FLOWER SHOW SET AT RUPERT

Annual Fall Event Slated for September 2 and 3

RUPERT, Aug. 24.—The annual fall flower show, sponsored by the Rupert Woman's club, will be held this year in the Rotary town of the Caledonian hotel Saturday and Sunday, September 2 and 3. The affair will be in charge of the club's civic committee, composed of Mrs. A. E. Johnson, Mrs. G. A. Scholer, Mrs. C. C. Hatch, Mrs. O. R. Hennberg, Mrs. Allan Goodman and Mrs. John Burnside.

There will be four classes of entries: Single specimen; quality; basket and miscellaneous or non-competitive.

In the single specimen class a single blossom or single stem of blossoms is to be placed in any suitable container. In the quality class five blossoms or five stems of blossoms are to be placed in a clear glass fruit jar. Judging in these two classes will be the county and with awards made on the most perfect specimens in each group.

In the basket class, judging will be done on the artistic arrangement of any flowers, mixed or all of one large container; but vases are excluded in this group.

Miscellaneous or non-competitive class gives the exhibitor opportunity to enter his or her novel or favorite blossoms arranged to suit his or her taste. This group will be for show only. It will not be anything placed in it.

Entrants must bring their own containers as none will be available at the show room. All flowers must be brought before 9 a. m. Saturday and left until the close of the show at 5 p. m. Sunday.

Doors will be open to the public from 1 p. m. to 5 p. m. Saturday, and from 1 p. m. to 5 p. m. Sunday. A special concert will be given from 8 to 9 p. m. Saturday.

BOISE, Aug. 24.—(By)—Residents awoke today much of the smoke that had reduced visibility from lookout stations in western Idaho's parched underbrush.

Medico Hits At Proposed Law

Idaho Association President Accepts Government Challenge

BOISE, Aug. 24.—A bill before congress providing for a national health program "undoubtedly promotes development of a complete system of tax-supported governmental medical care," Dr. P. C. Gibson, president of the Idaho State Medical association, asserted today.

Dr. Gibson, speaking at a banquet session of the association's fourth "4th annual" convention at which Dr. James Miller of the College of Idaho at Caldwell also was a speaker, said the bill "propose to make federal aid for medical care the rule rather than the exception," and added:

"It does not recognize the need for suitable food, sanitary housing and the improvement of other environmental conditions necessary to the continuous prevention of disease."

He said the bill, "commonly called the 'National Health Act of 1939' is an amendment to the social security act of 1935 and is intended to make effective a national health program recommended by the interdepartmental committee to coordinate health and welfare activities."

Dr. Gibson said physicians have been asked by the government of the United States with an indictment that we constitute a monopoly and that our actions through our decreased authority in the American Medical association have violated the laws of this country as they apply to interstate commerce and restraint of trade.

"If for one week I had to have the American people know that I personally as a physician have been indicted by the United States government; that the impugned reflection on the integrity of the American Medical association is considered by me as a reflection upon myself..."

"It would like to have the American people know that the medical profession of this country stands united in opposition to this indictment and the attacks made on its integrity."

Revising history of medical practice and its improvements, he said: "The medical profession has the responsibility of safeguarding its own interests against the invasion of the unimpaired physician who has only his own selfish interest at heart and is as a rule not familiar with living conditions of this country and the into our American way of living about as well as this nation would fit into the political situation in Europe today."

Dr. Miller, in his address, asserted America's ured today was for an ethical analysis of the nation's problems.

"We have been giving hypno- instead of making a real diagnosis," he said.

"That we tried a psychological hypo. Instead of trying to find out what was wrong. Then we tried a political hypo. changing personalities in politics. We have been trying a financial hypo. spending money in an effort to right our wrongs."

"What we really need is to face the problem and diagnose it as being ethical rather than political or economical. There has been too much thinking with our stomachs instead of with our brains."

Most of the day was taken up with technical lectures by the visiting clinicians from Washington university, St. Louis, Mo.

Plection of officers is scheduled for tomorrow and the convention will conclude tomorrow.

SECURITY ACT'S CHANGES LISTED

Older Workers Have Opportunity to Get Monthly Benefits

(Editor's Note: This is the second of a series of questions and answers prepared by the social security board explaining changes in the social security act made by the last congress.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24 (AP)—How do the old age insurance amendments affect workers now aged 65 or approaching that age? Through certain changes in the law, older workers now have an opportunity to get monthly benefits if they have paid into the fund one year or more before 1941 and have worked for 10 years.

U. S. TO EMPLOY OLDER WORKERS

Medical Authorities Believe More Mature 'National Mind' Developing

CHICAGO, Aug. 24 (AP)—A more mature "national mind" is developing in the United States, medical authorities believe.

The reason: There have been fewer births and an increasing number of older people. And, if this keeps up, the older men will "run the show." Older men and women will enjoy more employment in industry, commerce and the professions, and will assume more important places in social and political activities.

The viewpoint of more mature thought and judgment, they contend, should have a stabilizing effect on national life.

The American Medical Association's journal called attention to the extensive study of the aging process by Dr. G. M. Pincus and Dr. E. L. Bate, both of Philadelphia and reported.

Already many industries have modified their views on workers in the older years. It is beginning to be appreciated that those over 40 are a valuable asset to an industry, certain advantages more than compensating for any alleged fault associated with older workers.

Since at present 300 of every 1,000 persons living in the United States are 65 years old or over, and since it is estimated that 38 per cent of the population will be between 40 and 65 years old by 1950, the problem of industrial adjustment to this development is already being solved.

The birth rate has declined from 22.5 per 1,000 population in 1921-23 to 16.7 per 1,000 in 1927 and medical men see no immediate prospect of an upturn.

Later Life Expectancy — And even more men and women in the country are living to see a ripe old age, due to new birth-time instructor in Smith-Hughes agriculture and farm shop. He will devote the other half of the time teaching at Murtaugh. Mr. Miller received his degree from the University of Idaho and taught in the high school at Burley one year before coming to Kimberly and Murtaugh last year.

Mr. Wilcox will continue as head of the English and speech work at Kimberly. He completed the work for his master's degree at the University of Utah this summer. Mr. Wilcox is beginning his fourth year in the Kimberly school system. Before coming to this school he taught one year at McCammon.

Elementary teachers returning to the system include: Jean M. Husted, Twin Falls, elementary principal and fifth grade; Jean Wimmer, Shoshone, first grade; Sylvia Olsen, Twin Falls, second grade; Mrs. Hales, Castletford, third grade; Charley Yaw, Kimberly, fourth grade; Wilfred Anderson, Spokane, Wash., sixth grade; Robert Burgess, Castletford, sixth grade.

Mrs. Husted and Mrs. Anderson have taken university work during the past summer. Mrs. Husted at the University of Southern California and Mrs. Anderson at Washington state college.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24 (AP)—

Must a worker retire in order to receive his monthly benefit? Yes. But under the revised law he will, if he goes back to work, have enough credits to get a monthly benefit before the end of 1940. The lump sum he received in 1938 would be deducted from his monthly benefit.

Meet Mr. Lochinvar

By Marie Blizard

Yesterday Ceely is sent ahead by the mail to the chaffeur, pekingese, and baggage. His final face the fact that the poor fellow had been made for the group to attend the school day rally at Duhi Wednesday where they will exhibit their work.

Chapter Six

Errand Girl

Saturday morning Ceely awoke in surroundings less pleasing than those that had met her eyes the day before. But the sky was as blue as the air as fragrant, and that was all that Ceely's buoyant young spirit needed.

She washed, pouring the water from the pitcher into the basin decorated with morning glories and sang while she splashed. She couldn't get to the beach this morning because Mrs. Bates and her guests were arriving before lunch and Ceely had promised to see that they ran smoothly, as Olivia had put it when Ceely was departing from New York. Seeing that the soap suds weren't seeing that towels, soap sponges and cigarettes, new books and magazines were in all the bedrooms. It meant arranging for wood fires in the hearths and checking the kerosene for the candles which were used for lighting. Mrs. Bates had immediately found other duties for Ceely to perform when Ceely arrived.

Her tasks completed, Ceely changed into fresh frock and prepared herself for the arrival of Olivia's party. The girl arrived — Olivia and her secretary and accompanist, with two strange young men who hung about her like flies around a bonnet, and a pallid girl whom Olivia called Daphne — at exactly one o'clock.

Olivia kissed Ceely lightly on her cheek and said, "It's my niece, Ceely. Start, every body here. Ceely, my dear, I suppose the telephone isn't connected. Ceely said she hadn't been able to arrange that before the next holidays. Olivia blushed as if a major tragedy had occurred. So did one of the flufflike young men. Then Olivia said, "Don't look so stricken, Ceely. It's not so serious. Ceely drives beautifully down you, dear? Ceely said nothing. "You see we need William to manage the car and—"

—Daphne said, "I'd like to go to send a message to his brother. You won't mind driving to Machias' house, will you, Ceely, and an eighteen-mile drive—to telephone for him, will you? She's usually Daphne, Ceely, and you can trust her."

Ceely said if her aunt wished her to drive she would. "I knew you would, Ceely, you're going to be more of a comfort to me than my own car. Ceely had her doubts as she drove to Machias with a message in her hand. The letter she had written out and handed to her as if she had been a child. It was half an hour she had left—without any lunch, incidentally—and three miles when she returned. She didn't go back to the house directly.

Her presence would hardly be missed, she felt, and she had to conquer the rebellion that gave her to release. Strangely enough, her anger didn't seem to be focused either on her aunt or on the circumstances. It was a helpless helplessness in a situation that left her dependent and without any solution.

All her bright happiness, her sense of relief, was gone and the frown had returned to her brow. She thought of Doug and tried to find some comfort in thinking that, at least, he did not know that she was unhappy and that he was getting his chance which was a miracle that should sustain her.

No Books Dorena was a half-mile away from the village and wrote her brief stay at Vickersport. Ceely had not been down to the village. As she approached to her return from Machias, she saw that there was an ice-cream and candy shop. As she got out of the car she found that her legs felt weak from the combination of heat and anger.

ed. It contained no new books and she had read them all.

Mrs. Bates had told her there was a large and really young colony at Vickersport and Ceely wondered where the colonists got their reading matter. She knew that she would have to read. She was disappointed not to find a better source.

There was another smart dress in the library. It was the one of two small shops in the building. The other was unoccupied. Mrs. Bates had noticed it although she realized that she couldn't afford to spend any of her money. Impulsively she had bought it. She didn't attempt to explain to herself, she went in.

A sharp-faced, smartly-dressed woman of fifty or so greeted her. "Hello," she said, "may I show you anything?" Ceely rather regretted her impulse when she realized that this woman was always busy and had no time to talk to the woman to show her things, because she could not buy.

She was embarrassed. "Thank you, I . . . wonder if you could lend me a book about the shop next door that is for rent?" The Solution There it was that had been born in the library and multiplied suddenly by the sight of that unoccupied shop. It had happened so quickly that Ceely had not been aware of it until she searched for something to cover up her embarrassment.

"Gladly," was the answer. "Last year my daughter, Meg—my mother is Jane Hollings—" Ceely said she was Stuart—ran an antique shop next door to the shop she wanted to rent. She had asked a question. She had asked Meg to take to her person.

Mrs. Hollings didn't cheerfully shout, "Meg did beautifully. We all do after the holidays. Folks who come to see things usually have a lot of money to spend and we get a lot of trade from the inn. Then they come and buy up the things and most everything, once they're in the shop, they don't want to let it go."

"Wonderful!" That's the one thing Vickersport needs, I've heard Mr. Calder say how wonderful it would be if there was something like that. Why don't you go see Mrs. Calder? He's the man who owns these buildings. He owns the grocery store, too, and you'll find him there."

Ceely plunged then, all her anger and rebellion forgotten. "Do you know what the rental is?" "Blacks, it can't be much more than last year. She was paying twenty a month. You can see one of Mr. Calder's boys to get the figures for about two dollars a month and, if you want clerk, Mr. Calder has lots of daughters. I could give you a list of all the summer people when you get ready to send out your postcards."

"Postal cards?" Ceely asked eagerly, getting into the car.

ery, getting into the very current of the stream.

"Yes, you want to write cards telling them when you open. Everything you do has to be an event. When do you plan to open?" Ceely said she didn't know. She wasn't sure that she was going to, she said.

It was from that moment she knew that she was. The something that had to happen, had she had found solution.

If Tony got to thank her for her tireless trip to make his telephone call, Ceely did not even notice it. If, after dinner, they had all excluded her from their conversation, the fact did not detract her happy contemplation of her existing plans.

They were from their company early and, sitting up in the pink bed with a woolly robe around her shoulders to protect her from the sharp night air, and with the lamp drawn to the edge of her bedside table so that the light on her column of figures, she worked.

Machine to Put Diapers on Hens Too Much for Inventor

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — William Doeberich, son of an immigrant German boy maker, who will tell you he can make machines for any purpose, and come close to proving it, built up a reputation as a mechanical wizard after he got tired of making diapers on his layover here.

An ailing customer caused him to close his Philadelphia machine shop and come to Arizona to go into the chicken business. He dropped $10,000 before deciding that his forte, after all, was building gadgets. He is 67, thin and energetic.

"I worked like the devil on that chicken ranch," he mused, pale blue eyes peering over his glasses. "But I got tired putting clean diapers on 5,000 chickens. Boy, did you ever have to clean a chicken ranch?"

Doeberich, among other things, is the designer and builder of an electric cotton sorting machine, the only thing of its kind in existence. It sorts the various lengths of cotton fiber from the seed in order to determine which areas produce the greatest amounts of long fibers or have the smallest amount of waste.
