the common man sees his own virtues and his own failings. To improve it we must start at the very bottom — with ourselves.

RURAL UTOPIA

Announcement that pneumatic-tired tractors, equipped with radios, are now available for farmers is just more evidence of the trend toward making the lot of our rural citizens a happier one.

Crop insurance programs that may insure the farmer a secure livelihood are being considered. Chemists predict that factories will offer a profitable market for much farm produce in the future.

Rural electrification is making rapid strides, and it may not be long before electrical "hired men" will be milking cows, currying horses, prodding hens to greater egg production, and so on, throughout most of rural America.

It seems entirely probable that, in the not very distant future, the old problem, "How are you going to keep 'em on down the farm?" may become one of "keeping 'em in the city."

SOUTHERN JUSTICE

Some residents of the north are fond of saying that the Negro can never get even the shadow of justice in southern courts. They should take a look at a little case recently concluded by the Arkansas supreme court.

A white man was arrested for "stealing two hogs from a colored man." He was tried in Arkansas before a white jury, with the Negro as the principal witness against him. The white jury convicted him and a white judge sentenced him to a year in prison.

The defendant took the case to the Arkansas supreme court; and it has just upheld conviction and sentence, reasoning pointedly that the federal constitution gives the Negro full rights of citizenship, that a white jury disregarded the Negro's story, and that the convicted man deserved what he got.

Now this is the sort of thing which, according to some northern critics, just couldn't happen in a southern court. But it did happen — and one suspects that it happens much more often than northern critics are willing to believe.

EUROPE PRESSES HOUSING EFFORT

Vital Role in Economic Life
Recognized; Governments Participating

By DR. ERNEST M. FISHER
Written for the United Press Vice Chairman of the U.S. Government's interim committee on housing.
European countries is of long standing. The situation has been altered from time to time as a reflection of political and economic conditions of long standing which only gradually became recognized as real evils.

In some cases the first significant legislation to be executed dealt with sanitation. This was followed by the introduction in the first half of the 19th century, and the evolution of the public policy there continued steadily though slowly from that time.

In the early years of this century, the greatest emphasis was on the sanitary aspects of housing.

The chief reason for the early success of the housing movement in Europe was based on the need for stimulating new building to overcome the severe shortage of houses created by the war.

This objective was accomplished in various countries after the adoption of laws to sanitary and social aspects of housing.

Sanitation-Clearance Begins

Emphasis shifted to improvement of living conditions in urban areas and also of overcrowding. Assistance in the construction of houses for the poor was provided by the issue of credit on favorable terms became a more frequent practice.

In recent years, however, there has been recognition of the role of the housing and home-financing industries in the development of the huge investment in residential property.

In England, some protection was given to the important industries since the war.

Since the war, building societies have been the major source of funds for financing of new construction, and the significant part of all new money money comes from building societies.

Significance

A contributing factor to wider governmental participation in the housing problem is the recognition that the various aspects of the housing problem are so closely tied up with other handaspects of the social and economic structure that only government can adequately deal with them.

England and Holland possess outstanding examples of programs which have been developed to involve the control of construction standards and land utilization for the improvement of existing houses or districts through demolition or repair; the clearance and redevelopment of the supply of funds for public housing; control of the mortgage market through compulsory lending; and the encouragement of cooperatives, and other important factors.

Significance

Despite many years of housing activity in Europe, the situation is still far from ideal. There are groups which are conducting strategic planning which was built up in pre-war times considerable importance. The total sum of this type of structure is of great importance. The recommendation of the World Bank and the economic team by several private management firms in England.

Significance

In many European nations at present there are difficulties of housing the low-income groups. The reconditioning of existing structures and the construction of new structures are being conducted.

TALK OF PARIS NOVELTIES

A coat with two umbrellas—neither of them designed to be the least bit helpful in case of rain—is the sensation of the season. The idea is to use the umbrellas as substitutes for old-fashioned patch or salt poches. Marcel Rochas got the idea and put them on a tailored coat of heavy black plaid cloth with Maria Guy's black felt hat, also trimmed with mink.

TO CONSERVE OIL

Government Undertakes Action
To Have Adequate Supply
In Case of War

LONDON (UPI) — The British government is undertaking plans for the erection of oil storage tanks in districts safe from air attack. It is said, has been made necessary by the increased use of fuel oil and petroleum due to the lack of coal supplies.
