EXPECTED FLOOD OF BUYING TARDY

Ally's Purchases Of War Supplies Fails To Develop

NEW YORK, Sept. 23 (AP)—The expected flood of buying orders from the United States for war supplies has not yet materialized, leading financial sources said today.

A stable business upturn now underway was stimulated in part, they said, by expectation of such orders.

England and France, however, have not yet placed orders in the United States for legally permissible supplies on a scale indicating anticipation of a prolonged war, they said.

Although these countries have at hand billions of dollars of cash, convertible securities and legal permits, they are not buying in the United States for legal reasons.

While this seeming delay has puzzled some leading financiers, it has not been explained by the logical explanations for the phenomenon.

One such explanation offered was that England and France do not want to stir up isolationist opposition at a time when congress would be debating on the question of whether we should sell munitions of war.

To our defense program a number of expected sales have not materialized. It has been reported that the United States is going to assist railroads needing such assistance to bring their roads and rolling stock up to date.

"Minimum expenditures" have been in a given direction. However, a number of sales have been indicated no such general program has been undertaken.

Similarly, defense elimination of electric utility "bottlenecks" required has been completed.

Far from taking steps toward increasing the purchase of the armed forces, the army and navy is being stepped up to its full authorized strength.

These things have contributed to a growing feeling among Wall Street leaders that the United States can stay out of war. Many outstanding ideas, including those which might meet the needs of the public, said so this week. They also took the position that "runaway prices" should be avoided.

The New York stock exchange conducted a secret bar examination of its members' books this week which disclosed that it was a considerable number of members, doing most of the war speculation.

GERMANY SEES WAR CONCLUDED

Germany's best War military strategists whose analyses have been being in reserve in case activities on the western front become livelier.

News of his death was printed on inside pages of all newspapers but Von Braunsbach's name was published in a large dark notice heavily bordered in black, in the name of the entire army.

Today's first communiqué, covering the situation through yesterday, said that the German army approached the city. Low falls with the territory agreed upon as the Russian occupation zone.

But Warsaw still held out against the invaders, the communiqué admitted. It declared the Polish army was one of three "unbeatable nations," the others being Britain and the Heia peninsula.

Warsaw was said by the supreme command to have been cut off from Modlin, a fortress about 10 miles northwest of the city.

Among the Poles captured, the army said, was General Bortnowski, described as supreme commander of the Polish corridor army, along with his staff.

The Nazis ended the third week of war feeling everything was going their way. Their optimism was based on three things: a bumper, although not a record, grain crop was harvested; neutral countries, they believed are lining up behind them to deliver food and raw materials to what was expected from Russia; and the belief that the war has demonstrated to Britain and France that the nation is invulnerable.

They feel that military and air western fortifications made an attack from the west almost an impossibility. In the air, Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goerdner's air arm reported they had shot down on their first bombing attempt, a blitzer tactic of what it means to attack Germany.

Effectiveness of German planes in the Polish campaign has bolstered the already strong German belief that in the air force the rich has a weapon stronger than anything Britain and France possess.

NATION'S LABOR UNIONS CONVEENE

A. F. of L. Parley Schedules Neutrality for Major Discussion

CINCINNATI, Oct. 23 (AP)—With deep-rooted problems—organizational and national—on their minds, the advance guard of 1,200 to 1,500 delegates and visitors to the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor will arrive here next week for department meetings preliminary to the main show, Oct. 2-4.

The majority topics are expected to be:

1—Neutrality—Offering the organization's aid in plans to keep the United States out of the European war.

2—Labor peace—Review and further exploration of the possibility of settling the four-year-old, nationwide strife between the federation and the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

3—The National Labor Relations Board—Pressing the AFL drive for revision of the board activities and Wagner act.

Another trouble-laden question, bearing directly on the AFL-CIO controversy, is the problem of getting the International Typographical Union to pay a special assessment levied in 1937 for a "war quest" to combat CIO centralization.

This quarrel may be settled up in conference rooms and never reach the convention floor, but the question of the ITU is an announced probability.

Federation Backs Peace William Green, Ohio-born president of the AFL, forswore floor discussion and floor action on the "neutrality" question in a recent speech here when he promised the federation would not allow anything to keep this country at peace.

"It is impossible," he said, "to approve the future, but I feel that our great American labor movement ought to oppose the transportation of our young men to be killed in some battlefront because the people are fighting in Europe over the schemes of one man."

George M. Harrison, president of the Railway Labor Executives Association, a member of the federation executive council, and a federation vice president, predicted that neutrality would eclipse all other topics.

As a result of the bloodied abroad and the attendant problems created for this country, a new plea by President Roosevelt for peace in the labor ranks is expected to be presented to the convention. Paul J. Tobin, head of the AFL Teamsters Union, said this week in Washington he presumed the president's customary message to the convention would "ask that labor get on its feet so that war is on in Europe."

Score Wagner Act The federation, through Green and other officials, has characterized the NLRB as biased toward the CIO in decisions and rulings and has joined the clamor from other sources for revision of the Wagner act.

While discussion of the labor act died down with adjournment of the last session of congress, the question was expected to be revived and pushed at the convention.

The ITU quarrel is a lively one. The ITU has refused throughout to sanction payment of a "war quest" assessment—one cent a member's monthly—by its 30,000 members. At its recent Post World War convention, the union left its position unchanged but voted to send delegates to the AFL meeting held in the face of threatened refusal to seat them.

The dispute reached a pre-convention climax this week when Green declared that the ITU's check for regular per capita dues had been returned—unaccepted, unacceptable without the assessment.

The metal-trader department will open the preliminary meetings Monday through Wednesday. The building trades department and the union label league will also action Thursday, and others follow from day to day.

Work at Memorial Park Progresses

Red lava stone posts are being erected along the entire front of Sunset Memorial park; it was announced yesterday by W. H. Hawley, landscape architect of the project, who has established permanent residence here.

He said that work on 10 acres of new lawn had been completed this summer, with underground sprinkler systems installed to water the beautiful tract.

Red lava stone bridge has been constructed across the stream that cuts through the property and mirror lake completed.

Fertile Farm Area Figures in German Leader's Hidden Play

By JOHN LEAR

NEW YORK, Sept. 23 (AP)—In the international poker game known as the "hidden play," the German leader in this tight place decides who takes home the chips; that is, the one who can place their bets before they see it.

The German's war against Poland, the best now have been placed, and France and England have called Adolf Hitler's hand.

What will his "hole card" be? No one knows, but some armchair Hitlerians are putting odds bet down that his hidden play may involve a deal free down, and the rest of the boys must place their bets before they see it.

That is the Ukraine.

It might properly be called the "hidden play" because it is the most fertile piece of farm country in the world, a "hole card" sitting in eastern Europe, ready to be played in Poland, partly in Russia, and partly in Germany.

It is the Ukraine, a natural barrier against invasion from the east, the rest of the world, and in the north it extends past the Arctic Circle.
